MEMOIR OF EDMUND SPENSER.

THE reign of Elizabeth, various as may be the opinions held respecting the "virgin queen" herself, was unquestionably most favourable to the cultivation of wit and genius. A court sufficiently lax to allow of a tolerable freedom of language, but yet removed from anything like the broad coarseness which was hereafter to distinguish or disgrace the reign of Charles II.—a sovereign, herself no mean scholar, and a hearty lover of learning and genius in others—finally, a state of national prosperity, consequent on our freedom from a foreign enthralment; such were, indeed, advantages rarely combined in one reign, especially in a reign of such long duration; and it was not to be wondered at, if the times that developed the abilities of a Burleigh, a Hatton, or a Raleigh, should have also found fame and renown for a poet like the hero of the present narrative.

Obscure as are the accounts of his birth and origin, it seems probable, from certain passages in his poems, that he was at least respectably connected. But his early prospects appear to have been but moderate. Born in London, he was sent to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, where he subsequently competed for a fellowship against Andrewes, afterwards Bishop of Winchester. His failure (if indeed to be defeated by such a man as Andrewes can be called a failure), and the narrow state of his finances, compelled him to quit the university. He took up his residence with some friends in the north, and, being just in that state of pocket when love is most imprudent, he very naturally fell in love at once, therein following the example of nine-tenths of humanity.

Love, if a man be a poet at heart, is pretty sure to find its vent through that most charming of the liberal arts, and we may be said to owe the "Shepherd's Calendar," and other pastoral poems, to the lady whom Spenser everywhere celebrates, and whose cruelty he deplores, under the name of Rosalind. Spenser's love was, so far, profitable both to himself and to posterity; and when we read this delightful specimen of early English bucolic, we feel that, in the words of Sir Mulberry Hawk, "it is to Rosalind's mamma's obliging marriage that we are indebted for so much happiness."

Sir Philip Sidney, to whom this poem was dedicated, under the modest title of "Immerito," took great notice of our hero, and being himself not merely "a lord among wits, and a wit among lords," but an able writer and judicious thinker, as well as no mean poet, his introduction proved of no small advantage to Spenser. As long as this great man lived, he extended the benefits of his fortune, advice, and influence to his poet-friend, and proved as constant, as he was liberal, a patron.

Spenser quitted the north, and returned to the "Great Babylon," at the advice of some friends, who wished him to be near the court. To this he alludes in his sixth eclogue, where Hobbinol (i.e. his intimate friend Gabriel Harvey) persuades Colin (i.e. Spenser himself) to quit the hill country, and its barren solitudes, and seek a more genial soil.

It has, however, been doubted whether his acquaintance with Sidney began so early as has been above stated; and the following story seems to render it more probable that he had already begun the "Faerie Queepe." It is said, that on going to Leicester House, with the view of introducing himself to the then Mr. Sidney, he sent in a copy of the ninth canto of the first book of this poem. "Mr. Sidney was much surprised with the description of Despair in that canto, and is said to have shown an unusual kind of transport on the discovery of so new and uncommor a genius. After he had read some stanzas, he turned to his steward and bade him give the person that brought the verses fifty pounds; but upon reading the next stanza, he ordered the sum to be doubled. The steward was no less surprised than his master, and thought it his duty to make some delay in executing so sudden and lavish a bounty; but upon reading one stanza more, Mr. Sidney raised his gratuity to two hundred pounds, and commanded the steward to give it immediately, lest, as he read further, he might be tempted to give away his whole estate."

Spenser did not, however, reap any immediate substantial benefit from this introduction, and, although chosen poet-laureat, he for some time "wore a barren laurel, and possessed only the place without the pension." Burleigh, whatever thoughts might be comprehended in his "shake of the head," appears to have taken no thought for our poet, and his neglect was rendered more serious by the constant absence of Sir Philip Sidney, either on diplomatic negotiations, or in the Low Country wars. He has plaintively alluded to these disappointments in his poem called the "Ruins of Time," as follows:—

"O grief of griefs! O gall of all good hearts!
To see that vertue should despised be
Of such as first were rais'd for vertue's parts,
And now broad spreading like an aged tree,
Let none shoot up that nigh them planted be:
O let not those of whom the Muse is scorn'd,
Alive or dead be by the Muse adora'd."

With still greater bitterness, he inveighs against the neglect of learning and poetry, in "The Tears of Calliope:"—

"Their great revenues all in sumptuous pride
They spend, that nought to learning they may spare;
And the rich fees which Poets wont divide,
Now Parasites and Sycophants do share."

But it would appear that Spenser, like many others, was, to some extent, the cause of his own misfortune. The following lines, in Mother Hubbard's Tale, are supposed to have been construed by the courtier into a personal affront, for, as the author* of our poet's life observes, "even the sighs of a miserable man are sometimes resented as an affront by him that is the occasion of them."

"Full little knowest thou that hast not try'd,
What hell it is, in misery long to bide,

* Hughes, appended to the edition printed by Tonson, 12mo, 1715.

To lose good days, that might be better spent,
 To waste long nights in penative discontent;
 To speed to-day, to be put back to-morrow;
 To feed on Hope, to pine with Fear and Sorrow;
 To have thy prince's grace, yet want her peer's;
 To have thy asking, yet wait many years:
 To fret thy soul with crosses and with cares;
 To eat thy heart thro' comfortless despair;
 To fawn, to crouch, to wait, to ride, to run,
 To spend, to give, to want, to be undone."

At the end of the sixth book of his great poem, the author plainly alludes to this unfortunate ill-will of Burleigh's. Describing Detraction as a monster, he concludes with the following stanza:

"Ne may this homely verse, of many meanest,
 Hope to escape his venomous despite,
 More than my former writs, all were they cleaneat
 From baleful blot, and free from all that wite
 With which some wicked tongues did it backbite,
 And bring into a mighty peer's displeasure,
 That never so deserved to endite.
 Therefore do you, my rimes, keep better measure,
 And seek to please, that now is counted wise men's treasure.

On one occasion, Elizabeth had ordered a gratuity of one hundred pounds to be given to our poet; but my Lord-Treasurer Burleigh objected to it, saying, "What! all this for a single song!" The queen replied, "Then give what is reason." Spenser waited for some time, but finding the queen's intended bounty not forthcoming, he took an opportunity to present the following epigrammatic petition to her majesty:

"I was promis'd on a time
 To have reason for my rhyme;
 From that time unto this season,
 I receiv'd nor rhyme nor reason."

This had its effect; my lord-treasurer came in for a rebuke, and the poet got his money.

Our poet's fortune began to improve; his acquaintance with the great and the powerful increased, and in the year 1579 he was sent abroad by the Earl of Leicester, but upon what service does not appear. But when Lord Grey was chosen deputy of Ireland, he received the appointment of secretary. If we may judge by his "Discourse on the State of Ireland," his skill in political science must have been considerable, and the change from the listlessness of a merely poetical existence to the duties and anxieties of active life, doubtless had a most healthy influence upon his mind and disposition. A fair estate of 3000 acres in the county of Cork, and a good house in Kilcohnán, his grounds being intersected by the beautiful river Mulla, were a sufficient provision to give him freedom from want, if not the importance of a wealthy landowner.

About this time, he contracted an intimate friendship with Sir Walter Raleigh, then a captain under Lord Grey. In the poem entitled "Colin Clout's come home again," Sir Walter is allegorically described under the name of the "Shepherd of the Ocean." We gladly quote, after other writers, the following exquisite lines, so descriptive of the origin of this refined and affectionate friendship.

"I saile, as was my trade,
 Under the foot of Mole, that mountain hore,
 Keeping my sheep amongst the coolly shade
 Of the green alders, by the Mulla's shore:

There a strange shepherd chanc'd to find me out,
 Whether allured with my pipe's delight,
 Whose pleasing sound yshrilled far about,
 Or thither led by chance, I know not right:
 Whom when I asked from what place he came,
 And how he hight; himself he did yeleep
 The Shepherd of the Ocean by name,
 And said he came far from the main-sea deep.
 He sitting me beside, in that same shade
 Provoked me to play some pleasant fit;
 And when he heard the music that I made,
 He found himself full greatly pleas'd at it.
 Yet, emulating my pipe, he took in hand
 My pipe, before that emul'd of many,
 And plaid thereon, for well that skill he cou'd,
 Himself as skilful in that art as any."

Besides many advantages consequent on his introduction to Sir Walter Raleigh, our poet was now destined to have Cupid propitious, and we find a new attachment ripen into a marriage, which he himself celebrated in his "Epithalamion."

The events of a poet's life are seldom very marked or important in their character, and Edmund Spenser's history is no exception to the rule. The progress of the "Faerie Queene" was the main employment of his life, but its tranquillity was soon destined to be disturbed. The unfortunate rebellion of the Earl of Desmond, in which he was plundered and robbed of his estate, forced him to return to England. The griefs of one bankrupt in fortune, and in declining health, were aggravated by the death of his best friend, Sir Philip Sidney. Twelve years he survived his noble patron, but they were years of sadness and painful recollections. Death, the great leveller alike of enemies and friends, overtook both the courtly Burleigh and the poet he had slighted, if not injured, in the year 1598.

He was buried in Westminster Abbey, near his predecessor, and, we might almost say master, in the art of poetry, Geoffrey Chaucer. His obsequies were attended by many poets of his time, who cast copies of verses into his grave; and his monument was erected at the cost of Robert Devereux, the unfortunate Earl of Essex, with the following inscription:—

"Hear'st thou (expecting the second comminge of our Saviour Christ Jesus) the body of Edmund Spenser, the prince of poets in his tyme; whose divine spirit needs noe other witnesse, then the works which he left behind him. He was borne in London in the yeare 1510, and died in the yeare 1596."

Camden's account of his death presents some important differences. He says that he died in 1598, in the forty-first year of the queen's reign. But the mistake about his birth is still greater. How could he, at this rate, have stood for a fellowship in competition with Andrewes, who was not born till 1555? "Moreover," as Hughes observes, "if this account of his birth were true, he must have been above sixty years old when he first published his "Shepherd's Calendar," an age not the most proper for love-poetry; and in his seventieth year when he entered into business under the Lord Grey, who was created deputy of Ireland in 1580." It seems, on the whole, probable that the original inscription, said to have been in Latin, and published in the year 1600, in a small volume on the monument of Westminster, was the correct one, and as this speaks of him as dying "an untimely death," the date 1510 must be laid to the carelessness of the graver, or to some mistake in those who superin-

tended the new inscription. I attempt a translation of the inscription and ep'gram in question:—

"Edmund Spenser, of London, unquestionably prince of the English poets of our age, which his poems, written under the favour of the Muses, and of his genius that shall live hereafter, prove. He died an immature death, in the year of grace 1598, and is buried near unto Geoffrey Chaucer, who first most happily adorned poetry in the English language. Upon whom was written these epigrams:—

"Next Chaucer's bones sleeps Edmund Spenser's dust in death;
In genius each, in tomb, the other match.
Here, nearest poet Chaucer, poet Spenser, lie,
As near in sepulture, as poetry.
While thou wert living, England's muse lived joyantly;
Dying, while thou art dead, she fears to die."

It may be observed, that the stanzas are distinct epitaphs, of which the first and second couplets are merely the same thoughts differently expressed.

Little as is known of the life of our poet, his works are as much a part of our literature as can be well imagined. Of his pastorals, or his prose work, I will not speak on the present occasion, but, briefly to sum up the beauties of the "Faerie Queene," I may observe, that in no poem is the elevation of morality blended with the romance of chivalry with such singular success—in no work, of whatsoever age or clime, do we find the development of that graceful elevation of the female sex from the degradation of their feudal lords, so nobly and so devotedly set forth—nowhere, not even in Milton, are the vagaries of the Pagan world made so admirably subservient to the purposes of a Christian lesson—and, above all, no ancient English writer can be so safely, or so profitably, read even by the young. As a study of the English language, the "Faerie Queene" is not only highly instructive, but is less repulsive and difficult than other contemporaneous writers, while, as a glorious storehouse of fancy, of legend, and of brilliant allegory, we can only say, with Lucretius,

"Juvat integros accedere fontes,
Atque haurire, Juvatque novos decerpere flores."

TO THE RIGHT NOBLE AND VALOROUS

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, KNIGHT,

LO. WARDEIN, OF THE STANNERYES AND HER MAJESTIES LIEFTENAUNT OF THE COUNTIE OF CORNEWAYLL.

SIR,

KNOWING how doubtfully all Allegories may be construed, and this booke of mine, which I have entituled The Faerie Queene, being a continued Allegory, or darko Conceit, I have thought good, as well for avoyding of gealous opinions and misconstructions, as also for your better light in reading thereof, (being so by you commanded,) to discover unto you the general intention and meaning, which in the whole course thereof I have fashioned, without expressing of any particular purposes, or by accidents, therein occasioned. The general end, therefore, of all the booke, is to fashion a gentleman or noble person in vertuous and gentle discipline; which for that I conceived shoulde be most plausible and pleasing, being coloured with an historical fiction, the which the most part of men delight to read, rather for variety of matter than for profite of the ensample, I chose the Historye of King Arthure, as most fitte for the excellency of his person, being made famous by many mens former workes, and also furthest from the daunger of envy, and suspicion of present time. In which I have followed all the antique poets historicall; first Homere, who in the persons of Agamemnon and Ulysses hath ensampled a good governour and a vertuous man, the one in his Ilias, the other in his Odysses; then Virgil, whose like intention was to doe in the person of Æneas; after him Ariosto comprised them both in his Orlando; and lately Tasso discovered them again, and formed both parts in two persons, namely, that part which they in philosophy call Ethics, or Vertues of a private man, coloured in his Rinaldo; the other named Politics, in his Godfredo. By ensample of which excellent poets, I labour to pourtraict in Arthure, before he was king, the image of a brave knight, perfected in the twelve private Morall Vertues, as Aristotle hath devised; the which is the purpose of these first twelve bookes: which if I finde to be well accepted, I may be perhaps encouraged to frame the other part of Politicke Vertues in his person, after that hee came to be king. To some I know this methode will seem displeasunt, which had rather have good discipline delivered plainly in way of precepts, or sermoned at large, as they use, then thus clowdily enwrapped in allegorical devises. But such, me seeme, should be satisfied with the use of these days, seeing all things accounted by their shewes, and nothing esteemed of, that is not delightfull and pleasing to commune sence. For this cause is Xenophon preferred before Plato, for that the one, in the exquisite depth of his iudgement, formed a commonwealthe, such as it should be; but the other, in the person of Cyrus, and the Persians, fashioned a government, such as might best be: so much more profitable and gracious is doctrine by ensample then by rule. So have I laboured to do in the person of Arthure: whom I conceive, after his long education by Timon, to whom he was by Merlin delivered to be brought up, so soone as he was borne of the Lady Igrayne, to have scene in a dream or vision the Faerie Queene, with whose excellent beauty ravished, he awaking resolved to seeke her out, and so being by Merlin armed, and by Timon thoroughly instructed, he went to seeke her forth in Faerie Land. In that Faerie Queene I meane Glory in my generall intention, but in my particular I conceive the most excellent and glorious person of our soveraine the Queene, and her kingdom in Faerie Land. And yet, in some places els, I do otherwise shadow her. For considering she beareth two persons, the one of a most royal Queene or Emperesse, the other of a most vertuous and beautifull lady, this latter part in some places I doe express in Belphebe, fashioning her name according to your owne excellent conceipt of Cynthia: Phoebe and Cynthia being both names of Diana. So in the person of Prince Arthure I sette forth Magnificence in particular; which Vertue for that (according to Aristotle and the rest) it is the perfection of all the rest, and containeth in it them all, therefore in the whole course I mention the deeds of Arthure applyable to that Vertue, which I write of in that booke. But of the xii. other Vertues, I make xii. other knights the patrones, for the more variety of the history: of which these three bookes contain three.

The first, of the Knight of the Redcrosse, in whom I expresse Holynes: the seconde of Sir Guyon, in whome I sette forth Temperaunce: the third of Britomartis a lady-knight, in whom I picture Chastity. But, because the beginning of the whole worke seemeth abrupte and as depending upon other antecedents, it needs that ye know the occasion of these three knights severall adventures. For the methode of a poet historical is not such, as of an historiographer. For an historiographer discourseth of assayres orderly as they were donne, accounting as well the times as the actions; but a poet thrusteth into the middest, even where it most concerneth him, and there recourring to the thinges forepaste, and divining of thinges to come; maketh a pleasing analysis of all.

The beginning therefore of my history, if it were to be told by an historiographer, should be the twelfth booke, which is the last; where I devise that the Faerie Queene kept her annual feaste xii. days; uppon which xii. severall dayes, the occasions of the xii. severall adventures hapned, which, being undertaken by xii. severall knights, are in these xii. books severally handled and discoursed. The first was this. In the beginning of the feast, there presented himselve a tall clownishe young man, who falling before the Queene of Faeries desired a boone (as the manner then was) which during that feast she might not refuse; which was that hee might have the atchivement of any adventure, which during that feaste should happen. That being graunted, he rested him on the floore, unsitte through his rusticity for a better place. Soone after entred a faire ladye in mourning weedes, riding on a white asse, with a dwarfo behind her leading a warlike steed, that bore the arms of a knight, and his speare in the dwarfes hand. Shee, falling before the Queene of Faeries, complayned that her father and mother, an ancient king and queene, had bene by an huge dragon many years shut up in a brasen castle, who thence suffred them not to yssew; and therefore besought the Faerie Queene to assygne her some one of her knights to take on him that expleyt. Presently that clownish person, upstarting, desired that adventure; wherewith the Queene much wondering, and the lady much gainesaying, yet he earnestly importuned his desire. In the end the lady told him, that unlesse that armour which she brought, would serve him (that is, the armour of a Christian man specified by St. Paul, v. Ephes.) that he could not succeed in that enterprise: which being forthwith put upon him with dew furnitures thereunto, he seemed the goodliest man in al that company, and was well liked of the lady. And este-soones taking on him knighthood, and mounting on that strange courser, he went forth with her on that adventure; where beginneth the first booke, viz.

A gentle knight was pricking on the playne, &c.

The second day there came in a palmer bearing an infant with bloody hands, whose parents he complayned to have bene slayn by an enchauntresse called Aerasia; and therefore craved of the Faerie Queene, to appoint him some knight to performe that adventure; which being assigned to Sir Guyon, he presently went forth with that same palmer: which is the beginning of the second booke, and the whole subiect thereof. The third day there came in a groome, who complained before the Faerie Queene, that a vile enchanter, called Busirane, had in hand a most faire lady, called Amoretta, whom he kept in most grievous torment, because she would not yield him the pleasure of his body. Whereupon Sir Scudamour, the lover of that lady presently tooke on him that adventure. But being unable to performe it by reason of the hard enchantments, after long sorrow, in the end met with Britomartis, who succoured him, and reskewed his love.

But, by occasion hereof, many other adventures are intermeddled; but rather as accidents than intendments; as the love of Britomart, the overthrow of Marinell, the misery of Florimell, the vertuousnes of Belphebe, the lasciviousness of Hellenora; and many the like.

Thus much, Sir, I have briefly overronne to direct your understanding to the wel-head of the history; that, from thence gathering the whole intention of the conceit, ye may as in a handfull gripe al the discourse, which otherwise may happily seem tedious and confused. So, humbly craving the continuance of your honourable favour towards me, and th' eternall establishment of your happines, I humbly take leave.

Yours most humbly affectionate,

ED. SPENSER.

CONTAINING

The Legend of the Knight of the Red Crosse, or of Holiness.

O! I, the man whose Muse whylome did maske,
As time her taught, in lowly shepherds weeds,
Am now enforst, a farre unfitter taske,
To trumpets sterne to chaunge mine oaten reeds,
And sing of knights and ladies gentle deeds;
Whose praises having slept in silence long,
Am all to meane, the sacred Muse arreeds
To blazon broade amongst her learned throng:
Where warres and faithfull loves shall moralize my song.

Let then, O holy virgin! chiefe of myne,
My weaker novice to perform thy will;
Vest forth out of thine everlasting seryne
Dy antique rolles, which there lye hidden still,
Noble faerie knights and fayrest Tanaquill,
From that most noble Briton prince so long
Went through the world, and suffered so much ill.
For I must rue his undeserved wrong:
Helpe thou my weake wit, and sharpen my dull tong!

And thou, most dreaded impe of highest Love,
Thy ire Venus sonne, that with thy cruell dart
Vnto that good knight so cunningly didst rove,
Singe that glorious fire it kindled in his hart;
Methinks now thy deadly heben bowe apart,
Tend, with thy mother mylde, come to mine ayde;
Tome, both; and with you bring triumphant Mart,
Twhose loves and gentle iollities arraid,
Tster his murderous spoyle and bloudie rage allayd.

Tend with them eke, O goddesse heavenly bright,
Thy mirror of grace and majestic divine,
Tgreat Ladie of the greatest Isle, whose light
Tlike Phoebus lampe throughout the world doth shine,
Tshed thy faire beames into my feeble eyne,
TAnd raise my thoughtes, too humble and too vile,
Tto thinke of that true glorious type of thine,
Tthe argument of mine afflicted stile:
The which to heare vouchsafe, O dearest dread, awhile.

CANTO I

The patron of true Holinesse
 Foule Erreur doth defeat;
 Hypocrisie, him to entrappe,
 Doth to his home entreate.

A GENTLE knight was pricking on the plaine,
 Ycladd in mightie armes and silver shielde,
 Wherein old dints of deepe woundes did remaine,
 The cruel markes of many a bloody fielde;
 Yet armes till that time did he never wield:
 His angry steede did chide his soming bitt,
 As much disdayning to the curbe to yield:
 Full iolly knight he seemd, and faire did sitt,
 As one for knightly giusts and fierce encounters fitt.

And on his brest a bloodie crosse he bore,
 The deare remembrance of his dying Lord,
 For whose sweete sake that glorious badge he wore,
 And dead, as living, ever him ador'd:
 Upon his shield the like was also scor'd,
 For soveraine hope, which in his helpe he had.
 Right, faithfull, true he was in deede and word;
 But of his cheere did seeme too solemne sad;
 Yet nothing did he dread, but ever was ydrad.

Upon a great adventure he was bond,
 That greatest Gloriana to him gave,
 (That greatest glorious Queene of Faery lond)
 To winne him worshippe, and her grace to have,
 Which of all earthly things he most did crave.
 And ever as he rode, his hart did carno
 To prove his puissance in battell brave
 Upon his foe, and his new force to learne;
 Upon his foe, a dragon horrible and stearne.

A lovely ladie rode him faire beside,
 Upon a lowly asse more white then snow;
 Yet she much whiter; but the same did hide
 Under a vele, that wimpled was full low;
 And over all a blacke stole shee did throw,
 As one that inly mournd; so was she sad,
 And heavie sate upon her palfrey slow;
 Seemed in heart some hidden care she had;
 And by her in a line a milke-white lambe she lad.

So pure and innocent, as that same lambe,
 She was in life and every vertuous lore,
 And by descent from royall lynage came
 Of ancient kinges and queenes, that had of yore
 Their scepters stretcht from east to western shore,
 And all the world in their subjection held;
 Till that infernal feend with foule uprore
 Forwasted all their land, and them expeld;
 Whom to avenge, she had this knight from far compeld.

Behind her farre away a dwarfe did lag,
 That lasie seemd, in being ever last,
 Or wearied with bearing of her bag
 Of needments at his backe. Thus as they past,
 The day with cloudes was suddaine overcast,
 And angry Iove an hideous storme of raine
 Did poure into his lemans lap so fast,
 That everie wight to shrowd it did constrain;
 And this faire couple eke to shroud themselves were fain.

Enforst to seeke some covert nigh at hand,
 A shadie grove not farr away they spide,
 That promist ayde the tempest to withstand;
 Whose loftie trees, yelad with sommers pride
 Did spred so broad, that heavens light did hide,
 Not perceable with power of any starr;
 And all within were pathes and alleies wide,
 With footing worne and leading inward farr:
 Faire harbour that them seems; so in they entred ar.

And forth they passe, with pleasure forward led,
 Ioying to heare the birdes sweete harmony,
 Which therein shrouded from the tempest dred,
 Seemd in their song to scorne the cruell sky.
 Much can they praise the trées so straight and by,
 The sayling pine; the cedar proud and tall;
 The vine-propp olme; the poplar never dry;
 The builder oake, sole king of forrests all;
 The aspine good for staves; the cypresse funerall;

The laurell, meed of mightie conquerours
 And poets sage; the firre that weepeth still;
 The willow, worne of forlorne paramours;
 The cugh, obedient to the benders will;
 The birch for shaftes; the sawlow for the mill;
 The mirrhe sweete-bleeding in the bitter wound;
 The warlike beech; the ash for nothing ill;
 The fruitful olive; and the platane round;
 The carver holme; the maple, seldom inward sound.

Led with delight, they thus beguile the way,
 Untill the blustering storme is overblowne;
 When, weening to returne, whence they did stray,
 They cannot finde that path, which first was showne,
 But wander too and fro in waies unknowne,
 Furthest from end then, when they nearest weene,
 That makes them doubt their wits be not their owne;
 So many paths, so many turnings seene,
 That which of them to take in diverse doubt they been.

At last resolving forward still to fare,
 Till that some end they finde, or in or out,
 That path they take, that beaten seemd most bare,
 And like to lead the labyrinth about;
 Which when by tract they hunted had throughout,
 At length it brought them to a hollowe cave
 Amid the thickest woods. The champion stout
 Eftsoones dismounted from his courser brave,
 And to the dwarfe awhile his needlesse spere he gave.

"Be well aware," quoth then that ladie milde,
 "Least suddaine mischiefe ye too rash provoke:
 The danger hid, the place unknowne and wilde,
 Breedes dreadfull doubts: oft fire is without smoke,
 And perill without show; therefore your stroke,
 Sir Knight, with-hold, till further tryall made."
 "Ah, Ladie," sayd he, "shame were to revoke
 The forward footing for an hidden shade:
 Vertue gives her selfe light through darknesse for to wade."

"Yea, but," quoth she, "the perill of this place
 I better wot then you: Though nowe too late
 To wish you backe returne with foule disgrace,
 Yet wisdomes warnes, whilst foot is in the gate,
 To stay the steppe, ere forced to retrate.
 This is the Wandring Wood, this Errours Den,
 A monster vile, whom God and man does hate:
 Therefore I read beware." "Fly, fly," quoth then
 The fearefull dwarfe; "this is no place for living men."

But, full of fire and greedy hardiment,
 The youthfull knight could not for ought be staide;
 But forth unto the darksome hole he went,
 And looked in: his glistring armor made
 A htle glooming light, much like a shade;
 By which he saw the ugly monster plaine,
 Halfe like a serpent horribly displaide,
 But th' other halfe did womans shape retaine,
 Most lothsom, filthie, foule, and full of vile disdaine.

And, as she lay upon the durty ground,
 Her huge long taile her den all overspred,
 Yet was in knots and many boughtes upwound,
 Pointed with mortall sting: of her there bred
 A thousand yong ones, which she dayly fed,
 Sucking upon her poisonous dugs; each one
 Of sundrie shapes, yet all ill-flavored:
 Soone as that uncouth light upon them shone,
 Into her mouth they crept, and suddain all were gone.

Their dam upstart out of her den offraide,
 And rushed forth, hurling her hideous taile
 About her cursed head: whose folds displaid
 Were stretcht now forth at length without entraile.
 She lookt about, and seing one in mayle,
 Armed to point, sought backe to turne againe;
 For light she hated as the deadly bale,
 As wont in desert darknes to remaine,
 Where plain none might her see, nor she see any plaine.

Which when the valiant Elfe perceiv'd, he leapt
 As lyon fierce upon the flying pray,
 And with his trenchant blade her boldly kept
 From turning backe, and forced her to stay:
 Therewith enrag'd she loudly gan to bray,
 And turning fierce her speckled taile aduainst,
 Threatning her angrie sting, him to dismay;
 Who, nought aghast, his mightie hand enhaunst;
 The stroke down from her head unto her shoulder glaunst.

Much daunted with that dint her sence was dazd;
 Yet kindling rage her selfe she gathered round,
 And all attonce her beastly bodie raizd
 With doubled forces high above the ground:
 Tho, wrapping up her wretched sterne arownd,
 Lept fierce upon his shield, and her huge traino
 All suddenly about his body wound,
 That hand or foot to stirr he strove in vaine.
 God helpe the man so wrapt in Errours endlesse traine!

His lady, sad to see his sore constraint,
 Cride out, "Now, now, Sir Knight, shew what ye bee;
 Add faith unto your force, and be not faint;
 Strangle her, els she sure will strangle thee."
 That when he heard, in great perplexitie,
 His gall did grate for griefe and high disdain;
 And, knitting all his force, got one hand free,
 Wherewith he grypt her gorge with so great paine,
 That soone to loose her wicked bands did her constraine.

Therewith she spewd out of her filthie maw
 A flood of poyson horrible and blacke,
 Full of great lumps of flesh and gobbets raw,
 Which stunk so vildly, that it forst him slacke
 His grasping hold, and from her turne him backe:
 Her vomit full of bookees and papers was,
 With loathly frog and toades, which eyes did lacke,
 And creeping sought way in the weedy gras:
 Her filthie parbreake all the place defiled has.

As when old father Nilus gins to swell
 With timely pride above the Aegyptian vale,
 His fattie waves doe fertile slime outwell,
 And overflow each plaine and lowly dale:
 But, when his later spring gins to avale,
 Huge heapes of mudd he leaves, wherein there breed
 Ten thousand kindes of creatures, partly male
 And partly femall, of his fruitfull seed;
 Such ugly monstrous shapes elsewhere may no man reed.

The same so sore annoyed has the knight,
 That, wel-nigh choked with the deadly stinke,
 His forces faile, ne can no lenger fight.
 Whose corage when the feend perceivd to shrinko,
 She poured forth out of her hellish sinke
 Her fruitfull cursed spawne of serpents small,
 (Deformed monsters, fowle, and blacke as inke,)
 Which swarming all about his legs did crall,
 And him encombred sore, but could not hurt at all.

As gentle shepheard in sweete eventide,
 When ruddy Phebus gins to welke in west,
 High on an hill, his flocke to rewen wide,
 Markes which doe byte their hasty supper best,
 A cloud of cumbrous gnattes doe him molest,
 All striving to infixe their feeble stinges,
 That from their noyance he no where can rest;
 But with his clownish hands their tender wings
 He brusheth oft, and oft doth mar their murmurings.

Thus ill bestedd, and fearefull more of shame
 Then of the certeine perill he stood in,
 Halfe furious unto his foe he came,
 Resolvd in minde all suddenly to win,
 Or soone to lose, before he once would lin;
 And stroke at her with more then manly force,
 That from her body, full of filthie sin,
 He raft her hateful heade without remorse:
 A streame of cole-black blood forth gushed from her corse.

Her scattred brood, soone as their parent deare
 They saw so rudely falling to the ground,
 Groning full deadly all with troublous feare
 Gathered themselves about her body round.
 Weening their wonted entrance to have found
 At her wide mouth; but, being there withstood,
 They flocked all about her bleeding wound,
 And sucked up their dying mothers blood;
 Making her death their life, and eke her hurt their good.

That detestable sight him much amaze,
 To see th' unkindly impes, of heaven accurst,
 Devoure their dam; on whom while so he gazd,
 Having all satisfi'd their bloody thirst,
 Their bellies swolne he saw with fulnesse burst,
 And bowels gushing forth: well worthy end
 Of such, as drunke her life, the which them hurst!
 Now needeth him no longer labour spend, <sup>to contend.</sup>
 His foes have slaine themselves, with whom he should

His lady seeing all, that chaunst, from farre,
 Approcht in hast to greet his victorie;
 And saide, " Faire knight, borne under happie starre,
 Who see your vanquisht foes before you lye;
 Well worthie be you of that armory,
 Wherein ye have great glory wonne this day,
 And proof'd your strength on a strong enimie;
 Your first adventure: many such I pray,
 And henceforth ever wish that like succeed it may."

Then mounted he upon his steede againe,
 And with the lady backward sought to wend:
 That path he kept, which beaten was most plaine,
 Ne ever would to any by-way bend;
 But still did follow one unto the end,
 The which at last out of the wood them brought.
 So forward on his way (with God to frend)
 He passed forth, and new adventure sought:
 Long way he travailed, before he heard of ought.

At length they chaunst to meet upon the way
 An aged sire, in long blacke weedes yclad,
 His feete all bare, his beard all hoarie gray,
 And by his belt his booke he hanging had;
 Sober he seemde, and very sagely sad;
 And to the ground his eyes were lowly bent,
 Simple in shew, and voide of malice bad;
 And all the way he prayed, as he went,
 And often knockt his brest, as one that did repent.

He faire the knight saluted, louting low,
 Who faire him quited, as that courteous was;
 And after asked him, if he did know
 Of straunge adventures, which abroad did pas.
 "Ah! my dear sonne," quoth he, "how should, alas!
 Silly old man, that lives in hidden cell,
 Bidding his beades all day for his trespass,
 Tydings of warre and worldly trouble tell?
 With holy father sits not with such things to mell.

"But if of daunger, which hereby doth dwell,
 And homebredd evil ye desire to heare,
 Of a straunge man I can you tidings tell,
 That wasteth all this countrie farre and neare."
 "Of such," saide he, "I chiefly doe inquire;
 And shall thee well rewarde to shew the place,
 In which that wicked wight his dayes doth weare:
 For to all knighthood it is foule disgrace,
 That such a cursed creature lives so long a space."

"Far hence," quoth he, "in wastfull wildernessso
 His dwelling is, by which no living wight
 May ever passe, but thorough great distresse."
 "Now," saide the ladie, "draweth toward night;
 And well I wote, that of your later fight
 Ye all forweariéd be; for what so strong,
 But, wanting rest, will also want of might?
 The sunne, that measures heaven all day long,
 At night doth baite his steedes the ocean waves emong.

"Then with the sunne take, sir, your timely rest,
 And with new day new worke at once begin:
 Untroubled night, they say, gives counsell best."
 "Right well, Sir Knight, ye have advised bin,"
 Quoth then that aged man; "the way to win
 Is wisely to advise. Now day is spent:
 Therefore with me ye may take up your in
 For this same night." The knight was well content:
 So with that godly father to his home they went.

A little lowly hermitage it was,
 Downe in a dale, hard by a forest's side,
 Far from resort of people, that did pas
 In traveill to and froe: a little wyde
 There was an holy chappell edifyde,
 Wherein the hermite dewly went to say
 His holy things each morne and eventyde:
 Thereby a christall streame did gently play,
 Which from a sacred fountaine welled forth alway.

Arrived there, the litle house they fill,
 Ne looke for entertainment, where none was;
 Rest is their feast, and all thinges at their will:
 The noblest mind the best contentment has.
 With faire discourse the evening so they pas;
 For that olde man of pleasing wordes had store,
 And well could file his tongue, as smooth as glas:
 He told of saintes and popes, and evermore
 He strowd an Ave-Mary after and before.

The drouping night thus creepeth on them fast;
 And the sad humor loading their eye-liddes,
 As messenger of Morpheus, on them east
 Sweet slombring deaw, the which to sleep them biddes.
 Unto their lodgings then his guesstes he riddes:
 Where when all drownd in deadly sleepe he findes,
 He to his studie goes; and there amidles
 His magick bookes, and artes of sundrie kindes,
 He seeks out mighty charmes to trouble sleepy minds.

Then choosing out few words most horrible,
 (Let none them read!) thereof did verses frame:
 With which, and other spelles like terrible,
 He bad awake blacke Plutoes griesly dame;
 And cursed Heven; and spake reprochful shamo
 Of highest God, the Lord of life and light.
 A bold bad man! that dar'd to call by name
 Great Gorgon, princee of darknes and dead night;
 At which Coecytus quakes, and Styx is put to flight.

And forth he cald out of deepe darknes dredd
 Legions of sprights, the which, like litle flyes,
 Fluttring about his ever-damned hedd,
 Awaite whereto their service he applyes,
 To aide his friendes, or fray his enemies:
 Of those he chose out two, the falsest twoo,
 And fittest for to forge true-seeming lyes;
 The one of them he gave a message too.
 The other by himselie staide other worke to doo.

He, making speedy way through spersed ayre,
 And through the world of waters wide and deepe,
 To Morpheus house doth hastily repaire,
 Amid the bowels of the earth full steepe,
 And low, where dawning day doth never peepe,
 His dwelling is; there Tethys his wet bed
 Doth ever wash, and Cynthia still doth steepo
 In silver deaw his ever-drouping hed.
 Whiles sad Night over him her mantle black doth spred;

Whose double gates he findeth locked fast ;
 The one faire fram'd of burnisht yvory,
 The other all with silver overcast ;
 And wakeful dogges before them farre doe lye,
 Watching to banish Care their enemy,
 Who oft is wont to trouble gentle Sleepe.
 By them the sprite doth passe in quietly,
 And unto Morpheus comes, whom drowned deepe
 In drowsie fit he findes ; of nothing he takes keepe.

And, more, to lulle him in his slumber soft,
 A trickling streame from high rock tumbling downe,
 And ever-drizzling raine upon the loft,
 Mixt with a murmuring winde, much like the sowno
 Of swarming bees, did cast him in a swowne.
 No other noyse, nor peoples troublous cryes,
 As still are wont t' annoy the walled towne,
 Might there be heard : but carelesse Quiet lyes
 Wrapt in eternall silence farre from eninyes.

The messenger approaching to him spake ;
 But his waste wordes retourn'd to him in vaine :
 So sound he slept, that nought mought him awake.
 Then rudely he him thrust, and pusht with paine,
 Whereat he gan to stretch : but he againe
 Shooke him so hard, that forced him to speake.
 As one then in a dreame, whose dryer braine
 Is tost with troubled sights and fancies weake,
 He mumbled soft, but would not all his silence breake.

The sprite then gan more boldly him to wake,
 And threatned unto him the dreaded name
 Of Hecaté : whereat he gan to quake,
 And, lifting up his lompish head, with blame
 Halfe angric asked him, for what he came,
 "Hether," quoth he, "me Archimago sent,
 He that the stubborne sprites can wisely tame,
 He bids thee to him send for his intent
 A fit false Dreame, that can delude the sleepers sent."

The god obeyde ; and, calling forth straight way
 A diverse dreame out of his prison darke,
 Delivered it to him, and downe did lay
 His heaue head, devoide of careful carke ;
 Whose sences all were straight benumbd and starke.
 He, backe returning by the yvorie dore,
 Remounted up as light as chearefull larke ;
 And on his litle winges the Dreame he bore
 In hast unto his lord, where he him left afore.

Who all this while, with charmes and hidden artes,
 Had made a lady of that other spright,
 And fram'd of liquid ayre her tender partes,
 So lively, and so like in all mens sight,
 That weaker sence it could have ravisht quight:
 The makers selfe, for all his wondrous witt,
 Was nigh beguiled with so goodly sight,
 Her all in white he clad, and over it
 Cast a black stole, most like to seeme for Una fit.

Now when that ydle Dreame was to him brought,
 Unto that elfin knight he bad him fly,
 Where he slept soundly void of evil thought,
 And with false shewes abuse his fantasy;
 In sort as he him schooled privily,
 And that new creature, borne without her due,
 Full of the makers guile, with usage sly
 He taught to imitate that lady trew.
 Whose semblance she did carrie under feigned hew.

Thus, well instructed, to their worke they haste;
 And, comming where the knight in slomber lay,
 The one upon his hardie head him plaste,
 And made him dreame of loves and lustfull play;
 That nigh his manly hart did melt away,
 Bathed in wanton blis and wicked ioy:
 Then seemed him his lady by him lay,
 And to him playnd, how that false winged boy
 Her chaste hart had subdewd to learne dame Pleasures toy.

And she her selfe, of beantie soveraigne queene,
 Fayre Venus, seemde unto his bed to bring
 Her, whom he, waking, evermore did weene
 To bee the chastest flowre that aye did spring
 On earthly braunch, the daughter of a king,
 Now a loose leman to vile service bound:
 And eke the Graces seemed all to sing,
Hymen Io Hymen, dauncing all around;
 Whylst freshest Flora her with yvie girlond crown'd.

In this great passion of unwonted lust,
 Or wonted feare of doing ought amis,
 He starteth up, as seeming to mistrust
 Some secret ill, or hidden foe of his:
 Lo, there before his face his ladie is,
 Under blacke stole hyding her bayted hooke;
 And as halfe blushing offred him to kis,
 With gentle blandishment and lovely looke,
 Most like that virgin true, which for her knight him took.

All cleane dismayd to see so uncouth sight,
 And halfe enraged at her shamelesse guise,
 He thought have slaine her in his fierce despight,
 But, hastie heat tempring with sufferance wise,
 He stayde his hand; and gan himselfe advise
 To proue his sense, and tempt her fained truth.
 Wringing her hands, in womens pittous wise,
 Tho can she weepe, to stirre up gentle ruth
 Both for her noble blood, and for her tender youth.

And sayd, "Ah, sir, my liege lord, and my love,
 Shall I accuse the hidden cruell fate,
 And mightie causes wrought in heaven above,
 Or the blind god, that doth me thus amate,
 For hoped love to winne me certaine hate?
 Yet thus perforce he bids me do, or die.
 Die is my dew; yet rew my wretched state,
 You, whom my hard avenging destinie
 Hath made iudge of my life or death indifferently:

"Your owne deare sake forst me at first to leave
 My fathers kingdom"—there she stopt with teares;
 Her swollen hart her speech seemd to bereave,
 And then againe begun; "My weaker yeares,
 Captiv'd to fortune and frayle worldly feares,
 Fly to your fayth for succour and sure ayde:
 Let me not die in languor and long teares."
 "Why, dame," quoth he, "what hath ye thus dismay'd?
 What frayes ye, that were wont to comfort me allrayd?"

"Love of yourselfe," she saide, "and deare constraint,
 Lets me not sleepe, but waste the wearie night
 In secret anguish and unpittied plaint,
 Whiles you in carelesse sleepe are drowned quight."
 Her doubtfull words made that redoubted knight
 Suspect her truth; yet since no' untruth he knew,
 Her fawning love with foule disdainefull spight
 He would not shend; but said, "Deare dame, I rew
 That for my sake unknowne such griefe unto you grew:

"Assure your selfe, it fell not all to ground;
 For all so deare, as life is to my hart,
 I deeme your love, and hold me to you bound:
 Ne let vaine fears procure your needlesse smart,
 Where cause is none; but to your rest depart."
 Not all content, yet seemd she to appease
 Her mournfull plaintes, beguiled of her art,
 And fed with words, that could not chose but please:
 So, slyding softly forth, she turnd as to her case.

Long after lay he musing at her mood,
 Much griev'd to thinke that gentle dame so light,
 For whose defence he was to shed his blood.
 At last dull wearines of former fight
 Having yroekt asleepe his irkesome spright,
 That troublous Dreame gan freshly tosse his braine
 With bowres, and beds, and ladies deure delight:
 But, when he saw his labour all was vaine,
 With that unisformed spright he backe returnd againe.

CANTO II.

The guilefull great enchaunter parts
 The Redcrosse knight from Truth:
 Into whose stead faire Falshood steps,
 And workes him woefull ruth.

By this the northerne wagoner had set
 His sevenfold teme behind the stedfast starre
 That was in ocean waves yet never wet,
 But firme is fixt, and sendeth light from farre
 To all that in the wide deepe wandring arre;
 And chearefull chaunticlere with his note shrill
 Had warn'd once, that Phoebus fiery carre
 In hast was climbing up the easterne hill.
 Full envious that Night so long his roome did fill:

When those accursed messengers of hell,
 That feigning Dreame, and that faire-forged spright,
 Came to their wicked maister, and gan tell
 Their bootelesse paines, and ill-succeeding night:
 Who, all in rage to see his skillfull might
 Deluded so, gan threaten hellish paine
 And sad Prosérpines wrath, them to affright.
 But, when he saw his threatning was but vaine,
 He cast about, and searcht his baleful bokes againe.

Eftsoones he tooke that miscreated Faire,
 And that false other spright, on whom he spread
 A seeming body of the subtile aire,
 Like a young squire, in loves and lustyhed
 His wanton daies that ever loosely led,
 Without regard of armes and dreaded fight;
 Those two he tooke, and in a secrete bed,
 Covered with darkenes and misdeeming night,
 Them both together laid, to ioy in vaine delight.

Forthwith he runnes with feigned-faithfull hast
 Unto his guest, who, after troublous sights
 And dreames, gan now to take more sound repast;
 Whom suddenly he wakes with fearful frights,
 As one aghast with feends or damned sprights,
 And to him calls; " Rise, rise, unhappy swaine,
 That here wex old in sleepe, whiles wicked wights
 Have knit themselves in Venus shameful chaine:
 Come, see where your false lady doth her honor staine.

All in a maze he suddenly up start
 With sword in hand, and with the old man went;
 Who soone him brought into a secret part,
 Where that false couple were full closely ment
 In wanton lust and leud embracement:
 Which when he saw, he burnt with gealous fire;
 The eie of reason was with rage yblent;
 And would have slaine them in his furious ire,
 But hardly was restrained of that aged sire.

Retourning to his bed in torment great,
 And bitter anguish of his guilty sight,
 He could not rest; but did his stout heart eat,
 And wast his inward gall with deepe despight,
 Yrkesome of life, and too long lingring night.
 At last faire Hesperus in highest skie
 Had spent his lampe, and brought forth dawning light;
 Then up he rose, and clad him hastily;
 The dwarfe him brought his steed: so both away do fly.

Now when the rosy-fingered Morning faire,
 Weary of aged Tithones saffron bed,
 Had spread her purple robe through dewy aire;
 And the high hills Titan discovered;
 The royall virgin shooke off drousyhed:
 And, rising forth out of her baser bowre,
 Lookt for her knight, who far away was fled,
 And for her dwarfe, that wont to waite each howre:—
 Then gan she wail and weepe to see that woeful stowre.

And after him she rode with so much speede,
 As her slowe beast could make; but all in vaine:
 For him so far had borne his light-foot steede,
 Pricked with wrath and fiery fierce disdaine,
 That him to follow was but fruitlesse paine:
 Yet she her weary limbes would never rest;
 But every hil and dale, each wood and plaine,
 Did search, sore grieved in her gentle brest,
 He so ungently left her, whom she loved best.

But subtile Archimago, when his guests
 He saw divided into double parts,
 And Una wandring in woods and forrests,
 (Th' end of his drift,) he praised his diuelish arts,
 That had such might over true meaning harts:
 Yet rests not so, but other meanes doth make,
 How he may worke unto her further smarts:
 For her he hated as the hissing snake,
 And in her many troubles did most pleasure take.

He then devisde himselfe how to disguise;
 For by his mighty science he could take
 As many formes and shapes in seeming wise,
 As ever Proteus to himselfe could make:
 Sometime a fowle, sometime a fish in lake,
 Now like a foxe, now like a dragon fell;
 That of himselfe he ofte for feare would quake,
 And oft would flie away. O who can tell
 The hidden powre of herbes, and might of magick spell!

But now seemde best the person to put on
 Of that good knight, his late beguiled guest:—
 In mighty armes he was yelad anon,
 And silver shield; upon his coward brest
 A bloody crosse, and on his craven crest
 A bounch of heares discoloured diversly.
 Full iolly knight he seemde, and wel address;
 And, when he sate upon his courser free,
 Saint George himselfe ye would have deemed him to be.

But he, the knight, whose semblaunt he did beare,
 The true Saint George, was wandred far away,
 Still flying from his thoughts and gealous feare:
 Will was his guide, and grieve led him astray.
 At last him chaunst to meete upon the way
 A faithlesse Sarazin, all armed to point,
 In whose great shield was writ with letters gay
Sans joy; full large of limbe and every ioint
 He was, and cared not for God or man a point.

Hee had a faire companion of his way,
 A goodly lady clad in scarlot red,
 Pursled with gold and pearle of rich assay;
 And like a Persian mitre on her hed
 Shee wore, with crowns and owches garnished,
 The which her lavish lovers to her gave:
 Her wanton palfrey all was overspred
 With tinsell trappings, woven like a wave,
 Whose bridle rung with golden bells and bosses brave.

With faire disport, and courting dalliaunce,
 She intertaine her lover all the way;
 But, when she saw the knight his speare aduancee,
 Shee soone left off her mirth and wanton play,
 And bad her knight addresse him to the fray;
 His foe was nigh at hand. He, pricke with pride,
 And hope to winne his ladies heart that day,
 Forth spurred fast; adowne his coursers side
 The red bloud trickling stained the way, as he did ride.

The knight of the Rederosse, when him he spide
 Spurring so hote with rage dispiteous,
 Gan fairely couch his speare, and towards ride:
 Soone meete they both, both fell and furious,
 That, daunted with their forces hideous,
 Their steeds doe stagger, and amazed stand;
 And eke themselves, too rudely rigorous,
 Astonied with the stroke of their owne hand,
 Doe backe rebutte, and each to other yealdeth land.

As when two rams, stird with ambitious pride,
 Fight for the rule of the rich-fleeced flocke,
 Their horned fronts so fierce on either side
 Doe meete, that, with the terror of the shoocke
 Astonied, both stand sencelesse as a blocke,
 Forgetfull of the hanging victory:
 So stood these twaine, unmoved as a rocke,
 Both staring fierce, and holding idly
 The broken reliques of their former cruelty.

The Sarazin, sore daunted with the buffe,
 Snatcheth his sword, and fiercely to him flies;
 Who well it wards, and quyteth cuff with cuff:
 Each others equall puissance envies,
 And through their iron sides with cruell spies
 Does seeke to perce; repining courage yields
 No foote to foe: the flashing fier flies,
 As from a forge, out of their burning shields;
 And streams of purple bloud new die the verdant fields.

"Curse on that crosse," quoth then the Sarazin,
 "That keeps thy body from the bitter fitt;
 Dead long ygoe, I wote, thou haddest bin,
 Had not that charme from thee forwarned itt:
 But yet I warne thee now assured sitt,
 And hide thy head." Therewith upon his crest
 With rigor so outrageous he smitt,
 That a large share it hewd out of the rest,
 And glauncing down his shield from blame him fairly blest.

Who, thereat wondrous wroth, the sleeping spark
 Of native vertue gan eftsoones revive;
 And, at his haughty helmet making mark,
 So hugely stroke, that it the steele did rive,
 And cleft his head: he, tumbling downe alive,
 With bloody mouth his mother earth did kis,
 Greeting his grave: his grudging ghost did strive
 With the fraile flesh; at last it flitted is,
 Whither the soules doe fly of men, that live amis.

The lady, when she saw her champion fall,
 Like the old ruines of a broken towre,
 Staid not to waile his woefull funerall;
 But from him fled away with all her powre:
 Who after her as hastily gan scowre,
 Bidding the dwarfe with him to bring away
 The Sarazins shield, signe of the conquereur:
 Her soone he overtooke, and bad to stay;
 For present cause was none of dread her to dismay.

Shee turning backe, with ruefull countenaunce
 Cride, "Merrey, merrey, sir, vouchsafe to show
 On silly dame, subiect to hard mischaunce,
 And to your mighty will." Her humblesse low
 In so ritche weedes, and seeming glorious show,
 Did much emmove his stout heroicke heart;
 And said, "Deare dame, your suddain overthrow
 Much rueth me; but now put feare apart,
 And tel, both who ye be, and who that tooke your part."

Melting in teares, then gan shee thus lament:
 "The wretched woman, whom unhappy howre
 Hath now made thrall to your commandement,
 Before that angry heavens list to lowre,
 And fortune false betraide me to your powre,
 Was, (O what now availeth that I was!)
 Borne the sole daughter of an emperour;
 He that the wide west under his rule has,
 And high hath set his throne where Tiberis doth pas.

"He, in the first flowre of my freshest age,
 Betrothed me unto the onely haire
 Of a most mighty king, most rich and sage;
 Was never prince so faithfull and so faire,
 Was never prince so meeke and debonaire!
 But, ere my hoped day of spousall shone,
 My dearest lord fell from high honors staire
 Into the hands of hys accursed fone,
 And cruelly was slaine; that shall I ever mone!

"His blessed body, spoild of lively breenth,
 Was afterward, I know not how, conuaid,
 And fro me hid; of whose most innocent death
 When tidings came to mee, unhappy maid,
 O, how great sorrow my sad soule assaid!
 Then forth I went his woefull corse to find,
 And many yeares throughout the world I straid,
 A virgin widow; whose deepe-wounded mind
 With love long time did languish, as the stricken hind.

"At last it chaunced this proud Sarazin
 To meete me wandring; who perforce me led
 With him away; but yet could never win
 The fort, that ladies hold in soveraigne dread.
 There lie he now with foule dishonor dead.
 Who, whiles he livde, was called proud Sansfoy,
 The eldest of three brethren; all three bred
 Of one bad sire, whose youngest is Sansioy;
 And twixt them both was born the bloody bold Sansloy.

"In this sad plight, friendlesse, unfortunate,
 Now miserable I Fidessa dwell,
 Craving of you, in pittie of my state,
 To doe none ill, if please ye not doe well."
 He in great passion all this while did dwell,
 More busying his quicke eies, her face to view,
 Then his dull eares, to heare what shee did tell;
 And said, "Faire lady, hart of flint would rew
 The undeserved woes and sorrowes, which ye show.

"Henceforth in safe assuraunce may ye rest,
 Having both found a new friend you to aid,
 And lost an old foe that did you molest:
 Better new friend then old foe is said."
 With chaunge of chear the seeming-simple maid
 Let fal her eien, as shamefast, to the earth,
 And yeelding soft, in that she nought gainsaid.
 So forth they rode, he feining seemely merrth,
 And shee coy lookes: so dainty, they say, maketh dertth.

Long time they thus together traveled;
 Til, weary of their way, they came at last
 Where grew two goodly trees, that faire did spred
 Their armes abroad, with gray mosse overcaste;
 And their greene leaves, trembling with every blast,
 Made a calme shadowe far in compasse round:
 The fearfull shepheard, often there aghast,
 Under them never sat, ne wont there sound
 His mery oaten pipe; but shund th' unlucky ground.

But this good knight, soone as he them can spie,
 For the coole shade him thither hastily got;
 For golden Phoebus, now ymounted hie,
 From fiery wheelles of his faire chariot
 Hurled his beame so scorching cruell hot,
 That living creature mote it not abide;
 And his new lady it endured not.
 There they alight, in hope themselves to hide
 From the fierce heat, and rest their weary limbs a tide.

Faire-seemely pleasaunce each to other makes,
 With goodly purposes, there as they sit;
 And in his falsed fancy he her takes
 To be the fairest wight, that lived yit;
 Which to expresse, he bends his gentle wit;
 And, thinking of those braunches greene to frame
 A girlond for her dainty forehead sit.
 He pluckt a bough; out of whose rifte there came
 Smal drops of gory bloud, that trickled down the same.

Therewith a piteous yelling voice was heard,
 Crying, "O spare with guilty hands to teare
 My tender sides in this rough rynd embard;
 But fly, ah! fly far hence away, for feare
 Least to you hap, that happened to me heare,
 And to this wretched lady, my deare love;
 O too deare love, love bought with death too deare!"
 Astond he stood, and up his heare did hove:
 And with that suddein horror could no member move.

At last whenas the dreadfull passion
 Was overpast, and manhood well awake;
 Yet musing at the straunge occasion,
 And doubting much his sence, he thus bespake:
 "What voice of damned ghost from Limbo lake,
 Or guilefull spright wandring in empty aire,
 (Both which fraile men doe oftentimes mistake,)
 Sends to my doubtful cares these speeches rare,
 And ruefull plaints, me bidding guiltlesse blood to spare?"

Then, groning deep; "Nor damned ghost," quoth he,
 "Nor guileful sprite, to thee these words doth speake;
 But once a man I'radubio, now a tree;
 Wretched man, wretched tree! whose nature weake
 A cruell witch, her cursed will to wreake,
 Hath thus transformd, and plast in open plaines,
 Where Boreas doth blow full bitter bleake,
 And scorching sunne does dry my secret vaines;
 For though a tree I seeme, yet cold and heat me paines."

"Say on, Fradubio, then, or man or tree,"
 Quoth then the knight; "by whose mischiévous arts
 Art thou misshaped thus, as now I see?
 He oft finds medicine who his griefe imparts;
 But double griefs afflict concealing harts;
 As raging flames who striveth to suppress."

 "The author then," said he, "of all my smarte,
 Is one Duessa, a false sorceresse.
 This many errant knights hath brought to wretchednesse.

"In prime of youthly yeares, when corage hott
 The fire of love and ioy of chevalree
 First kindled in my brest, it was my lott
 To love this gentle lady, whome ye see
 Now not a lady, but a seeming tree;
 With whome as once I rode accompanyde,
 Me chaunced of a knight encountred bee,
 That had a like faire lady by his syde;
 Lyke a faire lady, but did fowle Duessa hyde;

"Whose forged beauty he did take in hand
 All other dames to have exceeded farre;
 I in defence of mine did likewise stand,
 Mine, that did then shine as the morning starre.
 So both to batteill fierce arraunged arre;
 In which his harder fortune was to fall
 Under my speare; such is the dye of warre.
 His lady, left as a prise martiall,
 Did yield her comely person to be at my call.

"So doubly lov'd of ladies unlike faire,
 Th' one seeming such, the other such indeede,
 One day in doubt I cast for to compare
 Whether in beauties glorie did exceede;
 A rosy girlond was the victors meede.
 Both seemde to win, and both seemde won to bee;
 So hard the discord was to be agreede.
 Eræliissa was as faire, as faire mote bee,
 And ever false Duessa seemde as faire as shee.

"The wicked witch, now seeing all this while
 The doubtfull ballaunce equally to sway,
 What not by right, she cast to win by guile;
 And, by her hellish science, raisd streight way
 A foggy mist that overcast the day,
 And a dull blast that breathing on her face
 Dimmed her former beauties shining ray,
 And with foule ugly forme did her disgrace:
 Then was she fayre alone, when none was faire in place.

"Then cride she out, 'Fye, fye, deformed wight
Whose borrowed beautie now appeareth plaine
To have before bewitched all mens sight:
O leave her soone, or let her soone be slaine!"
Her loathly visage viewing with disdain,
Eftsoones I thought her such as she me told,
And would have kild her; but with faigned paine
The false witch did my wrathfull hand withhold:
So left her, where she now is turned to treen mould."

"Thensforth I tooke Duessa for my dame,
And in the witch unweeting ioyd long time;
No ever wist, but that she was the sump:
Till on a day (that day is everie prime,
When witches wout do penancee for their crime,)
I chaunst to see her in her proper hew,
Bathing her selfe in origane and thyme:
A filthy foule old woman I did vew,
That ever to have toucht her I did deadly row."

"Her neather partes misshapen monstrous,
Were hidd in water, that I could not see;
But they did seeme more foule and hideous,
Then womans shipe man would beleewe to be.
Thensforth from her most beastly companie
I gan refraine, in minde to slipp away,
Soone as appeard safe opportunitie:
For danger great, if not assurd decay,
I saw before mine eyes, if I were knowne to stay."

"The divelish hag, by chaunges of my cheare,
Perceiv'd my thought; and, drownd in sleepe night,
With wicked herbes and oyntments did besmeare
My body, all through charmes and magicke night,
That all my senses were bereaved quight:
Then brought she me into this desert waste,
And by my wretched lovers side me pight;
Where now enclod in wooden wals full faste,
Banisht from living wights, our wearie daies we waste."

"But how long time," said then the Elfin knight,
"Are you in this misformed hous to dwell?"
"We may not chaunge," quoth he, "this evill plight,
Till we be bathed in a living well;
That is the terme prescribed by the spell."
"O how," sayd he, "mote I that well out find,
That may restore you to your wonted well?"
"Time and suffised fates to former kynd
Shall us restore; none else from hence may us unbynd."

5599

The false Duessa, now Fidessa hight,
 Heard how in vaine Fradubio did lament,
 And knew well all was true. But the good knight,
 Full of sad feare and ghastly dreriment,
 When all this speech the living tree had spent,
 The bleeding bough did thrust into the ground,
 That from the blood he might be innocent,
 And with fresh clay did close the wooden wound:
 Then turning to his lady, dead with feare her fownd.

Her seeming dead he fownd with feigned feare,
 As all unweeting of that well she knew;
 And paynd himselfe with busie care to reare
 Her out of carelesse swowne. Her eyelids blew,
 And dimmed sight with pale and deadly hew,
 At last she up gan lift; with trembling cheare
 Her up he tooke, (too simple and too trew.)
 And oft her kist. At length, all passed feare,
 He set her on her steede, and forward forth did beare.

CANTO III.

Forsoaken Truth long seekes her love,
 And makes the lyon mylde;
 Marres blind Devotions mart, and fals
 In hand of leachour vyld.

NOUGHT is there under heav'ns wide hollownesse,
 That moves more deare compassion of mind,
 Then beautie brought t' unworthie wretchednesse
 Through envies snares, or fortunes freakes unkind.
 I, whether lately through her brightnes blynd,
 Or through alleageance, and fast fealty,
 Which I do owe unto all womankynd,
 Feele my hart perst with so great agony,
 When such I see, that all for pitty I could dy.

And now it is empassion'd so deepe,
 For fairest Unaes sake, of whom I sing,
 That my frayle eies these lines with teares do steepe,
 To thinke how she through guyleful handeling,
 Though true as touch, though daughter of a king,
 Though faire as ever living wight was fayre,
 Though nor in word nor deede ill meriting,
 Is from her knight divorced in despayre,
 And her dew loves deryv'd to that vile witches shayre.

Yet she, most faithfull ladie, all this while
 Forsaken, wofull, solitarie mayd,
 Far from all peoples preace, as in exile,
 In wilderness and wastfull deserts strayd,
 To seeke her knight : who, subtilly betrayd
 Through that late vision which th' enchaunter wrought,
 Had her abandon'd : she of nought afraйд,
 Through woods and wastnes wide him daily sought,
 Yet wished tydings none of him unto her brought.

One day, nigh wearie of the yrkesome way,
 From her unhastie beast she did alight ;
 And on the grasse her dainty limbs did lay
 In secrete shadow, far from all mens sight ;
 From her fayre head her fillet she undight,
 And layd her stole aside : Her angels face,
 As the great eye of heaven, shyned bright,
 And made a sunshine in the shady place :
 Did never mortall eye behold such heavenly grace.

It fortun'd, out of the thickest wood
 A ramping lyon rushed suddenly,
 Hunting full greedy after salvage blood
 Soone as the royall virgin he did spy,
 With gaping mouth at her ran greedily,
 To have attonce devourd her tender corse ;
 But to the pray when as he drew more ny,
 His bloody rage aswaged with remorse,
 And, with the sight amazd, forgot his furious force.

Instend thereof, he kist her wearie feet,
 And lickt her lilly hands with fawning tong ;
 As he her wronged innocence did weat.
 O how can beautie maister the most strong,
 And simple truth subdue avenging wrong !
 Whose yielded pryde and proud submission,
 Still dreading death, when she had marked long,
 Her hart gan melt in great compassion ;
 And drizling teares did shed for pure affection.

"The lyon, lord of everie beast in field,"
 Quoth she, "his princely puissance doth abate,
 And mightie proud to humble weake does yield,
 Forgetfull of the hungry rage, which late
 Him prickt, in pittie of my sad estate :—
 But he, my lyon, and my noble lord,
 How does he find in cruell hart to hate
 Her, that him lov'd, and ever most adord
 As the god of my life ? why hath he me abhord ?"

Redounding teares did choke th' end of her plaint,
 Which softly echoed from the neighbour wood;
 And, sad to see her sorrowfull constraint,
 The kingly beast upon her gazing stood;
 With pittie calmd, downe fell his angry mood.
 At last, in close hart shutting up her payne,
 Arose the virgin, borne of heavenly brood,
 And to her snowy palfrey got agayne,
 To seeke her strayed champion if she might attayne.

The lyon would not leave her desolate,
 But with her went along, as a strong gard
 Of her chast person, and a faythfull mate
 Of her sad troubles and misfortunes hard;
 Still, when she slept, he kept both watch and ward;
 And, when she wakt, he wayted diligent,
 With humble service to her will prepar'd:
 From her fayre eyes he took commandement,
 And ever by her lookes conceived her intent.

Long she thus traueiled through deserts wyde,
 By which she thought her wandring knight shold pas,
 Yet never shew of living wight espyde;
 Till that at length she found the trodden gras,
 In which the tract of peoples footing was,
 Under the steepe foot of a mountaine bore;
 The same she followes, till at last she has
 A damzel spyde slow-footing her before,
 That on her shoulders sad a pot of water bore.

To whom approaching, she to her gan call,
 To weet, if dwelling-place were nigh at hand:
 But the rude wench her answerd nought at all;
 She could not heare, nor speake, nor understand:
 Till, seeing by her side the lyon stand,
 With suddein feare her pitcher downe she threw
 And fled away: for never in that land
 Face of fayre lady she before did vew,
 And that dredd lyons looke her cast in deadly hew.

Full fast she fled, ne ever lookt behynd,
 As if her life upon the wager lay;
 And home she came, whereas her mother blynd
 Sate in eternall night; nought could she say;
 But, suddeine catching hold, did her dismay
 With quaking hands, and other signes of feare;
 Who, full of ghastly fright and cold affray,
 Gan shut the dore. By this arrived there
 Dame Una, weary dame, and entrance did requere:

Which when none yielded, her unruly pago
 With his rude clawes the wicket open rent,
 And let her in; where, of his cruell rage
 Nigh dead with feare, and faint astonishment,
 Shee found them both in darksome corner pent:
 Where that old woman day and night did pray
 Upon her beads, devoutly penitent:
 Nine hundred Pater nosters every day,
 And thrice nine hundred Aves, she was wont to say.

And, to augment her painefull penance more,
 Thrice every weeke in ashes shee did sitt,
 And next her wrinkled skin, rough sackcloth wore
 And thrise-three times did fast from any butt:
 But now for feare her beads she did forgett,
 Whose needlesse dread for to remove away,
 Faire Una framed words and count'naunce fitt;
 Which hardly doen, at length she gan them pray,
 That in their cotage small that night she rest her may.

The day is spent; and cometh drowsie night,
 When every creature shrouded is in sleepe;
 Sad Una downe her laies in weary plight,
 And at her feete the lyon watch doth keepe;
 In stead of rest, she does lament, and weepe,
 For the late losse of her deare-loved knight,
 And sighes, and grones, and evermore does steepe
 Her tender brest in bitter teares all night;
 All night she thinks too long, and often lookes for light.

Now when Aldeboran was mounted hyc,
 Above the shinie Cassiopeias chaire,
 And all in deadly sleepe did drowned lye,
 One knocked at the dore, and in would fare;
 He knocked fast, and often curst, and sware,
 That ready entraunce was not at his call;
 For on his backe a heavy load he bare
 Of nightly stelths, and pillage severall,
 Which he had got abroad by purchas criminall.

He was, to weete, a stout and sturdy thiefe,
 Wont to robbe churches of their ornaments,
 And poore mens boxes of their due reliefe,
 Which given was to them for good intents:
 The holy saints of their rich vestiments
 He did disrobe, when all men carelesse slept;
 And spoild the priests of their habiliments;
 Whiles none the holy things in safety kept,
 Then he by conning sleights in at the window crept.

And all, that he by right or wrong could find,
 Unto this house he brought, and did bestow
 Upon the daughter of this woman blind,
 Abessa, daughter of Coreeca slow,
 With whom he whoredome used that few did know,
 And fed her fatt with feast of offerings,
 And plenty, which in all the land did grow;
 Ne spared he to give her gold and rings:
 And now he to her brought part of his stolen things.

Thus, long the dore with rage and threats he bett;
 Yet of these fearfull women none durst rize,
 (The lyon frayed them,) him in to lett;
 He would no longer stay him to advize,
 But open breakes the dore in furions wize,
 And entring is; when that disdainfull beast,
 Encountring fierce, him sudden doth surprize;
 And seizing cruell clawes on trembling brest,
 Under his lordly foot him proudly hath suppress.

Him booteth not resist, nor succour call,
 His bleeding hart is in the vengers hand;
 Who streight him rent in thousand peeces small,
 And quite dismembred hath: the thirsty land
 Dronke up his life; his corse left on the strand.
 His fearefull freends weare out the wofull night,
 Ne dare to weepe, nor seeme to understand
 The heavie hap, which on them is alight;
 Affraid, least to themselves the like mishapen might.

Now when broad day the world discovered has,
 Up Una rose, up rose the lyon eke;
 And on their former journey forward pas,
 In waies unknowne, her wandring knight to seeke,
 With paines far passing that long-wandring Greeke,
 That for his love refused deitye:
 Such were the labours of this lady meeke,
 Still seeking him, that from her still did flye;
 Then furthest from her hope, when most she weened nye.

Soone as she parted thence, the fearfull twayne,
 That blind old woman, and her daughter dear,
 Came forth; and, finding Kirkrapine there slayne,
 For anguish great they gan to rend their heare,
 And beat their breasts, and naked flesh to teare:
 And when they both had wept and wayld their fill,
 Then forth they ran, like two amazed deare,
 Halfe mad through malice and revenging will,
 To follow her, that was the causer of their ill:

Whome overtaking, they gan loudly bray,
 With hollow howling, and lamenting cry;
 Shamefully at her rayling all the way,
 And her accusing of dishonesty,
 That was the flowre of faith and chastity:
 And still, amidst her rayling, she did pray
 That plagues, and mischances, and long misery,
 Might fall on her, and follow all the way;
 And that in endlesse error she might ever stray.

But, when she saw her prayers nought prevaile,
 Shee backe retourned with some labour lost;
 And in the way, as shee did weepe and waile,
 A knight her mett in mighty armes embost,
 Yet knight was not for all his bragging bost;
 But subtile Archimag, that Una sought
 By traynes into new troubles to have teste:
 Of that old woman tidings he besought,
 If that of such a lady shee could tellen ought.

Therewith she gan her passion to renew,
 And cry, and curse, and raile, and rend her heare,
 Saying, that harlott she too lately knew,
 That causd her shed so many a bitter teare;
 And so forth told the story of her feare,
 Much seemed he to mone her haplesse chaunce,
 And after for that lady did inquere;
 Which being taught, he forward gan advaunce
 His fair enchaunted steed, and eke his charmed launce.

Ere long he came where Una traveld slow,
 And that wilde champion wayting her besyde;
 Whome seeing such, for dread hee durst not show
 Him selfe too nigh at hand, but turned wyde
 Unto an hil; from whence when she him spyde,
 By his like-seeming shield her knight by name
 Shee weend it was, and towards him gan ride;
 Approaching nigh she wist it was the same;
 And with faire fearefull humblesse towards him shee came:

And weeping said, "Ah my long-lacked lord,
 Where have ye bene thus long out of my sight?
 Much feared I to have bene quight abhord,
 Or ought have done, that ye displeasen might,
 That should as death unto my deare heart light;
 For since mine eie your ioyous sight did mis,
 My chearefull day is turnd to chearelesse night,
 And eke my night of death the shadow is:
 But welcome now, my light, and shining lampe of blis!"

He thereto meeting said, " My dearest dame,
 Far be it from your thought, and fro my wil,
 To thinke that knighthood I so much should shame,
 As you to leave that have me loved stil,
 And chose in Faery court, of meere goodwil,
 Where noblest knights were to be found on earth.
 The earth shall sooner leave her kindly skil
 To bring forth fruit, and make eternal derth,
 Then I leve you, my hefe, yborn of heavenly berth.

" And sooth to say, why I lefte you so long.
 Was for to seeke adventure in straunge place;
 Where, Archimago said, a felon strong
 To many knights did daily worke disgrace;
 But knight he now shall never more deface:
 Good cause of mine excuse that mote yo please
 Well to accept, and evermore embrace
 My faithfull service, that by land and seas
 Have vovd you to defend: now then your plaint appease."

His lovely words her seemd due recompence
 Of all her passed paines: one loving howro
 For many yeares of sorrow can dispence;
 A dram of sweete is worth a pound of sowre.
 Shee has forgott how many a woeful stowre
 For him she late endurd; she speakes no more
 Of past: true is, that true love hath no powre
 To looken backe; his eies be fixt before.
 Before her stands her knight, for whom she toyl'd so sore.

Much like, as when the beaten marinere,
 That long hath wandred in the ocean wide,
 Ofte soust in swelling Tethys saltish teare;
 And long time having tand his tawney hide
 With blustering breath of heaven, that none can bide,
 And scorching flames of fierce Orions hound;
 Soone as the port from far he has espide,
 His'chearfull whistle merily doth sound,
 And Nereus crownes with cups; his mates him pledg around;

Such ioy made Una, when her knight she found;
 And eke th' enchaunter ioyous seemde no lesse
 Then the glad marchant, that does vew from ground
 His ship far come from watrie wilderness;
 He hurles out voves, and Neptune oft doth blesse
 So forth they past; and all the way they spent
 Discoursing of her dreadful late distresse,
 In which he askt her, what the lyon ment;
 Who told, her all that fell in iourney, as she went.

They had not ridden far, when they might see
 One prieking towards them with hastie heat,
 Full strongly armd. and on a courser free,
 That through his fiersnesse fomed all with sweat,
 And the sharpe yron did for anger eat,
 When his hot ryder spurd his chauffed side;
 His looke was sterne, and seemed still to threat
 Cruell revenge, which he in hart did hyde:
 And on his shield Sans loy in bloody lines was dyde.

When nigh he drew unto this gentle parre,
 And saw the red crosse, which the knight did beare,
 He burnt in fire; and gan eftsoones prepare
 Himselfe to batteill with his couched speare.
 Loth was that other, and did faint through feare,
 To taste th' untryed dint of deadly steele:
 But yet his lady did so well him cheare,
 That hope of new good hap he gan to feele;
 So bent his speare, and spurd his horse with yron heele.

But that proud Paynim forward came so ferece
 And full of wrath, that, with his sharp-head speare,
 Through vainly crossed shield he quite did peere;
 And, had his staggering steede not shronke for feare,
 Through shield and body eke he should him beare:
 Yet, so great was the puissance of his push,
 That from his sadle quite he did him beare:
 He tombling rudely downe to ground did rush,
 And from his gored wound a well of bloud did gush.

Dismounting lightly from his loftie steed,
 He to him lept, in minde to reave his life,
 And proudly said; "Lo, there the worthie meed
 Of him, that slew Sansloy with bloody knife;
 Henceforth his ghost, freed from repining strife,
 In peace may passen over Lethe lake;
 When mourning altars, purgd with enemies life,
 The black infernall furies doen aslake:
 Life from Sansloy thou tookst, Sansloy shall from thee take."

• Therewith in haste his helmet gan unlace,
 Till Una cride, "O hold that heaveie hand,
 Dear sir, what ever that thou be in place:
 Enough is, that thy foe doth vanquisht stand
 Now at thy mercy; mercy not withstand;
 For he is one the truest knight alive,
 Though conquered now he lye on lowly land;
 And, whilst him fortune favourd, fayre did thrive
 In bloody field; therefore of life him not deprive."

Her piteous wordes might not abate his rage;
 But, rudely rending up his helmet, would
 Have slayne him straight; but when he sees his age,
 And hoarie head of Archimago old,
 His hasty hand he doth amased hold,
 And, halfe a-shamed, wondred at the sight:
 For that old man well knew he, though untold,
 In charmes and magick to have wondrous might;
 Ne ever wont in field, ne in round lists, to fight;

And said, "Why Archimago, lucklesse syre,
 What doe I see? what hard mishap is this,
 That hath thee hether brought to taste mine yre?
 Or thine the fault, or mine the error is,
 Instead of foe to wound my friend amis?"
 He answered nought, but in a traunee still lay,
 And on those guilefull dazed eyes of his
 The cloude of death did sit; which doen away,
 He left him lying so, ne would no lenger stay:

But to the virgin comes; who all this while
 Amased stands, herselfe so mockt to see
 By him, who has the guerdon of his guile,
 For so misfeigning her true knight to bee:
 Yet is she now in more perplexitie,
 Left in the hand of that same Paynim bold,
 From whom her booteth not at all to flie:
 Who, by her cleanly garment catching hold,
 Her from her palfrey pluckt, her visage to behold.

But her fiers servant, full of kingly aw
 And high disdain, whenas his souveraine dame
 So rudely handled by her foe he saw,
 With gaping iawes full greedy at him came,
 And, ramping on his shield, did weene the samo
 Have reft away with his sharp rending clawes:
 But he was stout, and lust did now inflame
 His corage more, that from his griping pawes
 He hath his shield redeemd; and forth his swerd he drawes.

O then, too weake and feeble was the forse
 Of salvage beast, his puissanee to withstand!
 For he was strong, and of so mightie corse,
 As ever wielded speare in warlike hand;
 And feates of armes did wisely understand.
 Eftsoones he perced through his chaufed chest
 With thrilling point of deadly yron brand,
 And launcht his lordly hart: with death opprest
 He ror'd aloud, whiles life forsooke his stubborne brest.

Who now is left to keepe the forlorne maid
 From raging spoile of lawlesse victors will?
 Her faithfull gard remov'd; her hope dismayd;
 Her selfe a yielded pray to save or spill!
 He now, lord of the field, his pride to fill,
 With foule reproches and disdaineful spight
 Her vildly entertaines; and, will or nill,
 Beares her away upon his courser light:
 Her prayers nought prevaile: his rage is more of might.

And all the way, with great lamenting paine,
 And piteous plaintes, she filleth his dull eares,
 That stony hart could riven have in twaine;
 And all the way she wetts with flowing teares;
 But he, enrag'd with rancor, nothing heares.
 Her servile beast yet would not leave her so,
 But follows her far off, ne ought he feares
 To be partaker of her wandring woe:
 More mild in beastly kind, then that her beastly foo.

CANTO IV.

To sinfull hous of Pryde Duessa-
 a guydes the faithfull knight;
 Where, brothers death to wreak, Sansloy
 Doth chaleng him to fight.

YOUNG knight whatever, that dost armes professe,
 And through long labours hunttest after fame,
 Beware of fraud, beware of ficklenesse,
 In choise, and chaunge, of thy deare-loved dame;
 Least thou of her believe too lightly blame,
 And rash misweening doe thy hart remove:
 For unto knight there is no greater shame,
 Then lightnesse and inconstancie in love:
 That doth this Rederosse knights ensample plainly prove.

Who, after that he had faire Una lorne,
 Through light misdeeming of her loialtie;
 And false Duessa in her sted had borne,
 Called Fidess', and so supposd to be;
 Long with her traveild; till at last they see
 A goodly building, bravely garnished;
 The house of mightie prince it seemd to be;
 And towards it a broad high way that led,
 All bare through peoples feet, which thether traveiled.

Great troupes of people traveild thetherward
 Both day and night, of each degree and place;
 But few returned, having scaped hard,
 With balefull beggery, or foule disgrace;
 Which ever after in most wretched case,
 Like loathsome lazars, by the hedges lay.
 Thether Dnessa badl him bend his pace;
 For she is wearie of the toilsom way;
 And also nigh consumed is the lingring day.

A stately pallace built of squared bricke,
 Which cunningly was without morter laud,
 Whose wals were high, but nothing strong nor thick,
 And golden foile all over them displaid,
 That purest skye with brightnesse they dismaid:
 High lifted up were many loftie towres,
 And goodly galleries far over laid,
 Full of faire windowes and delightful howres;
 And on the top a diall told the timely howres.

It was a goodly heape for to behould,
 And spake the praises of the workmans witt;
 But full great pittie, that so faire a mould
 Did on so weake foundation ever sitt:
 For on a sandie hill, that still did flitt
 And fall away, it mounted was full hie:
 That every breath of heaven shaken itt;
 And all the hinder partes, that few could spie,
 Were ruinous and old, but painted cunningly.

Arrived there, they passed in forth right;
 For still to all the gates stood open wide:
 Yet charge of them was to a porter hight,
 Cald Malvenú, who entrance none denide;
 Thence to the hall, which was on every sied
 With rich array and costly arras dight;
 Infinite sortes of people did abide
 There waiting long, to win the wished sight
 Of her, that was the lady of that pallace bright.

By them they passe, all gazing on them round,
 And to the presence mount; whose glorious vew
 Their frayle amazed senses did confound.
 In living princes court none ever knew
 Such endlesse riches, and so sumptuous shew;
 Ne Persia selfe, the nourse of pompous pride,
 Like ever saw: and there a noble crew
 Of lords and ladies stood on ever side,
 Which, with their presence fayre, the place much beautifyde.

High above all a cloth of state was spread,
 And a rich throne, as bright as sunny day;
 On which there sate, most brave embellished
 With royall robes and gorgeous array,
 A mayden queene that shone, as Titans ray,
 In glistring gold and perelesse pretious stone;
 Yet her bright blazing beautie did assay
 To dim the brightnesse of her glorious throne,
 As envying her selfe, that too exceeding shone:

Exceeding shone, like Phœbus fayrest childe,
 That did presume his fathers tyrie wayne.
 And flaming mouthes of steedes unwonted wilde,
 Through highest heaven with weaker hand to rayne;
 Proud of such glory and advancement vayne,
 While flashing beames do daze his feeble even,
 He leaves the welkin way most beaten playne.
 And, rapt with whirling wheelles, inflames the skyen
 With fire not made to burne, but fayrely for to shyne.

So proud she shyned in her princely state,
 Looking to heaven; for earth she did disdayne:
 And sitting high; for lowly she did hate:
 Lo, underneath her scornefull feete was layne
 A dreadfull dragon with an hideous trayne;
 And in her hand she held a mirrhour bright,
 Wherein her face she often vewed fayne.
 And in her selfe-lov'd semblance took delight;
 For she was wondrous faire, as any living wight.

Of griesly Pluto she the daughter was,
 And sad Prosérpina, the queene of hell;
 Yet did she thinke her pearcesse worth to pas
 That parentage, with pride so did she swell;
 And thundring Iove, that high in heaven doth dwell
 And wield the world, she claymed for her syre;
 Or if that any else did Iove excell;
 For to the highest she did still aspyre;
 Or, if ought higher were then that, did it desyre.

And proud Lucifera men did her call,
 That made her selfe a queene, and crownd to be;
 Yet rightfull kingdome she had none at all,
 No heritage of native soveraintie;
 But did usurpe with wrong and tyrannie
 Upon the scepter, which she now did hold:
 Ne ruld her realme with lawes, but pollicie,
 And strong advizement of six wizards old,
 That with their counsels bad her kingdome did uphold.

Soone as the elfin knight in presence came,
 And false Duessa, seeming lady fayre,
 A gentle husher, Vanitie by name,
 Made rowme, and passage for them did prepaire:
 So goodly brought them to the lowest stayre
 Of her high throne; where they, on humble knee
 Making obeysaunce, did the cause declare,
 Why they were come, her roiall state to see,
 To prove the wide report of her great maistee.

With loftie eyes, halfe loth to looke so lowe,
 She thancked them in her disdainfull wise;
 Ne other grace vouchsafed them to shewe
 Of princesse worthy; scarce them bad arise,
 Her lordes and ladies all this while devise
 Themselves to setten forth to straungers sight:
 Some frounce their curled heare in courtly guise;
 Some prancke their ruffles; and others trimly dight
 Their gay attyre: each others greater pride does spight.

Goodly they all that knight doe entertayne,
 Right glad with him to have increast their crew;
 But to Duess' each one himselfe did payne
 All kindnesse and faire courtesie to shew;
 For in that court whylome her well they knew:
 Yet the stout Faery mongst the middest crowd
 Thought all their glorie vaine in knightlie vew,
 And that great princesse too exceeding prowd,
 That to strange knight no better countenance allowd.

Suddein upriseth from her stately place
 The roiall dame, and for her coche did call:
 All hurtlen forth; and she, with princely pace,
 As faire Aurora, in her purple pall,
 Out of the east the dawning day doth call,
 So forth she comes; her brightnes brode doth blaze.
 The heapes of people, thronging in the hall,
 Doe ride each other, upon her to gaze:
 Her glorious glitter and light doth all mens eies amaze.

So forth she comes, and to her coche does clyme,
 Adorned all with gold and girlonds gay,
 That seemd as fresh as Flora in her prime;
 And strove to match, in roiall rich array,
 Great Iunoes golden chayre; the which, they say,
 The gods stand gazing on, when she does ride
 To Ioves nigh hous through heavens bras-paved way,
 Drawne of fayre peecoeks, that excell in pride,
 And full of Argus eyes their tayles dispredden wide.

But this was drawne of six unequall beasts.
 On which her six sage counsellours did ryde,
 Taught to obay their bestiall beheasts.
 With like conditions to their kindes applyde;
 Of which the first, that all the rest did guyde,
 Was sluggish Idlenesse, the nourse of Sin;
 Upon a slouthfull asse he chose to ryde,
 Arayd in habit blacke, and amis thin;
 Like to an holy monek, the service to begin.

And in his hand his portesse still he bare,
 That much was worne, but therein little redd;
 For of devotion he had little care,
 Still drownd in sleepe, and most of his daies dedd:
 Searse could he once uphold his heauey hedd,
 To looken whether it were night or day.
 May seeme the wayne was very evil ledd,
 When such an one had guiding of the way,
 That knew not, whether right he went or else astray.

From worldly cares himselfe he did esloyne,
 And greatly shunned manly exercise;
 From everie worke he chalenged essoyn,
 For contemplation sake: yet otherwise
 His life he led in lawlesse riotise;
 By which he grew to grievous malady:
 For in his lustlesse limbs, through evill guise,
 A shaking fever raigud continually:
 Such one was Idlenesse, first of this company.

And by his side rode loathsome Gluttony,
 Deformed creature, on a filthie swyne;
 His belly was upblowne with luxury,
 And eke with fatnesse swollen were his cyne;
 And like a crane his neck was long and fyne,
 With which he swallowed up excessive feast,
 For want whereof poore people oft did pyne:
 And all the way, most like a brutish beast,
 He spued up his gorge, that all did him deteast.

In greene vine leaves he was right fitly clad;
 For other clothes he could not wear for heate:
 And on his head an yvie girland had,
 From under which fast trickled downe the sweat:
 Still as he rode, he somewhat still did eat,
 And in his hande did beare a bouzing can,
 Of which he supt so oft, that on his seat
 His dronken corse he scarce upholden can:
 In shape and life more like a monster then a man.

Unfit he was for any worldly thing.
 And eke unliabie once to stirre or go;
 Not meet to be of counsell to a king.
 Whose mind in meate and drinke was drowned so,
 That from his frend he seeldome knew his fo:
 Full of diseases was his carcas blew,
 And a dry dropsie through his flesh did flow,
 Which by misdiet daily greater grew:
 Such one was Gluttony, the second of that crew.

And next to him rode lustfull Lechery
 Upon a bearded gote, whose rugged heare,
 And whally eies, (the signe of gelosy.)
 Was like the person selfe, whom he did beare:
 Who rough, and blacke, and filthy, did appeare;
 Unseemely man to please fair ladies eye:
 Yet he of ladies oft was loved deare,
 When fairer faces were bid standen by:
 O who does know the bent of womens fantasy!

In a greene gowne he clothed was full faire,
 Which underneath did hide his filthinesse;
 And in his hand a burning hart he bare,
 Full of vaine follies and new-fanglenesse:
 For he was false, and fraught with sicklenesse;
 And learned had to love with secret lookes;
 And well could daunce; and sing with ruefulness;
 And fortunes tell; and read in loving bookes:
 And thousand other waies, to bait his fleshly hookes.

Inconstant man, that loved all he saw,
 And lusted after all, that he did love;
 Ne would his looser life be tide to law,
 But ioyd weake womens hearts to tempt, and prove
 If from their loyall loves he might them move:
 Which lewdnes fild him with reproachfull pain
 Of that foule evill, which all men reprove,
 That rotts the marrow, and consumes the braine:
 Such one was Lechery, the third of all this traine.

And greedy Avarice by him did ride,
 Upon a camell loaden all with gold:
 Two iron coffers hong on either side,
 With precious metall full as they might hold;
 And in his lap an heap of coine he told;
 For of his wicked pelf his god he made,
 And unto hell himselfe for money sold;
 Accursed usury was all his trade;
 And right and wrong ylike in equall ballaunce waide.

His life was nigh unto deaths dore yplaste;
 And thred-bare cote, and cobled shoes, hee ware;
 Ne scarce good morsell all his life did taste;
 But both from backe and belly still did spare,
 To fill his bags, and richesse to compare;
 Yet childe ne kinsman living had he none
 To leave them to; but thorough daily care
 To get, and nightly feare to lose his owne,
 He led a wretched life, unto himselfe unknowne.

Most wretched wight, whom nothing might suffice;
 Whose greedy lust did lacke in greatest store;
 Whose need had end, but no end covetise;
 Whose welth was want; whose plenty made him pore;
 Who had enough, yett wished ever more;
 A vile disease; and eke in foote and hand
 A grievous gout tormented him full sore;
 That well he could not touch, nor goe, nor stand:
 Such one was Avarice, the fourth of this faire band!

And next to him malicious Envy rode
 Upon a ravenous wolfe, and still did chaw
 Between his cankred teeth a venomous tode,
 That all the poison ran about his chaw;
 But inwardly he chewed his owne maw
 At neibors welth, that made him ever sad;
 For death it was, when any good he saw;
 And wept, that cause of weeping none he had;
 But, when he heard of harme, he waxed wondrous glad.

All in a kirtle of discoloured say
 He clothed was, ypaynted full of eies;
 And in his bosome secretly there lay
 An hatefull snake, the which his taile uptyes
 In many folds, and mortall sting implyes:
 Still as he rode, he gnasht his teeth to see
 Those heapes of gold with griple Covetyse;
 And grudged at the great felicitie
 Of proud Lucifera, and his owne companie.

He hated all good workes and vertuous deeds,
 And him no lesse, that any like did use;
 And, who with gracious bread the hungry feeds,
 His almes for want of faith he doth accuse;
 So every good to bad he doth abuse:
 And eke the verse of famous poets witt
 He does backebite, and spightfull poison spues
 From leprous mouth on all that ever writt:
 Such one vile Envy was, that fift in row did sitt.

And him beside rides fierce revenging Wrath,
 Upon a lion, loth for to be led;
 And in his hand a burning brond he hath,
 The which he brandisheth about his hed;
 His eies did hurle forth sparces fiery red,
 And stared sterne on all that him beheld;
 As ashes pale of hew, and seeming ded;
 And on his dagger still his hand he held,
 Trembling through hasty rage, when choler in him sweld

His ruffin raiment all was staine with blood
 Which he had spilt, and all to rags yrent;
 Through unadvised rashnes woxen wood;
 For of his hands he had no government,
 Ne car'd for blood in his avengement:
 But, when the furious fitt was overpast,
 His cruell facts he often would repent;
 Yet, wilfull man, he never would forecast,
 How many mischieves should ensue his heedlesse hast.

Full many mischiefes follow cruell Wrath;
 Abhorred Bloodshed, and tumultuous Strife,
 Unmanly Murder, and unthrifty Seath,
 Bitter Despight with Rancours rusty knife;
 And fretting Griefe, the enemy of life:
 All these, and many evils moe haunt Ire,
 The swelling Splene, and Frenzy raging rise,
 The shaking Palsey, and St. Fraunces fire:
 Such one was Wrath, the last of this ungodly tire.

And, after all, upon the wagon beame
 Rode Sathan with a smarting whip in hand,
 With which he forward lasht the laesy teme,
 So oft as Slowth still in the mire did stand.
 Huge routs of people did about them band,
 Showing for joy; and still before their way
 A foggy mist had covered all the land;
 And, underneath their feet, all scattered lay
 Dead sculls and bones of men whose life had gone astray.

So forth they marchen in this goodly sort,
 To take the solace of the open aire,
 And in fresh flowring fields themselves to sport:
 Emongst the rest rode that false lady faire,
 The foule Duessa, next unto the chaire
 Of proud Lucifer, as one of the traine:
 But that good knight would not so nigh repaire,
 Him selfe estraunging from their ioyauce vaine,
 Whose fellowship seemd far unfitt for warlike swaine.

So, having solaced themselves a space
 With pleasaunce of the breathing fields yfed,
 They backe retourned to the princely place;
 Whereas an errant knight in armes yeled,
 And heathnish shield, wherein with letters red
 Was writt Sans loy, they new arrived find:
 Enflam'd with fury and fiers hardyhed,
 He seemd in hart to harbour thoughts unkind,
 And nourish bloody vengeance in his bitter mind.

Who, when the shamed shield of slaine Sansfoy
 He spide with that same Fary champions page,
 Bewraying him that did of late destroy
 His eldest brother: burning all with rage.
 He to him lept, and that same envious gage
 Of victors glory from him snacht away:
 But th' Elfin knight, which ought that warlike wago,
 Disdaind to loose the meed he wonne in fray:
 And, him rencountring fierce, reskewd the noblo pray.

Therewith they gan to hurtlen greedily,
 Redoubted battaile ready to darrayne,
 And clash their shields, and shake their swords on hy;
 That with their sturre they troubled all the traine:
 Till that great queene, upon eternall paine
 Of high displeasure that ensewen might,
 Commaunded them their fury to refraine;
 And, if that either to that shield had right,
 In equall lists they should the morrow next it fight.

"Ah, dearest dame," quoth then the Paynim bold,
 "Pardon the error of enraged wight,
 Whome great grieve made forgett the raines to hold
 Of reasons rule, to see this recreant knight,
 (No knight, but treachour full of false dispight
 And shameful treason,) who through guile hath slayn
 The prowest knight that ever field did fight,
 Even stout Sansfoy, (O, who can then refrayn!)
 Whose shield he beares renverst, the more to heap disdayn.

"And, to augment the glorie of his guile,
 His dearest love, the faire Fidessa, loe
 Is there possessed of the traytour vile;
 Who reapes the harvest sown by his foe,
 Sown in bloodie field, and bought with woe:
 That—brothers hand shall dearely well requight,
 So be, O Queene, you equall favour showe."
 Him litle answerd th' angry Elfin knight;
 He never meant with words, but swords, to plead his right:

But threw his gauntlet, as a sacred pledg,
 His cause in combat the next day to try:
 So been they parted both, with harts on edg
 To be aveng'd each on his enemy.
 That night they pas in ioy and iollity,
 Feasting and courting both in bowre and hall;
 For steward was excessive Gluttony,
 That of his plenty poured forth to all:
 Which doen, the chamberlain Slowth did to rest them call.

Now whenas darksome night had all displayd
 Her coleblacke curtein over brightest skye;
 The warlike youthes, on dayntie couches layd,
 Did chace away sweet sleepe from sluggish eye,
 To muse on meanes of hoped victory.
 But whenas Morpheus had with leaden mace
 Arrested all that courtly company,
 Uprose Duessa from her resting place,
 And to the Paynims lodging comes with silent pace:

Whom broad awake she findes, in troublous fitt,
 Fore-casting, how his foe he might annoy;
 And him amoves with speeches seeming fitt:
 "Ah, deare Sansioy, next dearest to Sansfoy,
 Cause of my new grieffe, cause of my new ioy;
 Ioyous, to see his ymage in mine eye,
 And greevd, to thinke how foe did him destroy,
 That was the flowre of grace and chevalrye;
 Lo, his Fidessa, to thy secret faith I flye."

With gentle wordes he can her fayrely greet,
 And bad say on the secrete of her hart:
 Then, sighing soft; "I learne that little sweet
 Oft tempred is," quoth she, "with muchell smart:
 For, since my brest was launcht with lovely dart
 Of deare Sansfoy I never ioyed howre,
 But in eternall woes my weaker hart
 Have wasted, loving him with all my powre,
 And for his sake have felt full many an heavy stowre.

"At last, when perils all I weened past,
 And hop'd to reape the crop of all my care,
 Into new woes unweeting I was cast
 By this false saytor, who unworthie ware
 His worthie shield, whom he with guilefull snare
 Entrapped slew, and brought to shamefull grave:
 Me silly maid away with him he bare,
 And ever since hath kept in darksom cave;
 For that I would not yeeld that to Sansfoy I gave.

"But since faire sunne hath sperst that lowring clowd,
 And to my loathed life now shewes some light,
 Under your beames I will me safely shrowd
 From dreaded storme of his disdainfull spight:
 To you th' inheritance belongs by right
 Of brothers prayse, to you eke ionges his love.
 Let not his love, let not his restlesse spright,
 Be unreveng'd, that calles to you above [move."
 From wandring Stygian shores, where it doth endlessse

Thereto said he, "Faire dame, be nought dismaid
 For sorrowes past; their griefe is with them gone.
 Ne yet of present perill be afraid;
 For needlesse feare did never vantage none;
 And helplesse hap it booteth not to mone.
 Dead is Sansfoy, his vitall paines are past,
 Though greeved ghost for vengeance deep do grono:
 He lives, that shall him pay his dewties last,
 And guiltie Elfin blood shall sacrifice in hast."

"O, but I feare the fickle freakes," quoth shee,
 "Of Fortune false, and oddes of armes in field."
 "Why, dame," quoth he, "what oddes can ever bee
 Where both doe fight alike, to win or yield?"
 "Yea, but," quoth she, "he beares a charmed shield,
 And eke enchaunted armes, that none can perce;
 Ne none can wound the man, that does them wield."
 "Charmd or enchaunted," answerd he then ferce,
 "I no whitt reek; ne you the like need to reherce."

"But, faire Fidessa, sithens Fortunes guile,
 Or enemies powre, hath now captived you.
 Returne from whence ye came, and rest a while,
 Till morrow next, that I the Elfe subdew,
 And with Sansfoyes dead dowry you endew."
 "Ay me, that is a double death," she said,
 "With proud foes sight my sorrow to renew:
 Where ever yet I be, my secret aide
 Shall follow you." So, passing forth, she him obaid.

CANTO V.

The faithfull knight in equall field
 Subdewes his faithlesse foe;
 Whom false Ducca saves, and for
 His cure to hell does goe.

THE noble hart that harbours vertuous thought,
 And is with childe of glorious great intent,
 Can never rest, untill it forth have brought
 Th' eternall brood of glorie excellent.
 Such restlesse passion did all night torment
 The flaming corage of that Faery knight,
 Devizing, how that doughtie turnament
 With greatest honour be atchieven might:
 Still did he wake, and still did watch for dawning light.

At last, the golden orientall gate
 Of greatest heaven gan to open fayre,
 And Phoebus, fresh as brydegrome to his mate,
 Came dauncing forth, shaking his deawie hayre;
 And hurld his glistring beams through gloomy ayre,
 Which when the wakeful Elfe perceiv'd, streightway
 He started up, and did him selfe prepayre
 In sunbright armes, and battailous array;
 For with that Pagan proud he combatt will that day.

And forth he comes into the commune hall;
 Where earely waite him many a gazing eye,
 To weet what end to straunger knights may fall.
 There many minstrales maken melody,
 To drive away the dull meláchoiy;
 And many bardes, that to the trembling chord
 Can tune their timely voices cunningly;
 And many chroniclers, that can record
 Old loves, and warres for ladies doen by many a lord.

Soone after comes the cruell Sarazin,
 In woven maile all armed warily;
 And sternly lookes at him, who not a pin
 Does care for looke of living creatures eye.
 They bring them wines of Greece and Araby,
 And daintie spices fetch from furthest Ynd,
 To kindle heat of corage privily;
 And in the wine a solemne oth they bynd
 T' observe the sacred lawes of armes, that are assynd.

At last forth comes that far renowned queene;
 With royall pomp and princely maiestie
 She is ybrought unto a paled greene,
 And placed under stately canapee,
 The warlike feates of both those knights to see.
 On th' other side in all mens open vew
 Duessa placed is, and on a tree
 Sansfoy his shield is hangd with bloody hew:
 Both those, the lawrell girlonds to the victor dew.

A shrilling trompett sownded from on hye,
 And unto battaill bad themselves addresse:
 Their shining shieldes about their wrestes they tye,
 And burning blades about their heades doe blesse,
 The instruments of wrath and heavinesse:
 With greedy force each other doth assaile,
 And strike so fiercely, that they do impresse
 Deepe dinted furrowes in the battred mayle:
 The yron walles to ward their blowes are weak and fraile.

The Sarazin was stout and wondrous strong,
 And heaped blowes like yron hammers great;
 For after blood and vengeance he did long.
 The knight was fiers, and full of youthly heat,
 And doubled strokes, like dreaded thunders threat:
 For all for praise and honour did he fight.
 Both stricken stryke, and beaten both doe beat;
 That from their shields forth flyeth fire light,
 And helmets, hewen deepe, shew marks of eithers might.

So th' one for wrong, the other strives for right:
 As when a gryfon, seized of his pray,
 A dragon fiers encountreth in his flight,
 Through widest ayre making his ydle way,
 That would his rightfull ravine rend away:
 With hideous horror both together smight,
 And souce so sore, that they the heavens affray:
 The wise soothsayer, seeing so sad sight,
 Th' amazed vulgar telles of warres and mortal fight.

So th' one for wrong, the other strives for right;
 And each to deadly shame would drive his foe:
 The cruell steele so greedily doth bight
 In tender flesh, that streames of blood down flow;
 With which the armes, that earst so bright did show,
 Into a pure vermillion now are dyde.
 Great ruth in all the gazers harts did grow,
 Seeing the gored woundes to gape so wyde,
 That victory they dare not wish to either side.

At last the Paynim chaunst to cast his eye,
 His sudden eye, flaming with wrathfull fyre,
 Upon his brothers shield, which hong thereby:
 Therewith redoubled was his raging yre,
 And said; "Ah! wretched sonne of wofull syre,
 Doest thou sit wayling by blacke Stygian lake,
 Whylest here thy shield is hangd for victors hyre?
 And, sluggish german, doest thy forces slake
 To after-send his foe, that him may overtake?"

"Go, caytive Elfe, him quickly overtake,
 And soone redeeme from his long-wandring woo:
 Goe, guiltie ghost, to him my message make,
 That I his shield have quit from dying foe."
 Therewith upon his crest he stroke him so,
 That twice he reeled, readie twice to fall:
 End of the doubtfull battaile deemed tho
 The lookers on; and lowd to him gan call
 The false Duessa, "Thine the shield, and I, and all!"

Soone as the Faerie heard his ladie speake,
 Out of his swowning dreame he gan awake;
 And quickning faith, that erst was woxen weake,
 The creeping deadly cold away did shake;
 Tho mov'd with wrath, and shame, and ladies sake,
 Of all attonce he east aveng'd to be,
 And with so' exceeding furie at him strake,
 That forced him to stoupe upon his knee:
 Had he not stouped so, he should have cloven beo.

And to him said; "Goe now, proud miscreant,
 Thyselfe thy message do to german deare;
 Alone he, wandring, thee too long doth want:
 Goe say, his foe thy shield with his doth beare."
 Therewith his heavie hand he high gan reare,
 If him to have slaine; when lo! a darkesome clowd
 Upon him fell; he no where doth appeare,
 But vanisht is. The Elfe him calls alowd,
 But answer none receives; the darknes him does shrowd.

In haste Duessa from her place arose,
 And to him running sayd; "O prowest knight,
 That ever ladie to her love did chose,
 Let now abate the terroure of your might,
 And quench the flame of furious despight
 And bloodie vengeance: lo! th'infernall powres,
 Covering your foe with cloud of deadly night,
 Have borne him hence to Plutoes balefull bowres:
 The conquest yours; I yours; the shield and glory yours!"

Not all so satisfide, with greedy eye
 He sought, all round about, his thirsty blade
 To bathe in blood of faithlesse enemy:
 Who all that while lay hid in secrete shade:
 He standes amazed how he thence should fade.
 At last the trumpets triumph sound on hie
 And running heralds humble homage made,
 Greeting him goodly with new victorie;
 And to him brought the shield, the cause of enmitie.

Wherewith he goeth to that soveraine queene;
 And, falling her before on lowly knee,
 To her makes present of his service scene:
 Which she accepts with thanks and goodly gree,
 Greatly advauncing his great chevalree:
 So marcheth home, and by her takes the knight,
 Whom all the people followe with great glee,
 Shouting, and clapping all their hands on hight,
 That all the ayre it fills, and flies to heaven bright.

Home is he brought, and layd in sumptuous bed:
 Where many skillfull leaches him abide
 To salve his hurts, that yet still freshly bled.
 In wine and oyle they wash his woundes wide,
 And softly gan embalne on everie side.
 And all the while most heavenly melody
 About the bed sweet musicke did divide,
 Him to beguile of grieve and agony:
 And all the while Duessa wept full bitterly.

As when a wearie traveler, that strays
 By muddy shore of broad seven-mouthed Nile,
 Unweeting of the perillous wandring wayes,
 Doth meete a cruell craftie crocodile,
 Which, in false grieve hyding his harmefull guile,
 Doth weepe full sore, and sheddeth tender teares;
 The foolish man, that pities all this while
 His mournefull plight, is swallowed up unwares;
 Forgetfull of his owne that mindes an others cares.

So wept Duessa untill eventyde,
 That shyning lampes in Ioves high house were light:
 Then forth she rose, no lenger would abide;
 But comes unto the place, where th'hethen knight,
 In slombring swownd nigh voyd of vitall spright,
 Lay cover'd with inchaunted cloud all day:
 Whom when she found, as she him left in plight,
 To wayle his wofull case she would not stay,
 But to the easterne coast of heaven makes speedy way.

Where griesly Night, with visage deadly sad,
 That Phœbus chearefull face durst never vew,
 And in a foule blacke pitchy mantle clad,
 She findes forth coming from her darksome mew;
 Where she all day did hide her hated hew.
 Before the dore her yron charet stood,
 Already harnessed for iourney new,
 And cole-blacke steedes yborne of hellish brood,
 That on their rusty bits did champ, as they were wood.

Who when she saw Duessa, sunny bright,
 Adorn'd with gold and iewels shining cleare,
 She greatly grew amazed at the sight,
 And th' unacquainted light began to feare;
 (For never did such brightnes there appeare;
 And would have backe retyred to her cave,
 Untill the witches speach she gan to heare,
 Saying; "Yet O thou dreaded dame, I crave Abyde, till I have told the message which I have."

She stayd; and forth Duessa gan proceede;
 "O thou, most auncient grandmother of all,
 More old than Iove, whom thou at first didst breede,
 Or that great house of gods caelestiall;
 Which wast begot in Dæmogorgons hall,
 And sawst the secrets of the world unmade;
 Why suffredst thou thy nephewes deare to fall
 With Elfin sword most shamefully betrade?
 Lo, where the stout Sansioy doth sleepe in deadly shade!

"And, him before, I saw with bitter eyes
 The bold Sansfoy shrinck underneath his speare;
 And now the pray of fowles in field he lyes,
 Nor wayld of friendes, nor layd on groning beare,
 That whylome was to me too dearely deare.
 O! what of gods then boots it to be borne,
 If old Aveugles sonnes so evill heare?
 Or who shall not great Nightes children scorne,
 When two of three her nephews are so fowle forlorne?

"Up, then; up, dreary dame, of darknes queene;
 Go, gayther up the reliques of thy race;
 Or else goe, them avenge; and let be seene
 That dreaded Night in brightest day hath place,
 And can the children of fayre Light deface."
 Her feeling speeches some compassion mov'd
 In hart, and chaunge in that great mothers face:
 Yet pitty in her hart was never prov'd
 Till then; for evermore she hated, never lov'd:

And said, "Deare daughter, rightly may I rewe
 The fall of famous children born of mee,
 And good successes, which their foes ensew:
 But who can turne the streame of destinee,
 Or breake the chayne of strong necessitee,
 Which fast is tyde to Ioves eternall seat?
 The sonnes of Day he favoureth, I see.
 And by my ruines thinkes to make them great:
 To make one great by others losse is bad excheat.

"Yet shall they not escape so freely all;
 For some shall pay the price of others guilt:
 And he, the man that made Sansfoy to fall,
 Shall with his owne blood price that he has spilt.
 But what art thou, that telst of nephews kilt?"
 "I, that do seeme not I, Duessa ame," Quoth she, "how ever now, in garments gilt
 And gorgeous gold arrayd, I to thee came;
 Duessa I, the daughter of Deceipt and Shame."

Then, bowing downe her aged backe, she kist
 The wicked witch, saying, "In that fayre face
 The false resemblaunce of Deceipt, I wist,
 Did closely lurke; yet so true-seeming grace
 It carried, that I scarce in darksome place
 Could it discerne; though I the mother bee
 Of Falshood, and roote of Duessaes race.
 O welcome, child, whom I have longd to see,
 And now have seene unwares! Lo, now I goe with thee."

Then to her yron wagon see betakes,
 And with her beares the fowle welfavoured witch:
 Through mirkesome aire her ready way she makes.
 Her twyfold teme (of which two blacke as pitch,
 And two were browne, yet each to each unlich)
 Did softly swim away, ne ever stamp
 Unlesse she chaunst their stubborn mouths to twitch;
 Then, foaming turre, their bridles they would champ,
 And trampling the fine element would fiercely ramp.

So well they sped, that they be come at length
 Unto the place, whereas the Paynim lay
 Devoid of outward sence and native strength,
 Coverd with charmed cloud from vew of day
 And sight of men, since his late lucklesse fray.
 His cruell woundes with cruddy blood congeald
 They binden up so wisely as they may,
 And handle softly, till they can be heald:
 So lay him in her charett, close in night conceald.

And, all the while she stood upon the ground,
 The wakefull dogs did never cease to bay;
 As giving warning of th' unwonted sound,
 With which her yron wheelles did them affray,
 And her darke griesly looke them much dismay.
 The messenger of death, the ghastly owle,
 With dreery shriekes did also her bewray;
 And hungry wolves continually did howle
 At her abhorred face, so filthy and so fowle.

Thence turning backe in silence soft they stole,
 And brought the heavy corse with easy pace
 To yawning gulfe of deep Avernus hole:
 By that same hole an entraunce, darke and bace,
 With smoake and sulphur hiding all the place,
 Descends to hell: there creature never past,
 That backe retourned without heavenly grace;
 But dreadfull furies, which their chaines have brast,
 And damned sprights sent forth to make ill men aghast.

By that same way the direfull dames doe drive
 Their mournfull charet, fild with rusty blood,
 And downe to Plutoes house are come bilive:
 Which passing through, on every side them stood
 The trembling ghosts with sad amazed mood,
 Chattring their iron teeth, and staring wide
 With stonie eies; and all the hellish brood
 Of feedes infernall flockt on every side,
 To gaze on erthly wight, that with the Night durst ride.

They pas the bitter waves of Acheron,
 Where many soules sit wailing woefully;
 And come to fiery flood of Phlegeton,
 Whereas the damned ghostes in torments fry,
 And with sharp shrilling shriekes doe bootlesse cry,
 Cursing high love, the which them thither sent.
 The hous of endlesse Paine is built thereby,
 In which ten thousand sorts of punishment
 The cursed creatures doe eternally torment.

Before the threshold dreadfull Cerberus
 His three deformed heads did lay along,
 Curled with thousand adders venomous;
 And lilled forth his bloody flaming tong:
 At them he gan to reare his bristles strong,
 And felly gnarre, untill Dayes enemy
 Did him appease; then downe his taile he hong,
 And suffered them to passen quietly:
 For she in hell and heaven had power equally.

There was Ixion turned on a wheele,
 For daring tempt the queene of heaven to sin;
 And Sisyphus an huge round stone did reele
 Against an hill, ne might from labour lin;
 There thirsty Tantalus hong by the chin;
 And Tityus fed a vultur on his maw;
 Typhoeus ioynts were stretched on a gin;
 Theseus condemn'd to endlesse slouth by law;
 And fifty sisters water in leke vessels draw.

They, all beholding worldly wights in place,
 Leave off their worke, unmindfull of their smart,
 To gaze on them; who forth by them doe pace,
 Till they be come unto the furthest part;
 Where was a cave ywrought by wondrous art,
 Deepe, darke, uneasy, dolefull, comfortlesse,
 In which sad Aesculapius far apart
 Emprison'd was in chaines remedlesse;
 For that Hippolytus rent corse he did redresse.

Hippolytus a iolly huntsman was,
 That went in charett chace the foming bore:
 He all his peeres in beauty did surpas:
 But ladies love, as losse of time, forbore:
 His wanton stepdame loved him the more;
 But, when she saw her offred sweets refusd,
 Her love she turn'd to hate, and him before
 His father fierce of treason false accusd,
 And with her gealous termes his open eares abusd;

Who, all in rage, his sea-god syre besought
 Some curs'd vengeance on his sonne to cast:
 From surging gulf two monsters streight were brought
 With dread whereof his chacing steedes aghast
 Both charett swifte and huntsman overcast.
 His goodly corps, on ragged cliffs yrent,
 Was quite dismembred, and his members chast
 Scattered on every mountaine as he went,
 That of Hippolytus was lefte no monument.

His cruell stepdame, seeing what was donne,
 Her wicked daies with wretched knife did end,
 In death avowing th' innocence of her sonne.
 Which hearing, his rash syre began to rend
 His heare, and hasty tong that did offend:
 Tho, gathering up the reliques of his smart,
 By Dianes meanes who was Hippolyts friend,
 Them brought to Aesculape, that by his art
 Did heale them all againe, and ioyned every part.

Such wondrous science in mans witt to rain
 When Iove avizd, that could the dead revive,
 And fates expired could renew again,
 Of endlesse life he might him not deprive;
 But unto hell did thrust him him downe alive,
 With flashing thunderbolt ywounded sore;
 Where, long remaining, he did alwaies strive
 Himselfe with salves to health for to restore,
 And slake the heavenly fire that raged evermore.

There auncient Night arriving, did alight
 From her nigh-weary wayne, and in her armes
 To Aesculapius brought the wounded knight:
 Whom having softly disaraid of armes,
 Tho gan to him discover all his harmes,
 Beseeching him with prayer, and with praise,
 If either salves, or oyles, or herbes, or charmes,
 A fordonne wight from dore of death mote raise,
 He would at her request prolong her nephews daies.

"Ah dame," quoth he, "thou temptest me in vaine
 To dare the thing, which daily yet I rew;
 And the old cause of my continued paine
 With like attempt to like end to renew.
 Is not enough, that, thrust from heaven dew,
 Here endlesse penance for one fault I pay;
 But that redoubled crime with vengeance new
 Thou biddest me to ecke? can Night defray [Day?"
 The wrath of thundring Iove, that rules both Night and

"Not so," quoth she; "but, sith that heavens king
 From hope of heaven hath thee excluded quight,
 Why fearest thou, that canst not hope for thing;
 And fearest not that more thee hurten might,
 Now in the powre of everlasting Night?
 Goe to then, O thou far renowned sonne
 Of great Apollo, shew thy famous might
 In medicine, that els hath to thee wonne
 Great pains, and greater praise, both never to be donne."

Her words prevaild; and then the learned leach
 His cunning hand gan to his wounds to lay,
 And all things els the which his art did teach;
 Which having seene, from thence arose away
 The mother of dredd Darknesse, and let stay
 Aveugles sonne there in the leaches cure;
 And, backe retourning, took her wonted way
 To ronne her timely race, whilst Phoebus pure
 In westerne waves his weary wagon did recure.

The false Duessa, leaving noyous Night,
 Returnd to stately pallace of Dame Pryde;
 Where when she came, she found the Faery knight
 Departed thence; albee (his woundes wydo
 Not throughly heald) unready were to ryde.
 Good cause he had to hasten thence away;
 For on a day his wary dwarfe had spyde
 Where, in a dungeon deepe, huge numbers lay
 Of cayne wretched thralls, that wayled night and day;

(A ruefull sight as could be seene with eie;
 Of whom he learned had in secret wise
 The hidden cause of their captivitie;
 How mortgaging their lives to Covetise,
 Through wastfull pride and wanton riotise,
 They were by law of that proud tyrannesse,
 Provokt with Wrath and Envyes false surmiso,
 Condemned to that dungeon mercilesse,
 Where they should live in wo, and dye in wretchednesse.

There was that great proud king of Babylon,
 That would compell all nations to adore
 And him, as onely God, to call upon;
 Till, through celestiall doome thrown out of dore,
 Into an oxe he was transformd of yore.
 There also was king Cræsus, that enhaunst
 His hart too high through his great riches store;
 And proud Antiochus, the which advaunst
 His cursed hand gainst God, and on his altares daunst.

And, them long time before, great Nimrod was,
 That first the world with sword and fire warrayd;
 And after him old Ninus far did pas
 In princely pomp, of all the world obayd.
 There also was that mightie monarch layd
 Low under all, yet above all in pride,
 That name of native syre did fowle upbrayd,
 And would as Ammons sonne be magnifide;
 Till, scornd of God and man, a shamefull death he dide.

All these together in one heape were throwne,
 Like carkases of beastes in butchers stall.
 And, in another corner, wide were strowne
 The antique ruins of the Romanes fall:
 Great Romulus, the grandsyre of them all
 Proud Tarquin; and too lordly Lentulus;
 Stout Scipio; and stubborne Hanniball;
 Ambitious Sylla; and sterne Marius;
 High Caesar; great Pompey; and fiers Antonius.

Amongst these mightie men were women mixt,
 Proud women, vaine, forgetfull of their yoke:
 The bold Semiramis, whose sides transtixt
 With sonnes own blade her fowle reproches spoke:
 Fayre Sthenobœa, that her selfe did choko
 With wilfull chord, for wanting of her will;
 High-minded Cleopatra, that with stroke
 Of aspēs sting her selfe did stoutly kill:
 And thousands moe the like, that did that dongeon fill.

Besides the endlesse routes of wretched-thralles,
 Which thether were assembled, day by day,
 From all the world, after their wofull fallies
 Through wicked pride and wasted welthes decay.
 But most, of all which in that dongeon lay,
 Fell from high princes courtes, or ladies howres;
 Where they in ydle pomp, or wanton play,
 Consumed had their goods and thriflesse howres,
 And lastly thrown themselves into these heavy stowres.

Whose case whenas the careful dwarfe had tould,
 And made ensample of their mournfull sight
 Unto his maister; he ne lenger would
 There dwell in perill of like painefull plight,
 But carely rose; and, ere that dawning light
 Discovered had the world to heaven wyde,
 He by a privy posterne tooke his flight,
 That of no envious eyes he mote be spyde:
 For, doubtlesse, death ensewd if any him descryde.

Searse could he footing find in that fowle way,
 For many corses, like a great lay-stall,
 Of mured men, which therein strowed lay
 Without remorse or decent funerall;
 Which, al through that great Princesse Pride did fall,
 And came to shamefull end: and them besyde,
 Forth ryding underneath the castell wall,
 A donghill of dead carcasses he spyde;
 The dreadfull spectacle of that sad House of Pryde.

CANTO VI.

From lawlesse lust by wondrous grace
 Fayre Una is releast;
 Whome salvage nation does adore,
 And learnes her wise behest.

As when a ship, that flyes fayre under sayle,
 An hidden rocke escaped hath unwares,
 That lay in waite her wrack for to bewaile;
 The mariner yet halfe amazed stares
 At perill past, and yet in doubt ne dares
 To ioy at his foolhappie oversight;
 So doubly is distrest twixt ioy and cares
 The dreadlesse corage of this Eltin knight,
 Having escapt so sad ensamples in his sight.

Yet sad he was, that his too hastie speede
 The fayre Duess' had forst him leave behind;
 And yet more sad, that Una, his deare dreed,
 Her truth had staynd with treason so unkind;
 Yet cryme in her could never creature find:
 But for his love, and for her owne selfe sake,
 She wandred had from one to other Ynd,
 Him for to seeke, ne ever would forsake:
 Till her unwares the fiers Sansloy did overtake:

Who, after Archimagoes fowle defeat,
 Led her away into a forest wilde;
 And, turning wrathful fyre to lustfull heat,
 With beastly sin thought her to have defilde,
 And made the vassall of his pleasures vilde.
 Yet first he cast by treatie, and by traynes,
 Her to persuaide that stubborn fort to yilde;
 For greater conquest of hard love he gaynes,
 That workes it to his will, then he that it constraines.

With sawning wordes he courted her a while;
 And, looking lovely and oft sighing sore,
 Her constant hart did tempt with diverse guile:
 But wordes, and lookes, and sighes she did abhore;
 As rock of diamond stedfast evermore.
 Yet, for to feed his fyrie lustfull eye,
 He snatcht the vele that hong her face before:
 Then gan her beautie shyne as brightest skye,
 And burnt his beastly hart t'enforce her chastitye.

So when he saw his flatt'ring arts to fayle,
 And subtile engines bett from batteree;
 With greedy force he gan the fort assaile,
 Whereof he weend possessed soone to bee,
 And win rich spoile of ransackt chastitee.
 Ah heavens! that doe this hideous act behold,
 And heavenly virgin thus outraged see,
 How can ye vengeance iust so long withhold,
 And hurle not flashing flames upon that Paynim bold?

The pitteous mayden, carefull, comfortlesse,
 Does throw out thrilling shriekes, and shrieking cryes,
 (The last vaine helpe of wemens greate distresse,)
 And with loud plaintes importuneth the skyes;
 That molten starres doe drop like weeping eyes;
 And Phoebus, flying so most shameful sight,
 His blushing face in foggy cloud implies,
 And hydes for shame. What witt of mortal wight
 Can now devise to quitt a thrall from such a plight?

Eternall Providence, exceeding thought,
 Where none appeares can make her selfe a way!
 A wondrous way it for this lady wrought,
 From lyons clawes to plucke the gryped pray.
 Her shrill outeryes and shriekes so loud did bray,
 That all the woodes and forestes did resound:
 A troupe of faunes and satyres far away
 Within the wood were dauncing in a rownd,
 Whiles old Sylvanus slept in shady arber sownd:

Who, when they heard that pitteous strained voico,
 In haste forsooke their rurall merriment,
 And ran towardes the far rebownded noyce,
 To weet what wight so loudly did lament.
 Unto the place they come incontinent:
 Whom when the raging Sarazin espyde,
 A rude, mishapen, monstrous rablement,
 Whose like he never saw, he durst not byde;
 But got his ready steed, and fast away gan ryde.

The wyld wood-gods, arrived in the place,
 There find the virgin, doolfull, desolate,
 With ruffled rayments, and fayre blubbred face,
 As her outrageous foe had left her late;
 And trembling yet through feare of former hate:
 All stand amazed at so uncouth sight,
 And gin to pittie her unhappie state;
 All stand astonied at her beauty bright.
 In their rude eyes unworthy of so wofull plight.

She, more amazd, in double dread doth dwell,
 And every tender part for feare does shake:
 As when a greedy wolfe, through hunger fell,
 A seely lamb far from the flock does take,
 Of whom he meanes his bloody feast to make,
 A lyon spies fast running towards him,
 The innocent pray in hast he does forsake:
 Which, quitt from death, yet quakes in every lim
 With chaunge of feare, to see the lyon looke so grim.

Such fearefull fitt assaid her trembling hart;
 Ne worde to speake, ne ioynt to move, she had:
 The salvage nation feele her secret smart,
 And read her sorrow in her count'naunce sad;
 Their frowning forheads, with rough hornes yelad
 And rustick horror, all asyde doe lay;
 And, gently grenning, show a semblance glad
 To comfort her; and, feare to put away,
 Their backward-bent knees teach her humbly to obay.

The doubtfull damzell dare not yet committ
 Her single person to their barbarous truth;
 But still twixt feare and hope amazd does sitt,
 Late leard what harme to hasty trust ensu'th:
 They, in compassion of her tender youth,
 And wonder of her beautie soverayne,
 Are wonne with pitty and unwonted ruth;
 And, all prostrate upon the lowly playne, [fayne,
 Doe kisse her feete, and fawne on her with count'naunce

Their harts she ghesseeth by their humble guise,
 And yieldees her to extremitie of time:
 So from the ground she fearlesse doth arise,
 And walketh forth without suspect of crime:
 They, all as glad as birdes of ioyous pryme,
 Thence led her forth, about her dauncing round,
 Shouting, and singing all a shepheards ryme;
 And with greene branches strowing all the ground,
 Do worship her as queene with olive girlond croud.

And all the way their merry pipes they sound,
 That all the woods with double echo ring;
 And with their horned feet doe weare the ground,
 Leaping like wanton kids in pleasant spring.
 So towards old Sylvanus they her bring;
 Who, with the noyse awaked, commeth out
 To weete the cause, his weake steps governing
 And aged limbs on cypresse stadle stout;
 And with an yvie twyne his waste is girt about.

Far off he wonders what them makes so glad,
 Or Bacchus merry fruit they did invent,
 Or Cybeles franticke rights have made them mad:
 They, drawing nigh, unto their god present
 That flowre of fayth and beautie excellent:
 The god himselfe, vewing that mirrhour rare,
 Stood long amaz'd, and burnt in his intent:
 His owne fayre Dryope now he thinks not faire,
 And Pholoë fowle, when her to this he doth compaire.

The wood-borne people fall before her flat,
 And worship her as goddessse of the wood;
 And old Sylvanus selfe bethinkes not, what
 To thinke of wight so fayre; but gazing stood
 In doubt to deeme her borne of earthly brood:
 Sometimes dame Venus selfe he seemes to see;
 But Venus never had so sober mood:
 Sometimes Diana he her takes to be;
 But misseth bow and shaftes, and buskins to her knee.

By vew of her he ginneth to revive
 His ancient love, and dearest Cyparisse;
 And calles to mind his pourtraiture alive,
 How fayre he was, and yet not fayre to this;
 And how he slew with glauncing dart amisse
 A gentle hynd, the which the lovely boy
 Did love as life, above all worldly blisse:
 For grieve whereof the lad n'ould after ioy;
 But pynd away in anguish and selfewild annoy.

The woody nymphes, faire Hamadryades,
 Her to behold do thether runne apace;
 And all the troupe of light-foot Naiades
 Flocke all about to see her lovely face:
 But, when they vewed have her heavenly grace,
 They envy her in their malicious mind,
 And fly away for feare of fowle disgrace:
 But all the Satyres scorne their woody kind,
 And henceforth nothing faire, but her, on earth they find.

Glad of such lucke, the luckelesse lucky mayd
 Did her content to please their feeble eyes;
 And long time with that salvage people stayd,
 To gather breath in many miseryes:
 During which time her gentle wit she plyes,
 To teach them truth, which worshipt her in vaine,
 And made her th' image of idolatryes:
 But, when their bootlesse zeale she did restrayne
 From her own worship, they her asse would worship fayn.

It fortuneda, a noble warlike knight
 By iust occasion to that forrest came
 To seeke his kindred, and the lignage right.
 From whence he tooke his wel-deserved name:
 He had in armes abroad wonne muchell fame,
 And fild far lands with glorie of his might;
 Plaines faithfull, true, and enemy of shame,
 And ever lov'd to fight for ladies right:
 But in vaine glorious frayes he litle did delight.

A satyres sonne yborne in forrest wyld,
 By straunge adventure as it did betyde,
 And there begotten of a lady myld.
 Fayre Thyamis, the daughter of Labryde:
 That was in sacred bandes of wedlike tyde
 To Therion, a loose, unruly swayne.
 Who had more ioy to rannege the forrest wyde,
 And chase the salyge beast with busie payne.
 Then serve his ladies love, and waste in pleasures wayne.

The forlorne mayd did with loves longing burne,
 And could not lacke her lovers company;
 But to the wood she goes, to serve her turne,
 And seeke her spouse, that from her still does fly
 And followes other game and venery:
 A satyre chaunst her wandring for to finde:
 And, kindling coles of lust in brutish eye,
 The loyall linkes of wedlocke did unbinde,
 And made her person thrall unto his beastly kind.

So long in secret cabin there he held
 Her captive to his sensuall desyre;
 Till that with timely fruit her belly sweld,
 And bore a boy unto that salvage syre:
 Then home he suffred her for to retyre;
 For ransome leaving him the late-borne childe:
 Whom, till to ryper years he gan aspyre,
 He nousel up in life and maners wilde,
 Emongst wild beastes and woods, from laws of men exilde

For all he taught the tender ymp, was but
 To banish cowardize and bastard feare:
 His trembling hand he would him force to put
 Upon the lyon and the rugged beare;
 And from the she-beares teats her whelps to teare;
 And eke wyld roring buls he would him make
 To tame, and ryde their backes not made to beare;
 And the robuckes in flight to overtake:
 That everie beast for feare of him did fly and quake.

Thereby so fearlesse and so fell he grew,
 That his owne syre and maister of his guise
 Did often tremble at his horrid vew;
 And oft, for dread of hurt, would him advise
 The angry beastes not rashly to despise,
 Nor too much to provoke; for he would learne
 The lyon stoup to him in lowly wise,
 (A lesson hard,) and make the libbard sterne
 Leave roaring, when in rage he for revenge did earne.

And, for to make his powre approved more,
 Wyld beastes in yron yokes he would compell.
 The spotted panther, and the tusked bore,
 The pardale swift, and the tigré cruell.
 The antelope and wolf, both fiers and fell;
 And them constraine in equall teme to draw.
 Such ioy he had their stubborne harts to quell,
 And sturdie courage tame with dreadfull aw;
 That his beheast they feared, as a tyrans law.

His loving mother came upon a day
 Unto the woodes, to see her little sonne;
 And chaunst unwares to meet him in the way,
 After his sportes and cruell pastime donne;
 When after him a lyonesse did runne,
 That roaring all with rage did lowd requere
 Her children deare, whom he away had wonne:
 The lyon whelpes she saw how he did beare,
 And full in rugged armes withouten childish feare.

The fearefull dame all quaked at the sight,
 And turning backe gan fast to fly away;
 Untill, with love revokt from vaine affright,
 She hardly yet perswaded was to stay.
 And then to him these womanish words gan say:
 "Ah, Satyrane, my dearling and my ioy,
 For love of me leave off this dreadfull play;
 To dally thus with death is no fit toy:
 Go, find some other play-fellowes, mine own sweet boy."

In these and like delightes of bloody game
 He trayned was, till ryper years he raught;
 And there abode, whylst any beast of name
 Walkt in that forrest, whom he had not taught
 To feare his force: and then his courage haught
 Desyrd of forreine foemen to be knowne,
 And far abroad for straunge adventures sought;
 In which his might was never overthrowne;
 But through al Faery lond his famous worth was blowne.

Yet evermore it was his manner faire,
 After long labours and adventures spent,
 Unto those native woods for to reparaire,
 To see his syre and offspring auncient.
 And now he thether came for like intent;
 Where he unwares the fairest Una found,
 Straunge lady, in so straunge habiliment.
 Teaching the Satyres, which her sat around,
 Trew sacred lore, which from her sweet lips did redound.

He wondred at her wisdom heavenly rare,
 Whose like in womens witt he never knew;
 And, when her curteous deeds he did compare,
 Gan her admire, and her sad sorrowes rew,
 Blaming of Fortune, which such troubles threw,
 And ioyd to make prooffe of her cruelty
 On gentle dame, so hurtlesse and so trew.
 Thenceforth he kept her goodly company,
 And leard her discipline of faith and verity.

But she, all vowd unto the Rederosse knight,
 His wandring perill closely did lament,
 Ne in this new acquaintaunce could delight;
 But her deare heart with anguish did torment,
 And all her witt in secret counsels spent,
 How to escape. At last in privy wise
 To Satyrane she shewed her intent;
 Who, glad to gain such favour, gan devise,
 How with that pensive maid he best might thence arise.

So on a day, when satyres all were gone
 To do their service to Sylvanus old,
 The gentle virgin, left behinde alone,
 He led away with corage stout and bold.
 Too late it was to satyres to be told,
 Or ever hope recover her againe;
 In vaine he seekes that, having, cannot hold.
 So fast he carried her with carefull paine,
 That they the woods are past, and come now to the plaine.

The better part now of the lingring day
 They traveld had, whenas they far espide
 A weary wight forwandring by the way;
 And towards him they gan in hast to ride,
 To weete of newes that did abroad betyde,
 Or tidings of her knight of the Rederosse;
 But he, them spyng gan to turne asyde
 For feare, as seemd, or for some feigned losse:
 More greedy they of newes fast towards him do crosse.

A silly man, in simple weedes forworne,
 And soild with dust of the long dried way;
 His sandales were with toilsome travell torne,
 And face all tand with scorching sunny ray,
 As he had traveild many a sommers day
 Through boyling sands of Arabie and Ynde;
 And in his hand a Jacobs staffe, to stay
 His weary limbs upon; and eke behind
 His scrip did hang, in which his needments he did bind.

The knight, approaching nigh, of him inquerd
 Tidings of warre, and of adventures new;
 But warres, nor new adventures, none he herd.
 Then Una gan to aske, if aught he knew
 Or heard abroad of that her champion trew,
 That in his armour bare a creslet red.
 "Ay me! deare dame," quoth he, "well may I rewe
 To tell the sad sight which mine eies have red;
 These eies did see that knight both living and eke ded."

That cruell word her tender hart so thrild,
 That suddein cold did runne through every vaine,
 And stony horror all her senses fild
 With dying fitt, that downe she fell for paine.
 The knight her lightly reared up againe,
 And comforted with curteous kind reliefe:
 Then, wonne from death, she bad him tellen plaine
 The further processe of her hidden grieve:
 The lesser pangs can beare, who hath endurd the chief.

Then gan the pilgrim thus; "I chaunst this day,
 This fatall day, that shall I ever rewe,
 To see two knights, in travell on my way,
 (A sory sight,) arraung'd in batteill new,
 Both breathing vengeance, both of wrathfull hew
 My fearefull flesh did tremble at their strife,
 To see their blades so greedily imbrow,
 That, dronke with blood, yet thirsted after life: [knife."
 What more? the Rederosse knight was slaine with Paynim

"Ah! dearest lord," quoth she, "how might that bee,
 And he the stoutest knight, that ever wonne?"
 "Ah! dearest dame," quoth he, "how might I see
 The thing, that might not be, and yet was donne?"
 "Where is," said Satyrane, "that Paynims sonne,
 That him of life, and us of ioy, hath reft?"
 "Not far away," quoth he, "he hence doth wonne, Foreby a fountaine, where I late him left [cleft."
 Washing his bloody avounds, that through the steele were

Therewith the knight then marched forth in hast,
 Whiles Una, with huge heavinesse opprest,
 Could not for sorrow follow him so fast;
 And soone he came, as he the place had ghest,
 Whereas that Pagan proud himselfe did rest
 In secret shadow by a fountaine side;
 Even he it was, that earst would have suppress
 Faire Una; whom when Satyrane espide,
 With foule reprochfull words he boldly him defido;

And said; "Arise, thou cursed miscreaunt,
 That hast with knightlesse guile, and trecherous tra-
 Faire knighthood fowly shamed, and doest vaunt
 That good knight of the Rederosse to have slain:
 Arise, and with like treason now maintain
 Thy guilty wrong, or els thee guilty yield."
 The Sarazin, this hearing, rose amain,
 And, catching up in haste his three-square shield
 And shining helmet, soone him buckled to the field;

And, drawing nigh him, said; "Ah! misborn Elfe,
 In evill houre thy foes thee hither sent
 Anothers wrongs to wreak upon thy selfe:
 Yet ill thou blamest me, for having blent
 My name with guile and traiterous intent:
 That Rederosse knight, perdie, I never slew;
 But had he beene, where erst his arms were lent,
 Th' enchaunter vaine his errour should not rew:
 But thou his errour shalt, I hope, now proven trew."

Therewith they gan, both furious and fell,
 To thunder blowes, and fiersly to assaile
 Each other, bent his enemy to quell;
 That with their force they perst both plate and maile,
 And made wide furrowes in their fleshes fraile,
 That it would pittie any living eie:
 Large floods of blood adowne their sides did raile;
 But floods of blood could not them satisfie:
 Both hongred after death; both choso to win, or dio.

So long they fight, and full revenge pursue,
 That, fainting, each themselves to breathen lett;
 And, ofte refreshed, battell oft renue.
 As when two bores, with ranceling malice mett,
 Their gory sides fresh bleeding fiercely frett;
 Til breathlesse both themselves aside retire,
 Where, foming wrath, their cruell tuskes they whett,
 And trample th' earth, the whiles they may respire;
 Then backe to fight againe, new breathed and entire.

So fiercely, when these knights had breathed once,
 They gan to fight retourne; increasing more
 Their puissant force, and cruell rage attonce,
 With heaped strokes more hugely than before;
 That with their dreery woundes, and bloody gore,
 They doth deformed, searsely could bee known.
 By this, sad Una fraught with anguish sore,
 Led with their noise which through the aire was thrown,
 Arriv'd, wher they in erth their fruitles blood had sown.

Whom all so soone as that proud Sarazin
 Espide, he gan revive the memory
 Of his leud lusts, and late attempted sin;
 And leste the doubtfull battel hastily,
 To catch her, newly offred to his eie:
 But Satyrane, with strokes him turning, staid,
 And sternely bad him other business plic
 Then hunt the steps of pure unspotted maid:
 Wherewith he al enrag'd these bitter speeches said,

"O foolish faeries sonne, what fury mad
 Hath thee incenst to hast thy dolefull fate?
 Were it not better I that lady had
 Then that thou hadst repented it too late?
 Most sencelesse man he, that himselfe doth hate
 To love another: Lo then, for thine ayd,
 Here take thy lovers token on thy pate."
 So they to fight; the whiles the royall mayd
 Fledd farre away, of that proud Paynim sore afrayd.

But that false pilgrim, which that leasing told
 Being in deed old Archimage, did stay
 In secret shadow all this to behold;
 And much reioiced in their bloody fray:
 But, when he saw the damsell passe away,
 He left his stond, and her pursewd apace,
 In hope to bring her to her last decay.
 But for to tell her lamentable cace,
 And eke this battels end. will need another place.

CANTO VII.

The Rederosse knight is captive made
 By gyaunt proud opprest:
 Prince Arthure meets with Una greatly
 with those newes distrest.

WHAT man so wise, what earthly witt so ware,
 As to disery the crafty cunning traine,
 By which Deceit doth maske in visour faire,
 And east her colours died deep in graine,
 To seeme like Truth, whose shape she well can faine,
 And sitting gestures to her purpose frame,
 The guiltlesse man with guile to entertaine?
 Great maistresse of her art was that false dame,
 The false Duessa, cloked with Fidessues name.

Who when, returning from the dreery Night,
 She found not in that perilous Hous of Pryde,
 Where she had left the noble Rederosse knight,
 Her hoped pray; she would no lenger byde,
 But forth she went to seeke him far and wyde.
 Ere long she fownd, whereas he wearie sato
 To rest him selfe, foreby a fountain syde,
 Disarmed all of yron-coted plate;
 And by his side his steed the grassy forage ate.

Hee feedes upon the cooling shade, and bayes
 His sweatic forehead in the breathing wynd,
 Which through the trembling leaves full gently playes,
 Wherein the chearefull birds of sundry kynd
 Doe chaunt sweet musick, to delight his mynd:
 The witch approching gan him fayrely greet,
 And with reproch of carelesnes unkynd
 Upbrayd, for leaving her in place unmeet,
 With fowle words tempring faire, soure gall with hony sweet.

Unkindnesse past, they gan of solace treat,
 And bathe in pleasaunce of the ioyous shade,
 Which shielded them against the boyling heat,
 And, with greene boughes decking a gloomy shade,
 About the fountaine like a girlond made;
 Whose bubbling wave did ever freshly well,
 Ne ever would through fervent summer fade:
 The sacred nymph, which therein wont to dwell,
 Was out of Diances favor, as it then befell.

The cause was this: One day, when Phoebe sayre
 With all her band was following the chace,
 This nymph, quite tyr'd with heat of seorching ayre,
 Sat downe to rest in midst of the race:
 The goddessse wroth gan sawly her disgrace,
 And badd the waters, which from her did flow,
 Be such as she her selfe was then in place.
 Thenceforth her waters waxed dull and slow;
 And all, that drinke thereof, do faint and feeble grow.

Hereof this gentle knight unsweeting was;
 And, lying downe upon the sandie graile,
 Dronke of the streame, as cleare as christall glas:
 Eftsoones his manly forces gan to fayle,
 And mightie strong was turnd to feeble frayle.
 His chaunged powres at first themselves not felt;
 Till cruddled cold his corage gan assaile,
 And cheareful blood in fayntnes chill did melt,
 Which, like a fever fit, through all his bodie swelt

Yet goodly court he made still to his dame,
 Poured out in loosnesse on the grassy grownd,
 Both carelesse of his health, and of his fame:
 Till at the last he heard a dreadfull sownd,
 Which through the wood loud bellowing did rebownd,
 That all the earth for terror seemd to shake,
 And trees did tremble. Th' Elfe, therewith astownd,
 Upstarte lightly from his looser make,
 And his unready weapons gan in hand to take.

But ere he could his armour on him dight,
 Or gett his shield, his monstrous enemy
 With sturdie steps came stalking in his sight,
 An hideous geaunt, horrible and hye,
 That with his tallnesse seemd to threat the skye;
 The ground eke groned under him for dreed:
 His living like saw never living eye,
 Ne durst behold; his stature did exceed
 The hight of three the tallest sonnes of mortall seed.

The greatest Earth his uncouth mother was,
 And blustering Æolus his boasted syre;
 Who with his breath, which through the world doth pas,
 Her hollow womb did secretly inspyre,
 And fild her hidden caves with stormie yre,
 That she conceiv'd; and trebling the dew time,
 In which the wombes of women do expyre,
 Brought forth this monstrous masse of earthly slyme,
 Puft up with emptie wynd, and fild with sinfull cryme.

So growen great, through arrogant delight,
 Of th' high descent whereof he was yborne,
 And through presumption of his matchlesse might,
 All other powres and knighthood he did scorne.
 Such now he marcheth to this man forlorne,
 And left to losse: his stalking steps are stayde
 Upon a snaggy oke, which he had torne
 Out of his mothers bowelles, and it made
 His mortall mace, wherewith his foemen he dismayde.

That, when the knight he spyde, he gan aduance
 With huge force and insupportable mayne,
 And towards him with dreadfull fury prauce;
 Who haplesse, and eke hopelesse, all in vaine
 Did to him pae sad battaile to darrayne,
 Disarmd, disgraste, and inwardly dismayde;
 And eke so faint in every ioynt and vayne,
 Through that fraile fountain, which him feeble made,
 That searsely could he weeld his bootlesse single blade.

The geaunt strooke so maynly mercilesse,
 That could have overthrowne a stony towre;
 And, were it not hevenly grace that did him blesse,
 He had beene pouldred all, as thin as flowre;
 But he was wary of that deadly stowre,
 And lightly lept from underneath the blow:
 Yet so exceeding was the villeins powre
 That with the winde it did him overthrow,
 And all his sences stoond, that still he lay full low.

As when that diuelish yron engin, wrought
 In deepest hell, and framd by furies skill,
 With windy nitro and quick sulphur fraught,
 And ramd with bollet rownd, ordaind to kill,
 Conceiveth fyre; the heavens it doth fill
 With thundring noyse, and all the ayre doth choke,
 That none can breath, nor see, nor heare at will,
 Through smouldry cloud of duskish stincking smoke;
 That th' only breath him daunts, who hath escapt the stroke.

So daunted when the geaunt saw the knight,
 His heaue hand he heaved up on hye,
 And him to dust thought to have battred quight,
 Untill Duessa loud to him gan crye;
 "O great Orgoglio, greatest under skye,
 Oh! hold thy mortall hand for ladies sake;
 Hold for my sake, and doe him not to dye,
 But vanquisht thine eternall bondslave make,
 And me, thy worthy meed, unto thy leman take."

He hearkned, and did stav from further harmes,
 To gayne so goodly guerdon as she spake:
 So willingly she came into his armes,
 Who her as willingly to grace did take,
 And was possessed of his newfound make.
 Then up he tooke the slombred sencelesse corse;
 And, ere he could out of his swowne awake,
 Him to his castle brought with hastie forse,
 And in a dongeon deepe him threw without remorse.

From that day forth Duessa was his deare,
 And highly honourd in his haughtie eye.
 He gave her gold and purple pall to weare,
 And triple crowne set on her head full hye,
 And her endowd with royall maiestye:
 Then, for to make her dreaded more of men,
 And peoples hartes with awfull terror tye,
 A monstrous beast ybredd in filthy fen
 He chose, which he had kept long time in darksom den.

Such one it was, as that renowned snake
 Which great Alcides in Stremona slew,
 Long fostred in the filth of Lerna lake:
 Whose many heades out-budding ever new
 Did breed him endlesse labor to subdew.
 But this same monster much more ugly was;
 For seven great heads out of his body grew!
 An yron brest, and back of sealy bras,
 And all embrewd in blood his eyes did shine as glas.

His tayle was stretched out in wondrous length,
 That to the hous of heavenly gods it raught;
 And with extorted powre, and borrow'd strength,
 The ever burning lamps from thence it braught,
 And proudly threw to ground, as things of naught
 And underneath his filthy feet did tread
 The sacred thinges, and holy heastes foretaught.
 Upon this dreadfull beast with sevenfold head
 He sett the false Duessa, for more aw and dread.

The wofull dwarfe, which saw his maisters fall,
 (Whiles he had keeping of his grasing steed,)
 And valiant knight become a caytive thrall;
 When all was past, tooke up his forlorne weed;
 His mightie armour, missing most at need;
 His silver shield, now idle, maisterlesse;
 His poynant speare, that many made to bleed;
 The rueful moniments of heavinesse;
 And with them all departes, to tell his great distresse.

He had not travailld long, when on the way
 He wofull lady, wofull Una met
 Fast flying from that Paynims greedy pray,
 Whilest Satyraue him from pursuit did let:
 Who when her eyes she on the dwarf had set,
 And saw the signes that deadly tydinges spake,
 She fell to ground for sorrowfull regret,
 And lively breath her sad brest did forsake;
 Yet might her pitteous hart be seen to pant and quake.

The messenger of so unhappie newes
 Would faine have dyde; dead was his heart within
 Yet outwardly some little comfort shewes:
 At last, recovering hart, he does begin
 To rub her temples, and to chaufe her chin,
 And everie tender part doesASSE and turne:
 So hardly he the flitted life does win
 Unto her native prison to retourne.
 Then gins her grieved ghost thus to lament and mourne:

"Ye dreary instruments of dolefull sight,
 That doe this dreadly spectacle behold,
 Why doe ye lenger feed on loathed light,
 Or liking find to gaze on earthly mould,
 Sith cruell Fates the carefull threds unfould,
 The which my life and love together tyde?
 Now let the stony dart of sencelesse Cold
 Perce to my hart, and pas through everie side;
 And let eternall night so sad sight fro me hyde.

"O, lightsome Day, the lampe of highest Love,
 First made by him mens wandring wayes to guyde,
 When darknesse he in deepest dongeon drove;
 Henceforth thy hated face for ever hyde,
 And shut up heavens windowes shyning wyde:
 For earthly sight can nought but sorrow breed,
 And late repentance, which shall long abyde
 Mine eyes no more on vanitie shall feed,
 But, seeled up with death, shall have their deadly meed."

Then downe againe she fell unto the ground;
 But he her quickly reared up againe:
 Thrice did she sinke adowne in deadly swound,
 And thrise he her reviv'd with busie paine,
 At last when life recover'd had the raine,
 And over-wrestled his strong enemy,
 With foltring tong, and trembling everie vaine,
 "Tell on," quoth she, "the wofull tragedy,
 The which these reliques sad present unto mine eye.

"Tempestuous Fortune hath spent all her spight,
 And thrilling Sorrow throwne his utmost dart:
 Thy sad tong cannot tell more heavy plight
 Then that I feele, and harbour in mine hart:
 Who hath endur'd the whole, can beare ech part.
 If death it be; it is not the first wound,
 That launched hath my brest with bleeding smart.
 Begin, and end the bitter balefull stound;
 If lesse then that I feare, more favour I have found."

Then gan the dwarfe the whole discourse declare;
 The subtile traines of Archimago old;
 The wanton loves of false Fidessa sayre,
 Bought with the blood of vanquisht Paynim bold;
 The wretched payre transformed to treen mould;
 The House of Pryde, and perilles round about;
 The combat, which he with Sansioy did hould;
 The lucklesse conflict with the gyaunt stout,
 Wherein captiv'd, of life or death he stood in doubt.

She heard with patience all unto the end;
 And strove to maister sorrowfull assay,
 Which greater grew, the more she did contend,
 And almost rent her tender hart in tway;
 And love fresh coles unto her fire did lay:
 For greater love, the greater is the losse.
 Was never lady loved dearer day
 Then she did love the knight of the Rederosse;
 For whose deare sake so many troubles her did tosse.

At last when fervent sorrow slaked was,
 She up arose, resolving him to find
 Alive or dead; and forward forth did pas,
 All as the dwarfe the way to her assynd:
 And evermore, in constant carefull mind,
 She fedd her wound with fresh renewed bale:
 Long tost with stormes, and bet with bitter wind,
 High over hills, and lowe adowne the dale,
 She wandred many a wood, and measurd many a vale.

At last she chaunced by good hap to meet
 A goodly knight, faire marching by the way,
 Together with his squire, arrayed meet:
 His glitterand armour shined far away,
 Like glauncing light of Phoebus brightest ray;
 From top to toe no place appeared bare,
 That deadly dint of steele endanger may:
 Athwart his brest a bauldrick brave he ware,
 That shind, like twinkling stars, with stones most pretious

[rare:

And, in the midst thereof, one pretious stone
 Of wondrous worth, and eke of wondrous might,
 Shapt like a ladies head, exceeding shone,
 Like Hesperus amongst the lesser lights,
 And strove for to amaze the weaker sights:
 Thereby his mortall blade full comely long
 In yvery sheath, yearv'd with curious slights,
 Whose hilts were burnisht gold; and handle strong
 Of mother perle; and buckled with a golden tong.

His haughtie helmet, horrid all with gold.
 Both glorious brightnesse and great terroure bredd:
 For all the crest a dragon did enfold
 With greedie pawes, and over all did spredd
 His golden winges: his dreadfull hideous hedd
 Close couched on the bever, seemd to throw
 From flaming mouth bright sparckles fiery redd,
 That suddaine horroure to fainte hartes did show,
 And scaly taylo was stretcht adowne his back full low.

Upon the top of all his loftie crest,
 A bounch of heares discoloured diversly,
 With sprinced pearle and gold full richly drest,
 Did shake, and seemd to daunce for iollity;
 Like to an almond tree ymounted hye
 On top of greene Selinis all alone,
 With blossoms brave bedecked daintily;
 Whose tender locks do tremble every one
 At everie little breath, that under heaven is blowne.

His warlike shield all closely cover'd was,
 Ne might of mortall eye be ever scene;
 Not made of steele, nor of enduring bras,
 (Such earthly mettals soon consumed beene,)
 But all of diamond perfect pure and cleene
 It framed was, one massy entire mould,
 Hew'n out of adamant rocke with engines keene,
 That point of speare it never pereen could,
 Ne dint of direfull sword divide the substance would.

The same to wight he never wont disclose,
 But whenas monsters huge he would dismay,
 Or daunt unequall armies of his foes,
 Or when the flying heavens he would affray:
 For so exceeding shone his glistring ray,
 That Phoebus golden face it did attaint,
 As when a cloud his beames doth over-lay;
 And silver Cynthia waxed pale and faynt,
 As when her face is staynd with magicke arts constraint.

No magicke arte hereof had any might,
 Nor bloody wordes of bold enchaunters call;
 But all that was not such as seemd in sight
 Before that shield did fade, and suddaine fall:
 And, when him list the raskall routes appall,
 Men into stones therewith he could transmew,
 And stones to dust, and dust to nought at all:
 And, when him list the prouder lookes subdew,
 He would them gazing blind, or turne to other hew.

Ne let it seeme that credence this exceeds;
 For he, that made the same, was knowne right well
 To have done much more admirable deedes:
 It Merlin was, which whylome did excell
 All living wightes in might of magicke spell:
 Both shield, and sword, and armour all he wrought
 For this young prince, when first to armes he fell;
 But, when he dyde, the Faery Queene it brought
 To Faerie lond; where yet it may be scene, if sought.

A gentle youth, his dearly loved squire,
 His speare of heben wood behind him bare,
 Whose harmful head, thrise heated in the fire,
 Had riven many a brest with pikehead square:
 A goodly person; and could menage faire
 His stubborne steed with curbed canon bitt,
 Who under him did trample as the aire,
 And chaust, that any on his backe should sitt;
 The yron rowels into frothy some he bitt.

Whenas this knight nigh to the lady drew,
 With lovely court he gan her entertaine;
 But, when he heard her aunswers loth, he knew
 Some secret sorrow did her heart distraine:
 Which to allay, and calme her storming paine,
 Faire feeling words he wisely gan display,
 And, for her humor fitting purpose faire,
 To tempt the cause it selfe for to bewray;
 Wherewith enmovd, these bleeding words she gan to say;

"What worlds delight, or ioy of living speach,
 Can hart, so plungd in sea of sorrowes deep,
 And heaped with so huge misfortunes, reach?
 The carefull Cold beginneth for to creep,
 And in my heart his yron arrow steep,
 Soone as I thinke upon my bitter bale.
 Such hellesse harmes yts better hidden keep,
 Then rip up griefe, where it may not avale;
 My last left comfort is my woes to weepe and waile."

"Ah lady deare," quoth then the gentle knight,
 "Well may I weene your griefe is wondrous great;
 For wondrous great griefe groweth in my spright,
 Whiles thus I heare you of your sorrowes treat.
 But, woefull lady, let me you intrete
 For to unfold the anguish of your hart:
 Mishaps are maistred by advice discrete,
 And counsell mitigates the greatest smart:
 Found never help, who never would his hurts impart."

"Oh! but," quoth she, "great griefe will not be tould,
 And can more easily be thought then said."
 "Right so," quoth he: "but he, that never would,
 Could never: will to might gives greatest aid."
 "But griefe," quoth she, "does greater grow displaid,
 If then it find not helpe, and breeds despaire."
 "Despair breeds not," quoth he, "where faith is staid."
 "No faith so fast," quoth she, "but flesh does paire."
 "Flesh may empaire," quoth he, "but reason can repaire."

His goodly reason, and well-guided speech,
 So deepe did settle in her gracious thought,
 That her perswaded to disclose the breach
 Which love and fortune in her hart had wrought;
 And said; "Fairst sir, I hope good hap have brought
 You to inquere the secrets of my griefe;
 Or that your wisdom will direct my thought;
 Or that your prowess can me yield reliefe;
 Then heare the story sad, which I shall tell you brief.

"The forlorne maiden, whom your eies have seene
 The laughing stocke of Fortunes mockeries,
 Am th' onely daughter of a king and queene,
 Whose parents deare (whiles equal destinies
 Did runne about, and their felicities
 The favourable heavens did not envy.)
 Did spread their rule through all the territories,
 Which Phison and Euphrates floweth by,
 And Gehons golden waves doe wash continually.

"Till that their cruell cursed enemy,
 An huge great dragon, horrible in sight,
 Bred in the loathly lakes of Tartary,
 With murderous ravine, and devouring might,
 Their kingdome spoild, and countrey wasted quight,
 Themselves, for feare into his iawes to fall,
 He forst to castle strong to take their flight;
 Where, fast embard in mighty brasen wall,
 He has them now fowr years besiegd to make them thrall.

"Full many knights, adventurous and stout,
 Have enterpriz'd, that monster to subdew:
 From every coast, that heaven walks about,
 Have thither come the noble martial crew,
 That famous harde atchievements still pursew;
 Yet never any could that girlond win,
 But all still shronke; and still he greater grew;
 All they for want of faith, or guilt of sin,
 The pittceous pray of his fiers cruelty have bin.

"At last, yled with far reported praise,
 Which flying Fame throughout the world had spred,
 Of doughty knights, whom Fary land did raise,
 That noble order hight of Maidenhead,
 Forthwith to court of Gloriane I sped,
 Of Gloriane, great queene of glory bright,
 Whose kingdomes seat Cleopolis is red;
 There to obtaine some such redoubted knight
 That parents deare from tyrants powre deliver might.

"Yt was my chaunce (my chaunce was faire and good)
 There for to find a fresh unproved knight;
 Whose manly hands imbrawd in guilty blood
 Had never beene, ne ever by his might
 Had throwne to ground the unregarded right:
 Yet of his prowesse prooffe he since has made
 (I witnes am) in many a cruell fight;
 The groning ghosts of many one dismaide
 Have felt the bitter dint of his avenging blade.

"And ye, the forlorne reliques of his powre,
 His biting Sword, and his devouring Speare,
 Which have endured many a dreadfull stowre,
 Can speake his prowesse, that did earst you beare,
 And well could rule; now he hath left you heare
 To be the record of his ruefull losse,
 And of my dolefull disaventurous deare:
 O heavie record of the good Rederosse,
 Where have ye left your lord, that could so well you tosse?

"Well hoped I, and faire beginnings had,
 That he my captive languor should redceme:
 Till all unweeting an enchaunter bad
 His sence abusd, and made him to misdceme
 My loyalty, not such as it did seeme,
 That rather death desire then such despight.
 Be judge, ye heavens, that all things right esteeme,
 How I him lov'd, and love with all my might!
 So thought I eke of him, and think I thought aright.

"Thenceforth me desolate he quite forsooke,
 To wander, where wilde Fortune would me lead,
 And other bywaies he himselfe betooke,
 Where never foote of living wight did tread,
 That brought not backe the balefull body dead;
 In which him chaunced false Duessa meete,
 Mine onely foe, mine onely deadly dread;
 Who with her witchcraft, and misseeming sweete,
 Inveigled him to follow her desires unmeete.

"At last, by subtile sleights she him betraid
 Unto his foe, a gyaunt huge and tall;
 Who him disarmed, dissolute, dismaid,
 Unwares surprised, and with mighty mall
 The monster mercesse him made to fall,
 Whose fall did never foe before behold:
 And now in darkesome dungeon, wretched thrall,
 Remédillesse, for aie he doth him hold:
 This is my cause of grieve, more great than may be told."

Ere she had ended all, she gan to faint:
 But he her comforted, and faire bespake:
 "Certes, madame, ye have great cause of plaint,
 That stoutest heart, I weene, could cause to quake.
 But be of cheare, and comfort to you take;
 For, till I have acquit your captive knight,
 Assure your selfe, I will you not forsake."
 His chearefull words reviv'd her chearelesse spright.
 So forth they went, the dwarfe them guiding ever right.

CANTO VIII.

Faire virgin, to redeeme her deare,
 Brings Arthure to the light;
 Who slayes the gyaunt, wounds the beast,
 And strips Duessa quight.

AY me, how many perils doe enfold
 The righteous man, to make him daily fall,
 Were not that heavenly grace doth him uphold,
 And stedfast Truth acquite him out of all!
 Her love is firme, her care continuall,
 So oft as he, through his own foolish pride
 Or weaknes, is to sinfull bands made thrall:
 Els should this Redecrosse knight in bands have dyde,
 For whose deliverance she this prince doth thether guyd.

They sadly traveld thus, untill they came,
 Nigh to a castle builded strong and hye:
 Then cryde the dwarfe, "Lo! yonder is the same,
 In which my lord, my liege, doth lucklesse ly,
 Thrall to that gyaunts hat-full tyranny:
 Therefore, deare sir, your mighty powres assay."
 The noble knight alighted by and by
 From loftie steed, and bad the ladie stay,
 To see what end of fight should him befall that day.

So with his squire, th' admirer of his might,
 He marched forth towardes that castle wall;
 Whose gates he fownd fast shutt, ne living wight
 To warde the same, nor answere cominers call.
 Then tooke that squire an horne of bugle small,
 Which hong adowne his side in twisted gold
 And tasselles gay: wyde wonders over all
 Of that same hornes great vertues weren told
 Which had approved bene in uses manifold.

Was never wight that heard that shrilling sownd,
 But trembling feare did feel in every vaine:
 Three miles it might be easy heard arownd,
 And ecchoes three answer'd it selfe agayne:
 No faulse enchauntment, nor deceitfull traine,
 Might once abide the terror of that blast,
 But presently was voide and wholly vaine:
 No gate so strong, no locke so firme and fast,
 But with that piercing noise flew open quite, or brast.

The same before the geaunts gate he blew,
 That all the castle quaked from the grownd,
 And every dore of free-will open flew.
 The gyaunt selfe dismaied with that sownd,
 Where he with his Duessa dalliaunce fownd,
 In hast came rushing forth from inner bowre,
 With staring countenance sterne, as one astownd
 And staggering steps, to weet what suddain stowre [powre.
 Had wrought that horror strange, and dar'd his dreaded

And after him the proud Duessa came,
 High mounted on her many-headed beast;
 And every head with fyrie tongue did flame,
 And every head was crowned on his creast,
 And bloody mouthed with late cruell feast.
 That when the knight beheld, his mightie shild
 Upon his manly arme he soone addrest,
 And at him fiersly flew, with corage fild,
 And eger greedinesse through every member thrild.

Therewith the gyaunt buckled him to fight,
 Inslamd with seornefull wrath and high disdaine,
 And lifting up his dreadfull club on hight,
 All armd with ragged snubbes and knottie graine,
 Him thought at first encounter to have slaine.
 But wise and wary was that noble pere;
 And, lightly leaping from so monstrous maine,
 Did fayre avoide the violence him nere;
 It booted nought to thinke such thunderbolts to beare;

Ne shame he thought to shonne so hideous might:
 The ydle stroke, enforcing furious way,
 Missing the marke of his misaymed sight,
 Did fall to ground, and with his heavie sway
 So deeply dinted in the driven clay,
 That three yardes deepe a furrow up did throw:
 The sad earth, wounded with so sore assay,
 Did grone full grievous underneath the blow; [show.
 And, trembling with strange feare, did like an erthquake

As when almightie Iove, in wrathfull mood,
 To wreake the guilt of mortall sins is bent,
 Hurles forth his thundring dart with deadly food,
 Enrold in flames, and smouldring dreriment,
 Through riven cloudes and molten firmament;
 The fiers threeforked engin, making way,
 Both loftie towres and highest trees hath rent,
 And all that might his angry passage stay;
 And, shooting in the earth, castes up a mount of clay.

His boystrous club, so buried in the grownd,
 He could not rearen up againe so light.
 But that the knight him at advantage fownd;
 And, whiles he strove his combred clubbe to quight
 Out of the earth, with blade all burning bright
 He smott off his left arme, which like a block
 Did fall to ground depriv'd of native might;
 Large streames of blood out of the truncked stock
 Forth gushed, like fresh-water streames from riven rocke.

Dismayed with so desperate deadly wound,
 And eke impatient of unwonted payne,
 He lowdly brayd with beastly yelling sownd,
 That all the fieldes rebellowed againe:
 As great a noyse as when in Cymbrian plaine,
 An herd of bulles, whom kindly rage doth sting,
 Doe for the milky mothers want complaine,
 And fill the fieldes with troublous bellowing:
 The neighbor woodes arownd with hollow murmur ring.

That when his deare Duessa heard, and saw
 The evil stownd that daungerd her estate,
 Unto his aide she hastily did draw,
 Her dreadfull beast: who, swollen with blood of late,
 Came ramping forth with proud presumptuous gate,
 And threatned all his heades like flaming brandes.
 But him the squire made quickly to retrate,
 Encountring fiers with single sword in hand;
 And twixt him and his lord did like a bulwarke stand.

The proud Duessa, full of wrathfull spight
 And fiers disdaine, to be affronted so,
 Enforst her purple beast with all her might,
 That stop out of the way to overthroe,
 Scorning the let of so unequall foe:
 But nathemore would that corageous swayne
 To her yeeld passage, gainst his lord to goe;
 But with outrageous strokes did him restraine,
 And with his body bard the way atwixt them twaine.

Then tooke the angrie witch her golden cup,
 Which still she bore, replete with magick artes;
 Death and despayre did many thereof sup,
 And secret poyson through their inner partes;
 Th' eternall bale of heaue wounded harts:
 Which, after charmes and some enchauntments said,
 She lightly sprinkled on his weaker partes:
 Therewith his sturdie corage soon was quayd,
 And all his sences were with suddein dread dismayd.

So downe he fell before the cruell beast,
 Who on his neck his bloody clawes did sieze,
 That life nigh crusht out of his panting brest:
 No powre he had to stirre, nor will to rize.
 That when the carefull knight gan well avise,
 He lightly left the foe with whom he fought,
 And to the beast gan turne his enterprise;
 For wondrous anguish in his hart it wrought,
 To see his loved squyre into such thraldom brought;

And, high advauncing his blood-thirstie blade,
 Stroke one of those deformed heades so sore,
 That of his puissance proud ensample made;
 His monstrous scalpe down to his teeth it tore,
 And that misformed shape misshaped more:
 A sea of blood gusht from the gaping wound,
 That her gay garments staynd with filthy gore,
 And overflowed all the field arownd;
 That over shoes in blood he waded on the grownd.

Thereat he rored for exceeding paine,
 That, to have heard, great horror would have bred;
 And scourging th' emptie ayre with his long trayne,
 Through great impatience of his grieved hed,
 His gorgeous ryder from her lettie sted
 Would have cast downe, and trodd in durty myre,
 Had not the gyaunt soone her succoured;
 Who, all enrag'd with smart and frantick yre,
 Came hurtling in full fiers, and forst the knight retyre.

The force, which wont in two to be disperst,
 In one alone left hand he now unites,
 Which is through rage more strong than both were erst;
 With which his hideous club aloft he dities,
 And at his foe with furious rigor smites,
 That strongest oake might seeme to overthrow:
 The stroke upon his shield so heauië lites,
 That to the ground it doubleth him full low:—
 What mortall wight could ever beare so monstrous blow?

And in his fall his shield, that covered was,
 Did loose his vele by chaunce, and open flew;
 The light whereof, that heuens light did pas,
 Such blazing brightnesse through the ayër threw,
 That eye mote not the same endure to vew.
 Which when the gyaunt spyde with staring eye,
 He downe let fall his arme, and soft withdrew
 His weapon huge, that heaved was on hye
 For to have slain the man, that on the ground did lye.

And eke the fruitfull-headed beast, amazd
 At flashing beames of that sunshiny shield,
 Became stark blind, and all his sences dazd,
 That downe he tumbled on the durtie field,
 And seemd himselfe as conquered to yield.
 Whom when his maistresse proud perceiv'd to fall,
 Whiles yet his feeble feet for faintnesse reeld,
 Unto the gyaunt lowdly she gan call;
 "O! helpe, Orgoglio; helpe, or els we perish all."

At her so pitteous cry was much amov'd
 Her champion stout; and, for to ayde his frend,
 Againe his wonted angry weapon proov'd,
 But all in vaine: for he has redd his end
 In that bright shield, and all their forces spend
 Themselves in vaine: for, since that glauncing sight,
 He hath no powre to hurt, nor to defend,
 As where th' Almightyes lightning brond does light,
 It dimmes the dazed eyen, and daunts the sences quight.

Whom when the prince, to batteill new addrest
 And threatning high his dreadfull stroke, did see,
 His sparkling blade about his head he blest,
 And smote off quite his left leg by the knee,
 That downe he tumbled; as an aged tree,
 High growing on the top of rocky clift,
 Whose hart-strings with keene steele nigh hewen be;
 The mightie trunk halfe rent with ragged rift
 Doth roll adowne the rocks, and fall with fearefull drift.

Or as a castle, reared high and round,
 By subtile engins and malicious slight
 Is undermined from the lowest ground,
 And her foundation forst, and feebled quight,
 At last downe falles; and with her heaped hight
 Her hastie ruine does more heauie make,
 And yields it selfe unto the victours might:
 Such was this gyaunts fall, that seemd to shake
 The stedfast globe of earth, as it for feare did quake.

The knight then, lightly leaping to the pray,
 With mortall steele him smot againe so sore,
 That headlesse his unweldy bodie lay,
 All wallowd in his owne fowle bloody gore,
 Which flowed from his wounds in wondrous store.
 But, soone as breath out of his brest did pas,
 That huge great body, which the gyaunt bore,
 Was vanisht quite; and of that monstrous mas
 Was nothing left, but like an emptie blader was.

Whose grievous fall when false Duessa spyde,
 Her golden cup she cast unto the ground,
 And crowned mitre rudely threw asyde:
 Such percing griefe her stubborne hart did wound,
 That she could not endure that dolefull stound;
 But, leaving all behind her, fled away:
 The light-foot squyer her quickly turnd around,
 And, by hard meanes enforcing her to stay,
 So brought unto his lord, as his deserved pray.

The roiall virgin which beheld from farre,
 In pensive plight and sad perplexitie,
 The whole atchievement of this doubtfull warre,
 Came running fast to greet his victorie,
 With sober gladnesse and myld modestie;
 And, with sweet ioyous cheare, him thus bespake:
 "Fayre branch of noblesse, flowre of chevalrie,
 That with your worth the world amazed make,
 How shall I quite the paynes, ye suffer for my sake?

"And you, fresh budd of vertue springing fast,
Whom these sad eyes saw nigh unto Deaths dore,
What hath poore virgin for such perill past
Wherewith you to reward? Accept therefore
My simple selfe, and service evermore.
And He that high does sit, and all things see
With equall eye, their merites to restore,
Behold what ye this day have done for mee;
And, what I cannot quite, requite with usuree!

"But sith the heavens, and your faire handeling,
Have made you master of the field this day;
Your fortune maister eke with governing,
And, well begonne, end all so well, I pray!
Ne let that wicked woman scape away;
For she it is, that did my lord bethrall,
My dearest lord, and deepe in dungeon lay;
Where he his better dayes hath wasted all:
O heare, how piteous he to you for ayd does call!"

Forthwith he gave in charge unto his squire,
That scarlet whore to keepeen carefully;
Whiles he himselfe with greedie great desyre
Into the castle entred forcibly,
Where living creature none he did espye:
Then gan he loudly through the house to call;
But no man ear'd to answer to his crye:
There raignd a solenme silence over all;
Nor voice was heard nor wight was seene in bowre or hall!

At last, with creeping crooked pace forth came
An old old man, with beard as white as snow;
That on a staffe his feeble steps did frame,
And guyde his wearie gate both too and fro;
For his eye-sight him fayled long ygo:
And on his arme a bounch of keyes he bore,
The which unused rust did overgrow:
Those were the keyes of every inner dore;
But he could not them use, but kept them still in store.

But very uncouth sight was to behold,
How he did fashion his untoward pace;
For as he forward moov'd his footing old,
So backward still was turnd his wrineled face:
Unlike to men, who ever, as they trace,
Both feet and face one way are wont to lead.
This was the auncient keeper of that place,
And foster father of the gyaunt dead;
His name Ignaro did his nature right aread.

His reverend heares and holy gravitee
 The knight much honord, as beseemed well;
 And gently askt, where all the people bee,
 Which in that stately building wont to dwell:
 Who answerd him full soft, He could not tell,
 Again he askt, where that same knight was layd,
 Whom great Orgoglio with his puissance fell
 Had made his caytive thrall: againe he sayde,
He could not tell; ne ever other answer made.

Then asked he, which way he in might pas:
He could not tell, againe he answered.
 Thereat, the courteous knight displeased was,
 And said; "Old syre, it seemes thou hast not red
 How ill it sits with that same silver hed.
 In vaine to mocke, or mockt in vaine to bee:
 But if thou be, as thou art pourtrahed
 With Natures pen, in ages grave degree,
 Arcad in graver wise what I demaund of thee."

His answer likewise was, He could not tell.
 Whose senceless speach, and doted ignorance,
 Whenas the noble prince had marked well,
 He ghest his nature by his countenance;
 And calm'd his wrath with goodly temperance.
 Then, to him stepping, from his arme did reache
 Those keyes, and made himselfe free enterance.
 Each dore he opened without any breach:
 There was no barre to stop, nor foe him to empeach.

There all within full rich arayd he found,
 With royall arras, and resplendent gold,
 And did with store of every thing abound,
 That greatest princes presence might behold.
 But all the floore (too filthy to be told)
 With blood of guiltlesse babes, and innocents trow,
 Which there were slaine, as sheepe out of the fold,
 Defiled was; that dreadfull was to vew;
 And sacred ashes over it was strowed new.

And there beside a marble stone was built
 An altare, carv'd with cunning ymagery;
 On which trow Christians blood was often spilt,
 And holy martyres often doen to dye,
 With cruell malice and strong tyranny:
 Whose blessed sprites, from underneath the stone,
 To God for vengeance cryde continually;
 And with great grieve were often heard to grone;
 That hardest heart would bleede to hear their pitious moene.

Through every rowme he sought, and everie bowr,
 But no where could he find that woful thrall.
 At last he came unto an yron doore
 That fast was lockt; but key found not at all
 Amongst that bounch to open it withall;
 But in the same a little grate was pight,
 Through which he sent his voyce, and lowd did call
 With all his powre, to weet if living wight
 Were housed therewithin, whom he enlargen might.

Therewith an hollow, dreary, murmuring voyce
 These pitteous plaintes and dolours did resound;
 "O! who is that, which brings me happy choyce
 Of death, that here lye dying every stound,
 Yet live perforce in balefull darknesse bound?
 For now three moones have changed thrice their hew,
 And have been thrice hid underneath the ground,
 Since I the heavens chearefull face did vew:
 O welcome, thou, that doest of death bring tydings trew!

Which when that champion heard, with percing point
 Of pitty deare his hart was thrilled sore;
 And trembling horror ran through every ioynt
 For ruth of gentle knight so fowle forlore:
 Which shaking off, he rent that yron dore
 With furious force and indignation fell;
 Where entred in, his foot could find no flore,
 But all a deepe descent, as dark as hell,
 That breathed ever forth a filthie baneful smell.

But neither darkenesse fowle, nor filthy bands,
 Nor noyous smell, his purpose could withhold
 (Entire affection hateth nicer hands.)
 But that with constant zele and corage bold,
 After long paines and labors manifold,
 He found the meanes that prisoner up to reare;
 Whose feeble thighes, unable to uphold
 His pined corse, him scarce to light could beare;
 A ruefull spectacle of death and ghastly dreere.

His sad dull eies, deepe sunck in hollow pits,
 Could not endure th' unwonted sunne to view;
 His bare thin checkes for want of better bits,
 And empty sides deceived of their dew,
 Could make a stony hart his hap to rew;
 His rawbone armes, whose mighty brawned bowrs
 Were wont to rive steele plates, and helmets hew,
 Were elene consum'd; and all his vitall powres
 Decayd; and al his flesh shronk up like withered flowres.

Whome when his lady saw, to him she ran
 With hasty ioy : to see him made her glad,
 And sad to view his visage pale and wan ;
 Who earst in flowres of freshest youth was clad.
 Tho, when her well of teares she wasted had,
 She said : " Ah, dearest lord ! what evil starre
 On you hath frownd, and poured his influence bad,
 That of your selfe ye thus berobbed arre,
 And this misseeming hew your manly lookes doth marre ?

" But welcome now, my lord, in wele or woe,
 Whose presence I have lackt too long a day :
 And fye on Fortune mine avowed foe,
 Whose wrathful wreakes themselves doe now alay ;
 And for these wronges shall treble penaunce pay
 Of treble good : good growes of evils priefe."
 The chearlesse man, whom sorrow did dismay,
 Had no delight to treaten of his griefe ;
 His long endured famine needed more reliefe.

" Faire lady," then said that victorious knight,
 " The things, that grievous were to doe, or beare,
 Them to renew, I wote, breeds no delight ;
 Best musicke breeds delight in loathing care :
 But th' only good, that growes of passed feare,
 Is to be wise, and ware of like again.
 This daies ensample hath this lesson deare
 Deepe written in my heart with yron pen,
That blisse may not abide in state of mortall men.

" Henceforth, sir knight, take to you wonted strength.
 And maister these mishaps with patient might :
 Loe, where your foe lies stretcht in monstrous length ;
 And lo, that wicked woman in your sight,
 The roote of all your care and wretched plight,
 Now in your powre, to let her live, or die."
 " To doe her die," quoth Una, " were despight,
 And shame t'avenge so weake an enemy ;
 But spoile her of her scarlet robe, and let her fly."

So, as she bad, that witch they disaraid,
 And robd of roiall robes, and purple pall,
 And ornaments that richly were displaid ;
 Ne spared they to strip her naked all.
 Then, when they had despoyled her tire and call,
 Such, as she was, their eies might her behold,
 That her misshaped parts did them appall ;
 A loathy, wrinckled hag, ill-favoured, old,
 Whose secret filth good manners biddeth not be told.

Her crafty head was altogether bald,
 And, as in hate of honorable eld,
 Was overgrowne with scurfe and filthy scald;
 Her teeth out of her rotten gummies were feld,
 And her sowre breath abhominably smeld;
 Her dried dugs, lyke bladders lacking wind,
 Hong downe, and filthy matter from them weld;
 Her wrizled skin, as rough as maple rind,
 So scabby was, that would have loathd all womankind.

Her neather parts, the shame of all her kind,
 My chaster Muse for shame doth blush to write:
 But at her rompe she growing had behind
 A foxes taile, with dong all fowly dight;
 And eke her feete most monstrous were in sight;
 For one of them was like an eagles claw,
 With griping talaunts armd to greedy fight;
 The other like a beares uneven paw:
 More ugly shape yet never living creature saw.

Which when the knights beheld, amazd they were
 And wondred at so fowle deformed wight.
 "Such then," said Una, "as she seemeth here,
 Such is the face of Falsehood; such the sight
 Of fowle Ducessa, when her borrowed light
 Is laid away, and counterfesaunce knowne."
 Thus when they had the witch disrobed quight,
 And all her filthy feature open showne,
 Tacy let her goe at will, and wander waies unknowne.

Shee, flying fast from heavens hated face,
 And from the world that her discovered wide,
 Fled to the wastfull wildernessse apace,
 From living eies her open shame to hido;
 And lurkt in rocks and caves, long unespide.
 But that faire crew of knights, and Una faire,
 Did in that castle afterwards abide,
 To rest themselves, and weary powres repaire;
 Where store they fownd of al, that dainty was and rare.

CANTO IX.

His loves and lignage Arthure tells:
 The knights knitt friendly bands:
 Sir Trevisan flies from Despeyre,
 Whom Rederos knight withstands.

O! GOODLY golden chayne, wherewith yfere
 The vertues linked are in lovely wize;
 And noble mindes of yore allyed were,
 In brave poursuitt of chevalrous emprise,
 That none did others safety despize,
 Nor aid envy to him, in need that stands;
 But friendly each did others praise devise,
 How to advaunce with favourable hands, [hands.
 As this good prince redeemed the Rederosse knight from

Who when their powres, empayrd through labor long,
 With dew repast they had recured well,
 And that weake captive wight now waxed strong;
 Them list no lenger there at leasure dwell,
 But forward fare, as their adventures fell:
 But, ere they parted, Una faire besought
 That straunger knight his name and nation tell;
 Least so great good, as he for her had wrought,
 Should die unknown, and buried be in thankles thought.

"Faire virgin," said the prince, "yee me require
 A thing without the compas of my witt:
 For both the lignage, and the certein sire,
 From which I sprong, from mee are hidden yitt.
 For all so soone as life did me admitt
 Into this world, and shewed hevens light,
 From mother's pap I taken was unfitt,
 And streight deliver'd to a Fary knight,
 To be upbrought in gentle thewes and martiall might.

"Unto old Timon he me brought by live;
 Old Timon, who in youthly yeares hath beene
 In warlike feates th' expertest man alive,
 And is the wisest now on earth I weene:
 His dwelling is, low in a valley greene,
 Under the foot of Rauran mossy hore,
 From whence the river Dee, as silver cleene,
 His tomling billowes rolls with gentle rore;
 There all my daies he traind me up in vertuous lore.

"Thether the great magicien Merlin came,
 As was his use, oftentimes to visit me;
 For he had charge my discipline to frame,
 And tutors nouriture to oversee.
 Him oft and oft I askt in privy,
 Of what loines and what lignage I did spring,
 Whose aunswere bad me still assured bee,
 That I was sonne and heire unto a king.
 As time in her iust term the truth to light should bring."

"Well, worthy impe," said then the lady gent,
 "And pupil fitt for such a tutors hand!
 But what adventure, or what high intent,
 Hath brought you hether into Fary land,
 Arcad, Prince Arthure, crowne of martiall band?"
 "Full hard it is," quoth he, "to read aright
 The course of heavenly cause, or understand
 The secret meaning of th' Eternall Might, [wight.
 That rules mens waies, and rules the thoughts of living

"For whether He, through fatal deepe foresight,
 Me hither sent, for cause to me unghost;
 Or that fresh bleeding wound, which day and night
 Whilome doth rancle in my riven brest,
 With forced fury following his behest,
 Me hether brought by wayes yet never found;
 You to have helpt I hold myself yet blest."
 "Ah! courteous knight," quoth she, "what secret wound
 Could ever find to grieve the gentlest hart on ground?"

"Deare dame," quoth he, "you sleeping sparkes awake,
 Which, troubled once, into huge flames will grow;
 Ne ever will their fervent fury slake,
 Till living moysture into smoke do flow,
 And wasted life doe lye in ashes low.
 Yet sithens silence lesseneth not my fire,
 But, told, it flames; and, hidden, it does glow;
 I will revele what ye so much desire:
 Ah! Love, lay down thy bow, the whiles I may respyre.

"It was in freshest flowre of youthly yeares,
 When corage first does creepe in manly chest;
 Then first that cole of kindly heat appeares
 To kindle love in every living brest:
 But me had warnd old Timons wise behest,
 Those creeping flames by reason to subdew,
 Before their rage grew to so great unrest,
 As miserable lovers used to row,
 Which still wex old in woe, whiles woe still wexeth new.

"That ydle name of love, and lovers life,
 As losse of time, and vertues enemy,
 I ever scorn'd. and ioyde to stirre up strife,
 In middest of their mournfull tragedy;
 Ay wont to laugh, when them I heard to cry,
 And blow the fire, which them to ashes brent:
 Their god himselfe, grievd at my libertie,
 Shott many a dart at me with fiers intent;
 But I them warded all with wary government.

"But all in vaine; no fort can be so strong,
 Ne fleshly brest can armed be so sounnd,
 But will at last be wonne with batttrie long,
 Or unawares at disadvantage fownd:
 Nothing is sure that growes on earthly grownd.
 And who most trustes in arme of fleshly might,
 And boastes in beauties chaine not to be bownd,
 Doth soonest fall in disaventrous fight,
 And yeeldes his caytive neck to victours most despight.

"Ensampl make of him your haplesse ioy,
 And of my selfe now mated, as ye see;
 Whose prouder vaunt that proud avenging boy
 Did soone pluck downe, and curbd my libertee.
 For on a day, prickt forth with iollitee
 Of looser life and heat of hardiment,
 Raunging the forest wide on courser free,
 The fields, the floods, the heavens, with one consent,
 Did seeme to laugh on me, and favour mine intent.

"Forwearied with my sportes, I did alight
 From loftie steed, and downe to sleepe me layd:
 The verdant gras my couch did goodly dight,
 And pillow was my helmet fayre displayd:
 Whiles every sence the humour sweet embayd,
 And slombring soft my hart did steale away,
 Me seemed, by my side a royall mayd
 Her daintie limbes full softly down did lay:
 So fayre a creature yet saw never sunny day.

"Most goodly glee and lovely blandishment
 She to me made, and badd me love her deare;
 For dearly sure her love was to me bent,
 As, when iust time expired, should appeare.
 But, whether dreames delude, or true it were,
 Was never hart so ravisht with delight,
 Ne living man like wordes did ever heare,
 As she to me delivered all that night;
 And at her parting said, she Queene of Faries hight.

"When I awoke, and found her place devoyd,
 And nought but pressed gras where she had lyen,
 I sorrowed all so much as earst I ioyd,
 And washed all her place with watry even.
 From that day forth I lov'd that face divyne;
 From that day forth I cast in carefull mynd,
 To seek her out with labor and long tyne,
 And never vowd to rest till her I fynd:
 Nyne monethes I seek in vain, yet ni'll that vow unbynd."

Thus as he spake, his visage waxed pale,
 And chaunge of hew great passion did bewray;
 Yett still he strove to cloke his inward bale,
 And hide the smoke that did his fire display;
 Till gentle Una thus to him gan say;
 "O happy Queene of Faries, that hast fownd,
 Mongst many, one that with his prowesse may
 Defend thine honour, and thy foes confownd?
 True loves are often sown, but seldom grow on grownd."

"Thine, O! then," said the gentle Rederosse knight,
 "Next to that ladies love, shall be the place,
 O fayrest virgin, full of heavenly light,
 Whose wondrous faith exceeding earthly race,
 Was firmest fixt in myne extremest case.
 And you, my lord, the patrone of my life,
 Of that great queene may well gaine worthie grace;
 For onke worthie you through prowes priefe,
 Yf living man mote worthie be, to be her liewe."

So diversly discoursing of their loves,
 The golden sunne his glistring head gan shew,
 And sad remembraunce now the prince amoves
 With fresh desire his voyage to pursue;
 Als Una earnd her travaill to renew.
 Then those two knights, fast friendship for to bynd,
 And love establish each to other trefw,
 Gave goodly gifts, the signes of gratefull mynd,
 And eke, as pledges firme, right hands together ioynd.

Prince Arthur gave a boxe of diamond sure,
 Embowd with gold and gorgeous ornament,
 Wherein were closd few drops of liquor pure,
 Of wondrous worth, and vertue excellent,
 That any wovnd could heale incontinent.
 Which to requite, the Rederosse knight him gave
 A booke, wherein his Saveours Testament
 Was writt with golden letters rich and brave;
 A worke of wondrous grace, and hable soules to save.

Thus beene they parted; Arthur on his way
 To seeke his love, and th' other for to fight
 With Unacs foe, that all her realme did pray.
 But she, now weighing the decayed plight,
 And shrunkn synewes of her chosen knight,
 Would not a while her forward course pursew,
 Ne bring him forth in face of dreadfull fight,
 Till he recovered had his former hew:
 For him to be yet weake and wearie well she knew:

So as they traveild, lo! they gan espy
 An armed knight towards them gallop fast,
 That seemed from some feared foe to fly,
 Or other griesly thing, that him aghast.
 Still, as he sledd, his eye was backward cast,
 As if his feare still followed him behynd:
 Als flew his steed, as he his bandes had brast,
 And with his winged heeles did tread the wynd,
 As he had been a fole of Pegasus his kynd.

Nigh as he drew, he might perceiue his head
 To be unarmd, and curld uncombed heares
 Upstaring stiffe, dismayd with uncouth dread:
 Nor drop of blood in all his face appeares,
 Nor life in limbe; and to increase his feares,
 In fowle reproach of knighthoodes fayre degree,
 About his neck an hempen rope he weares,
 That with his glistring armes does ill agree:
 But he of rope, or armes, has now no memoree.

The Redcrosse knight toward him crossed fast,
 To weet what mister wight was so dismayd:
 There him he findes all senceless and aghast,
 That of himselfe he seemd to be afrajd;
 Whom hardly he from flying forward stayd;
 Till he these wordes to him deliver might;
 "Sir knight, aread who hath ye thus arayd,
 And eke from whom make ye this hasty flight?
 For never knight I saw in such misseeming plight."

He answerd nought at all; but adding new
 Fear to his first amazment, staring wyde
 With stony eyes and hartlesse hollow hew,
 Astonisht stood as one that had aspyde
 Infernall Furies with their chaines untyde.
 Him yett againe, and yett againe, bespake
 The gentle knight: who nought to him replyde;
 But trembling every ioint did inly quake,
 And foltring tongue at last these words seemd forth to shake:

"For Gods deare love, sir knight, doe me not stay;
 For loe! he comes, he comes fast after mee!
 Eft looking back would faine have runne away:
 But he him forst to stay, and tellen free
 The secrete cause of his perplexitie:
 Yet nathemore by his bold hartie speach
 Could his blood-frozen heart emboldned bee,
 But through his boldnes rather feare did reach:
 Yett, forst, at last he made through silence suddain breach:

"And am I now in safetic sure," quoth he,
 "From him, that would have forced me to dye?
 And is the point of death now turnd fro mee,
 That I may tell this haplesse history?"
 "Fear nought," quoth he, "no daunger now is nye,"
 "Then shall I you recount a ruefull case,"
 Said he, "the which with this unlucky eye
 I late beheld; and, had not greater grace
 Me reft from it, had bene partaker of the place.

"I lately chaunst (would I had never chaunst!)
 With a fayre knight to keepen companee,
 Sir Terwin hight, that well himselfe advaunst
 In all assayres, and was both bold and free;
 But not so happy as mote happy bee:
 He lov'd, as was his lot, a lady gent,
 That him againe lov'd in the least degree;
 For she was proud, and of too high intent,
 And ioyd to see her lover languish and lament:

"From whom retourning sad and comfortlesse,
 As on the way together we did fare,
 We met that villen. (God from him mo blesse!)
 That cursed wight, from whom I seapt whyleare,
 A man of hell; that calls himselfe Despayre;
 Who first us greets, and after fayre arceedes
 Of tydinges straunge, and of adventures rare:
 So creeping close, as snake in hidden weedes,
 Inquireth of our states, and of our knightly deedes.

"Which when he knew, and felt our feeble harts
 Embost with bale, and bitter byting griefe,
 Which Love had launched with his deadly darts;
 With wounding words, and termes of foule reprimede,
 He pluckt from us all hope of dew reliefe,
 That erst us held in love of lingring life:
 Then hopelesse, hartlesse, gan the cunning thiefe
 Perswade us dye, to stint all further strife;
 To me he lent this rope, to him a rusty knife:

"With which sad instrument of hasty death,
That wofull lover loathing lenger light,
A wyde way made to let forth living breath.
But I, more fearfull or more lucky wight,
Dismayd with that deformed dismall sight,
Fledd faste away, half dead with dying feare;
Ne yet assur'd of life by you, sir knight,
Whose like infirmity like chaunce may beare:
But God you never let his charmed speeches heare!"

"How many a man," said he, "with idle speech
Be wonne to spoyle the castle of his health?"
"I wote," quoth he, "whom triall late did teach,
That like would not for all this world's wealth.
His subtil tong, like dropping honny, mealt'h
Into the heart, and searcheth every vaine;
That, ere one be aware, by secret stealth
His powre is rest and weaknes doth remaine,
O never, sir, desire to try his guilefull traine!"

"Certes," sayd he, "hence shall I never rest,
Till I that treachours art have heard and tryde:
And you, sir knight, whose name mote I request,
Of grace do me unto his cabin guyde."
"I, that hight Trevisan," quoth he, "will ryde,
Against my liking, backe to do you grace:
But not for gold nor glee will I abyde
By you, when ye arrive in that same place:
For lever had I die then see his deadly face."

Ere long they come, where that same wicked wight
His dwelling has, low in an hollow cave,
Far underneath a craggy cliff ypyght,
Darke, dolefull, dreary, like a greedy grave,
That still for carrion carcasses doth crave:
On top whereof ay dwelt the ghastly owle,
Shrieking his balefull note, which ever drave
Far from that haunt all other chearefull fowle;
And all about it wandring ghostes did wayle and howle:

And all about old stockes and stubs of trees,
Whereon nor fruit nor leafe was ever seen,
Did hang upon the ragged rocky knees;
On which had many wretches hanged beene,
Whose carcasses were scattred on the greene,
And throwne about the cliffs. Arrived there,
That bare-head knight, for dread and dolefull teene,
Would faine have fled, ne durst aprochen neare;
But th' other forst him staye, and comforted in feare.

That darksome cave they enter, where they find
 That cursed man, low sitting on the ground,
 Musing full sadly in his sullein mind:
 His griesly lockes, long growen and unbound
 Disordred hong about his shoulders round,
 And hid his face; through which his hollow eyne
 Lookt deadly dull, and stared as astound;
 His raw-bone cheekes, through penurie and pine,
 Were shronke into his iawes, as he hid never dine.

His garments, nought but many ragged clouts,
 With thornes together pind and patched was,
 The which his naked sides he wrapt abouts:
 And him beside there lay upon the gras
 A dreary corse whose life away did pas,
 All wallowed in his own yet luke-warme blood,
 That from his wound yet welled fresh, alas!
 In which a rusty knife fast fixed stood,
 And made an open passage for the gushing flood.

Which piteous spectacle, approving trew
 The wofull tale that Trevisan had told,
 Whenas the gentle Rederosse knight did vew;
 With fierie zeale he burnt in courage bold
 Him to avenge, before his blood were cold;
 And to the villen sayd; "Thou damned wight,
 The authour of this fact we here behold,
 What iustice can but iudge against thee right,
 With thine owne blood to price his blood, here shed in sight?"

"What franticko fit," quoth he, "hath thus distraught
 Thee, foolish man, so rash a doome to give?
 What iustice ever other iudgement taught,
 But he should dye, who merites not to live?
 None els to death this man despayring drive
 But his owne guiltie mind, deserving death.
 Is then uniust to each his dew to give?
 Or let him dye, that loatheth living breath?
 Or let him die at ease, that liveth here uneath?"

"Who travailes by the wearie wandring way,
 To come unto his wished home in haste,
 And meetes a flood, that doth his passage stay;
 Is not great grace to helpe him over past,
 Or free his feet that in the myre sticke fast?
 Most envious man, that grieves at neighbours good;
 And fond, that ioyest in the woe thou hast;
 Why wilt not let him passe, that long hath stood
 Upon the bancke, yet wilt thy selfe not pas the flood?"

"He there does now enioy eternall rest
 And happy ease, which thou dost want and crave,
 And further from it daily wanderest;
 What if some little payne the passage have,
 That makes frayle flesh to feare the bitter wave;
 Is not short payne well borne, that bringes long ease,
 And layes the soule to sleepe in quiet grave?
 Sleepe after toyle, port after stormie seas,
 Ease after warre, death after life, does greatly please."

The knight much wondred at his suddeine wit,
 And sayd; "The terme of life is limited,
 Ne may a man prolong, nor shorten, it:
 The souldier may not move from watchfull sted,
 Nor leave his stand untill his captaine bed."
 "Who life did limit by Almighty doome."
 Quoth he, "knowes best the termes established;
 And he, that points the centonell his roome,
 Doth license him depart at sound of morning droome."

"Is not His deed, what ever thing is donne
 In heaven and earth? Did not He all create
 To die againe? All ends, that was begonne:
 Their times in His eternall booke of fate
 Are written sure, and have their certein date.
 Wlso then can strive with strong necessitie,
 That holds the world in his still chaunging state;
 Or shunne the death ordaynd by destinie?
 When houre of death is come, let none aske whence, nor why."

"The lenger life, I wote the greater sin;
 The greater sin, the greater punishment:
 All those great battels, which thou boasts to win
 Through strife, and blood-shed, and avengement,
 Now prayst, hereafter deare thou shalt repent:
 For life must life, and blood must blood, repay.
 Is not enough thy evill life forespent?
 For he that once hath missed the right way,
 The further he doth goe, the further he doth stray."

"Then doe no further goe, no further stray;
 But here ly downe, and to thy rest betake,
 Th' ill to prevent, that life ensewen may.
 For what hath life, that may it loved make,
 And gives not rather cause it to forsake?
 Feare, sicknesse, age, losse, labour, sorrow, strife,
 Payne, hunger, cold that makes the heart to quake;
 And ever fickle fortune rageth rife;
 All which, and thousands mo, do make a loathsome life."

"Thou, wretched man, of death hast greatest need,
 If in true ballaunce thou wilt weigh thy state;
 For never knight, that dared warlike deed,
 More luckless disadvantages did amate:
 Witnes the dungeon deepe, wherein of late
 Thy life shutt up for death so oft did call;
 And though good lucke prolonged hath thy date,
 Yet death then would the like mishap forestall.
 Into the which hereafter thou maist happen fall.

"Why then doest thou, O man of sin, desire
 To draw thy dayes forth to their last degree?
 Is not the measure of thy sinfull hire
 High heaped up with huge iniquitee,
 Against the day of wrath, to burden thee?
 Is not enough, that to his lady mild
 Thou falsed hast thy faith with periuree,
 And sold thyselfe to serve Duessa vild.
 With whom in all abuse thou hast thyselfe defild?

"Is not he iust, that all this doth behold
 From highest heven, and beares an equall cie?
 Shall he thy sins up in his knowledge fold,
 And guilty be of thine impietie?
 Is not his law, Let every sinner die,
 Die shall all flesh? What then must needs be donne,
 Is it not better to doe willinglie,
 Then linger till the glas be all out ronno?
 Death is the end of woes: Die soone, O Faries sonne."

The knight was much enmoued with his speach,
 That as a sword's poynt through his hart did perse,
 And in his conscience made a secrete breach,
 Well knowing trew all that he did rehearse,
 And to his fresh remembraunce did reverse
 The ugly vew of his deformed crimes;
 That all his manly powres it did disperse,
 As he were charmed with inchaunted rimes;
 That oftentimes he quakt, and fainted oftentimes.

In which amazement when the miscreant
 Perceived him to waver weake and fraile,
 Whiles trembling horror did his conscience daunt,
 And hellish anguish did his soule assaile;
 To drive him to despaire, and quite to quaille,
 Hce shewd him painted in a table plaine
 The damned ghosts, that doe in torments waile,
 And thousand feends, that doe them endlesse paine
 With fire and brimstone, which for ever shall remaine.

The sight whereof so throughly him dismaid,
 That nought but death before his eies he saw,
 And ever burning wrath before him laid,
 By righteous sentence of th' Almightyes law.
 Then gan the villain him to overeraw,
 And brought unto him swords, ropes, poison, fire,
 And all that might him to perdition draw;
 And bad him choose what death he would desire:
 For death was dew to him, that had provokt Gods ire.

But, whenas none of them he saw him take,
 He to him raught a dagger sharpe and keene,
 And gave it him in hand: his hand did quake
 And tremble like a leafe of aspin greene,
 And troubled blood through his pale face was scene
 To come and goe, with tidings from the heart,
 As it a ronning messenger had beene.
 At last, resolv'd to work his finall smart,
 He lifted up his hand, that backe againe did start.

Which whenas Una saw, through every vaine
 The crudled cold ran to her well of life,
 As in a swowne; but, soone reliev'd againe,
 Out of his hand she snatcht the cursed knife,
 And threw it to the grownd, enraged rife,
 And to him said: "Fie, fie, faint-hearted knight,
 What meanest thou by this reprochfull strife.
 Is this the battaile, which thou vauntst to fight
 With that fire-mouthed dragon, horrible and bright?"

"Come; come away, fraile, feeble, fleshly wight,
 Ne let vaine words bewitch thy manly hart,
 Ne divelish thoughts dismay thy constant spright:
 In heavenly mercies hast thou not a part?
 Why shouldst thou then despeire, that chosen art?
 Where iustice growes, there grows eke greater grace,
 The which doth quench the brond of hellish smart,
 And that accurst hand-writing doth deface:
 Arise, sir knight; arise, and leave this cursed place."

So up he rose, and thence amounted streight.
 Which when the carle beheld, and saw his guest
 Would safe depart, for all his subtile sleight;
 He chose an halter from among the rest,
 And with it hong himselfe, unbid, unblest.
 But death he could not worke himselfe thereby;
 For thousand times he so himselfe had drest,
 Yet nathëless it could not doe him die,
 Till he should die his last, that is, eternally.

CANTO X

Her faithfull knight faire Una brings
 To house of Holinesse:
 Where he is taught repentaunce, and
 The way to heavenly blesse.

WHAT man is he, that boasts of fleshly might
 And vaine assurance of mortality,
 Which, all so soone as it doth come to fight
 Against spirituall foes, yields by and by,
 Or from the fielde most cowardly doth fly!
 Ne let the man ascribe it to his skill,
 That thorough grace hath gained victory:
 If any strength we have, 'tis to ill;
 But all the good is Gods, both power and eke will.

By that which lately hapned, Una saw
 That thus her knight was feeble, and too faint;
 And all his sinewes woxen weake and raw,
 Through long enprisonment, and hard constraint,
 Which he endured in his late restraint,
 That yet he was unfitt for bloody fight.
 Therefore to cherish him with diets daint,
 She cast to bring him, where he chearen might,
 Till he recovered had his late decayed plight.

There was an auncient house not far away,
 Renownd throughout the world for sacred lore
 And pure unspotted life: so well, they say,
 It governd was, and guided evermore,
 Through wisdom of a matrone grave and hore;
 Whose onely ioy was to relieve the needes
 Of wretched soules, and helpe the helpelesse pore:
 All night she spent in bidding of her bedes,
 And all the day in doing good and godly deedes.

Dame Cælia, men did her call, as thought
 From heaven to come, or thether to arise;
 The mother of three daughters well upbrought
 In goodly thewes, and godly exercise:
 The eldest two, most sober, chaste, and wise,
 Fidelia and Speranza, virgins were;
 Though spoused, yet wanting wedlocks solemnize;
 But faire Charissa to a lovely fere
 Was lincked, and by him had many pledges dere.

Arrived there, the dore they find fast lockt;
 For it was warely watched night and day,
 For feare of many foes; but, when they knockt,
 The porter opened unto them streight way.
 He was an aged syre, all hory gray,
 With lookes full lowly cast, and gate full slow,
 Wont on a staffe his feeble steps to stay,
 Hight Humilta. They passe in, stouping low;
 For streight and narrow was the way which he did show.

Each goodly thing is hardest to begin;
 But, entred in, a spatious court they see,
 Both plaine and pleasaunt to be walked in;
 Where them does meete a francklin faire and free,
 And entertaines with comely courteous glee;
 His name was Zele, that him right well became:
 For in his speeches and behaviour hee
 Did labour lively to expresse the same,
 And gladly did them guide, till to the hall they came.

There fayrely them receives a gentle squire,
 Of mild demeanure and rare courtesee,
 Right cleanly clad in comely sad attyre;
 In word and deede that shewd great modestee,
 And knew his good to all of each degree;
 Hight Reverence: he them with speeches meet
 Does faire entreat; no courting nicetee,
 But simple, trew, and eke unfained sweet,
 As might become a squire so great persons to greet.

And afterwarde them to his dame he leades,
 That aged dame, the lady of the place,
 Who all this while was busy at her beades;
 Which doen, she up arose with seemely grace,
 And toward them full matronely did pace.
 Where, when that fairest Una she beheld,
 Whom well she knew to spring from heavenly race,
 Her heart with joy unwonted inly sweld,
 As feeling wondrous comfort in her weaker old:

And, her embracing, said; "O happy earth,
 Whereon thy innocent feet doe ever tread!
 Most vertuous virgin, borne of heavenly berth,
 That, to redeeme thy woefull parents head
 From tyrans rage and ever-dying dread,
 Hast wandred through the world now long a day,
 Yett ceassest not thy weary soles to lead;
 What grace hath thee now hether brought this way?
 Or doen thy feeble feet unweeting hether stray?"

"Straunge thing it is an errant knight to see
 Here in this place; or any other wight,
 That hether turnes his steps: so few there bee,
 That chose the narrow path, or seeke the right!
 All keepe the broad high way, and take delight
 With many rather for to goe astray,
 And be partakers of their evill plight,
 Then with a few to walke the rightest way:
 O! foolish men, why hast ye to your own decay?"

"Thy selfe to see, and tyred limbes to rest,
 O matrone sage," quoth she, "I hether came;
 And this good knight his way with me addrest,
 Iedde with thy prayses, and broad-blazed fame,
 That up to heven is blowne." The auncient damo
 Him goodly greeted in her modest guyse,
 And enterleynd them both, as best became,
 With all the court'sies that she could devyse,
 Ne wanted ought to shew her bounteous or wise.

Thus as they gan of sondrie thinges devise,
 Loe! two most goodly virgins came in place,
 Ylinked arme in arme in lovely wise;
 With countenance demure, and modest grace,
 They numbred even steps and equall pace:
 Of which the eldest, that Fidelia hight,
 Like sunny beames threw from her christall face
 That could have dazd the rash beholders sight,
 And round about her head did shine like hevens light.

She was araied all in lily white,
 And in her right hand bore a cup of gold,
 With wine and water fild up to the hight,
 In which a serpent did himselfe enfold,
 That horroure made to all that did behold;
 But she no whitt did chaunge her constant mood:
 And in her other hand she fast did hold
 A booke, that was both signd and seald with blood:
 Wherein darke things were writt, hard to be understood.

Her younger sister, that Speranza hight,
 Was clad in blew, that her beseemed well;
 Not all so chearefull seemed she of sight,
 As was her sister; whether dread did dwell
 Or anguish in her hart, is hard to tell:
 Upon her arme a silver anchor lay,
 Whereon she leaned ever, as befell;
 And ever up to heven, as she did pray,
 Her stedfast eyes were bent, ne swarved other way.

They, seeing Una, towards her gan wend,
 Who them encounters with like courtesee;
 Many kind speeches they betweene them spend,
 And greatly ioy each other for to see:
 Then to the knight with shamefast modestie
 They turne themselves, at Unaes meeke request,
 And him salute with well beseeeming glee;
 Who faire them quites, as him beseeemed best,
 And goodly gan discourse of many a noble gest.

Then Una thus; "But she, your sister deare,
 The deare Charissa, where is she become?
 Or wants she health, or busie is elsewhere?"
 "Ah! no," said they, "but forth she may not come;
 For she of late is lightned of her wombe,
 And hath encreast the world with one sonne more,
 That her to see should be but troublesome."
 "Indeed," quoth she, "that should her trouble sore;
 But thank't be God, and her encrease so evermore!"

Then said the aged Cælia: "Deare dame,
 And you, good sir, I wote that of youre toyle
 And labors long, through which ye hether came,
 Ye both forweari'd be: therefore a while
 I read you rest, and to your bowres recoyle."
 Then called she a groome, that forth him ledd
 Into a goodly lodge, and gan despoile
 Of puissant armes, and laid in easie bedd:
 His name was meeke Obedience rightfully aredd.

Now when their wearie limbes with kindly rest,
 And bodies were refresht with dew repast,
 Fayre Una gan Fidelia sayre request,
 To have her knight into her schoolehous plaste,
 That of her heavenly learning he might taste,
 And heare the wisdom of her wordes divine.
 She graunted: and that knight so much agraste
 That she him taught celestiall discipline,
 And opened his dull eyes, that light mote in them shine.

And that her sacred booke, with blood ywritt,
 That none could reade except she did them teach,
 She unto him disclosed every whitt;
 And heavenly documents thereout did preach,
 That weaker witt of man could never reach;
 Of God; of Grace; of Iustice; of Free-will;
 That wonder was to heare her goodly speach:
 For she was hable with her wordes to kill,
 And rayse againe to life the hart that she did thrill.

And, when she list poure out her larger spright,
 She would commaund the hasty sunne to stay,
 Or backward turne his course from heuens hight:
 Sometimes great hostes of men she could dismay;
 Dry-shod to passe she parts the fouds in tway;
 And eke huge mountaines from their native seat
 She would commaund themselves to beare away,
 And throw in raging sea with roaring threat:
 Almighty God her gave such powre and puissance great.

The faithfull knight now grew in little space,
 By bearing her, and by her sisters lore,
 To such perfection of all heavenly grace,
 That wretched world he gan for to abhore,
 And mortall life gan loath as thing forlore,
 Greevd with remembrance of his wicked wayes,
 And priekt with anguish of his sinnes so sore,
 That he desirde to end his wretched dayes:
 So much the dart of sinfull guilt the soule dismayes.

But wise Speranza gave him comfort sweet,
 And taught him how to take assured hold
 Upon her silver anchor, as was meet;
 Els had his sinnes so great and manifold
 Made him forget all that Fidelia told.
 In this distressed doubtfull agony,
 When him his dearest Una did behold
 Disdeining life, desiring leave to dye,
 She found her selfe assayld with great perplexity;

And came to Cælia to declare her smart;
 Who well acquainted with that commune plight,
 Which sinfull horror workes in wounded hart,
 Her wisely comforted all that she might,
 With goodly counsell and advisement right;
 And streightway sent with carefull diligence,
 To fetch a leach, the which had great insight
 In that disease of grieved conscience,
 And well could cure the same; his name was Patience.

Who, comming to that sowle-diseased knight,
 Could hardly him intreat to tell his grief:
 Which knowne, and all, that noyd his heave spright,
 Well searcht, eftsoones he gan apply relief
 Of salves and med'cines, which had passing prief;
 And thereto added wordes of wondrous might:
 By which to ease he him recured brieft,
 And much aswag'd the passion of his plight,
 That he his paine endur'd, as seeming now more light.

But yet the cause and root of all his ill,
 Inward corruption and infected sin,
 Not purg'd nor heald, behind remained still,
 And festring sore did ranckle yett within,
 Close creeping twixt the marow and the skin:
 Which to extirpe, he laid him privily
 Downe in a darksome lowly place far in,
 Whereas he meant his corrosives to apply,
 And with streight diet tame his stubborne malady.

In ashes and sackcloth he did array
 His daintie corse, poud humors to abate;
 And dieted with fasting every day,
 The swelling of his woundes to mitigate;
 And made him pray both earely and eke late:
 And ever, as superfluous flesh did rott,
 Amendment readie still at hand did wayt
 To pluck it out with pincers fyrie whott
 That soone in him was lefte no one corrupted iott.

And bitter Penaunce, with an yron whip,
 Was wont him once to disple every day:
 And sharp Remorse his hart did prick and nip,
 That drops of blood thence like a well did play:
 And sad Repentance used to embay
 His body in salt water smarting sore,
 The filthy blottes of sin to wash away.
 So in short space they did to health restore
 The man that would not live, but erst lay at deathes dore.

In which his torment often was so great,
 That, like a lyon, he would cry and rore;
 And rend his flesh; and his own synewes eat.
 His owne deare Una, hearing evermore
 His ruefull shriekes and gronings, often tore
 Her guiltlesse garments and her golden heare,
 For pittie of his payne and anguish sore:
 Yet all with patience wisely she did beare;
 For well she wist his cryme could els be never cleare

Whom, thus recovered by wise Patience
 And trew Repentaunce, they to Una brought;
 Who, ioyous of his cured conscience,
 Him dearely kist, and fayrely eke besought,
 Himselfe to chearish, and consuming thought
 To put away out of his carefull brest.
 By this Charissa, late in child-bed brought,
 Was woxen strong, and left her fruitfull nest:
 To her fayre Una brought this unacquainted guest.

She was a woman in her freshest age,
 Of wondrous beauty, and of bounty rare,
 With goodly grace and comely personage,
 That was on earth not easie to compare;
 Full of great love; but Cupids wanton snare
 As hell she hated; chaste in worke and will;
 Her necke and brests were ever open bare,
 That ay thereof her babes might sucke their fill;
 The rest was all in yellow robes arrayed still.

A multitude of babes about her hong,
 Playing their sportes, that ioyed her to behold;
 Whom still she fed, whiles they were weake and young,
 But thrust them forth still as they waxed old:
 And on her head she wore a tyre of gold,
 Adorn'd with gemmes and owches wondrous fayre,
 Whose passing price unceath was to be told:
 And by her syde there sate a gentle payre
 Of turtle doves, she sitting in an yvory chayre.

The knight and Una entring fayre her greet,
 And bid her ioy of that her happy brood;
 Who them requites with court sies seeming meet,
 And entertaynes with friendly chearefull mood.
 Then Una her besought, to be so good
 As in her vertuous rules to schoole, her knight,
 Now after all his torment well withstood
 In that sad house of Penance, where his spright
 Had past the paines of hell and long-enduring night.

She was right ioyous of her iust request;
 And, taking by the hand that faeries sonne,
 Gan him instruct in everie good behest,
 Of love; and righteousness: and well to donne,
 And wrath and hatred warily to shonne,
 That drew on men Gods hatred and his wrath,
 And many soules in dolours had fordonne:
 In which when him she well instructed hath,
 From thence to heaven she teacheth him the ready path.

Wherein his weaker wandring steps to guyde,
 An aunient matrone she to her does call,
 Whose sober lookes her wisdom well deseryde;
 Her name was Mercy; well knowne over all
 To be both gracious and eke liberall:
 To whom the carefull charge of him she gave,
 To leade aright, that he should never fall
 In all his waies through this wide worldës wave;
 That mercy in the end his righteous soule might save.

The godly matrone by the hand him beares
 Forth from her presence, by a narrow way,
 Scattered with bushy thornes and ragged breares,
 Which still before him she remov'd away,
 That nothing might his ready passage stay:
 And ever when his feet encombred were,
 Or gan to shrink, or from the right to stray,
 She held him fast, and firmly did upheare;
 As carefull nurse her child from falling oft does reare.

First soones unto an holy hospitall,
 That was foreby the way, she did him bring;
 In which seven head-men, that had vowed all
 Their life to service of high heavens king,
 Did spend their daies in doing godly thing:
 Their gates to all were open evermore,
 That by the wearie way were travelling;
 And one sate wayting ever them before,
 To call in commers-by, that needy were and pore.

The first of them, that eldest was and best,
 Of all the house had charge and government,
 As guardian and steward of the rest:
 His office was to give entertainement
 And lodging unto all that came and went;
 Not unto such as could him feast againe,
 And double quite for that he on them spent;
 But such, as want of harbour did constraine:
 Those for Gods sake his dewty was to entertaine.

The second was an almner of the place:
 His office was the hungry for to feed,
 And thirsty give to drinke; a worke of grace:
 He feard not once himselfe to be in need,
 Ne car'd to hoord for those whom he did breede:
 The grace of God he layd up still in store,
 Which as a stocke he left unto his seede:
 He had enough; what need him care for more?
 And had he lesse, yet some he would give to the pore.

The third had of their wardrobe custody,
 In which were not rich tyres, nor garments gay,
 The plumes of pride and winges of vanity,
 But clothēs meet to keep keene cold away,
 And naked nature seemely to aray;
 With which bare wretched wights he dayly clad,
 The images of God in earthly clay;
 And if that no spare clothes to give he had,
 His owne cote he would cut, and it distribute glad.

The fourth appointed by his office was
 Poore prisoners to relieve with gracious ayd,
 And captives to redeeme with price of bras
 From Turkes and Sarazins, which them had stayd;
 And though they faulty were, yet well he wayd,
 That God to us forgiveth every howre
 Much more then that why they in bands were layd;
 And he, that harrowd hell with heavie stowre,
 The faulty soules from thence brought to his heavenly bowre.

The fift had charge sick persons to attend,
 And comfort those in point of death which lay;
 For them most needeth comfort in the end.
 When Sin, and Hell, and Death, doe most dismay
 The feeble soule departing hence away,
 All is but lost, that living we bestow,
 If not well ended at our dying day.
 O man! have mind of that last bitter throw;
 For as the tree does fall, so lyes it ever low.

The sixt had charge of them now being dead,
 In seemely sort their corses to engrave,
 And deck with dainty flowres their brydall bed,
 That to their heavenly Spouse both sweet and brave
 They might appeare, when he their soules shall save.
 The wondrous workmanship of Gods owne mould,
 Whose face he made all beastes to feare, and gave
 All in his hand, even dead we honour should.
 Ah, dearest God, me graunt, I dend be not defould!

The seventh, now after death and buriall done,
 Had charge the tender orphans of the dead
 And wydowes ayd, lest they should be undone:
 In face of iudgement he their right would plead,
 No ought the powre of mighty men did dread
 In their defence; nor would for gold or fee
 Be wonne their rightfull causes downe to tread:
 And, when they stood in most necessitee,
 He did supply their want, and gave them ever free.

There when the elfin knight arrived was,
 The first and chiefest of the seven, whose care
 Was guests to welcome, towardes him did pas:
 Where seeing Mercie, that his steps upbare
 And alwaies led, to her with reverence rare
 He humbly louted in meeke lowlinesse,
 And seemely welcome for her did prepare:
 For of their order she was patronesse,
 Albe Charissa were their chiefest founderesse.

There she awhile him stayes, himselfe to rest,
 That to the rest more hable he might bee:
 During which time, in every good behest,
 And godly worke of almes and charitee,
 Shee him instructed with great industree.
 Shortly therein so perfect he became,
 That, from the first unto the last degree,
 His mortall life he learned had to frame
 In holy righteousnesse, without rebuke or blamo.

Thence forward by that painfull way they pas
 Forth to an hill, that was both steepe and hy;
 On top whereof a sacred chapel was,
 And eke a little hermitage thereby,
 Wherein an aged holy man did lie,
 That day and night did his devotion,
 No other worldly busines did apply:
 His name was Heavenly Contemplation;
 Of God and goodness, was his meditation.

Great grace that old man to him given had;
 For God he often saw from heavens hight:
 All were his earthly eien both blunt and bad,
 And through great age had lost their kindly sight,
 Yet wondrous quick and persaunt was his spright,
 As eagles eie, that can behold the sunne.
 That hill they scale with all their powre and might,
 That his fraile thighes, nigh weary and fordonne,
 Gan faile; but, by her helpe, the top at last he wonne.

There they doe finde that godly aged sire,
 With snowy lockes adowne his shoulders shed;
 As hoary frost with spangles doth attire
 The mossy braunches of an oake halfe ded.
 Each bone might through his body well be red,
 And every sinew seene, through his long fast:
 For nought he car'd his carcas long unfed;
 His mind was full of spirituall repast,
 And pynd his flesh to keep his body low and chast.

Who, when these two approaching he aspide,
 At their first presence grew agrieved sore,
 That forst him lay his heavenly thoughts aside;
 And had he not that dame respected more,
 Whom highly he did reverence and adore,
 He would not once have moved for the knight.
 They him saluted, standing far afore;
 Who, well them greeting, humbly did requight,
 And asked, to what end they clomb that tedious hight?

"What end," quoth she, "should cause us take such pame,
But that same end, which every living wight
Should make his marke, high heaven to attaine?
Is not from hence the way, that leadeth right
To that most glorious house, that glistreth bright
With burning starres and everliving fire,
Whereof the keies are to thy hand beight
By wise Fidelia? She doth thee require,
To shew it to this knight, according his desire."

"Thrise happy man," said then the father grave,
"Whose staggering steps thy steady hand doth lead,
And shewes the way his sinfull soule to save!
Who better can the way to heaven aread
Then thou thyselfe, that was both borne and bred
In heavenly throne, where thousand angels shine?
Thou doest the prayers of the righteous send
Present before the Majesty Divine,
And his avenging wrath to clemency incline."

"Yet, since thou bidst, thy pleasure shal be donne.
Then come, thou man of earth, and see the way,
That never yet was scene of Faries sonne;
That never leads the traueiler astray,
But, after labors long and sad delay,
Brings them to ioyous rest and endlesse blis.
But first thou must a season fast and pray,
Till from her bands the spright assoiled is.
And have her strength recur'd from fraile infirmitis."

That done, he leads him to the highest mount;
Such one, as that same mighty man of God,
That blood-red billowes like a walled front
On either side disparted with his rod,
Till that his army dry-foot through them yod,
Dwelt forty daies upon; where, writt in stone
With bloody letters by the hand of God,
The bitter doome of death and balefull mone
He did receiue, whiles flashing fire about him shone:

Or like that sacred hill, whose head full hie,
Adorn'd with fruitfull olives all arownd,
Is, as it were for endlesse memory
Of that deare Lord who oft thereon was fownd,
For ever with a flowring girlond crown'd;
Or like that pleasaunt mount, that is for ay
Through famous poets verse each where renown'd,
On which the thrise three learned ladies play
Their hevenly notes, and make full many a lovely lay.

From thence, far off he unto him did shew
 A little path, that was both steepe and long,
 Which to a goodly citty led his vew;
 Whose wals and towres were builded high and strong
 Of perle and precious stone, that earthly tong
 Cannot describe, nor wit of man can tell;
 Too high a ditty for my simple song!
 The citty of the Greate King hight it well,
 Wherein eternall peace and happinesse doth dwell.

As he thereon stood gazing, he might see
 The blessed Angels to and fro descend
 From highest heaven in gladsome companee,
 And with great ioy into that citty wend,
 As commonly as frend does with his frend.
 Whereat he wondred much, and gan enquire,
 What stately building durst so high extend
 Her lofty towres unto the starry sphere,
 And what unknownen nation there empleed were.

"Faïre knight," quoth he, "Hierusalem that is,
 The New Hierusalem, that God has built
 For those to dwell in, that are chosen his,
 His chosen people purg'd from sinful guilt
 With pretious blood, which cruelly was spilt
 On cursed tree, of that unspotted Lam,
 That for the sinnes of al the world was kilt:
 Now are they saints all in that citty sam,
 More dear unto their God than younglings to their dam."

"Till now," said then the knight, "I weened well,
 That great Cleopolis where I have beene,
 In which that fairest Fary Queene doth dwell,
 The fairest citty was that might be seene;
 And that bright towre, all built of christall clene,
 Panthea, seemd the brightest thing that was:
 But now by prooffe all otherwise I weene;
 For this great citty that does far surpas,
 And this bright Angels towre quite dims that towre of [glas."

"Most trew," then said the holy aged man;
 "Yet is Cleopolis, for earthly frame,
 The fairest peece that eie beholden can;
 And well beseemes all knights of noble name,
 That covett in th' immortall booke of fame
 To be eternized, that same to haunt,
 And doen their service to that soveraigne dame,
 That glory does to them for guerdon graunt:
 For she is hevenly borne, and heaven may iustly vaunt.

"And thou, faire ymp. sprong out from English race,
 How ever now accompted Elfins sonne,
 Well worthy doest thy service for her grace,
 To aide a virgin desolate fordonne,
 But when thou famous victory hast wonne,
 And high emongst all knights hast hong thy shield,
 Thenceforth the suitt of earthly conquest shonne,
 And wash thy hands from guilt of bloody field:
 For blood can nought but sin, and wars but sorrows yield.

"Then seek this path that I to thee presage,
 Which after all to heaven shall thee send;
 Then peaceably thy painefull pilgrimage
 To yonder same Hierusalem doe bend.
 Where is for thee ordaind a blessed end:
 For thou emongst those saints, whom thou doest see
 Shall be a saint, and thine owne nations frend
 And patrone: thou Saint George shalt called bee,
Saint George of mery England, the signe of victoree."

"Unworthy wretch," quoth he, "of so great grace,
 How dare I thinke such glory to attaine!"
 "These, that have it attaynd, were in like case,"
 Quoth he, "as wretched, and liv'd in like paine."
 "But deeds of armes must I at last be faine
 And ladies love to leave, so dearely bought?"
 "What need of armes, where peace doth ay remaine,
 Said he, "and battailes none are to be fought?
 As for loose loves, they're vaine, and vanish into nought."

"O let me not," quoth he, "then turne againe
 Backe to the world, whose ioyes so fruitlesse are;
 But let me here for aie in peace remaine,
 Or streightway on that last long voiage fare,
 That nothing may my present hope empare."
 "That may not be," said he, "ne maist thou yitt
 Forgoe that royal maides bequeathed care,
 Who did her cause into thy hand committ,
 Till from her cursed foe thou have her freely quitt."

"Then shall I soone," quoth he, "so God me grace,
 Abett that virgins cause disconsolate,
 And shortly back returne unto this place,
 To walke this way in pilgrims poore estate.
 But now aread, old father, why of late
 Didst thou behight me borne of English blood,
 Whom all a Faeries sonne doen nominate?"
 "That word shall I," said he, "avouchen good,
 Sith to thee is unknowne the cradle of thy brood.

"For well I wote thou springst from ancient race
 Of Saxon kinges, that have with mightie hand,
 And many bloody battailes fought in place,
 High reard their royall throne in Britane land,
 And vanquisht them, unable to withstand:
 From thence a Faery thee unweeting reft,
 There as thou slepst in tender swadling band,
 And her base Elfin brood there for thee left:
 Such, men do chaungelings call, so chaung'd by Faeries theft.

"Thence she thee brought into this Faery lond,
 And in an heaped furrow did thee hyde;
 Where thee a ploughman all unweeting fond,
 As he is toylesome tene that way did guyde,
 And brought thee up in ploughmans state to byde,
 Whereof Gēorgos he thee gave to name;
 Till prickt with courage, and thy forces pryde,
 To Fary court thou cam'st to seek for fame,
 And prove thy puissant armes, as seemes thee best became."

"O holy sire," quoth he, "how shall I quight
 The many favours I with thee have fownd,
 That hast my name and nation redd aright,
 And taught the way that does to heaven bownd!"
 This saide, adowne he looked to the grownd
 To have returnd, but dazed were his eyne
 Through passing brightnes, which did quite confound
 His feeble sence, and too exceeding shyne.
 So darke are earthly thinges compard to things divine!

At last, whenas himselfe he gan to fynd,
 To Una back he cast him to retyre;
 Who him awaited still with pensive mynd.
 Great thanks, and goodly meed, to that good syre
 He thens departing gave for his paynes hyre.
 So came to Una, who him ioyd to see;
 And, after little rest, gan him desyre
 Of her adventure myndfull for to bee.
 So leave they take of Cælia and her daughters three.

CANTO XI.

The knight with that old dragon fights
 Two dayes incessantly :
 The third, him overthrowes; and gayns
 Most glorious victory.

From time now gan it wax for Una sayre
 To thinke of those her captive parents deare,
 And their forwasted kingdom to repayre:
 Whereto whenas they now approached neare,
 With hartie wordes her knight she gan to cheare,
 And in her modest manner thus bespake;
 "Deare knight, as deare as ever knight was deare,
 That all these sorrows suffer for my sake,
 High heven behold the tedious toyle, ye for me take!

"Now are we come unto my native soyle,
 And to the place where all our perilles dwell;
 Here hauntes that feend, and does his daily spoyle;
 Therefore henceforth bee at your keeping well,
 And ever ready for your foeman fell:
 The spark of noble corage now awake,
 And strive your excellent selfe to excell:
 That shall ye evermore renowned make
 Above all knights on earth, that batteill undertake."

And pointing forth, "Lo! yonder is," said she,
 "The brasen towre, in which my parents deare
 For dread of that huge feend imprisond be;
 Whom I from far see on the walls appeare,
 Whose sight my feeble soule doth greatly cheare;
 And on the top of all I do espye
 The watchman wayting tydings glad to heare,
 That, O my parents, might I happily
 Unto you bring, to ease you of your misery!"

With that they heard a roaring hideous sownd,
 That all the ayre with terror filled wyde,
 And seemd unceath to shake the stedfast ground.
 Eftsoones that dreadful dragon they espyde,
 Where stretcht he lay upon the sunny side
 Of a great hill, himselfe like a grèat hill:
 But, all so soone as he from far descryde
 Those glistering armes that heven with light did fill,
 He rousd himselfe full blyth, and hastned them untill.

Then badd the knight his lady yede aloof,
 And to an hill herselfe withdraw asyde:
 From whence she might behold that battailles proof,
 And eke be safe from daunger far deseryde:
 She him obeyd, and turnd a little wyde.—
 Now, O thou sacred Muse, most learned dame,
 Fayre ympe of Phœbus and his aged bryde,
 The nourse of time and everlasting fame,
 That warlike handes ennoblest with immortall name;

O, gently come into my feeble brest,
 Come gently; but not with that mightie rage,
 Wherewith the martiall troupes thou doest infest,
 And hartes of great heroës doest enrage,
 That nought their kindled corage may aswage:
 Soone as thy dreadfull trompe begins to sownd,
 The god of warre with his fiers equipage
 Thou doest awake, sleepe never he so sownd;
 And scared nations doest with horror sterne astownd.

Fayre goddess, lay that furious fitt asyde,
 Till I of warres and bloody Mars doe sing,
 And Bryton fieldes with Sarazin blood bedyde,
 Twixt that great Faery Queene, and Paynim king,
 That with their horror heven and earth did ring;
 A worke of labour long and endlesse prayse:
 But now a while lett downe that haughtie string
 And to my tunes thy second tenor rayse,
 That I this man of God his godly armes may blaze.

By this, the dreadful beast drew nigh to hand,
 Haife flying and halfe footing in his haste,
 That with his largenesse measured much land,
 And made wide shadow under his huge waste;
 As mountaine doth the valley overcaste.
 Approching nigh, he reared high afore
 His body monstrous, horrible, and vaste;
 Which, to increase his wondrous greatnes more,
 Was swoln with wrath and poyson, and with bloody gore;

And over all with brazen scales was armd,
 Like plated cote of steele, so couched neare
 That nought mote perce; ne might his corse be harmd
 With dint of sword, nor push of pointed speare:
 Which, as an eagle, seeing pray appeare,
 His aery plumes doth rouze full rudely dight;
 So shaked he, that horror was to heare:
 For, as the clashing of an armor bright,
 Such noyse his rouzed scales did send unto the knight.

His flaggy winges, when forth he did display,
 Were like two sayles, in which the hollow wynd
 Is gathered full, and worketh speedy way:
 And eke the penne, that did his pineons bynd,
 Were like mayne-yardes with flying canvas lynd;
 With which whenas him list the ayre to beat,
 And there by force unwonted passage fynd,
 The cloudes before him fledd for terror great,
 And all the hevens stood still amazed with his threat.

His huge long tayle, wovnd up in hundred foldes,
 Does overspred his long bras-sealy back,
 Whose wreathed boughtes when ever he unfolds,
 And thick-entangled knots adown does slack,
 Bespotted as with shieldes of red and blaek,
 It sweepeth all the land behind him farre,
 And of three furlongs does but litle lacke;
 And at the point two stinges infixed arre,
 Both deadly sharp, that sharpest steele exceeden farre.

But stinges and sharpest steele did far exceed
 The sharpnesse of his cruell rending clawes:
 Dead was it sure, as sure as death indeed,
 What ever thing does touch his ravenous pawes,
 Or what within his reach he ever drawes.
 But his most hideous head my tongue to tell
 Does tremble; for his deepe devouring iawes
 Wyde gaped, like the griesly mouth of hell,
 Through which into his darke abysses all ravin fell.

And, that more wondrous was, in either iaw
 Three ranckes of yron teeth enraunged were,
 In which yett trickling blood, and gobbets raw,
 Of late devoured bodies did appeare;
 That sight thereof bredd cold congealed feare:
 Which to increase, and all at once to kill,
 A cloud of smothering smoke, and sulphure sear.
 Out of his stinking gorge forth steemed still,
 That all the ayre about with smoke and stench did fill.

His blazing eyes, like two bright shining shieldes,
 Did burne with wrath, and sparkled living fyre:
 As two broad beacons, sett in open fieldes,
 Send forth their flames far off to every shyre,
 And warning give, that enemies conspyre
 With fire and sword the region to invade;
 So flam'd his eyne with rage and rancorous yre:
 But far within, as in a hollow glade,
 Those glaring lampes were sett, that made a dreadfull shade.

So dreadfully he towardes him did pas,
 Forelusting up aloft his speckled brest,
 And often bounding on the brused gras.
 As for great ioyance of his new come guest.
 Eftsoones he gan advance his haughty crest;
 As chauffed bore his bristles doth upreare;
 And shoke his scales to battaile ready drest,
 (That made the Rederosse knight nigh quake for feare,)
 As bidding bold defyaunce to his foeman neare.

The knight gan fayrely couch his steady speare,
 And siersly ran at him with rigorous might:
 The pointed steele, arriving rudely theare,
 His harder hyde would nether perce nor bight,
 But, glauncing by, foorth passed forward right:
 Yet, sore amoved with so puissaunt push,
 The wrathfull beast about him turned light,
 And him so rudely, passing by, did brush
 With his long tayle, that horse and man to ground did rush.

Both horse and man up lightly rose againe,
 And fresh encounter towardes him addrest;
 But th' ydle stroke yet backe recoyld in vaine,
 And found no place his deadly point to rest.
 Exceeding rage enflam'd the furious beast,
 To be avenged of so great despight;
 For never felt his imperceable brest
 So wondrous force from hand of living wight:
 Yet had he prov'd the powre of many a puissant knight.

Then, with his waving wings displayed wyde,
 Himselfe up high he lifted from the ground,
 And with strong flight did forcibly divyde
 The yielding ayre, which nigh too feeble found
 Her flitting parts, and element unsound,
 To beare so great a weight: He, cutting way
 With his broad sayles, about him soared round;
 At last, low stouping with unweldy sway,
 Szatcht up both horse and man, to beare them quite away.

Long he them bore abo e the subject plaine,
 So far as ewghen bow a shaft may send;
 Till struggling strong did him at last constraine
 To let them downe before his flightes end:
 As hagar hauke, presuming to contend
 With hardy fowle above his hable might,
 His wearie pounces all in vaine doth spend
 To trusse the pray too heavy for his flight;
 Which comming down to ground, does free itselfe by fight

He so disseized of his gryping grosse,
 The knight his thrillant speare again assayd
 In his bras-plated body to embosse,
 And three mens strength unto the stroake he layd;
 Wherewith the stiffe beame quaked, as affrayd,
 And glauncing from his sealy neeke did glyde
 Close under his left wing, then broad displayd:
 The perding steele there wrought a wound full wyde,
 That with the uncouth smart the monster lowdly cryde.

He cryde, as raging seas are wont to rore,
 When wintry storme his wrathful wreck does threat;
 The rolling billowes beate the ragged shore,
 As they the earth would shoulder from her seat;
 And greedy gulfe does gape, as he would eat
 His neighbour element in his revenge:
 Then gin the blustering brethren boldly threat
 To move the world from off his stedfast henge,
 And boystrous battaile make, each other to avengo.

The steely head stuck fast still in his flesh
 Till with his cruell clawes he snatcht the wood,
 And quite asunder broke: forth flowed fresh
 A gushing river of blacke gory blood,
 That drowned all the land, whereon he stood;
 The streame thereof would drive a water-mill:
 Trebly augmented was his furious mood
 With bitter sence of his deepe-rooted ill,
 That flames of fire he threw forth from his large nosethrill.

His hideous tayle then hurled he about,
 And therewith all enwrapt the nimble thyes
 Of his froth-fomy steed, whose courage stout
 Striving to loose the knot that fast him tyes,
 Himselfe in streighter bandes too rash implies,
 That to the ground he is perforce constraynd
 To throw his ryder; who can quickly ryse
 From off the earth, with durty blood distaynd,
 For that reprochfull fall right fowly he disdaynd;

And fiercely tooke his trenchard blade in hand,
 With which he stroke so furious and so fell,
 That nothing seemd the puissaunce could withstand
 Upon his crest the hardned yron fell;
 But his more hardned crest was armd so well,
 That deeper dint therein it would not make;
 Yet so extremely did the buffe him quell,
 That from thenceforth he shund the like to take
 But, when he saw them come, he did them still forsake

The knight was wroth to see his stroke beguylde,
 And smot againe with more outrageous might;
 But backe againe the sparring steele recoyld,
 And left not any marke where it did light,
 As if in adamant rocke it had beene pight.
 The beast, impatient of his smarting wound,
 And of so fierce and forcible despight,
 Thought with his winges to stye above the ground;
 But his late wounded wing unserviceable found.

Then, full of grief and anguish vehement,
 He lowdly brayd, that like was never heard:
 And from his wide devouring oven sent
 A flake of fire, that, flashing in his beard,
 Him all amazd, and almost made afeard:
 The scorching flame sore swinged all his face,
 And through his armour all his body seard,
 That he could not endure so cruell cace,
 But thought his armes to leave, and helmet to unlacc.

Not that great champion of the antique world,
 Whom famous poetes verse so much doth vaunt,
 And hath for twelve huge labours high extold,
 So many furies and sharpe fits did haunt,
 When him the poysond garment did enchaunt,
 With Centaures blood and bloody verses charmd;
 As did this knight twelve thousand dolours daunt,
 Whom fyrie steele now burnt, that erst him armd;
 That erst him goodly armd, now most of all him harmed.

Faynt, wearie, sore, emboyled, grieved, brent,
 With heat, toyle, wounds, armes, smart, and inward fire,
 That never man such mischiefes did torment;
 Death better were; death did he oft desire;
 But death will never come, when needes require.
 Whom so dismayd when that his foe beheld,
 He cast to suffer him no more respire,
 But gan his sturdy sterne about to weld,
 And him so strongly stroke, that to the ground him feld.

It fortun'd, (as fayre it then befell,)
 Behynd his backe, unweeting where he stood,
 Of auncient time there was a springing well,
 From which fast trickled forth a silver flood,
 Full of great vertues, and for med'cine good:
 Whylome, before that cursed dragon got
 That happy land, and all with innocent blood
 Defyld those sacred waves, it rightly hot
 The Well of Life; ne yet his vertues had forgot:

For unto life the dead it could restore,
 And guilt of sinfull crimes cleane wash away;
 Those, that with sicknesse were infected sore,
 It could recure; and aged long decay
 Renew, as one were born that very day.
 Both Silo this, and Iordan, did excell,
 And th' English Bath, and eke the German Spau;
 Ne can Cephise, nor Hebrus, match this well:
 Into the same the knight back overthrowen fell.

Now gan the golden Phœbus for to steepe
 His fierie face in billowes of the west,
 And his saint steedes watred in ocean deepe,
 Whiles from their iournall labours they did rest;
 When that infernall monster, having kest
 His wearie foe into that living well,
 Can high aduance his broad discoloured brest
 Above his wonted pitch, with countenance fell.
 And clapt his yron wings, as victor he did dwell.

Which when his pensive lady saw from farre,
 Great woe and sorrow did her soule assay,
 As weening that the sad end of the warre;
 And gan to highest God entirely pray
 That feared chaunce from her to turne away:
 With folded hands, and knees full lowly bent,
 All night she watcht; ne once adowne would lay
 Her dainty limbs in her sad dreriment,
 But praying still did wake, and waking did lament.

The morrow next gan early to appeare,
 That Titan rose to runne his daily race;
 But early, ere the morrow next gan reare
 Out of the sea faire Titans deawy face,
 Up rose the gentle virgin from her place,
 And looked all about, if she might spy
 Her loved knight to move his manly pace:
 For she had great doubt of his safety,
 Since late she saw him fall before his enemy.

At last she saw, where he upstarted brave
 Out of the well wherein he drenched lay:
 As eagle, fresh out of the ocean wave,
 Where he hath leste his plumes all hory gray,
 And deckt himselfe with fethers youthly gay,
 Like eyas hauke up mounts unto the skies,
 His newly-budded pineons to assay,
 And marveiles at himselfe, stil as he flies:
 So new this new-borne knight to battell new did rise.

Whom when the damned seed so fresh did spy,
 No wonder if he wondred at the sight,
 And doubted whether his late enemy
 It were, or other new supplied knight.
 He now, to prove his late-renewed might,
 High brandishing his bright dew-burning blade,
 Upon his crested scalp so sore did smite,
 That to the scull a yawning wound it made:
 The deadly dint his dulled senses all dismayd.

I wote not, whether the revenging steelo
 Were hardned with that holy water dew
 Wherein he fell; or sharper edge did feele;
 Or his baptized hands now greater grew;
 Or other secret vertue did ensew;
 Els never could the force of fleshly arme,
 Ne molten mettall, in his blood embrew:
 For, till that stownd, could never wight him harme
 By subtilty, nor slight, nor night, nor mighty charme.

The cruell wound enraged him so sore,
 That loud he yelled for exceeding paine;
 As hundred ramping lions seemd to rore,
 Whom ravenous hunger did thereto constraîne.
 Then gan he tosse aloft his stretched traine,
 And therewith scourge the buxome aire so sore,
 That to his force to yelden it was faine;
 Ne ought his sturdy strokes might stand afore,
 That high trees overthrew, and rocks in peeces tore:

The same advatnceing high above his head,
 With sharpe intended sting so rude him smott,
 That to the earth him drove, as stricken dead;
 Ne living wight would have him life behott:
 The mortall sting his angry needle shott
 Quite through his shield, and in his shoulder seasd,
 Where fast it stucke, ne would thereout be gott:
 The griefe thereof him wondrous sore diseasd,
 Ne might his raneling paine with patience be appeasd.

But yet, more mindfull of his honour deare
 Then of the grievous smart which him did wring,
 From loathed soile he can him lightly reare,
 And strove to loose the far infixd sting:
 Which when in vaine he tryde with struggeling,
 Inflam'd with wrath, his raging blade he heste,
 And strooke so strongly, that the knotty string
 Of his huge taile he quite asonder clefte;
 Five ioints thereof he hewd, and but the stump him lefte.

Hart cannot thinke, what outrage and what cries,
 With fowle enfouldred smoake and flashing fire,
 The hell-bred beast threw forth unto the skies,
 That all was covered with darknesse dire:
 Then fraught with rancour, and engorged yre,
 He cast at once him to avenge for all;
 And, gathering up himselfe out of the mire
 With his uneven wings, did fiercely fall
 Upon his sunne-bright shield, and grypt it fast withall.

Much was the man encombred with his hold,
 In feare to lose his weapon in his paw,
 Ne wist yett, how his talaunts to unfold;
 Nor harder was from Cerberus greedy iaw
 To plucke a bone, then from his cruell claw
 To reave by strength the griped gage away:
 Thrise he assayd it from his foote to draw,
 And thrise in vaine to draw it did assay;
 It booted nought to thinke to robbe him of his pray.

Tho, when he saw no power might prevaile,
 His trusty sword he cald to his last aid,
 Wherewith he fiersly did his foe assaile,
 And double blowes about him stoutly laid,
 That glauncing fire out of the yron plaid;
 As sparckles from the andvile use to fly,
 When heavy hammers on the wedg are swaid;
 Therewith at last he forst him to unty
 One of his grasping feete, him to defend thereby.

The other foote, fast fixed on his shield,
 Whennas no strength nor stroks mote him constraine
 To loose, ne yett the warlike pledg to yield;
 He smott thereat with all his might and maine,
 That nought so wondrous puissaunce might sustaine:
 Upon the ioint the lucky steele did light,
 And made such way, that hewd it quite in twaine;
 The paw yett missed not his minisht might,
 But hong still on the shield, as it at first was pight.

For grieve thereof and divelish despight,
 From his infernall founnace fourth he threw,
 Huge flames, that dimmed all the heavens light,
 Enrold in duskish smoke and brimstone blew:
 As burning Aetna from his boyling stew
 Doth belch out flames, and rockes in peeces broke,
 And ragged ribs of mountaines molten new,
 Enwrapt in coleblacke clowds and filthy smoke,
 That at the land with stench, and heven with horror choke.

The heate whereof, and harmefull pestilence,
 So sore him noyd, that forst him to retire
 A little backward for his best defence,
 To save his body from the scorching fire,
 Which he from hellish entrailes did expire.
 It chaunst, (Eternall God that chaunce did guide,)
 As he recoiled backward, in the mire
 His nigh forweari'd feeble feet did slide,
 And downe he fell, with dread of shame sore terrifide.

There grew a goodly tree him faire beside,
 Loaden with fruit and apples rosy redd,
 As they in pure vermilion had been dide,
 Whereof great vertues over all were redd:
 For happy life to all which thereon fedd,
 And life eke everlasting did befall:
 Great God it planted in that blessed stedd
 With his Almighty hand, and did it call
 The Tree of Life, the crime of our first fathers fall.

In all the world like was not to be fownd,
 Save in that soile, where all good things did grow,
 And freely sprong out of the fruitfull grownd,
 As incorrupted Nature did them sow,
 Till that dredd dragon all did overthrow.
 Another like faire tree eke grew thereby,
 Whereof whoso did eat, eftsounes did know
 Both good and ill: O mournfull memory!
 That tree through one mans fault bath doen us all to dy!

From that first tree forth flowd, as from a well,
 A trickling streame of balme, most souveraine
 And dainty deare, which on the ground still fell,
 And overflowed all the fertile plaine,
 As it had deawed bene with timely raine;
 Life and long health that gracious ointment gave;
 And deadly wounds could heale; and reare againe
 The sencelesse corse appointed for the grave:
 Into that same he fell, which did from death him save.

For nigh thereto the ever-damned beast
 Durst not approach, for he was deadly made,
 And al that life preserved did detest;
 Yet he it oft adventur'd to invade.
 By this the drouping Day-light gan to fade,
 And yield his rowme to sad succeeding Night,
 Who with her sable mantle gan to shade
 The face of earth and wayes of living wight,
 And high her burning torch set up in heaven bright.

When gentle Una saw the second fall
 Of her deare knight, who, weary of long fight,
 And faint through losse of blood, moov'd not at all,
 But lay, as in a dreame of deepe delight,
 Besmeard with pretious balme, whose vertuous might
 Did heale his woundes, and scorching heat alay;
 Againe she stricken was with sore affright,
 And for his safetie gan devoutly pray,
 And watch the noyous night, and wait for ioyous day.

The ioyous day gan early to appeare;
 And fayre Aurora from the dewy bed
 Of aged Tithone gan herselfe to reare
 With rosy cheekes, for shame as blushing red:
 Her golden locks, for hast, were loosely shed
 About her cares, when Una her did marko
 Clynbe to her charet, all with flowers spred,
 From heven high to chace the chearelesse darke;
 With mery note her lowd salutes the mountain larke.

Then freshly up arose the doughty knight,
 All healed of his hurts and woundes wide,
 And did himselfe to battaile ready dight;
 Whose early foe awaiting him beside
 To have devourd, so soone as day he spyde,
 When now he saw himselfe so freshly reare,
 As if late fight had nought him damnifyde,
 He woxe dismayd, and gan his fate to feare;
 Nathlesse with wonted rage he him adyaunced neare;

And in his first encounter, gaping wyde,
 He thought attonce him to have swallowd quight,
 And rusht upon him with outragious pryde;
 Who him rencounting fierce as hauke in flight,
 Perforce rebutted back: the weapon bright,
 Taking advantage of his open iaw,
 Ran through his mouth with so importune might,
 That deepe emperst his darksome hollow maw,
 And, back retyrd, his life blood forth withall did draw.

So downe he fell, and forth his life did breath,
 That vanisht into smoke and cloudes swift;
 So downe he fell, that th' earth him underneath
 Did grone, as feeble so great load to lift;
 So downe he fell, as an huge rocky clift,
 Whose false foundation waves have washt away,
 With dreadfull poyse is from the mayneland rift,
 And, rolling downe, great Neptune doth dismay:
 So downe he fell, and like an heaped mountaine lay.

The knight himselſe even trembled at his fall,
 So huge and horrible a maſſe it ſeemd;
 And his deare lady, that beheld it all,
 Durſt not approach for dread which ſhe miſdeemd;
 But yet at laſt, whenas the direfull ſeend
 She ſaw not ſtirre, off-shaking vaine affright
 She nigher drew, and ſaw that ioyous end:
 Then God ſhe prayd, and thankt her faithfull knight,
 That had atchieved ſo great a conqueſt by his might.

CANTO XII.

Fayre Una to the Redcroſſe knight
 Betrouthed is with ioy:
 Though falſe Dueſſa, it to barre,
 Her falſe ſleightes doe employ.

BEHOLD I ſee the haven nigh at hand,
 To which I meane my wearie courſe to bend;
 Vere the maine ſhete, and beare up with the land,
 The which afore is fayrly to be kend,
 And ſeemeth ſafe from ſtorms that may offend:
 There this fayre virgin wearie of her way
 Muſt landed bee, now at her iourneyes end;
 There eke my feeble barke a while may ſtay,
 Till mery wynd and weather call her thence away.

Scarcely had Phœbus in the glooming eaſt
 Yett harnessed his fyrie-footed teeme,
 Ne reard above the earth his flaming creſt;
 When the laſt deadly ſmoke aloft did ſteeme
 That ſigne of laſt outbreathed life did ſeeme
 Unto the watchman on the caſtle-wall,
 Who thereby dead that balefull beaſt did deeme
 And to his lord and lady lowd gan call,
 To tell how he had ſeene the dragons fatall fall.

Uproſe with haſty ioy, and feeble ſpeed,
 That aged ſyre, the lord of all that land,
 And looked forth, to wœt if trew indeed
 Thoſe tydinges were, as he did underſtand:
 Which whenas trew by tryall he out-fond,
 He badd to open wyde his braſen gate,
 Which long time had beene ſhut, and out of hond
 Proclaymed ioy and peace through all his ſtate;
 For dead now was their foe, which them forrayed late.

Then gan triumphant trumpets soun on hye,
 That sent to heven the eechoed report
 Of their new ioy, and happie victory
 Gainst him, that had them long opprest with tort,
 And fast imprisoned in sieged fort.
 Then all the people, as in solemne feast,
 To him assembled with one full consórt,
 Reioyeing at the fall of that great beast,
 From whose eternall bondage now they were releast.

Forth came that auncient lord, and aged queene,
 Arayd in ántique robes downe to the grownd,
 And sad habiliments right well besene:
 A noble crew about them waited rownd
 Of sage and sober peres, all gravely gownd;
 Whom far before did march a goodly band
 Of tall young men, all haule armes to soun.
 But now they laurell braunches bore in hand;
 Glad signe of victory and peace in all their land.

Unto that doughtie conquerour they came,
 And, him before themselves prostrating low,
 Their lord and patrone loud did him proclame,
 And at his feet their lawrell boughes did throw.
 Soone after them, all dauncing on a row,
 The comely virgins came, with girlands dight,
 As fresh as flowres in meadow greene doe grow.
 When morning deaw upon their leaves doth light;
 And in their handes sweet timbrells all upheld on hight.

And, them before, the fry of children yong
 Their wanton sportes and childish mirth did play,
 And to the maydens sounding tymbrels song
 In well attuned notes a ioyous lay,
 And made delightful musiek all the way.
 Untill they came, where that faire Virgin stood:
 As fayre Diana in fresh sommers day
 Beholdes her nymphes enraung'd in shady wood,
 Some wrestle, some do run, some bathe in christall flood:

So she beheld those maydens meriment
 With chearefull vew; who, when to her they came,
 Themselves to ground with gracious humblesse bent,
 And her ador'd by honorable name,
 Lifting to heven her everlasting fame:
 Then on her head they sett a girlond greene,
 And crowned her twixt earnest and twixt game:
 Who, in her self-resemblance well besene,
 Did seeme, such as she was, a goodly maiden queene.

And after all the raskall many ran,
 Heaped together in rude rablement,
 To see the face of that victorious man,
 Whom all admired as from heaven sent,
 And gaz'd upon with gaping wonderment.
 But when they came where that dead dragon lay,
 Stretched on the ground in monstrous large extent,
 The sight with ydle feare did them dismay,
 Ne durst approach him nigh, to touch, or once assay.

Some feard, and fledd; some feard, and well it faynd;
 One, that would wiser seeme then all the rest,
 Warnd him not touch, for yet perhaps remaynd
 Some lingring life within his hollow brest,
 Or in his wombe might lurke some hidden nest
 Of many dragonettes, his fruitfull seede;
 Another saide, that in his eyes did rest
 Yet sparekling fyre, and badd thereof take heed;
 Another said, he saw him move his eyes indeed.

One mother, whenas her foolehardy chyld
 Did come too neare, and with his talants play,
 Halfe dead through feare, her little babe revyld,
 And to her gossips gan in counsell say;
 "How can I tell, but that his talants may Yet scratch my sonne, or rend his tender hand?"
 So diversly themselves in vaine they fray;
 Whiles some more bold to measure him nigh stand,
 To prove how many acres he did spred of land.

Thus flocked all the folke him rownd about;
 The whiles that hoarie king, with all his traine,
 Being arrived where that champion stout
 After his foes defeasaunce did remaine,
 Him goodly greetes, and sayre does entertayne
 With princely gifts of yvory and gold,
 And thousand thanks him yeeldes for all his paine.
 Then when his daughter deare he does behold,
 Her dearly doth imbrace, and kisseth manifold.

And after to his pallace he them brings,
 With shaumes, and trompets, and with clarions sweet;
 And all the way the ioyous people singes,
 And with their garments strowes the paved street;
 Whence mounting up, they fynd purveyaunce meet
 Of all, that royall princes court became;
 And all the floore was underneath their feet
 Bespredd with costly scarlott of great name,
 On which they lowly sitt, and fitting purpose frame.

" But when they came where that dead dragon lay,
Stretcht on the ground in monstrous large extent,
The sight with bile fear did them dismay."

Book I. Canto XII. Ver. 9.

What needes me tell their feast and goodly guize,
 In which was nothing riotous nor vaine?
 What needes of dainty dishes to devise,
 Of comely services, or courtly trayne.
 My narrow leaves cannot in them contayne
 The large discourse of roiall princes state.
 Yet was their manner then but bare and playne;
 For th' antique world excesse and pryde did hate
 Such proud luxurious pompe is swollen up but late.

Then, when with meates and drinckes of every kinde
 Their fervent appetite they quenched had,
 That auncient lord gan fit occasion finde,
 Of straunge adventures, and of perils sad
 Which in his travell him befallen had,
 For to demanda of his renowned guest:
 Who then with utt'rance grave, and count'nance sad,
 From poynt to poynt, as is before exprest,
 Discourst his voyage long, according his request.

Great pleasure, mixt with pittifull regard,
 That godly king and queene did passionate,
 Whyles they his pittifull adventures heard;
 That oft they did lament his lucklesse state,
 And often blame the too importune fate
 That heaped on him so many wrathfull wreakes;
 (For never gentle knight, as he of late,
 So tossed was in fortunes cruell freakes;)
 And all the while salt teares bedewd the hearers cheeks.

Then said that royall pere in sober wise;
 "Deare sonne, great beene the evils which ye bore
 From first to last in your late enterprise,
 That I no'te whether praise or pitty more:
 For never living man, I weene, so sore
 In sea of deadly daungers was distrest:
 But since now safe ye seised have the shore,
 And well arrived are (high God be blest!)
 Let us devise of ease and everlasting rest."

"Ah, dearest lord," said then that doughty knight,
 "Of ease or rest I may not yet devise;
 For by the faith, which I to armes have plight,
 I bownden am streight after this emprize,
 As that your daughter can ye well advize,
 Backe to retourne to that great Faery Queene,
 And her to serve sixe yeares in warlike wize,
 Gainst that proud Paynim king that works her teene:
 Therefore I ought crave pardon, till I there have beene."

"Unhappy falls that hard necessity,"
 Quoth he, "the troubler of my happy peace,
 And vowed foe of my felicity;
 Ne I against the same can justly preace.
 But since that band ye cannot now release,
 Nor doen undo, (for vows may not be vayne,)
 Soone as the terme of those six yeares shall cease,
 Ye then shall hether back retourne agayne,
 The marriage to accomplish vowd betwixt you twayn:

"Which, for my part, I covet to performe,
 In sort as through the world I did proclame,
 That whoso kild that monster most deforme,
 And him in hardy battayle overcame,
 Should have mine onely daughter to his dame,
 And of my kingdome heyre apparaunt bee:
 Therefore since now to thee perteynes the same,
 By dew desert of noble chevalree,
 Both daughter and eke kingdome lo! I yield to thee."

Then forth he called that his daughter sayre,
 The fairest Un', his onely daughter deare,
 His onely daughter and his onely hayre;
 Who forth proceeding with sad sober cheare,
 As bright as doth the morning starre appeare
 Out of the east, with flaming lockes bedight,
 To tell that dawning day is drawing neare,
 And to the world does bring long-wished light:
 So faire and fresh that lady shewd herselfe in sight:

So faire and fresh, as freshest flowre in May;
 For she had layd her mournefull stole aside,
 And widow-like sad wimple throwne away,
 Wherewith her heavenly beautie she did hide,
 Whiles on her weary iourney she did ride;
 And on her now a garment she did weare
 All lilly white, withoutten spot or pride,
 That seemd like silke and silver woven neare;
 But neither silke nor silver therein did appeare.

The blazing brightnesse of her beauties beame,
 And glorious light of her sunshyny face,
 To tell, were as to strive against the streame:
 My ragged rimes are all too rude and bace
 Her heavenly lincaments for to enchace.
 Ne wonder; for her own deare loved knight,
 All were she daily with himselfe in place,
 Did wonder much at her celestial sight:
 Oft had he seene her faire, but never so faire dight.

So fairely dight when she in presence came,
 She to her syre made humble reverence,
 And bowed low, that her right well became,
 And added grace unto her excellence:
 Who with great wiselome and grave eloquence
 Thus gan to say—But, eare he thus had sayd,
 With flying speede, and seeming great pretence,
 Came running in, much like a man dismayd,
 A messenger with letters, which his message sayd.

All in the open hall amazed stood
 At suddeinnesse of that unwary sight,
 And wondred at his breathlesse hasty mood:
 But he for nought would stay his passage right,
 Till fast before the king he did alight;
 Where falling flat great humblesse he did make,
 And kist the ground whereon his foot was pight;
 Then to his handes that writt he did betake,
 Which he disclosing, read thus as the paper spake;

“To thee, most mighty king of Eden fayre,
 Her greeting sends in these sad lines adrest
 The wofull daughter and forsaken heyre
 Of that great emperour of all the west;
 And bids thee be advized for the best,
 Ere thou thy daughter linck in holy band
 Of wedlocke, to that new unknownen guest:
 For he already plighted his right hand
 Unto another love, and to another land.

“To me sad mayd, or rather widow sad,
 He was assyaunced long time before,
 And sacred pledges he both gave, and had.
 False erraunt knight, infâmous, and forswore!
 Witnesse the burning altars, which he swore,
 And guilty heavens of his bold periury;
 Which though he hath polluted oft of yore,
 Yet I to them for iudgment iust doe fly.
 And them coniure t’ avenge this shamefull iniury!

“Therefore since mine he is, or free or bond,
 Or false or trew, or living or else dead,
 Withhold, O soverayne prince, your hasty hond
 From knitting league with him, I you aread;
 Ne weene my right with strength adowne to tread,
 Through weaknesse of my widowhed or woe;
 For Truth is strong her rightfull cause to plead,
 And shall finde friends, if need requireth soe. [dessa.”
 So bids thee well to fare, thy neither friend nor foe, Fi-

When he these bitter byting wordes had red,
 The tydings straunge did him abashed make,
 That still he sate long time astonished,
 As in great muse, ne word to creature spake.
 At last his solemn silence thus he brake,
 With doubtfull eyes fast fixed on his guest:
 "Redoubted knight, that for myne only sake
 Thy life and honor late adventurst;
 Let nought be hid from me, that ought to be exprest.

"What meane these bloody vowes and idle threats,
 Throwne out from womanish impatient mynd?
 What hevens? what altars? what enraged heates,
 Here heaped up with termes of love unkynd,
 My conscience cleare with guilty bands would bynd?
 High God be witnesse, that I guiltlesse ame!
 But if yourselfe, sir knight, ye faulty fynd,
 Or wrapped be in loves of former dame,
 With cryme doe not it cover, but diselosse the same."

To whom the Redcrosse knight this answer sent;
 "My lord, my king; be nought hereat dismayd,
 Till well ye wote by grave intendment,
 What woman, and wherefore, doth me upbrayd
 With breach of love and loialty betrayed.
 It was in my mishaps, as hitherward
 I lately traveild, that unawares I strayd
 Out of my way, through perils straunge and hard;
 That day should faile me ere I had them all declar'd.

"There did I find, or rather I was fownd
 Of this false woman that Fidessa hight,
 Fidessa hight the falsest dame on grownd,
 Most false Duessa, royall richly dight,
 That easy was t' inveigle weaker sight;
 Who by her wicked arts and wiely skill,
 Too false and strong for earthly skill or might,
 Unawares me wrought unto her wicked will.
 And to my foe betrayd, when least I feared ill."

Then steppeth forth the goodly royall mayd,
 And, on the ground herselfe prostrating low,
 With sober countenance thus to him sayd;
 "O pardon me, my souveraine lord, to show
 The secret treasons, which of late I know
 To have bene wrought by that false sorceresse:
 Shee, onely she, it is, that erst did throw
 This gentle knight into so great distresse,
 That death him did awaite in daily wretchednesse.

"And now it seemes, that she suborned hath
 This crafty messenger with letters vaine,
 To worke new woe and unprovided seath,
 By breaking of the band betwixt us twaine;
 Wherein she used hath the practicke paine
 Of this false footman, clokt with simplenesse,
 Whome if ye please for to discover plaine,
 Ye shall him Archimago find, I ghesse,
 The falsest man alive; who tries, shall find no lesse."

The king was greatly moved at her speech;
 And, all with suddain indignation fraight,
 Bad on that messenger rude hands to reach.
 Eftsoones the gard, which on his state did wait,
 Attacht that faytor false, and bound him strait:
 Who seeming sorely chauffed at his band,
 As chained beare whom cruell dogs doe bait,
 With ydle force did faine them to withstand:
 And often semblaunce made to scape out of their hand.

But they him layd full low in dungeon deepe,
 And bound him hand and foote with yron chains:
 And with continual watch did warely keepe.
 Who then would thinke, that by his subtil trains
 He could escape fowle death or deadly pains?
 Thus, when that princes wrath was pacified,
 He gan renew the late forbidden baine,
 And to the knight his daughter dear he tyde
 With sacred rites and vowes for ever to abyde.

His owne two hands the holy knotts did knitt,
 That none but death for ever can divide;
 His owne two hands, for such a turne most fitt,
 The housling fire did kindle and provide,
 And holy water thereon sprinckled wide;
 At which the bushy teade a groome did light,
 And sacred lamp in secret chamber hide,
 Where it should not be quenched day nor night,
 For feare of evil fates, but burnen ever bright.

Then gan they sprinckle all the posts with wine,
 And made great feast to solemnize that day:
 They all perfumde with frankincense divine,
 And precious odours fetcht from far away,
 That all the house did sweat with great aray
 And all the while sweete musicke did apply
 Her curious skill the warbling notes to play,
 To drive away the dull melánocholy;
 The whiles one sung a song of love and iollity.

During the which there was an heavenly noise
Heard sownd through all the pallace pleasantly,
Like as it had bene many an angels voice
Singing before th' Eternal Maiesty,
In their trinall triplicities on hye:
Yett wist no creature whence that heavenly sweet
Proceeded, yet each one felt secretly
Himselfe thereby reſte of his ſences meet,
And raviſhed with rare impreſſion in his ſprite.

Great ioy was made that day of young and old.
And ſolemne feaſt proclaymd throughout the land,
That their exceeding merth may not be told:
Suffice it heare by ſignes to underſtand
The uſuall ioyes at knitting of loves band.
Thiſe happy man the knight himſelfe did hold,
Poſſeſſed of his ladies hart and hand;
And ever, when his eie did her behold,
His heart did ſeeme to melt in pleaſures manifold.

Her ioyous preſence, and ſweet company,
In full content he there did long enioy;
Ne wicked envy, ne vile geology,
His deare delights were hable to annoy:
Yet, ſwimming in that ſea of bliſſfull ioy,
He nought forgott how he whilome had ſworne,
In caſe he could that monſtrous beaſt deſtroy,
Unto his Faery Queene backe to retourne;
The which he ſhortly did; and Una left to mourne.

Now, ſtrike your ſailes, yee iolly mariners,
For we be come unto a quiet rode,
Where we muſt land ſome of our paſſengers,
● And light this weary veſſell of her lode.
Here ſhe a while may make her ſafe abode,
Till ſhe repaired have her tackles ſpent,
And wants ſupplide; and then againe abroad
On the long voiage whereto ſhe is bent:
Well may ſhe ſpeede, and fairely finiſh her intent?

THE SECOND BOOK
OF
THE FAERIE QUEENE,

CONTAYNING

The Legend of Sir Guyon, or of Temperaunce.

---

RIGHT well I wote, most mighty soveraine,
That all this famous antique history
Of some th' aboundance of an ydle braine
Will iudged be, and painted forgery,
Rather then matter of iust memory;
Sith none that breatheth living aire doth know
Where is that happy land of Faëry,
Which I so much doe vaunt, yet no where show;
But vouch antiquities, which no body can know.

But let that man with better sence aduize,
That of the world least part to us is red;
And daily how through hardy enterprize
Many great regions are discovered,
Which to late age were never mentioned,
Who ever heard of th' Indian Peru?
Or who in venturous vessell measured
The Amazon huge river, now found trew?
Or fruitfulest Virginia who did ever vew?

Yet all these were, when no man did them know,
Yet have from wisest ages hidden beene;
And later times thinges more unknowne shall show
Why then should witlesse man so much misweene,
That nothing is, but that which he hath seene?
What, if within the moones fuyre shining spheare,
What, if in every other starre unscene
Of other worldes he happily should heare?
He wonder would much more; yet such to some appeare.

Of Faery lond yet if he more inquire,
By certein signes, here sett in sondrie place,
He may it fynd; ne let him then admyre,
But yield his sence to bee too blunt and bace,
That note without an hound fine footing trace.
And thou, O fayrest princesse under sky,
In this fayre mirrhour maist behold thy face,
And thine owne realmes in lond of Faëry,
And in this antique ymage thy great auncestry.

The which, O! pardon me thus to enfold
 In covert vele, and wrapt in shadowes light,
 That feeble eyes your glory may behold,
 Which els could not endure those beam's bright,
 But would bee dazled with exceeding light.
 O! pardon, and vouchsafe with patient eare
 The brave adventures of this Faery knight,
 The good Sir Guyon, graciously to heare;
 In whom great rule of Temp'raunce goodly doth appeare.

CANTO I.

Guyon, by Archimage abusd,
 The Redcrosse knight awaytes;
 Fyndes Mordant and Amavia slaine
 With Pleasures poisoned baytes.

THAT conning architect of cancred guyle,
 Whom princes late displeasure left in bands,
 For falsed letters, and suborned wyle;
 Soone as the Redcrosse knight he understands
 To beene departed out of Eden landes,
 To serve againe his souveraine Elfin queene;
 His artes he moves, and out of caytives handes
 Himselfe he frees by secret meanes unscene;
 His shackles emptie lefte, himselfe escaped cleene;

And forth he fares, full of malicious mynd,
 To worken mischief, and avenging woe,
 Whereever he that godly knight may fynd,
 His onely hart-sore and his onely foe;
 Sith Una now he algates must foregoe,
 Whom his victorious handes did earst restore
 To native crowne and kingdom late ygoe;
 Where she enjoyes sure peace for evermore,
 As wetherbeaten ship arryv'd on happie shore.

Him therefore now the obiect of his spight
 And deadly food he makes: him to offend
 By forged treason, or by open fight,
 He seekes, of all his drifte the aymed end:
 Thereto his subtil engins he does bend,
 His practick witt and his fayre fyled tonge,
 With thousand other sleighes; for well he kend
 His credit now in doubtfull ballaunce hong:
 For hardly could bee hurt, who was already stong.

Still, as he went, he craftie stales did lay,
 With cunning traynes him to entrap unwares,
 And privy spyuals plast in all his way,
 To weete what course he takes, and how he fares;
 To ketch him at a vantage in his snares.
 But now so wise and wary was the knight
 By tryall of his former harmes and cares,
 That he deseryde, and shonned still, his slight:
 The fish, that once was caught, new bayt wil hardly byte.

Nath'lesse th' enchaunter would not spare his payne,
 In hope to win occasion to his will;
 Which when he long awaited had in vayne,
 He chaungd his mynd from one to other ill:
 For to all good he enemy was still.
 Upon the way him fortun'd to meete,
 Fayre marching underneath a shady hill,
 A goodly knight, all armd in harnesse meete,
 That from his head no place appeared to his feete.

His carriage was full comely and upright;
 His countenance demure and temperate;
 But yett so sterne and terrible in sight,
 That cheard his friendes, and did his foes amate:
 He was an Elfin borne, of noble state
 And mickle worship in his native land;
 Well could he tourney, and in lists debate,
 And knighthood tooke of good Sir Huons hand,
 When with king Oberon he came to Fary land.

Him als accompanyd upon the way
 A comely palmer, clad in black attyre,
 Of ripest yeares, and heares all hoarie gray,
 That with a staffe his feeble steps did stire,
 Least his long way his aged limbes should tire:
 And, if by lookes one may the mind aread,
 He seemd to be a sage and sober syre;
 And ever with slow pace the knight did lead,
 Who taught his trampling steed with equall steps to tread.

Such whenas Archimago them did view,
 He weened well to worke some uncouth wyle:
 Eftsoones, untwisting his deceptfull clew,
 He gan to weave a web of wicked guyle;
 And, with faire countenance and flattering style
 To them approching, thus the knight bespake;
 "Fayre sonne of Mars, that seeke with warlike spoyle,
 And great atchiev'ments, great yourselfe to make,
 Vouchsafe to stay your steed for humble misers sake."

He stayd his steed for humble misers sake,
 And badd tell on the tenor of his playnt:
 Who feigning then in every limb to quake
 Through inward feare, and seeming pale and faynt,
 With piteous mone his percing speach gan paynt:
 "Deare lady! how shall I declare thy case,
 Whom late I left in languorous constraynt?
 Would God! thyselfe now present were in place
 To tell this ruefull tale: thy sight could win thee grace:

"Or rather would, O! would it so had chaunst,
 That you, most noble sir, had present beene
 When that lewd rybault, with vyle lust advaunst,
 Laid first his filthie hands on virgin cleene,
 To spoyle her dainty corps, so faire and sheene
 As on the earth, great mother of us all,
 With living eye more sayre was never seene
 Of chastity and honour virginall:
 Witnes, ye heavens, whom she in vaine to help did call!

"How may it be," sayd then the knight halfe wroth,
 That knight should knighthood ever so have shent?"
 "None but that saw," quoth he, "would weene for troth,
 How shamefully that mayd he did torment:
 Her looser golden lockes he rudely rent,
 And drew her on the ground; and his sharpe sword
 Against her snowy brest he fiercely bent,
 And threatned death with many a bloodie word;
 Tounge hates to tell the rest that eye to see abhord."

Therewith amoved from his sober mood,
 "And lives he yet," said he, "that wrought this act?
 And doen the heavens afford him vitall food?"
 "He lives," quoth he, "and boasteth of the fact,
 Ne yet hath any knight his courage crackt."
 "Where may that treachour then," sayd he, "be found,
 Or by what meanes may I his footing tract?"
 "That shall I shew," said he, "as sure as hound
 The stricken deare doth chaleng by the bleeding wound."

He stayd not lenger talke, but with fierce yre
 And zealous haste away is quickly gone
 To seeke that knight, where him that crafty squyre
 Supposd to be. They do arrive anone
 Where sate a gentle lady all alone,
 With garments rent, and heare discheveled,
 Wringing her handes, and making piteous mone:
 Her swollen eyes were much disfigured,
 And her faire face with teares was fowly blubbered.

The knight, approching nigh, thus to her said;
 "Faure lady, through fowle sorrow ill bedight,
 Great pitty is to see you thus dismayd,
 And marre the blossom of your beauty bright:
 Forthy appease your grieve and heavy plight,
 And tell the cause of your conceived payne;
 For, if he live that hath you doen despyght,
 He shall you doe dew recompence agayne.
 Or els his wrong with greater puissance maintaine."

Which when she heard, as in despyghtfull wise
 She wilfully her sorrow did augment,
 And offred hope of comfort did despise:
 Her golden lockes most cruelly she rent,
 And scratcht her face with ghastly dreriment;
 Ne would she speake, ne see, ne yet be seene,
 But hid her visage, and her head downe bent,
 Either for grievous shame, or for great teene,
 As if her hart with sorrow had transfixt beene:

Till her that squire bespake; "Madame, my liefse,
 For Gods deare love be not so wilfull bent,
 But doe vouchsafe now to receive reliefe,
 The which good fortune doth to you present.
 For what bootes it to weepe and to wayment
 When ill is chaunst, but doth the ill increase,
 And the weake minde with double woe torment?"
 When she her squire heard speake, she gan appease
 Her voluntarie paine, and feele some secret ease.

Etsoone she said; "Ah! gentle trustie squire,
 What comfort can I, wofull wretch, conceave!
 Or why should ever I henceforth desyre
 To see faire heavens face, and life not leave,
 Sith that false traytour did my honour reave?"
 "False traytour certes," saide the Faerie knight,
 "I read the man, that ever would deceave
 A gentle lady, or her wrong through might:
 Death were too litle paine for such a fowle despyght.

"But now, fayre ladye, comfort to you make,
 And read who hath ye wrought this shameful plight,
 That short revenge the man may overtake,
 Whereso he be, and soon upon him light."
 "Certes," said she, "I wote not how he light,
 But under him a gray steede he did wield,
 Whose sides with dapled circles weren dight:
 Upright he rode, and in his silver shield
 He bore a bloodie crosse, that quartred all the field."

"Now by my head," saide Guyon, "much I muse
 How that same knight should doe so fowle amis,
 Or ever gentle damzell so abuse:
 For may I holdly say, he surely is
 A right good knight, and trew of word ywis:
 I present was, and can it witnesse well.
 When armes he swore, and straight did enterpris
 Th' adventure of the errant damozell;
 In which he hath great glory wonne, as I heare tel.

"Nathlesse he shortly shall againe be tryde,
 And fairely quit him of th' imputed blame;
 Els, be ye sure, he dearely shall abyde,
 Or make you good amendment for the same:
 All wrongs have mendes, but no amendes of shame.
 Now therefore, lady, rise out of your paine,
 And see the salving of your blotted name."
 Full loth she seemd thereto, but yet did faine;
 For she was inly glad her purpose so to gaine.

Her purpose was not such as she did faine,
 Ne yet her person such as it was seene;
 But under simple shew, and semblant plaine,
 Lurkt false Duessa secretly unseene,
 As a chaste virgin that had wronged beene;
 So had false Archimago her disguysd,
 To cloke her guile with sorrow and sad teene;
 And eke himselfe had craftily devisd
 To be her squire, and do her service well aguysd.

Her, late forlorne and naked, he had found
 Where she did wander in wasto wilderness,
 Lurking in rockes and caves far under ground,
 And with greene mosse cov'ring her nakednesse
 To hide her shame and loathly filthinesse,
 Sith her Prince Arthur of proud ornaments
 And borrowd beauty spoyld: her nathelless
 Th' enchaunter finding fit for his intents
 Did thus revest, and deckt with dew habiliments.

For all he did was to deceive good knights,
 And draw them from pursuit of praise and fame
 To slug in slouth and sensuall delights,
 And end their daies with irrenowned shame.
 And now exceeding grieve him overcame,
 To see the Redcrosse thus advaunced hye;
 Therefore this craftie engine he did frame,
 Against his praise to stirre up enmitye
 Of such, as vertues like mote unto him allye.

So now he Guyon guydes an uncouth way
Through woods and mountaines, till they came at last
Into a pleasant dale that lowly lay
Betwixt two hils, whose high heads, overplast,
The valley did with coole shade overcast;
Through midst thereof a little river rold,
By which there sate a knight with helme unlaste,
Himselfe refreshing with the liquid cold,
After his travell long and labours manifold.

"Lo! yonder he," cryde Archimage alowd.
"That wrought the shamefull fact which I did shew;
And now he doth himselfe in secret shrowd,
To fly the vengeance for his outrage dew;
But vaine; for ye shall dearely do him rew:
(So God ye speed and send you good successe!)
Which we far off will here abide to vew."
So they him left inflam'd with wrathfulnesse.
That streight against that knight his speare he did addresse.

Who, seeing him from far so fierce to pricke,
His warlike armes about him gan embrace,
And in the rest his ready speare did sticke;
Tho, whenas still he saw him towards pace,
He gan rencounter him in equall race.
They bene ymett, both ready to affrap,
When suddainly that warriour gan abace
His threatned speare, as if some new mishap
Had him betide, or hidden danger did entrap;

And cryde, "Mercie, sir knight! and mercie, lord,
For mine offence and heedelesse hardiment,
That had almost committed crime abhord,
And with reprochfull shame mine honour shent,
Whiles cursed steele against that badge I bent,
The sacred badge of my Redemmers death,
Which on your shield is set for ornament!"
But his fierce foe his steed could stay uneach.
Who, prickt with courage kene, did cruell battell breath.

But, when he heard him speake, streight way he knew
His error; and, himselfe inclyning, sayd;
"Ah! deare Sir Guyon, well becommeth you,
But me behoveth rather to upbrayd,
Whose hastie hand so far from reason strayd,
That almost it did haynous violence
On that fayre ymage of that heavenly mayd,
That decks and armes your shield with faire defence:
Your court'sie takes on you anothers dew offence."

So beene they both atone, and doen upreare
 Their bevers bright each other for to greet;
 Goodly comportsunce each to other beare,
 And entertaine themselves with court'sies meet.
 Then said the Rederosse knight; "Now mote I weet,
 Sir Guyon, why with so fierce saliaunce,
 And fell intent ye did at earst me meet;
 For, sith I know your goodly gouvernaunce,
 Great cause, I weene, you guided, or some uncouth chaunce."

"Certes," said he, "well mote I shame to tell
 The fond encheason that me hether led.
 A false infamous faitour late befell
 Me for to meet, that seemed ill bested,
 And playnd of grievous outrage, which he red
 A knight had wrought against a lady gent;
 Which to avenge, he to this place me led,
 Where you he made the marke of his intent,
 And now is fled: foule shame him follow wher he went!"

So can he turne his earnest unto game,
 Through goodly handling and wise temperaunce.
 By this his aged guide in presence came;
 Who, soone as on that knight his eye did glaunce,
 Eftscones of him had perfect cognizaunce,
 Sith him in Faery court he late avizd;
 And said; "Fayre sonne, God give you happy chaunce,
 And that deare Crosse uppon your shield devizd,
 Wherewith above all knights ye goodly seeme aguizd!"

"Joy may you have, and everlasting fame,
 Of late most hard atchiev'ment by you donne,
 For which enrolled is your glorious name
 In heavenly registers above the sunne,
 Where you a saint with saints your seat have wonne!
 But wretched we, where ye have left your marke,
 Must now anew begin like race to ronne.
 God guide thee, Guyon, well to end thy warke,
 And to the wished haven bring thy weary barke!"

"Palmer," him answered the Rederosse knight,
 "His be the praise, that this atchiev'ment wrought,
 Who made my hand the organ of His might!
 More then goodwill to me attribute nought;
 For all I did, I did but as I ought.
 But you, faire sir, whose pageant next ensewes,
 Well mote yee thee, as well can wish your thought,
 That home ye may report thrise happy newes!
 For well ye worthy bene for worth and gentle thewes."

So courteous congé both did give and take,
 With right hands plighted, pledges of good will.
 Then Guyon forward gan his voyage make
 With his blacke palmer, that him guided still:
 Still he him guided over dale and hill,
 And with his steedy staffe did point his way;
 His race with reason, and with words his will,
 From fowle intemperaunce he ofte did stay,
 And suffred not in wrath his hasty steps to stray.

In this faire wize they traveild long yfere,
 Through many hard assayes which did betide;
 Of which he honour still away did beare,
 And spred his glory through all cuntryes wide.
 At last, as chaunst them by a forest side
 To passe, for succour from the scorching ray,
 They heard a ruefull voice, that dearly cride
 With percing shriekes and many a dolefull lay;
 Which to attend, awhile their forward steps they stay.

"But if that carelesse heavens," quoth she, "despise
 The doome of iust revenge, and take delight
 To see sad pageaunts of mens miseries,
 As bownd by them to live in lives despight;
 Yet can they not warne Death from wretched wight.
 Come, then; come soone; come, sweetest Death, to me,
 And take away this long lent loathed light:
 Sharpe be thy wounds, but sweete the medicines be,
 That long captived soules from weary thralldrome free.

"But thou, sweete babe, whom frowning froward fate
 Hath made sad wnesse of thy fathers fall,
 Sith heven thee deignes to hold in living state,
 Long maist thou live, and better thrive withall
 Then to thy lucklesse parents did befall!
 Live thou! and to thy mother dead attest,
 That cleare she dide from blemish criminall:
 Thy little hands embrewd in bleeding brest
 Loe! I for pledges leave! So give me leave to rest!"

With that, a deadly shrieke she forth did throw
 That through the wood re-echoed againe;
 And after gave a grone so deepe and low
 That seemd her tender hart was rent in twaine,
 Or thrild with point of thorough-piercing paine:
 As gentle hynd, whose sides with cruell steele
 Through launched, forth her bleeding life does raine,
 Whiles the sad pang approaching shee does feelee,
 Braies out her latest breath, and up her eies doth seele.

Which when that warriour heard, dismounting strait
 From his tall steed, he rusht into the thicke,
 And soone arrived where that sad pourtraict
 Of death and dolour lay, halfe dead, halfe quick;
 In whose white alabaster brest did stick
 A cruell knife, that made a griesly wound,
 From which forth gusht a stream of gore-blood thicke,
 That all her goodly garments staine arownd,
 And into a deep sanguine dide the grassy grownd.

Pitifull spectacle of deadly smart,
 Beside a bubling fountaine low she lay,
 Which shee increased with her bleeding hart,
 And the cleane waves with purple gore did ray:
 Als in her lap a lovely babe did play
 His cruell sport, in stead of sorrow dew;
 For in her streaming blood he did embay
 His little hands, and tender ioints embrew:
 Pitifull spectacle, as ever eie did vew!

Besides them both, upon the soiled gras
 The dead corse of an armed knight was spred,
 Whose armour all with blood besprincled was;
 His ruddy lips did smyle, and rosy red
 Did paint his chearefull cheekes, yett being ded;
 Seemd to have beene a goodly personage,
 Now in his freshest flowre of lustyhed,
 Fitt to inflame faire lady with loves rage,
 But that fiers fute did crop the blossome of his age.

Whom when the good Sir Guyon did behold,
 His hart gan wexe as starke as marble stone,
 And his fresh blood did frieze with fearefull cold,
 That all his sences seemd berefte attone:
 At last his mighty ghost gan deepe to grone,
 As lion, grudging in his great disdaine,
 Mournes inwardly, and makes to himselfe mone;
 Til ruth and fraile affection did constraine
 His stout courage to stoupe, and shew his inward paine.

Out of her gored wound the cruell steel
 He lightly snatcht, and did the floodgate stop
 With his faire garment: then gan softly feel
 Her feeble pulse, to prove if any drop
 Of living blood yet in her veynes did hop:
 Which when he felt to move, he hoped faire
 To call backe life to her forsaken shop:
 So well he did her deadly wounds repaire,
 That at the last shee gan to breath out living aire.

Which he perceiuing, greatly gan reioice, -
 And goodly counsell, that for wounded hart
 Is meetest med'cine, tempered with sweete voice;
 "Ay me! deare lady, which the ymage art
 Of ruefull pittie and impatient smart,
 What direfull chaunce armed with avenging fate,
 Or cursed hand, hath plaid this cruell part,
 Thus fowle to hasten your untimely date?
 Speake, Oh, dear lady, speake; help never comes too late."

Therewith, her dim eie-lids she up gan reare,
 On which the dreery death did sitt as sad
 As lump of lead, and made darke clouds appeare:
 But when as him, all in bright armour clad,
 Before her standing she espied had,
 As one out of a deadly dreame affright,
 She weakely started, yet she nothing drad:
 Streight downe againe herselfe in great despight:
 She groveling throw to ground, as hating life and light.

The gentle knight her soone with carefull paine
 Uphisted light, and softly did uphold:
 Thrise he her reard, and thrise she sunck againe,
 Till he his armes about her sides gan fold,
 And to her said; "Yet, if the stony cold
 Have not all seized on your frozen hart,
 Let one word fall that may your grief unfold,
 And tell the secrete of your mortall smart:
 He oft finds present helpe, who does his grieffe impart."

Then, casting up a deadly looke, full low
 She sigh't from bottome of her wounded brest;
 And, after many bitter throbs did throw,
 With lips full pale, and foltring tong opprest,
 These words she breathed forth from riven chest;
 "Leave, ah! leave off, whatever wight thou bee,
 To lett a weary wretch from her dew rest,
 And trouble dying soules tranquilitie;
 Take not away now got, which none would give to me."

"Ah! far be it," said he, "dear dame, fro mee,
 To hinder soule from her desired rest,
 Or hold sad life in long captivitee:
 For, all I seeke, is but to have redrest
 The bitter pangs that doth your heart infest.
 Tell then, O lady, tell what fatall priefe
 Hath with so huge misfortune you opprest;
 That I may cast to compas your reliefe,
 Or die with you in sorrow, and partake your grieffe."

With feeble hands then stretched forth on hye,
 As heven accusing guilty of her death,
 And with dry drops congealed in her eye,
 In these sad wordes she spent her utmost breath;
 "Heare then, O man, the sorrowes that unceath
 My tong can tell, so far all sence they pas!
 Loe! this dead corpse, that lies here underneath,
 The gentlest knight, that ever on greene gras
 Gay steed with spurs did pricke, the good Sir Mordant was:

"Was, (ay the while, that he is not so now!)
 My lord, my love, my deare lord, my deare love,
 So long as heavens iust with equall brow
 Vouchsafed to behold us from above.
 One day, when him high corage did enmove,
 (As wont ye knightes to seeke adventures wilde,)
 He pricked forth his puissant force to prove,
 Me then he left enwombed of this childe,
 This lucklesse childe, whom thus ye see with blood defild.

"Him fortun'd (hard fortune ye may ghesse!)
 To come, where vile Acrasia does wonne:
 Acrasia, a false enchaunteresse,
 That many errant knightes have fowle fordonne;
 Within a wandring island, that doth ronne
 And stray in perilous gulfe, her dwelling is:
 Fayre sir, if ever there ye travell, shonne
 The cursed land where many wend amis.
 And know it by the name; it hight the Bowre of Blis.

"Her blis is all in pleasure, and delight,
 Wherewith she makes her lovers drunken mad;
 And then with words, and weedes, of wondrous might,
 On them she workes her will to uses bad:
 My liefest lord she thus beguiled had;
 For he was flesh: (all flesh doth fraytie breed!)
 Whom when I heard to beene so ill bestad,
 (Weake wretch,) I wrapt myselfe in palmers weed,
 And cast to seek him forth through danger and great dreed.

"Now had fayre Cynthia by even tournes
 Full measured three-quarters of her yeare,
 And thrice three tymes had fild her crooked hornes,
 Whenas my wombe her burdein would forbcare,
 And bad me call Lucina to me neare.
 Lucina came: a manchild forth I brought:
 The woods, the nymphes, my bowres, my midwives, weare
 Hard help at need! so deare thee, babe, I bought;
 Yet nought too dear I deemd, while so my deare I sought.

"Him so I sought; and so at last I fownd.
 Where him that witch had thrall'd to her will,
 In chaines of lust and lewde desyres ybownd,
 And so transformed from his former skill,
 That me he knew not, nether his owne ill;
 Till, through wise handling and faire governaunce,
 I him recured to a better will.
 Purged from drugs of fowle intemperaunce:
 Then meanes I gan devise for his deliveraunce.

"Which when the vile enchauntresse perceiv'd,
 How that my lord from her I would reprove,
 With cup thus charmd him parting she deceiv'd;
 'Sad verse, give death to him that death does give,
 And losse of love to her that loves to live,
 So soone as Bacchus with the Nymphe does lincke!
 So parted we, and on our journey drive:
 Till, coming to this well, he stoupt to drinke:
 The charme fulfild, dead suddainly he downe did sincke.

"Which, when I, wretch"—Not one word more she sayd,
 But breaking off the end for want of breath,
 And slyding soft, as downe to sleepe her layd,
 And ended all her woe in quiet death.
 That seeing, good Sir Guyon could uneth
 From teares abstayne; for grieve his hart did grate,
 And from so heavie sight his head did wreath,
 Accusing fortune, and too cruell fate,
 Which plonged had faire lady in so wretched state.

Then, turning to his palmer, said; "Old syre,
 Behold the ymage of mortalitie,
 And feeble nature cloth'd with fleshly tyre!
 When raging Passion with fierce tyranny
 Robs Reason of her dew regalitie,
 And makes it servaunt to her basest part;
 The strong it weakens with infirmitie,
 And with bold furie armes the weakest hart! [smart."
 The strong through pleasure soonest fallies, the weakest through

"But Temperaunce," said he, "with golden squire
 Betwixt them both can measure out a meane;
 Nether to melt in pleasures whott desyre,
 Nor frye in hartlesse grieve and dolefull tene:
 Thrise happy man, who fares them both atweene?
 But sith this wretched woman overcome
 Of anguish, rather then of crime, hath bene,
 Reserve her cause to her eternall doome;
 And, in the meane, vouchsafe her honorable toombe."

"Palmer," quoth he, "death is an equall doome
 To good and bad, the common in of rest;
 But after death the tryall is to come,
 When best shall bee to them that lived best:
 But both alike, when death hath both supprest,
 Religious reverence doth burial teene;
 Which whoso wants, wants so much of his rest:
 For all so greet shame after death I weene,
 As selfe to dyen bad, unburied bad to beene.

So both agree their bodies to engrave:
 The great earthes wombe they open to the sky,
 And with sad cypresse seemely it embrace;
 Then, covering with a clod their closed eye,
 They lay therein their corsen tenderly,
 And bid them sleepe in everlasting peace.
 But, ere they did their utmost obsequy,
 Sir Guyon more affection to increace,
 Bynempt a sacred vow, which none should ay releace.

The dead knights sword out of his sheath he drew,
 With which he cutt a lock of all their heare,
 Which medling with their blood and earth he threw
 Into the grave, and gan devoutly sweare;
 "Such and such evil God on Guyon reare,
 And worse and worse, young orphane, be thy payne,
 If I, or thou, dew vengeance doe forbear,
 Till guiltie blood her guerdon doe obtayne!"—
 So, shedding many teares, they closd the earth agayne.

CANTO II.

Babes bloody handes may not be clensd.
 The face of Golden Meane:
 Her sisters, Two Extremities,
 Strive her to banisli cleane.

Thus when Sir Guyon with his faithful guyde
 Had with dew rites and dolorous lament
 The end of their sad tragedie uptyde,
 The little babe up in his armes he hent;
 Who with sweet pleasaunce, and bold blandishment,
 Gan smyle on them, that rather ought to weepe,
 As carelesse of his woe, or innocent
 Of that was doen; that ruth emperced deepe [steepe:
 In that knightes hart, and wordes with bitter teares did

"Ah! lucklesse babe, borne under cruell starre,
 And in dead parents balefull ashes bred,
 Full little weenest thou what sorrowes are
 Lest thee for porcion of thy livelyhed;
 Poore orphan! in the wide world scattered,
 As budding braunch rent from the native tree,
 And throwen forth, till it be withered!
 Such is the state of men! Thus enter we
 Into this life with woe, and end with miserie!"

Then, soft himselfe inclyning on his knee
 Downe to that well, did in the water weene
 (So love does loath disdainefull nicitee)
 His guiltie handes from bloody gore to cleene:
 He washt them oft and oft, yet nought they beene
 For all his washing cleaner: still he strove;
 Yet still the litle hands were bloody seene:
 The which him into great amazement drove,
 And into diverse doubt his wavering wonder clove.

He wist not whether blott of fowle offence
 Might not be purgd with water nor with bath;
 Or that High God, in lieu of innocence,
 Imprinted had that token of His wrath,
 To shew how sore bloodguiltinesse He hat'th;
 Or that the charme and veneme, which they dronck,
 Their blood with secret filth infected hath,
 Being diffused through the senceless tronck
 That, through the great contagion, direful deadly stonck.

Whom thus at gaze the palmer gan to bord
 With goodly reason, and thus fayre bespake;
 "Ye bene right hard amated, gracious lord,
 And of your ignorance great marveill make
 Whiles cause not well conceived ye mistake.
 But know, that secret vertues are infusd
 In every fountaine, and in everie lake,
 Which, who hath skill them rightly to have chusd,
 To proove of passing wonders hath full often usd:

"Of those, some were so from their sourse indewd
 By great dame Nature, from whose fruitfull pap
 Their welheads spring, and are with moisture deawd;
 Which feeds each living plant with liquid sap,
 And fills with flowres fayre Floraes painted lap:
 But other some, by guifte of later grace
 Or by good prayers, or by other hap,
 Had vertue pourd into their waters bace,
 And thenceforth were renownd, and sought from <sup>[place.</sup> place to

"Such is this well, wrought by occasion straunge,
Which to her nymphe befell. Upon a day,
As she the woodes with bow and shaftes did raunge,
The heartlesse hynd and roebucke to dismay,
Dan Faunus chaunst to meet her by the way,
And, kindling fire at her faire-burning eye,
Inflamed was to follow beauties chace,
And chased her, that fast from him did fly;
As hynd from her, so she fled from her enemy.

"At last, when fayling breath began to faint,
And saw no meanes to scape; of shame affrayd,
She set her downe to weepe for sore constraint;
And, to Diana calling lowd for ayde,
Her deare besought to let her die a mayd.
The goddesse heard; and suddeine, where she sate
Welling out streames of teares, and quite dismayd
With stony feare of that rude rustick mate,
Transformd her to a stone from stedfast virgins state.

"Lo! now she is that stone; from whose two heads,
As from two weeping eyes, fresh streames do flow,
Yet colde through feare and old conceived dreads;
And yet the stone her semblance seemes to show,
Shapt like a maide, that such ye may her know;
And yet her vertues in her water byde:
For it is chaste and pure as purest snow,
Ne lets her waves with any filth be dyde;
But ever, like herselfe, unstayned hath beene tryde.

"From thence it comes, that this babes bloody hand
May not be clensd with water of this well:
Ne certes, sir, strive you it to withstand,
But let them still be bloody, as befell,
That they his mothers innocence may tell,
As she bequeathd in her last testament;
That as a sacred symbole, it may dwell
In her sonnes flesh, to mind revengement,
And be for all chaste dames an endlesse monument."

He hearkned to his reason; and the childe
Uptaking, to the palmer gave to beare;
But his sad fathers armes with blood defilde,
An heave load, himselfe did lightly reare;
And turning to that place, in which whyleare
He left his loftie steed with golden sell
And goodly gorgeous barbes, him found not there:
By other accident, that earst befell,
He is convaide; but how, or where, here fits not tell.

Which when Sir Guyon saw, all were he wroth,
 Yet algates mote he soft himselfe appease,
 And fairely fare on foot, however loth:
 His double burden did him sore disease.
 So, long they traueiled with little ease,
 Till that at last they to a castle came,
 Built on a rocke adioyning to the seas:
 It was an auncient worke of antique fame,
 And wondrous strong by nature and by skilfull frame.

Therein three sisters dwelt of sundry sort,
 The children of one syre by mothers three;
 Who, dying whylome, did divide this fort
 To them by equall shares in equall fee:
 But stryfull mind and diuerse qualitee
 Drew them in partes, and each made others foe:
 Still did they strive and daily disagree;
 The eldest did against the youngest goe,
 And both against the middest meant to worken woe.

Where when the knight arriv'd, he was right well
 Receiv'd, as knight of so much worth became,
 Of second sister, who did far excell
 The other two; Medina was her name,
 A sober, sad, and comely courteous dame:
 Who rich arayd, and yet in modest guise,
 In goodly garments that her well became,
 Fayre marching forth in honorable wize,
 Him at the threshold mett and well did enterprize.

She led him up into a goodly bowre,
 And comely courted with meeke modestie;
 Ne in her speach, ne in her haviour,
 Was lightnesse seene or looser vanitie,
 But gracious womanhood, and gravitie,
 Above the reason of her youthly yeares:
 Her golden lockes she roundly did uptye
 In breaded tramels, that no looser heares
 Did out of order stray about her daintie eares.

Whilst she her selfe thus busily did frame
 Seemely to entertaine her new-come guest,
 Newes hereof to her other sisters came,
 Who all this while were at their wanton rest,
 Accounting each her frend with lavish fest:
 They were two knights of perelesse puissance,
 And famous far abroad for warlike gest,
 Which to these ladies love did countenance,
 And to his mistresse each himselfe strove to aduance.

He, that made love unto the eldest dame,
 Was hight Sir Huddibras, an hardy man;
 Yet not so good of deedes as great of name,
 Which he by many rash adventures wan,
 Since errant armes to sew he first began.
 More huge in strength than wise in workes he was
 And reason with fool-hardize over-ran;
 Sterne melancholy did his courage pas;
 And was, for terroure more, all armd in shyning bras.

But he, that lov'd the youngest, was Sansloy;
 He, that faire Una late fowle outraged,
 The most unruly and the boldest boy
 That ever warlike weapons menaged,
 And all to lawlesse lust encouraged
 Through strong opinion of his matchlesse might;
 Ne ought he car'd whom he endamaged
 By tortious wrong, or whom bereav'd of right;
 He, now this ladies champion, chose for love to fight.

These two gay knights vowd to so diverse loves,
 Each other does envy with deadly hate,
 And daily warre against his foeman moves,
 In hope to win more favour with his mate,
 And th' others pleasing service to abate,
 To magnifie his owne. But when they heard
 How in that place straunge knight arrived late,
 Both knights and ladies forth right angry far'd,
 And fiercely unto battell sterne themselves prepar'd.

But, ere they could proccede unto the place
 Where he abode, themselves at discord fell,
 And cruell combat ioynd in middle space:
 With horrible assault, and fury fell,
 They heapt huge strokes the scorned life to quell,
 That all on uprore from her settled seat
 The house was raysd, and all that in did dwell;
 Seemd that lowd thunder with amazement great
 Did rend the ratling skyes with flames of fouldring heat.

The noyse thereof cald forth that straunger knight,
 To weet what dreadfull thing was there in hond;
 Where whenas two brave knightes in bloody fight
 With deadly rancour he enraunged fond,
 His sunbroad shield about his wrest he bond,
 And shyning blade unsheatht, with which he ran
 Unto that stead, their strife to understand;
 And, at his first arrivall, them began
 With goodly meanes to pacifie, well as he can.

But they, him spying, both with greedy forse
 Attonce upon him ran, and him beset
 With strokes of mortall steele without remorse,
 And on his shield like yron sledges bet.
 As when a beare and tygre, being met
 In cruell fight on Lybieke ocean wide,
 Espye a traueiler with feet surbet,
 Whom they in equall pray hope to diuide,
 They stint their strife and him assayle on everie side.

But he, not like a wearie traueilero,
 Their sharp assault right boldly did rebut,
 And suffred not their blowes to byte him nere,
 But with redoubled buffes them backe did put:
 Whose grieved mindes, which choler did englut,
 Against themselves turning their wrathfull spight,
 Gan with new rage their shieldes to hew and cut.
 But still, when Guyon came to part their fight,
 With heauie load on him they freshly gan to smight

As a tall ship tossed in troublous seas.
 Whom raging windes, threatning to make the pray
 Of the rough rockes, doe diversly disease,
 Meetes two contrarie billowes by the way,
 That her on either side doe sore assay,
 And boast to swallow her in greedy grave;
 Shee, scorning both their spights, does make wide way,
 And with her brest breaking the fomy wave,
 Does ride on both their backs; and faire herself doth save:

So boldly he him beares, and rusheth forth
 Betweene them both, by conduct of his blade.
 Wondrous great prowesse and heroick worth
 He shewd that day, and rare ensample made,
 When two so mightie warriours he dismade:
 Attonce he wards and strikes; he takes and paies;
 Now forst to yield, now forcing to invade;
 Before, behind, and round about him laies:
 So double was his paines, so double be his praise.

Straunge sort of fight, three valiaunt knights to see
 Three combates ioine in one, and to darraigne
 A triple warre with triple enmittee,
 All for their ladies froward love to gaine,
 Which, gotten, was but hate. So Love does raine
 In stoutest minds, and maketh monstrous warre;
 He maketh warre, he maketh peace againe,
 And yett his peace is but continual iarre:
 O miserable men, that to him subject arre!

Whilst thus they mingled were in furious armes,
 The faire Medina with her tresses torne
 And naked brest, in pittie of their harmes,
 Emongst them ran; and, falling them beforne,
 Besought them by the womb which them had born
 And by the loves which were to them most deare,
 And by the knighthood which they sure had sworn
 Their deadly cruell discord to forbear,
 And to her iust conditions of faire peace to heare.

But her two other sisters, standing by,
 Her lowd gainsaid; and both their champions bad
 Pursue the end of their strong enmity,
 As ever of their loves they would be glad:
 Yet she with pittie words, and counsell sad,
 Still strove their stubborne rages to reuoke;
 That at the last, suppressing fury mad,
 They gan abstaine from dint of direfull stroke,
 And harken to the sober speaches which she spoke.

"Ah! puissant lords, what cursed euill spright,
 Or fell Erinnyes, in your noble harts
 Her hellish brond hath kindled with despight,
 And stird you up to worke your wilfull smart?
 Is this the ioy of armes? be these the parts
 Of glorious knighthood, after blood to thrust,
 And not regard dew right and iust desarts?
 Vaine is the vaunt, and victory uniust.
 That more to mighty hands then rightfull cause doth trust.

"And were there rightfull cause of difference,
 Yet were not better fayre it to accord,
 Then with blood-guiltinesse to heape offence
 And mortal vengeaunce ioyne to crime abhord?
 O! fly from wrath; fly, O my liefest lord!
 Sad be the sights, and bitter fruits of warre,
 And thousand furies wait on wrathfull sword:
 Ne ought the praise of prowesse more doth marre
 Then fowle revenging rage, and base contentious iarre.

"But lovely concord, and most sacred peace,
 Doth nourish vertue, and fast friendship breeds;
 Weake she makes strong, and strong thing does increace,
 Till it the pitch of highest praise exceeds:
 Brave be her warres, and honorable deeds,
 By which she triumphs over yre and pride,
 And winnes an olive girlond for her meeds.
 Be therefore, O my deare lords, pacifide,
 And this misseeming discord meekely lay aside."

Her gracious words their rancour did appall,
 And suncke so deepe into their boyling brests,
 That downe they lett their cruell weapons fall,
 And lowly did abase their lofty crests
 To her faire presence and discrete behests.
 Then she began a treaty to procure,
 And stablish terms betwixt both their requests,
 That as a law for ever should endure;
 Which to observe, in word of knights they did assure.

Which to confirme and fast to bind their league,
 After their weary sweat and bloody toile,
 She then besought, during their quiet treague,
 Into her lodging to repair a while,
 To rest themselves, and grace to reconcile.
 They soone consent: so forth with her they fare;
 Where they are well receivd and made to spoile
 Themselves of soiled armes, and to prepare
 Their minds to pleasure, and their mouths to dainty fare.

And those two froward sisters, their faire loves,
 Came with them eke, all were they wondrous loth,
 And fained cheare, as for the time behoves;
 But could not colour yet so well the troth,
 But that their natures bad appeard in both:
 For both did at their second sister grutch
 And inly grieve, as doth an hidden moth
 The inner garment frett, not th' utter touch;
 One thought her cheare too litle, th' other thought too much.

Elissa (so the eldest hight) did deeme
 Such entertainment base, ne ought would eat.
 Ne ought would speake, but evermore did seeme
 As discontent for want of merth or meat;
 No solace could her paramour intreat
 Her once to show, ne court, nor dalliaunce;
 But with bent lowring browes, as she would threat,
 She scould, and frownd with froward countenaunce;
 Unworthy of faire ladies comely governaunce.

But young Perissa was of other mynd,
 Full of disport, still laughing, loosely light,
 And quite contráry to her sisters kynd;
 No measure in her mood, no rule of right,
 But poured out in pleasure and delight:
 In wine and meats she flowd above the banck,
 And in excesse exceeded her owne might;
 In sumptuous tire she ioyd her self to pranck,
 But of her love too lavish: little have she thanck!

Fast by her side did sitt the bold Sansloy,
 Fitt mate for such a mincing mineon,
 Who in her loosenesse tooke exceeding ioy;
 Might not be found a francker franion,
 Of her leawd parts to make companion.
 But Huddibras, more like a malecontent,
 Did see and grieve at his bold fashion;
 Hardly could he endure his hardiment;
 Yett still he satt, and inly did himselfe torment.

Betwixt them both the faire Medina sate
 With sober grace and goodly carriage:
 With equall measure she did moderate
 The strong extremities of their outráge;
 That forward paire she ever would asswage,
 When they would strive dew reason to exceed;
 But that same froward twaine would accoráge,
 And of her plenty adde unto their need:
 So kept she them in order, and herselfe in heed.

Thus fairely shee attempered her feast,
 And pleasd them all with meete satiety:
 At last, when lust of meat and drinke was ceast,
 She Guyon deare besought of courtesie
 To tell from whence he came through ieopardy,
 And whether now on new adventure bound:
 Who with bold grace, and comely gravity,
 Drawing to him the cies of all arownd,
 From lofty siege began these words alowd to sownd.

"This thy demaund, O lady, doth revive
 Fresh memory in me of that great queene,
 Great and most glorious virgin queene alive,
 That with her souveraine power, and scepter shene,
 All Faery lond does peaceably sustene.
 In widest ocean she her throne does reare,
 That over all the earth it may be seene;
 As morning sunne her beams dispredden cleare;
 And in her face faire peace and mercy doth appeare.

"In her the richesse of all heavenly grace
 In chiefe degree are heaped up on hye:
 And all, that els this worlds enclosure bace
 Hath great or glorious in mortall eye,
 Adornes the person of her maiestye;
 That men, beholding so great excellence
 And rare perfection in mortalitie,
 Doe her adore with sacred reverence,
 As th' idole of her Makers great magnificence.

"To her I homage and my service owe,
 In number of the noblest knightes on ground,
 Mongst whom on me she deigned to bestowe
 Order of maydenhead, the most renownd,
 That may this day in all the world be found.
 An yearely solemn feast she wontes to make,
 The day that first doth lead the yeare around,
 To which all knights of worth and courage bold
 Resort, to heare of straunge adventures to be told.

"There this old palmer shewd himselfe that day,
 And to that mighty princesse did complaine
 Of grievous mischiefes, which a wicked Fay
 Had wrought, and many whelmd in deadly paine,
 Whereof he crav'd redresse. My sovaine,
 Whose glory is in gracious deeds, and ioyes
 Throughout the world her merey to maintaine,
 Eftsoones devisd redresse for such annoyes:
 Me, all unfitt for so great purpose, she employes.

"Now hath faire Phebe with her silver face
 Thrise scene the shadowes of the neather world.
 Sith last I left that honorable place,
 In which her roiall presence is entold;
 Ne ever shall I rest in house nor hold,
 Till I that false Acrasia have wonne;
 Of whose fowle deedes, too hideous to bee told,
 I witnesse am, and this their wretched sonne
 Whose wofull parents she hath wickedly fordonne."

"Tell on, fayre sir," said she, "that dolefull tale,
 From which sad ruth does seeme you to restraine,
 That we may pittie such unhappie bale,
 And learne from Pleasures poyson to abstaine:
 Ill, by ensample, good doth often gayne."
 Then forward he his purpose gan pursew,
 And told the story of the mortall payne,
 Which Mordant and Amavia did rew;
 As, with lamenting eyes, himselfe did lately vew.

Night was far spent; and now in ocean deep
 Orion, flying fast from hissing snake,
 His flaming head did hasten for to steep,
 When of his pitteous tale he end did make:
 Whilst with delight of that he wisely spake
 Those gwestes beguyled did beguyle their eyes
 Of kindly sleepe, that did them overtake.
 At last, when they had markt the chaunged skyes,
 They wist their howre was spent; then each to rest him hyes.

CANTO III.

Vaine Braggadocchio, getting Guy-
ons horse, is made the scorne
Of knighthood trew; and is of sayre
Belphæbe fowle forlorne.

Soone as the morrow fayre with purple beames
Disperst the shadowes of the misty night,
And Titan, playing on the eastern streames,
Gan cleare the dewy ayre with springing light;
Sir Guyon, mindfull of his vow yplight,
Uprose from drowsie couch, and him addrest
Unto the iourney which he had belight:
His puissant armes about his noble brest,
And many folded shield he bound about his wrest.

Then, taking congé of that virgin pure,
The bloody-handed babe unto her truth
Did earnestly committ, and her coniure
In vertuous lore to traine his tender youth,
And all that gentle noriture enu'st;
And that, so soone as ryper yeares he raught,
Ac might, for memory of that dayes ruth,
Be called Ruddymane; and thereby taught
T' avenge his parents death on them that had it wrought.

So forth he far'd, as now befell, on foot,
Sith his good steed is lately from him gone;
Patience perforce: helplesse what may it boot
To frett for anger, or for grieve to mone?
His palmer now shall foot no more alone.
So fortune wrought, as under greene woodes syde
He lately heard that dying lady grone.
He left his steed without, and speare besyde,
And rushed in on foot to ayd her ere she dyde.

The whyles a losell wandring by the way,
One that to bountie never cast his mynd,
Ne thought of honour ever did assay
His baser brest, but in his kestrell kynd
A pleasing vaine of glory he did synd,
To which his flowing tounge and troublous spright
Gave him great ayd, and made him more inclynd;
He, that brave steed there finding ready dight,
Purloynd both steed and speare, and ran away full light.

Now gan his hart all swell in iollity,
 And of himselfe great hope and help conceiv'd,
 That puffed up with smoke of vanity,
 And with selfe-loved personage deceiv'd,
 He gan to hope of men to be receiv'd
 For such, as he him thought, or faine would bee:
 But for in court gay portaunee he perceiv'd,
 And gallant shew to be in greatest gree,
 Eftsoones to court he cast t' aduance his first degree.

And by the way he chaunced to espy
 One sitting ydle on a sunny bancke,
 To whom avaunting in great bravery,
 As peacocke that his painted plumes doth pranck,
 He smote his courser in the trembling flank.
 And to him threatned his hart-thrilling speare
 The seely man, seeing him ryde so ranck
 And ayme at him, fell flat to ground for feare,
 And crying, "Mercy," loud, his pitious handes gan reare.

Thereat the scarerow wexed wondrous prowde,
 Through fortune of his first adventure fayre,
 And with big thundring voice reuyld him lowd;
 "Vile caytive, vassal of dread and despayre?
 Unworthie of the commune breathed ayre,
 Why livest thou, dead dog, a lenger day,
 And doest not unto death thyselfe prepayre?
 Dy, or thyselfe my captive yield for ay:
 Great favour I thee graunt for aunswere thus to stay."

"Hold, O deare lord, hold your dead-doing hand,"
 Then loud he cryde, "I am your humble thrall."
 "Ah wretch," quoth he, "thy destinies withstand
 My wrathfull will, and doe for mercy call.
 I give thee life: therefore prostrated fall,
 And kisse my stirrup; that thy homage bee."
 The miser threw himselfe, as an offfall,
 Streight at his foot in base humilitee,
 And cleeped him his liege, to hold of him in fee.

So happy peace they made and faire accord.
 Eftsoones this liegeman gan to wexe more bold,
 And, when he felt the folly of his lord,
 In his owne kind he gan himselfe unfold:
 For he was wylie witted, and growne old
 In cunning sleighes and practick knavery.
 From that day forth he cast for to uphold
 His ydle humour with fine flattery,
 And blow the bellowes to his swelling vanity.

Trompart, fitt man for Braggadoecchio
 To serue at court in view of vaunting eye:
 Vaine-glorious man, when fluttring wind does blow
 In his light winges is lifted up to skye;
 The scorne of knighthood and trow cheualrye,
 To thinke, without desert of gentle deed
 And noble worth, to be aduanced hye;
 Such prayse is shame: but honour, vertues meed,
 Doth beare the sayrest flowre in honourable seed.

So forth they pas, a well consorted payre,
 Till that at length with Archimage they meet:
 Who seeing one, that shone in armour sayre,
 On goodly courser thondring with his feet,
 Eftsoones supposed him a person meet
 Of his revenge to make the instrument:
 For since the Redecrosse knight he erst did weet
 To been with Guyon knitt in one consent,
 The ill, which earst to him, he now to Guyon ment.

And comming close to Trompart gan inquere
 Of him, what mightie warriour that mote bee,
 That rode in golden sell with single spere,
 But wanted sword to wreake his enmittee.
 "He is a great adventurer," said he,
 "That hath his sword through hard assay forgone,
 And now hath vowd, till he avenged bee
 Of that despight, never to wearen none;
 That speare is him enough to doen a thousand grone."

Th' enchaunter greatly ioyed in the vaunt,
 And weened well ere long his will to win,
 And both his foen with equall soyle to daunt:
 Tho to him louting lowly did begin
 To plaine of wronges, which had committed bin
 By Guyon, and by that false Redecrosse knight;
 Which two, through treason and deceitfull gin,
 Had slayne Sir Modant and his lady bright:
 That mote him honour win, to wreak so foule despight.

Therewith all suddainly he seemd enrag'd,
 And threatned death with dreadfull countenance,
 As if their lives had in his hand beene gag'd;
 And with stiffe force shaking his mortall launce,
 To let him weet his doughtie valiaunce,
 Thus said; "Old man, great sure shal be thy meed,
 If, where those knights for feare of dew vengeance
 Doe lurke, thou certainly to mee areed,
 That I may wreake on them their hainous hateful deed."

"Certes, my lord," said he, "that shall I soone,
 And give you eke good helpe to their decay,
 But mote I wisely you advise to doon;
 Give no ods to your foes, but dee purvay
 Yourselfe of sword before that bloody day;
 (For they be two the prowest knights on grownd,
 And oft approv'd in many hard assay;)
 And eke of surest steele, that may be fownd.
 Do arme yourselfe against that day, them to confownd."

"Dotard," saide he, "let be thy deepe advise;
 Seemes that through many yeares thy wits thee faile,
 And that weake eld hath left thee nothing wise,
 Els never should thy iudgement be so frayle
 To measure manhood by the sword or mayle.
 Is not enough fowre quarters of a man,
 Withouten sword or shield, an hoste to quayle?
 Thou litle wotest what this right-hand can:
 Speake they, which have beheld the battailes which it wan."

The man was much abashed at his boast;
 Yet well he wist that whoso would contend
 With either of those knightes on even coast,
 Should neede of all his armes him to defend;
 Yet feared least his boldnesse should offend:
 When Braggadocchio saide; "Once I did sweare,
 When with one sword seven knightes I brought to end,
 Thenceforth in battaile never sword to beare,
 But it were that which noblest knight on earth doth weare."

"Perdy, sir knight," saide then th' enchaunter blive,
 "That shall I shortly purchase to your hond:
 For now the best and noblest knight alive
 Prince Arthur is, that wonnes in Faerie lond;
 He hath a sword, that flames like burning brond:
 The same, by my device, I undertake
 Shall by to-morrow by thy side be fond."
 At which bold word that boaster gan to quake,
 And wondred in his minde what mote that monster make.

He stayd not for more bidding, but away
 Was suddein vanished out of his sight:
 The northerne winde his wings did broad display
 At his commaund, and reared him up light
 From off the earth to take his aerie flight.
 They lookt about, but no where could espye
 Tract of his foot: then dead through great affright
 They both nigh were, and each had other flye:
 Both fled attonce, ne ever backe retourned eye;

Till that they come unto a forrest greene,
 In which they shrowd themselves from causeles feare;
 Yet feare them followes still, where so they beene:
 Each trembling leafe and whistling wind they heare,
 As ghastly bug, does greatly them affeare:
 Yet both doe strive their fearefulnesse to faine.
 At last they heard a horne that shrilled cleare
 Throughout the wood that echoed againe,
 And made the forrest ring, as it would rive in twaine.

Eft through the thicke they heard one rudely rush;
 With noyse whereof he from his loftie steed
 Downe fell to ground, and crept into a bush,
 To hide his coward head from dying dreed.
 But Trompart stoutly stayd to taken heed
 Of what might hap. Eftsoone there stepped forth
 A goodly ladie clad in hunters weed,
 That seemd to be a woman of great worth,
 And by her stately portance borne of heavenly birth.

Her face so faire, as flesh it seemed not,
 But heavenly pourtraict of bright angels hew,
 Cleare as the skye, withouten blame or blot,
 Through goodly mixture of complexions dew;
 And in her cheekes the vermeill red did shew
 Like roses in a bed of lillies shed,
 The which ambrosiall odours from them threw,
 And gazers sence with double pleasure fed,
 Hable to heale the sicke and to revive the ded.

In her faire eyes two living lamps did flame,
 Kindled above at th' heavenly Makers light,
 And darted fyrie beames out of the same,
 So passing persa and so wondrous bright,
 That quite bereav'd the rash beholders sight:
 In them the blinded god his lustfull fyre
 To kindle oft assayd, but had no might;
 For, with dredd maiestie and awfull yre,
 She broke his wanton darts, and quenched bace desyre.

Her yvorie forehead full of bountie brave,
 Like a broad table did itselfe dispred,
 For Love, his loftie triumphes to engrave,
 And write the battailes of his great godhed:
 All good and honour might therein be red;
 For there their dwelling was. And, when she spake,
 Sweete wordes, like dropping honny, she did shed;
 And twixt the perles and rubins softly brake
 A silver sound, that heavenly musicke seemd to make.

Upon her eyelids many graces sate,
 Under the shadow of her even browes,
 Working belgardes and amorous retrate;
 And everie one her with a grace endowes,
 And everie one with meekenesse to her bowes:
 So glorious mirrhour of celestiall grace,
 And soveraine moniment of mortall vowes,
 How shall frayle pen describe her heavenly face,
 For feare, through want of skill, her beauty to disgrace!

So faire, and thousand thousand times more faire,
 She seemd, when she presented was to sight;
 And was yclad, for heat of scorching aire,
 All in a silken Camus lilly whight,
 Purpled upon with many a folded plight,
 Which all above besprinkled was throughout
 With golden aygulets, that glistred bright,
 Like twineckling starres; and all the skirt about
 Was hemd with golden fringe.

Below her ham her weed did somewhat trayne,
 And her streight legs most bravely were embayld
 In gilden buskins of costly cordwayne,
 All bard with golden bendes, which were entayld
 With curious antickes, and full fayre aumayld.
 Before, they fastned were under her knee
 In a rich iewell, and therein entrayld
 The ends of all the knots, that none might see
 How they within their fouldings close enwrapped bee:

Like two faire marble pillours they were scene,
 Which doe the temple of the gods support,
 Whom all the people decke with girlands greene,
 And honour in their festivall resort;
 Those same with stately grace and princely port
 She taught to tread, when she herselfe would grace,
 But with the woody nymphes when she did play,
 Or when the flying libbard she did chace,
 She could them nimbly move, and after fly apace.

And in her hand a sharp bore-speare she held,
 And at her backe a bow and quiver gay,
 Stuft with steel-headed dartes wherewith she queld
 The salvage beastes in her victorious play,
 Knit with a golden bauldricke which forelay
 Athwart her snowy brest, and did divide
 Her daintie paps; which, like young fruit in May,
 Now little gan to swell, and being tide
 Through her thin weed their places only signified.

Her yellow lockes, crisped like golden wyre,
 About her shoulders weren loosely shed,
 And, when the wind amongst them did inspyre,
 They waved like a penon wyde disprede,
 And low behinde her backe were scattered:
 And, whether art it were or heedlesse hap,
 As through the flourishing forrest rash she fled,
 In her rude heares sweet flowres themselves did lap,
 And flourishing fresh leaves and blossoms did enwrap.

Such as Diana by the sandy shore
 Of swift Eurotas, or on Cynthus greene,
 Where all the nymphes have her unwares forloren,
 Wandreth alone with bow and arrowes keene,
 To seeke her game: or as that famous queene,
 Of Amazons, whom Pyrrhus did destroy,
 The day the first of Priame she was seene,
 Did shew herselfe in great triumphant ioy,
 To succour the weake state of sad afflicted Troy.

Such when as hartlesse Trompart her did vew,
 He was dismayed in his coward minde,
 And doubted whether he himselfe should shew,
 Or fly away, or bide alone behinde;
 Both feare and hope he in her face did finde:
 When she at last him spying thus bespake;
 "Hayle, groome; didst not thou see a bleeding hynde,
 Whose right haunch earst my stedfast arrow strake?
 If thou didst, tell me, that I may her overtake."

Wherewith reviv'd, this answer forth he threw;
 "O goddesse, (for such I thee take to bee.)
 For nether doth thy face terrestriall shew,
 Nor voyce sound mortall; I avow to thee,
 Such wounded beast, as that, I did not see,
 Sith earst into this forrest wild I came.
 But mote thy goodlyhed forgive it mee,
 To weete which of the gods I shall thee name.
That unto thee dew worship I may rightly frame."

To whom she thus—But ere her words ensewd,
 Unto the bush her eye did suddein glaunce,
 In which vaine Braggadocchio was mewd,
 And saw it stirre: she lefte her percing launce,
 And towards gan a deadly shafte advaunce,
 In mind to marke the beast. At which sad stowre,
 Trompart forth stept, to stay the mortall chaunce,
 Out crying; "O! whatever heavenly powre,
 Or earthly wight thou be, withhold this deadly howre!

"O! stay thy hand; for yonder is no game
 For thy fiers arrowes, them to exereize;
 But loe! my lord, my liege, whose warlike name
 Is far renownd through many bold emprise;
 And now in shade he shrowded yonder lies."
 She staid: with that he crawld out of his nest,
 Forth creeping on his caitive hands and thies;
 And standing stoutly up his lofty crest
 Did fiercely shake, and rowze as conning late from rest.

As fearfull fowle, that long in secret cave
 For dread of soring hauke herselfe hath hid,
 Not caring how, her silly life to save,
 She her gay painted plumes disorderid;
 Seeing at last herselfe from daunger rid,
 Peeps forth, and soone renews her native pride;
 She gins her feathers fowle distigured
 Prowdly to prune, and sett on every side;
 So shakes off shame, ne thinks how erst she did her hide.

So when her goodly visage he beheld,
 He gan himselfe to vaunt: but, when he rew'd
 Those deadly tooles which in her hand she held
 Soone into other fitts he was transmewd,
 Till she to him her gracious speach renewd;
 "All haile, sir knight, and well may thee befall,
 As all the like, which honor have pursewd
 Through deeds of armes and prowess martiall!
 All vertue merits praise, but such the most of all."

To whom he thus; "O fairest under skie,
 Trew be thy words, and worthy of thy praise,
 That warlike feats doest highest glorifie.
 Therein I have spent all my youthly daies,
 And many battailes fought and many fraies
 Throughout the world, wherso they might be found,
 Endeavoring my dredded name to raise
 Above the moone, that Fame may it resound
 In her eternall trompe with laurell girlond croud.

*"But what art thou, O lady, which doest raunge
 In this wilde forest, where no pleasure is,
 And doest not it for ioyous court exchange,
 Emongst thine equall peres, where happy blis
 And all delight does raigne much more then this?
 There thou maist love, and dearly loved be,
 And swim in pleasure, which thou here doest mis;
 There maist thou best be seene, and best maist see:
 The wood is fit for beasts, the court is fitt for thee."*

"Whoso in pompe of prowde estate," quoth she,
 "Does swim, and bathes himselfe in courtly blis,
 Does waste his daies in darke obscuritee,
 And in oblivion ever buried is:
 Where ease abownds, yt's eath to doe amis:
 But who his limbs with labours, and his mynd
 Behaves with cares, cannot so easy mis.
 Abroad in armes, at home in studious kynd,
 Who seekes with painfull toile, shall Honor soonest fynd:

"In woods, in waves, in warres, she wents to dwell,
 And wil be found with perill and with paine;
 Ne can the man, that moulds in ydle cell,
 Unto her happy mansion attaine:
 Before her gate High God did Sweate ordaine,
 And wakefull Watches ever to abide:
 But easy is the way and passage plaine
 To Pleasures pallace; it may soone be spide,
 And day and night her dores to all stand open wide.

"In Princes Court"—The rest she would have sayd,
 But that the foolish man, (fild with delight
 Of her sweete words that all his sence dismayd,
 And with her wondrous beauty ravisht quight,)
 Gan burne in filthy lust; and, leaping light,
 Thought in his bastard armes her to embrace.
 With that she, swarving backe, her iavelin bright
 Against him bent, and fiercely did menace:
 So turned her about, and fled away apace.

Which when the pesaunt saw, amazd he stood,
 And grieved at her flight; yet durst he not
 Pursue her steps through wild unknowen wood;
 Besides he feard her wrath, and threatned shot,
 Whiles in the bush he lay, not yet forgott:
 Ne ear'd he greatly for her presencc vayne,
 But turning said to Trompart; "What fowle blott
 Is this to knight, that lady should agayne
 Depart to woods untoucht, and leave so proud disdayne!"

"Perdy," said Trompart, "lett her pas at will,
 Least by her presence daunger mote befall.
 For who can tell (and sure I feare it ill)
 But that shee is some powre celestiall?
 For, whiles she spake, her great words did appall
 My feeble corage, and my heart oppresse,
 That yet I quake and tremble over all."
 "And I," said Braggadocchio, "thought no lesse,
 When first I heard her horn sound with such ghastrlinesse.

"For from my mothers wombe this grace I have
 Me given by eternall destiny,
 That earthly thing may not my corage brave
 Dismay with feare, or cause one foote to flye,
 But either hellish feends, or powres on hye:
 Which was the cause, when earst that horn I heard,
 Weening it had been thunder in the skye,
 I hid my selfe from it as one affeard;
 But, when I other knew, my self I boldly reard.

"But now, for feare of worse that may betide,
 Let us soone hence depart." They soone agree:
 So to his steed he gott, and gan to ride
 As one unfitt therefore, that all might see
 He had not trayned bene in chevalree,
 Which well that valiaunt courser did discerne;
 For he despisd to tread in dew degree,
 But chaufd and fom'd with corage fiers and sterno,
 And to be easd of that base burden still diderne.

CANTO IV.

Guyon does Furor bind in chaines,
 And stops Occasion:
 Delivers Phedon, and therefore
 By Strife is rayld uppon.

In brave poursuitt of honorable deed,
 There is I know not what great difference
 Betweene the vulgar and the noble seed,
 Which unto things of valorous pretence
 Seemes to be borne by native influence;
 As feates of armes; and love to entertaino:
 But chiefly skill to ride seemes a sciēce
 Proper to gentle blood: some others faine
 To menage steeds, as did this vaunter; but in vaine.

But he, the rightfull owner of that steede,
 Who well could ménage and subdew his pride,
 The whiles on foot was forced for to yeed
 With that blacke palmer, his most trusty guide,
 Who suffred not his wandring feete to slide;
 But when strong passion, or weake fleshlinesse,
 Would from the right way seeke to draw him wide,
 He would, through temperaunce and stedfastnesse,
 Teach him the weak to strengthen, and the strong suppressse.

It fortun'd, forth faring on his way,
 He saw from far, or seemed for to see,
 Some troublous uprore or contentious fray,
 Whereto he drew in hast it to agree.
 A mad man, or that feigned mad to bee,
 Drew by the heare along upon the grownd
 A handsom stripling with great crueltee,
 Whom sore he bett, and gor'd with many a wovnd,
 That cheekes with teares, and sydes with blood, did all abownd.

And him behynd a wicked hag did stalke
 In ragged robes and filthy disaray;
 Her other leg was lame, that she no'te walke,
 But on a staffe her feeble steps did stay:
 Her lockes, that loathly were and hoarie gray,
 Grew all afore, and loosly hong unrold;
 But all behinde was bald, and worne away,
 That none thereof could ever taken hold;
 And eke her face ill-favour'd, full of wrinckles old.

And, ever as she went, her tounge did walke
 In fowle reproch and termes of vile despight,
 Provoking him, by her outrageous talke,
 To heape more vengeance on that wretched wight;
 Sometimes she raught him stones, wherewith to smit,
 Sometimes her staffe, though it her one leg were,
 Withouten which she could not goe upright;
 Ne any evil meanes she did forbear,
 That might him move to wrath, and indignation reare.

The noble Guyon, mov'd with great remorse
 Approching, first the hag did thrust away;
 And after, adding more impetuous forse,
 His mighty hands did on the madman lay,
 And pluckt him backe; who, all on fire streightway
 Against him turning all his fell intent,
 With beastly brutish rage gan him assay,
 And smott, and bitt, and kickt, and scratcht, and rent,
 And did he wist not what in his avengement.

And sure he was a man of mickle might,
 Had he had governaunce it well to guyde:
 But, when the frantick fitt inflamd his spright,
 His force was vaine, and strooke more often wyde
 Then at the aymed marke which he had eyde:
 And oft himselfe he chaunst to hurt unwares,
 Whylest reason, blent through passion, nought descryde;
 But, as a blindfold bull, at random fares, [nought cares.
 And where he hits nought knowes, and whom he hurts

His rude assault and rugged handeling
 Straunge seemed to the knight, that aye with foo
 In sayre defence and goodly menaging
 Of armes was wont to fight; yet nathemoe
 Was he abashed now, not fighting so;
 But, more enfiereed through his currish play,
 Him sternly grypt. and, hailing to and fro,
 To overthrow him strongly did assay,
 But overthrew himsele unawares, and lower lay:

And being downe the villein sore did beate
 And bruze with clownish sistes his manly face:
 And eke the hag, with many a bitter threat,
 Still cald upon to kill him in the place.
 With whose reproch, and odious menace,
 The knight emboyling in his haughtie hart
 Knitt all his forces, and gan soone unbraco
 His grasping hold: so lightly did upstart,
 And drew his deadly weapon to maintaine his part.

Which when the palmer saw, he loudly cryde,
 "Not so, O Guyon, never thinke that so
 That monster can be maistred or destroyd:
 He is not, ah! he is not such a foe,
 As steele can wounde, or strength can overthrowe.
 That same is Furor, cursed cruel wight,
 That unto knighthood workes much shame and woo:
 And that same Hag, his aged mother, hight,
 Occasion; the roote of all wrath and despight.

"With her, whoso will raging Furor tame,
 Must first begin, and well her ámenage:
 First her restraine from her reprochfull blame
 And evill meanes, with which she doth enrago
 Her frantick sonne, and kindles his corage;
 Then, when she is withdrawne or strong withstood,
 It's eath his ydle fury to aswage,
 And calme the tempest of his passion wood:
 The bankes are overflowne when stopped is the flood."

Therewith Sir Guyon left his first emprise,
 And, turning to that woman, fast her hent
 By the hoare lockes that hong before her eyes,
 And to the ground her threw: yet n'ould she stent
 Her bitter rayling and foule révilement;
 But still provokt her sonne to wreake her wrong;
 But nathélesse he did her still torment,
 And, catching hold of her ungratious tong,
 Thereon an yron lock did fasten firme and strong.

Then, whenas use of speach was from her rest,
 With her two crooked handes she signes did make,
 And beekned him; the last help she had left:
 But he that last left helpe away did take,
 And both her handes fast bound unto a stake,
 That she no'te stirre. Then gan her sonne to flye
 Full fast away, and did her quite forsake:
 But Guyon after him in hast did hye,
 And soone him overtooke in sad perplexitye.

In his strong armes he stifly him embraste,
 Who him gain-striving nought at all prevaild;
 For all his power was utterly defaste,
 And furious fitts at earst quite weren quaild:
 Oft he re'nforst, and oft his forces sayld,
 Yet yield he would not, nor his rancor slacke.
 Then him to ground he cast, and rudely hayld,
 And both his hands fast bound behind his backe,
 And both his feet in fetters to an yron racke.

With hundred yron chaines he did him bind,
 And hundred knots, that did him sore constraine:
 Yet his great yron teeth he still did grind
 And grimly gnash, threatning revenge in vaine:
 His burning eyen, whom bloody strakes did staine,
 Stared full wide, and threw forth sparkes of fyre;
 And, more for rank despyght then for great paine,
 Shakt his long locks colourd like copper-wyre,
 And bitt his tawny beard to shew his raging yre.

Thus whenas Guyon Furor had captivd,
 Turning about he saw that wretched squire,
 Whom that mad man of life nigh late deprivd,
 Lying on ground, all soild with blood and myre:
 Whom whenas he perceived to respyre,
 He gan to comfort, and his woundes to dresse.
 Being at last recured, he gan inquire
 What hard mishap him brought to such distresse,
 And made that caytives thrall, the thrall of wretchednesse

With hart then throbbing, and with watry eyes,
 "Fayre sir," quoth he, "what man can shun the hap
 That hidden lyes unwares him to surpryse?
 Misfortune waites advantage to entrap
 The man most wary in her whelming lap.
 So me, weake wretch, of many weakest one,
 Unweeting and unaware of such mishap,
 She brought to mischief through occasion,
 Where this same wicked villain did me light upon.

"It was a faithlesse squire, that was the sourse
 Of all my sorrow and of these sad teares,
 With whom from tender dug of commune nourse
 Attonce I was upbrought; and eft, when yeares
 More ripe us reason lent to chose our peares,
 Ourselves in league of vowed love we knitt;
 In which we long time, without gealous feares
 Or faultie thoughts, contynewd as was fitt;
 And, for my part I vow, dissembled not a whit.

"It was my fortune, commune to that age,
 To love a lady fayre of great degree,
 The which was borne of noble parentage,
 And set in highest seat of dignitee,
 Yet seemd no lesse to love then lovd to bee:
 Long I her serv'd, and found her faithfull still,
 Ne ever thing could cause us disagree:
 Love, that two hartes makes one, makes eke one will:
 Each strove to please, and others pleasures to fulfill.

"My friend, hight Philemon, I did partake
 Of all my love and all my privitie;
 Who gently ioyous seemed for my sake,
 And gracious to that lady, as to mee;
 Ne ever wight, that mote so welcome bee
 As he to her, withouten blott or blame;
 Ne ever thing, that she could think or see,
 But unto him she would impart the same:
 O wretched man, that would abuse so gentle dame!

"At last such grace I found, and meanes I wrought,
 That I that lady to my spouse had wonne;
 Accord of friendes, consent of parents sought,
 Affyaunce made, my happinesse begonne,
 There wanted nought but few rites to be donne,
 Which mariage make: that day too farre did seeme!
 Most ioyous man, on whome the shining sunne
 Did shew his face, myself I did esteeme,
 And that my falsen friend did no lesse ioyous deeme.

"But, ere that wished day his beame disclosd,
 He, either envying my toward good,
 Or of himselfe to treason ill disposd,
 One day unto me came in friendly mood,
 And told, for secret, how he understood
 That lady, whom I had to me assynd,
 Had both distaind her honorable blood,
 And eke the faith which she to me did bynd;
 And therefore wisht me stay, till I my truth should fynd.

"The gnawing anguish, and sharp gelosy,
Which his sad speech infixed in my brest,
Ranckled so sore, and festred inwardly,
That my engreaved mind could find no rest,
Till that the truth thereof I did out wreat;
And him besought, by that same sacred band
Betwixt us both, to counsell me the best:
He then with solemne oath and plighted hand
Assurd, ere long the truth to let me understand.

"Ere long with like againe he boorded mee,
Saying, he now had boulted all the floure,
And that it was a groome of base degree,
Which of my love was partner paramoure:
Who used in a darksome inner bowre
Her oft to meete: which better to approve,
He promised to bring me at that howre,
When I should see that would me nearer move,
And drive me to withdraw my blind abused love.

"This gracelesse man, for furtherance of his guile,
Did court the handmayd of my lady deare,
Who, glad t' embosome his affection vile,
Did all she might more pleasing to appeare.
One day, to worke her to his will more neare,
He woo'd her thus; 'Pryené,' (so she hight,)
'What great despight does fortune to thee beare,
Thus lowly to abase thy beautie bright,
That it should not deface all others lesser light?

"'But if she had her least helpe to thee lent,
T' adorne thy forme according thy desart,
Their blazing pride thou wouldest soone have blent,
And staynd their prayses with thy least good part;
Ne should faire Claribell with all her art,
Tho' she thy lady be, approach thee neare:
For prooffe thereof, this evening, as thou art,
Aray thyselfe in her most gorgeous geare,
That I may more delight in thy embracement deare.

"The mayden proud through praise and mad through love
Him hearkned to, and soone herselfe arayd;
The whiles to me the treachour did remove
His craftie engin: and, as he had sayd,
Me leading, in a secret corner layd,
The sad spectatour of my tragedie:
Where left, he went, and his owne false part playd,
Disguised like that groome of base degree,
Whom he had feignd th' abuser of my love to bee.

"Eftsoones he came unto th' appointed place,
 And with him brought Pryené, rich arayd,
 In Claribellæes clothes: her proper face
 I not discerned in that darkesome shade,
 But weend it was my love with whom he playd.
 Ah God! what horreur and tormenting grieve
 My hart, my handes, mine eies, and all assayd!
 Me liefer were ten thousand deathes priefe
 Then wounde of gealous worme, and shame of such repriefe.

"I home retourning, fraught with fowle despight,
 And chawing vengeance all the way I went
 Soone as my loathed love appeard in sight,
 With wrathfull hand I slew her innocent;
 That after soone I dearely did lament:
 For, when the cause of that outrageous deedo
 Demanded I made plaine and evident,
 Her faultie handmayd, which that bale did breede,
 Confest how Philemon her wrought to chaunge her weede.

"Which when I heard, with horrible affright
 And hellish fury all enragd, I sought
 Upon myselfe that vengeable despight
 To punish: yet it better first I thought
 To wreake my wrath on him, that first it wrought;
 To Philemon, false fatour Philemon,
 I cast to pay that I so dearely bought:
 Of deadly drugs I gave him drinke anon,
 And washt away his guilt with guilty potion.

"Thus heaping crime on crime, and grieve on grieve,
 To losse of love adioyning losse of frend,
 I meant to purge both with a third mischiefe,
 And in my wões beginner it to end:
 That was Pryené; she did first offend,
 She last should smart: with which cruell intent,
 When I at her my murderous blade did bend,
 She fled away with ghastly dreriment,
 And I, poursewing my fell purpose, after went.

"Feare gave her winges, and Rage enforst my flight;
 Through woods and plaines so long I did her chace,
 Till this mad man, whom your victorious might
 Hath now fast bound, me met in middle space:
 As I her, so he me poursewd apace,
 And shortly overtooke: I, breathing yre,
 Sore chauffed at my stay in such a cace,
 And with my heat kindled his cruell fyre;
 Which kindled once, his mother did more rage inspyre.

"Betwixt them both they have me doen to dye,
Through wounds, and strokes, and stubborn handeling,
That death were better then such agony,
As grieve and fury unto me did bring;
Of which in me yet stickes the mortall sting,
'That during life will never be appeas'd!'
When he thus ended had his sorrowing,
Said Guyon; "Squyre, sore have ye beene diseas'd;
But all your hurts may soone through temperance be eas'd."

Then gan the palmer thus; "Most wretched man,
That to Affections does the bridie lend!
In their beginning they are weake and wan,
But soone through suff'rance growe to fearefull end;
Whiles they are weake, betimes with them contend;
For, when they once to perfect strength do grow,
Strong warres they make, and cruell battry bend
Gainst fort of Reason, it to overthrow:
Wrath, Gelosy, Griefe, Love, this squyre have laide thus low.

"Wrath, Gealosie, Griefe, Love, do thus expell:
Wrath is a fire; and Gealosie a weede;
Griefe is a flood; and Love a monster fell;
The fire of sparkes, the weede of little seede,
The flood of drops, the monster filth did breede:
But sparks, seed, drops, and filth, do thus delay;
The sparks soone quench, the springing seed outweede,
The drops dry up, and filth wipe cleane away:
So shall Wrath, Gealosy, Griefe, Love, die and decay."

"Unlucky squire," saide Guyon, "sith thou hast
Falne into mischief through intemperaunce,
Henceforth take heede of that thou now hast past,
And guyde thy waies with warie governaunce,
Least worse betide thee by some later chaunce.
But read how art thou nam'd, and of what kin."
"Phedon I hight," quoth he, "and do advaunce
Mine auncestry from famous Coradin,
Who first to rayse our house to honour did begin."

Thus as he spake, lo! far away they spyde
A varlet ronning towards hastily,
Whose flying feet so fast their way applyde,
That round about a cloud of dust did fly,
Which, mingled all with sweate, did dim his eye.
He soone approached, panting, breathlesse, whot,
And all so soyl'd, that none could him descry;
His countenance was bold, and bashed not
For Guyons looks, but scornfull ey-glauce at him shot.

Behinde his backe he bore a brasen shield,
 On which was drawen faire, in colours fit,
 A flaming fire in midst of bloody field,
 And round about the wreath this word was writ,
Burnt I doe burne: Right well besecmed it
 To be the shield of some redoubted knight:
 And in his hand two darter exceeding flit
 And deadly sharp he held, whose heads were dight
 In poyson and in blood of malice and despight.

When he in presence came, to Guyon first
 He boldly spake; "Sir knight, if knight thou bee,
 Abandon this forestalled place at erst,
 For feare of further harme, I counsell thee;
 Or bide the chaunce at thine owne ieopardie."
 The knight at his great boldnesse wondered;
 And, though he scorn'd his ydle vanitee,
 Yet mildly him to purpose answered;
 For not to grow of nought he it coniectured;

"Varlet, this place most dew to me I deeme,
 Yielded by him that held it forcibly:
 But whence shold come that harme, which thou dost seeme
 To threat to him that mindes his chaunce t'abye?"
 "Perdy," sayd he, "here comes, and is hard by,
 A knight of wondrous powre and great assay,
 That never yet encountred enemy,
 But did him deadly daunt, or fowle dismay;
 Ne thou for better hope, if thou his presence stay."

"How hight he," then sayd Guyon, "and from whence?"
 "Pyrochles is his name, renowned farre
 For his bold feates and hardy confidence,
 Full oft approvd in many a cruell warre;
 The brother of Cymochles; both which arre
 The sonnes of old Acrates and Despight;
 Acrates, sonne of Phlegeton and Iarre;
 But Phlegeton is sonne of Herebus and Night
 But Herebus sonne of Acternitie is hight.

"So from immortall race he does proceede,
 That mortall hands may not withstand his might,
 Drad for his derring doe and bloody deed;
 For all in blood and spoile is his delight.
 His am I Atin, his in wrong and right,
 That matter make for him to worke upon,
 And stirre him up to strife and cruell fight.
 Fly therefore, fly this fearefull stead anon,
 Least thy foolhardize worke thy sad confusion."

"His be that care, whom most it doth concerne,"
Said he: "but whether with such hasty flight
Art thou now bownd? for well mote I discern
Great cause, that carries thee so swifte and light."
"My lord," quoth he, "me sent, and streight behight
To seeke Occasion, where so she bee:
For he is all disposd to bloody fight,
And breathes out wrath and hainous crueltee;
Hard is his hap, that first fals in his icopardee."

"Mad man," said then the palmer, "that does seeke
Occasion to wrath, and cause of strife;
Shee comes unsought, and shonned followes eke.
Happy! who can abstaine, when Rancor rise
Kindles Revenge, and threats his rusty knife:
Woe never wants, where every cause is caught;
And rash Occasion makes unquiet life!"
"Then loe! wher bound she sits, whom thou hast sought,"
Said Guyon; "let that message to thy lord be brought."

That when the varlett heard and saw, streightway
He waxed wondrous wroth, and said; "Vile knight,
That knights and knighthood doest with shame upbray,
And shewst th' ensample of thy childishe might,
With silly weake old woman thus to fight!
Great glory and gay spoile sure hast thou gott,
And stoutly prov'd thy puissance here in sight!
That shall Pyrochles well requite, I wott,
And with thy blood abolish so reprochfull blott."

With that, one of his thrillant darts he threw,
Headed with yre and vengeable despight:
The quivering steele his aymed end wel knew,
And to his brest itselfe intended right:
But he was wary, and, ere it empight
In the meant marke, advaunst his shield atween,
On which it seizing no way enter might,
But backe rebownding eft the forehead keene:
Eftsoones he fled away, and might no where be seene.

CANTO V.

Pyrochles does with Guyon fight,
 And Furors chayne untyes,
 Who him sore woundes; whiles Atin to
 Cymochles for ayd flies.

WHOEVER doth to Temperaunce apply
 His stedfast life, and all his actions frame,
 Trust me, shal find no greater enemy,
 Then stubborne Perturbation, to the same;
 To which right wel the wise doe give that name;
 For it the goodly peace of staid mindes
 Does overthrow, and troublous warre proclame:
 His owne woes author, who so bound it findes,
 As did Pyrochles, and it wilfully unbindes.

After that varlets flight, it was not long
 Ere on the plaine fast pricking Guyon spide
 One in bright armes embatteiled full strong,
 That, as the sunny beames do glaunce and glido
 Upon the trembling wave, so shined bright,
 And round about him threw forth sparkling fire,
 That seemd him to enflame on every side:
 His steed was bloody red, and fomed yre,
 When with the maistring spur he did him roughly stiro.

Approching nigh, he never staid to greete,
 Ne chaffar words, prowd corage to provoke,
 But prickt so fiers, that underneath his feete
 The smouldring dust did rownd about him smoke,
 Both horse and man nigh able for to choke;
 And, fayrly couching his steelheaded speare,
 Him first saluted with a sturdy stroke:
 It booted not sir Guyon, comming neare,
 To thincke such hideous puissaunce on foot to beare;

But lightly shunned it; and passing by,
 With his bright blade did smite at him so fell,
 That the sharpe steele, arriving forcibly
 On his broad shield, bitt not, but glauncing fell
 On his horse necke before the quilted sell,
 And from the head the body sundred quight:
 So him dismounted low he did compell
 On foot with him to matchen equall fight;
 The truncked beast fast bleeding did him fowly dight.

Sore bruized with the fall he slow uprose,
 And all enraged thus him loudly shent;
 "Disleall knight, whose coward corage chose
 To wreake itselfe on beast all innocent,
 And shund the marke at which it should be ment:
 Therby thine armes seem strong, but manhood frayl:
 So hast thou oft with guile thine honor blent,
 But litle may such guile thee now awayl,
 If wouted force and fortune doe me not much sayl."

With that he drew his flaming sword, and strooke
 At him so fiercely, that the upper marge
 Of his sevenfolded shield away it tooke,
 And, glauncing on his helmet, made a large
 And open gash therein: were not his targe
 That broke the violence of his intent,
 The weary sowle from thence it would discharge;
 Nathelesse so sore a buff to him it lent,
 That made him reele, and to his brest his bever bent.

Exceeding wroth was Guyon at that blow,
 And much ashamd that stroke of living arme
 Should him dismay, and make him stoup so low,
 Though otherwise it did him litle harme:
 Tho, hurling high his yron-braced arme,
 He smote so manly on his shoulder plate,
 That all his left side it did quite disarm;
 Yet there the steel stayd not, but inly bate
 Deepe in his flesh, and opened wide a red floodgate.●

Deadly dismayd with horror of that dint
 Pyrochles was, and grieved eke entyre;
 Yet nathemore did it his fury stint,
 But added flame unto his former fire,
 That wel-nigh molt his hart in raging yre:
 Ne thenceforth his approved skill, to ward,
 Or strike, or hurtle rownd in warlike gyre,
 Remembred he, ne car'd for his saufgard,
 But rudely rag'd, and like a cruell tygre far'd.

He hewd, and lasht, and foynd, and thondred blowes,
 And every way did seeke into his life;
 Ne plate, ne male, could ward so mighty throwes,
 But yielded passage to his cruell knife.
 But Guyon, in the heat of all his strife,
 Was wary wise, and closely did awayt
 Avauntage, whilst his foe did rage most rife;
 Sometimes athwart, sometimes he strook him strayt,
 And falsed oft his blowes t'illude him with such bayt.

Like as a lyon whose imperiall powre
 A proud rebellious unicorn defyes,
 T' avoide the rash assault and wrathful stowre
 Of his fiers foe, him to a tree applies,
 And when him ronning in full course he spyces,
 He slips aside; the whiles that furious beast
 His precious horne, sought of his enemyes,
 Strikes in the stocke, ne thence can be releast,
 But to the mighty victor yields a bounteous feast.

With such faire sleight him Guyon often sayld
 Till at the last all breathlesse, weary, faint,
 Him spying, with fresh onsett he assayld,
 And, kindling new his corage seeming queint,
 Strooke him so hugely, that through great constraint
 He made him stoup perforce unto his knee,
 And doe unwilling worship to the saint,
 That on his shield depainted he did see;
 Such homage till that instant never learned hee.

Whom Guyon seeing stoup, poursewed fast
 The present offer of faire victory,
 And soone his dreadfull blade about he cast,
 Wherewith he smote his haughty crest so hye,
 That streight on grownd made him full low to lye;
 Then on his brest his victor foote he thrust:
 With that he cryde; "Mercy, doe me not dye,
 Ne deeme thy force by fortunes doome uniuist,
 That bath (maugre her spight) thus low me laid in dust."

Estsoones his cruel hand Sir Guyon stayd,
 Tempring the passion with advizement slow
 And maistring might on enemy dismayd;
 For th' equall dio of warre he well did know:
 Then to him said: "Live, and alleagaunce owe
 To him, that gives thee life and liberty;
 And henceforth by this daies ensample trow,
 That hasty wroth, and heedlesse hazardry,
 Doe breede repentaunce late, and lasting infamy."

So up he let him rise; who, with grim looke
 And count'naunce sterne upstanding, gan to grind
 His grated teeth for great disdeigne, and shooke
 His sandy lockes, long hanging downe behind,
 Knotted in blood and dust, for grief of mind
 That he in ods of armes was conquered;
 Yet in himselfe some comfort he did find,
 That him so noble knight had maystered;
 Whose bounty more then might, yet both, he wondered.

Which Guyon marking said; "Be nought agriev'd,
 Sir knight, that thus ye now subdew'd arre:
 Was never man, who most conquēstes atchiev'd,
 But sometimes had the worse, and lost by warre;
 Yet shortly gaynd, that losse exceeded farre;
 Losse is no shame, nor to bee lesse then foe;
 But to bee lesser then himselfe doth marre
 Both losers lott, and victour's prayse alsōe:
 Vaine others overthrowes who selfe doth overthrow.

"Fly, O Pyrochles, fly the dreadful warro
 That in thyselfe thy lesser partes do move;
 Outrageous Anger, and woe-working Iarre,
 Direfull Impatience, and hart-murdring Love:
 Those, those thy foes, those warriors, far remove,
 Which thee to endlesse bale captived lead.
 But, sith in might thou didst my mercy prove,
 Of courtesie to mee the cause aread
 That thee against me drew with so impetuous dread."

"Dreadlesse," said he, "that shall I soone declare:
 It was complaind that thou hadst done great tort
 Unto an aged woman, poore and bare,
 And thrall'd her in chaines with strong effort,
 Voide of all succour and needfull comfort:
 That ill besemes thee, such as I thee see,
 To worke such shame: therefore I thee exhort
 To chaunge thy will, and set Occasion free,
 And to her captive sonne yield his first libertee."

Thereat Sir Guyon smylde; "And is that all,"
 Said he, "that thee so sore displeased hath?
 Great mercy sure, for to enlarge a thrall,
 Whose freedom shall thee turne to greatest scath!
 Nath'lesse now quench thy whott emboyling wrath:
 Loe! there they bee; to thee I yield them free."
 Thereat he, wondrous glad, out of the path
 Did lightly leape, where he them bound did see,
 And gan to breake the bands of their captivitee.

Soone as Occasion felt her selfe untyde,
 Before her sonne could well assoyled bee,
 She to her use returnd, and streight defyde
 Both Guyon and Pyrochles; th' one (said shee)
 Bycause he wonne; the other, because hee
 Was wonne: so matter did she make of nought,
 To stirre up strife, and garre them disagree:
 But, soone as Furor was enlargd, she sought
 To kindle his quencht fyre, and thousand causes wrought.

It was not long ere she inflam'd him so,
 That he would algates with Pyrochles fight,
 And his redeemer chalengd for his foe,
 Because he had not well mainteind his right.
 But yielded had to that same straunger knight.
 Now gan Pyrochles wex as wood as hee,
 And him affronted with impatient might:
 So both together fiers engrasped bee,
 Whyles Guyon standing by their uncouth strife does see.

Him all that while Occasion did provoke
 Against Pyrochles, and new matter fram'd
 Upon the old, him stirring to bee wroke
 Of his late wronges, in which she oft him blam'd
 For suffering such abuse as knighthood sham'd,
 And him dishabled quyte: but he was wise,
 Ne would with vaine occasions be inflam'd;
 Yet others she more urgent did devise:
 Yet nothing could him to impatience entise.

Their fell contention still increased more,
 And more thereby increased Furors might,
 That he his foe has hurt and wounded sore
 And him in blood and durt deformed quight.
 His mother eke, more to augment his spight,
 Now brought to him a flaming fyer-brond,
 Which she in Stygian lake, ay burning bright,
 Had kindled: that she gave into his hond,
 That armd with fire more hardly he mote him withstond.

Tho gau that villain wex so fiers and strong,
 That nothing might sustaine his furious forse:
 He cast him downe to ground, and all along
 Drew him through durt and myre without remorse,
 And fowly battered his comely corse.
 That Guyon much disdeign'd so loathly sight.
 At last he was compeld to cry perforce,
 "Help, O Sir Guyon! helpe, most noble knight,
 To ridd a wretched man from handes of hellish wight!"

The knight was greatly moved at his playnt,
 And gan him dight to succour his distresse,
 Till that the palmer, by his grave restraynt,
 Him stayd from yielding pittifull redresse,
 And said; "Deare sonne, thy causelesse ruth represses,
 Ne let thy stout hart melt in pittie vayne:
 He that his sorrow sought through wilfulnesse,
 And his foe fettred would release agayne,
 Deserves to taste his follies fruit, repented payne."

Guyon obeyd: so him away he drew
 From needlesse trouble of renewing fight
 Already fought, his voyage to poursew.
 But rash Pyrochles varlett, Atin hight,
 When late he saw his lord in heauie plight,
 Under Sir Guyons puissaunt stroke to fall.
 Him deeming dead, as then he seemd in sight,
 Fledd fast away to tell his funerall
 Unto his brother, whom Cymochles men did call.

He was a man of rare redoubted might,
 Famous throughout the world for warlike prayse,
 And glorious spoiles, purchast in perilous fight:
 Full many doughtie knightes he in his dayes
 Had doen to death, subdewde in equall frayes;
 Whose carkases, for terroure of his name,
 Of fowles and beastes he made the piteous prayes,
 And hong their conquerd armes for more defame
 On gallow trees, in honour of his dearest dame.

His dearest dame is that enchaunteresse,
 The vyle Acrasia, that with vaine delightes,
 And ydle pleasures, in her Bowre of Blisse,
 Does charme her lovers, and the feeble sprights
 Can call out of the bodies of fraile wightes;
 Whom then she does transforme to monstrous howes
 And horribly misshapes with ugly sightes,
 Captiv'd eternally in yron mewes
 And darksom dens, where Titan his face never shewes.

There Atin fownd Cymochles sojourning,
 To serve his lemans love; for he by kynd
 Was given all to lust and loose living,
 Whenever his fiers handes he free mote synd:
 And now he has pourd out his ydle mynd
 In daintie delices and lavish ioyes,
 Having his warlike weapons cast behynd,
 And flowes in pleasures and vaine pleasing toyes,
 Mingled emongst loose ladies and lascivious boyes.

And over him Art, stryving to compayre
 With Nature, did an arber greene dispred,
 Framed of wanton yvie, flouing fayre,
 Through which the fragrant eglantine did spred
 His prickling armes, entrayld with roses red,
 Which daintie odours round about them threw:
 And all within with flowres was garnished,
 That, when myld Zephyrus emongst them blew,
 Did breath out bounteous smels, and painted colors shew.

And fast beside there trickled softly downe
 A gentle stream, whose murmuring wave did play
 Emongst the pumy stones, and made a sowne,
 To lull him soft asleepe that by it lay:
 The wearie traveiler, wandring that way,
 Therein did often quench his thirsty heat,
 And then by it his wearie limbes display,
 (Whiles creeping slomber made him to forget
 His former payne,) and wypt away his toilsom sweat.

And on the other syde a pleasaunt grove
 Was shott up high, full of the stately tree
 That dedicated is t' Olympick Iove,
 And to his sonne Alcides, whenas hee
 In Nemea gayned goodly victoree:
 Therein the mery birdes of every sorte
 Chaunted alowd their chearefull harmonee,
 And made emougst themselves a sweete consórt,
 That quickned the dull spright with musically comfort.

There he him found all carelesly displaid,
 In secrete shadow from the sunny ray,
 On a sweet bed of lillies softly laid,
 Amidst a flock of damzelles fresh and gay,
 That rownd about him dissolute did play
 Their wanton follies and light meriment;
 Every of which did loosely disaray
 Her upper partes of meet habiliments,
 And shewd them naked, deckt with many ornaments.

And every of them strove with most delights
 Him to aggrate, and greatest pleasures shew:
 Some frand faire lookes, glancing like evening lights;
 Others sweet wordes, dropping like honny dew;
 Some bathed kisses, and did soft embrew
 The sugred licour through his melting lips.
 One boastes her beantie, and does yield to vew
 Her daintie limbes above her tender hips:
 Another her out boastes, and all for tryall strips.

He, like an adder lurking in the weedes,
 His wandring thought in deepe desire does steepe,
 And his frayle eye with spoyle of beauty feedes:
 Sometimes he falsely faines himselfe to sleepe,
 Whiles through their lids his wanton eies do peepe
 To steale a snatch of amorous conceipt,
 Whereby close fire into his hart does creepe:
 So' he them deceives, deceivd in his deceit,
 Made dronke with drugs of deare voluptuous receipt.

Atin, arriving there, when him he spyde
 Thus in still waves of deepe delight to wade,
 Fierecly approching to him lowdly cryde,
 "Cymochles; oh! no, but Cymochles shade,
 In which that manly person late did fade!
 What is become of great Acrates sonne?
 Or where hath he hong up his mortall blade,
 That hath so many haughty conquests wonne?
 Is all his force forlorne, and all his glory donne?"

Then, pricking him with his sharp-pointed dart.
 He said: "Up, up, thou womanish weake knight,
 That here in ladies lap entombed art,
 Unmindfull of thy praise and prowest might,
 And weetlesse eke of lately-wrought despight;
 Whiles sad Pyrocles lies on sencelesse ground,
 And groneth out his utmost grudging spright
 Through many a stroke and many a streaming wound.
 Calling thy help in vaine, that here in ioyes art dround."

Suddeinly out of his delightfull dreame
 The man awoke, and would have questiond more;
 But he would not endure that wofull theame
 For to dilate at large, but urged sore,
 With percing wordes and pittifull implore,
 Him hasty to arise: as one affright
 With hellish feends, or furies mad uprore,
 He then uprose, inflamd with fell despight,
 And called for his armes; for he would algates fight.

They bene ybrought; he quickly does him dight,
 And lightly mounted passeth on his way;
 Ne ladies loves, ne sweete entreaties, might
 Appease his heat, or hastie passage stay;
 For he has vowd to beene avengd that day
 (That day itselfe him seemed all too long)
 On him, that did Pyrochles deare dismay:
 So proudly pricketh on his courser strong,
 And Atin ay him pricks with spurs of shame and wrong.

CANTO VI.

Guyon is of immodest Merth
 Led into loose desyre;
 Fights with Cymochles, whiles his brother
 burnes in furious fyre.

A HARDER lesson to learne continence
 In ioyous pleasure then in grievous paine:
 For sweetnesse doth allure the weaker sence
 So strongly, that unweathes it can refraine
 From that which feeble nature covets faine:
 But grieve and wrath, that be her enemies
 And foes of life, she better can restraine:
 Yet Vertue vauntes in both her victories;
 And Guyon in them all shewes goodly maysteries.

Whom bold Cymochles traveling to finde,
 With cruell purpose bent to wreake on him
 The wrath which Atin kindled in his mind,
 Came to a river, by whose utmost brim
 Wayting to passe he saw whereas did swim
 Along the shore, as swift as glaunce of eye,
 A little gondelay, bedecked trim
 With boughes and arbours woven cunningly,
 That like a litle forrest seemed outwardly.

And therein sate a lady fresh and fayre,
 Making sweete solace to herselfe alone:
 Sometimes she song as lowd as lark in ayre,
 Sometimes she laught, that nigh her breath was gone;
 Yet was there not with her else any one,
 That to her might move cause of meriment:
 Matter of merrith enough, though there were none,
 She could devize; and thousand waies invent
 To feede her foolish humour and vaine iolliment.

Which when far off Cymochles heard and saw,
 He lowdly cald to such as were aboard
 The little barke unto the shore to draw,
 And him to ferry over that deepe ford.
 The merry mariner unto his word
 Soone hearkned, and her painted bote streightway
 Turnd to the shore, where that same warlike lord
 She in receiv'd, but Atin by no way
 She would admit, albe the knight her much did pray.

Eftsoones her shallow ship away did slide,
 More swift than swallow sheres the liquid skye,
 Withouten oare or pilot it to guide,
 Or winged canvas with the wind to fly:
 Onely she turnd a pin, and by and by
 It cut away upon the yielding wave,
 (Ne cared she her course for to apply.)
 For it was taught the way which she would have,
 And both from rocks and flats itselfe could wisely save.

And all the way the wanton damsell found
 New merth her passenger to entertaine;
 For she in pleasaunt purpose did abound,
 And greatly ioyed merry tales to fayne,
 Of which a store-house did with her remaine;
 Yet seemed, nothing well they her became:
 For all her wordes she drownd with laughter vaine,
 And wanted grace in utt'ring of the same,
 That turned all her pleasaunce to a scoffing game,

And other whiles vaine toyes she would devize,
 As her fantasticke wit did most delight:
 Sometimes her head she fondly would aguize
 With gaudy girlonds, or fresh flowrets dight
 About her necke, or rings of rushes plight:
 Sometimes, to do him laugh, she would assay
 To laugh at shaking of the leav'es light,
 Or to behold the water worke and play
 About her little frigot, therein making way.

Her light behaviour and loose dalliaunce
 Gave wondrous great contentment to the knight,
 That of his way he had no sovenaunce,
 Nor care of vow'd revenge and cruell fight,
 But to weake wench did yield his martiall might.
 So easie was to quench his flamed minde
 With one sweete drop of sensuall delight!
 So easie is t' appease the stormy winde
 Of malice in the calme of pleasaunt womankind!

Diverse discourses in their way they spent;
 Mongst which Cymochles of her questioned
 Both what she was, and what that usage ment,
 Which in her cott she daily practized:
 "Vaine man," saide she, "that wouldest be reckoned
 A straunger in thy home, and ignoraunt
 Of Phædria, (for so my name is red,)
 Of Phædria, thine owne fellow servaunt;
 For thou to serve Acrasia thy selfe doest vaunt.

"In this wide inland sea, that hight by name
 The Idle Lake, my wandring ship I row,
 That knowes her port, and thether sayles by ayme,
 Ne care no feare I how the wind do blow,
 Or whether swift I wend or whether slow:
 Both slow and swift alike do serve my tourne;
 Ne swelling Neptune ne lowd-thundring Iove
 Can chaunge my cheare, or make me ever mourne:
 My litle boat can safely passe this perilous bourne."

Whiles thus she talked, and whiles thus she toyd,
 They were far past the passage which he spake,
 And come into an island waste and voyd,
 That floted in the midst of that great lake;
 There her small gondelay her port did make,
 And that gay payre issewing on the shore
 Disburnded ner: their way they forward take
 Into the land that lay them faire before,
 Whose pleasaunce she him shewd, and plentifull great store.

It was a chosen plott of fertile land,
 Emongst wide waves sett, like a litle nest,
 As if it had by Natures cunning hand
 Bene choyceely picked out from all the rest,
 And laid forth for ensample of the best:
 No daintie flowre or herbe that growes on grownd,
 No arborett with painted blossomes drest
 And smelling sweete, but there it might be fownd
 To bud out faire, and her sweete smels throwe al arownd.

No tree, whose braunches did not bravely spring;
 No braunch, whereon a fine bird did not sitt:
 No bird, but did her shrill notes sweetely sing;
 No song, but did containe a lovely ditt.
 Trees, braunches, birds, and songs, were framed fitt
 For to allure fraile mind to carelesse ease.
 Carelesse the man soone woxe, and his weake witt
 Was overcome of thing that did him please:
 So pleased did his wrathfull purpose faire appease.

Thus when shee had his eyes and sences fed
 With false delights, and fild with pleasures vayn,
 Into a shady dale she soft him led,
 And layd him downe upon a grassy playn;
 And her sweete selfe without dread or disdayn
 She sett beside, laying his head disarmd
 In her loose lap, it softly to sustayn,
 Where soonc he slumbred, fearing not be harmd:
 The whiles with a love lay she thus him sweetly charmd:

"Debatefull strife, and cruell enmity,
 The famous name of knighthood fowly shend;
 But lovely peace, and gentle amity,
 And in amours the passing howres to spend,
 The mightie martiall bandes doe most commend;
 Of love they ever greater glory bore
 Then of their armes: Mars is Cupidoes frend,
 And is for Venus loves renowned more
 Then all his wars and spoiles, the which he did of yore."

Therewith she sweetly smyld. They, though full bent
 To prove extremities of bloody fight,
 Yet at her speach their rages gan relent,
 And calme the sea of their tempestuous spight:
 Such powre have pleasing wordes! Such is the might
 Of courteous clemency in gentle hart!
 Now after all was ceast, the Faery knight
 Besought that damsell suffer him depart,
 And yield him ready passage to that other part.

She no lesse glad then he desirous was
 Of his departure thence; for of her ioy
 And vaine delight she saw he light did pas,
 A foe of folly and immodest toy,
 Still solemne sad, or still disdainfull coy;
 Delighting all in armes and cruell warre,
 That her sweete peace and pleasures did annoy,
 Troubled with terroure and unquiet iarre,
 That she well pleased was thence to amove him farre.

Tho him she brought aboard, and her swift bote
 Forthwith directed to that further strand;
 The which on the dull waves did lightly flote,
 And soone arrived on the shallow sand,
 Where gladsome Guyon salied forth to land,
 And to that damsell thanks gave for reward.
 Upon that shore he spyed Atin stand,
 There by his maister left, when late he far'd
 In Phædrias flitt barge over that perlous shard.

Well could he him remember, sith of late
 He with Pyrocles sharp debatement made:
 Streight gan he him revyle, and bitter rate,
 As shepheardes curre, that in darke eveninges shade
 Hath tracted forth some salvage beastes trade:
 "Vile miscreant," said he, "whether dost thou flye
 The shame and death, which will thee soon invade?
 What coward hand shall doe thee next to dye,
 That art thus fowly fledd from famous enemy?"

With that he stifly shooke his steelhead dart:
 But sober Guyon hearing him so rayle,
 Though somewhat moved in his mightie hart,
 Yet with strong reason maistred passion fraile,
 And passed fayrely forth: he, turning taile,
 Backe to the strond retyrd, and there still stayd,
 Awaiting passage, which him late did faile;
 The whiles Cymochles with that wanton mayd
 The hasty heat of his avowd revenge delayd.

Whylest there the varlet stood, he saw from farre
 An armed knight that towards him fast ran;
 He ran on foot, as if in lucklesse warre
 His forlorne steed from him the victour wan:
 He seemed breathlesse, hartlesse, faint, and wan;
 And all his armour sprinckled was with blood,
 And soyld with durtie gore, that no man can
 Discerne the hew thereof; he never stood,
 But bent his hastie course towards the Ydle flood.

The varlet saw, when to the flood he came
 How without stop or stay he fiersly leapt,
 And deepe himselfe beducked in the same,
 That in the lake his loftie crest was stept,
 Ne of his safetie seemed care he kept:
 But with his raging armes he rudely flasht
 The waves about, and all his armour swept,
 That all the blood and filth away was washt;
 Yet still he bet the water, and the billowes dasht.

Atin drew nigh to weet what it mote bee;
 For much he wondered at that uncouth sight:
 Whom should he but his own deare lord there see,
 His owne deare lord Pyrochles in sad plight,
 Ready to drowne himselfe for fell despight:
 "Harrow now, out and well away!" he cryde,
 "What dismall day hath lent this cursed light,
 To see my lord so deadly damnifyde?
 Pyrochles, O Pyrochles, what is thee betyde?"

"I burne, I burne, I burne," then lowd he cryde,
 "O how I burne with implacable fyre!
 Yet nought can quench mine inly flaming syde,
 Nor sea of licour cold, nor lake of myre;
 Nothing but death can doe me to respyre."
 "Ah! be it," said he, "from Pyrochles farre
 After pursewing death once to requyre,
 Or think, that ought those puissant hands may marre:
 Death is for wretches borne under unhappy starre."

"Perdye, then is it fitt for me," said he,
 "That am, I weene, most wretched man alive;
 Burning in flames, yet no flames can I see,
 And, dying dayly, dayly yet revive:
 O Atin, helpe to me last death to give!"
 The varlet at his plaint was grieved so sore,
 That his deepe-wounded hart in two did rive;
 And, his owne health remembring now no more,
 Did follow that ensample which he blam'd afore.

Into the lake he leapt his lord to ayd,
 (So love the dread of daunger doth despise,)
 And, of him catchling hold, him strongly stayd
 From drowning; but more happy, he then wise,
 Of that seas nature did him not avise:
 The waves thereof so slow and sluggish were,
 Engrost with mud which did them fowle agrise,
 That every weighty thing they did upheare,
 Ne ought mote ever sinck downe to the bottom there.

Whyles thus they strugled in that Ydle wave,
 And strove in vaine, the one himselfe to drowne,
 The other both from drowning for to save;
 Lo! to that shore one in an auncient gowne,
 Whose hoary locks great gravitie did crowne,
 Holding in hand a goodly arming sword,
 By fortune came, ledd with the troublous sowne:
 Where drenched deepe he fownd in that dull ford
 The carefull servaunt stryving with his raging lord.

Him Atin spyng knew right well of yore,
 And lowdly cald; "Help! helpe. O Archimage,
 To save my lord in wretched plight forlore;
 Helpe with thy hand, or with thy counsell sage:
 Weake handes, but counsell is most strong in age.
 Him when the old man saw, he woundred sore
 To see Pyrochles there so rudely rage:
 Yet sithens helpe, he saw, he needed more
 Then pitty, he in hast approched to the shore.

And cald; "Pyrochles, what is this I see?
 What hellish fury hath at earst thee hent?
 Furious ever I thee knew to bee,
 Yet never in this straunge astonishment."
 "These flames, these flames!" he cryde, "doe me torment!"
 "What flames," quoth he, "when I thee present see
 In daunger rather to be drent then brent?"
 "Harrow! the flames which me consume," said he,
 "Ne can be quencht, within my secret bowelles bee.

"That cursed man, that cruel feend of hell,
 Furor, oh! Furor hath me thus bedight:
 His deadly woundes within my liver swell,
 And his whott fyre burnes in mine entralles bright,
 Kindled through his infernall brond of spight,
 Sith late with him I batteill vaine would boste;
 That now I weene Ioves dreaded thunder light
 Does scorch not halfe so sore, nor damned ghoste
 In flaming Phlegeton does not so felly roste."

Which whenas Archimago heard, his grieve
 He knew right well, and him attonce disarm'd:
 Then searcht his secret woundes, and made a priese
 Of every place that was with bruizing harmd,
 Or with the hidden fier inly warmd.
 Which doen, he balmes and herbes thereto applyde.
 And evermore with mightie spels them charmd;
 That in short space he has them qualifyde,
 And him restord to helth, that would have algates dyde.

CANTO VII.

Guyon findes Mammon in a delve
 Sunning his treasure hore;
 Is by him tempted, and led downe
 To see his secrete store.

As pilot well expert in perilous wave,
 That to a stedfast starre his course hath bent,
 When foggy mistes or cloudy tempests have
 The faithfull light of that faire lampe yblent,
 And cover'd heaven with hideous dreriment;
 Upon his card and compas firmes his eye,
 The maysters of his long experiment,
 And to them does the steddy helme apply.
 Bidding his winged vessell fairely forward fly:

So Guyon having lost his trustie guyde,
 Late left beyond that Ydle Lake, procedes
 Yet on his way, of none accompanyde;
 And evermore himselfe with comfort feedes
 Of his owne vertues and praise-worthie dedes.
 So, long he yode, yet no adventure found,
 Which Fame of her shrill trompet worthy reedes:
 For still he traveild through wide wastfull ground,
 That nought but desert wilderness shewd all around.

At last he came unto a gloomy glade,
 Cover'd with boughes and shrubs from heavens light,
 Whereas he sitting found in secret shade
 An uncouth, salvage, and uncivile wight,
 Of griesly hew and fowle ill-favour'd sight;
 His face with smoke was tand, and eies were beard,
 His head and beard with sout were ill bedight,
 His cole-blacke hands did seeme to have ben seard [peard.
 In smythes fire-spitting forge, and nayles like clawes ap-

His yron cote, all overgrowne with rust,
 Was underneath enveloped with gold;
 Whose glistring glosse, darkned with filthy dust,
 Well yet appered to have beene of old
 A worke of rich entayle and curious mould,
 Woven with antickes and wyld ymagery:
 And in his lap a masse of coyne he told,
 And turned upside downe, to feede his eye
 And covetous desire with his huge threasury.

And round about him lay on every side
 Great heapes of gold that never could be spent;
 Of which some were rude owre, not purifide
 Of Mulcibers devouring element;
 Some others were new driven, and distent
 Into great ingoyes and to wedges square;
 Some in round plates withouten monument:
 But most were stampd, and in there metal bare
 The antique shapes of kings and Kesars straung and raro.

Soone as he Guyon saw, in great affright
 And haste he rose for to remove aside
 Those pretious hils from straungers envious sight,
 And downe them poured through an hole full wide
 Into the hollow earth, them there to hide:
 But Guyon, lightly to him leaping, stayd
 His hand that trembled as one terrifyde;
 And though himselfe were at the sight dismayd,
 Yet him perforce restraynd, and to him doubtfull sayd;

"What art thou, man, (if man at all thou art,)
 That here in desert hast thine habitaunce,
 And these rich hils of welth doest hide apart
 From the worldes eye, and from her right usaunce?"
 Thereat, with staring eyes fixed askaunce,
 In great disdaine he answerd: "Hardy Elfe,
 That darest view my direful countenaunce!
 I read thee rash and heedlesse of thyselfe,
 To trouble my still seate and heapes of pretious pelfe.

"God of the world and worldlings I me call,
Great Mammon, greatest god below the skye,
That of my plenty poure out unto all,
And unto none my graces do enuye:
Riches, renowne, and principality,
Honour, estate, and all this world's good,
For which men swinke and sweat incessantly,
Fro me do flow into an ample flood,
And in the hollow earth have their eternall brood.

"Wherefore if me thou deigne to serve and sew,
At thy commaund lo! all these mountaines bee:
Or if to thy great mind, or greedy vew,
All these may not sullise, there shall to thee
Ten times so much be nombred francke and free."
"Mammon," said he "thy godheads vaunt is vaine,
And idle offers of thy golden fee;
To them that covet such eye-glutting gaine
Proffer thy giftes, and fitter servaunts entertaine.

"Me ill befits, that in derdoing armes
And honours suit my vowed daies do spend,
Unto thy bounteous baytes and pleasing charmes,
With which weake men thou witchest, to attend;
Regard of worldly mucke doth sowly blend
And low abase the high heroicke spright,
That ioyes for crownes and kingdomes to contend:
Faire shields, gay steedes, bright armes, be my delight;
Those be the riches fit for an advent'rous knight."

"Vaine glorious Elfe," saide he, "doest not thou weet,
That money can thy wantes at will supply?
Shields, steedes, and armes, and all things for thee meet,
It can purvay in twineckling of an eye;
And crownes and kingdomes to thee multiply.
Do not I kings create, and throw the crowne
Sometimes to him that low in dust doth ly,
And him that raignd into his rowme thrust downe;
And, whom I lust, do heape with glory and renowne?"

"All otherwise," saide he, "I riches read,
And deeme them roote of all disquietnesse;
First got with guile, and then preserv'd with dread,
And after spent with pride and lavishnesse,
Leaving behind them grieve and heavinesse:
Infinite mischiefes of them doe arise;
Strife and debate, bloodshed and bitterness,
Outrageous wrong and hellish covetize;
That noble heart, as great dishonour, doth despize.

"Ne thine be kingdomes, ne the scepters thine;
 But realmes and rulers thou doest both confound,
 And loyall truth to treason doest incline:
 Witnesse the guiltlesse blood pourd oft on ground;
 The crowned often slaine; the slayer cround;
 The sacred diademe in peecees rent;
 And purple robe gored with many a wound;
 Castles surprizd; great cities sackt and brent:
 So mak'st thou kings, and gaynest wrongfull government!

"Long were to tell the troublous stormes that tosse
 The private state, and make the life unsweet:
 Who swelling sayles in Caspian sea doth crosse,
 And in frayle wood on Adrian gulf doth fleet,
 Doth not, I weene, so many evils meet."
 Then Mammon waxing wroth, "And why then," sayd,
 "Are mortall men so fond and undiscereet
 So evill thing to seeke unto their ayd;
 And, having not, complaine; and, having it upbrayd?"

"Indeed," quoth he, "through fowle intemperaunce,
 Frayle men are oft captiv'd to covetise:
 But would they thinke with how small allowaunce
 Untroubled nature doth herselfe sullise,
 Such superfluities they would despise,
 Which with sad cares impeach our native ioyes.
 At the well-head the purest streames arise;
 But mucky filth his braunching armes annoyes,
 And with uncomely weedes the gentle wave accloyes.

"The ántique world, in his first-flowring youth,
 Fownd no defect in his Creators grace;
 But with glad thankes, and unreprieved truth,
 The guiftes of souveraine bounty did embrace:
 Like angels life was then mens happy cace:
 But later ages pride, like corn-fed steed,
 Abusd her plenty and fat-swolne encrease
 To all licentious lust, and gan exceed
 The measure of her meane and naturall first need.

"Then gan a cursed hand the quiet wombe
 Of his great grandmother with steele to wound,
 And the hid treasures in her sacred tombe
 With sacriledge to dig: therein he fownd
 Fountaines of gold and silver to abownd,
 Of which the matter of his huge desire
 And pompous pride eftsoones he did compownd;
 Then Avarice gan through his veines inspire
 His greedy flames, and kindled life-devouring fire."

"Sonne," said he then, "lett be thy bitter scorne,
 And leave the rudenesse of that antique age
 To them, that liv'd therin in state forlorne.
 Thou, that doest live in later times must wage
 Thy workes for wealth, and life for gold engage.
 If then thee list my offred grace to use,
 Take what thou please of all this surplusage;
 If thee list not, leave have thou to refuse:
 But thing refused doe not afterward accuse."

"Me list not," said the Elfin knight, "receave
 Thing offred, till I know it well be gott;
 Ne wote I but thou didst these goods bereave
 From rightfull owner by unrighteous lott,
 Or that blood-guiltinesse or guile them blott."
 "Perdy," quoth he, "yet never eie did vew,
 Ne tong did tell, ne hand these handled not;
 But safe I have them kept in secret mew
 From hevens sight and powre of al which them poursew."

"What secret place," quoth he, "can safely hold
 So huge a masse, and hide from heavens eie?
 Or where hast thou thy wonne, that so much gold
 Thou canst preserve from wrong and robbery?"
 "Come thou," quoth he, "and see." So by and by
 Through that thicke covert he him led, and fownd
 A darksome way, which no man could desery,
 That deepe descended through the hollow grownd,
 And was with dread and horror compassed arownd.

At length they came into a larger space,
 That stretcht itselfe into an ample playne;
 Through which a beaten broad high way did trace,
 That streight did lead to Plutoes griesly rayne:
 By that wayes side there sate infernall Payne,
 And fast beside him sate tumultuous Strife;
 The one in hand an yron whip did strayne,
 The other brandished a bloody knife;
 And both did gnash their teeth, and both did threaten life.

On th' other side in one consórt there sate
 Cruell Revenge, and rancorous Despight,
 Disloyall Treason, and hart-burning Hate;
 But gnawing Gealosy, out of their sight
 Sitting alone, his bitter lips did bight;
 And trembling Feare still to and fro did fly,
 And found no place wher safe he shroud him might:
 Lamenting Sorrow did in darknes lye;
 And Shame his ugly face did hide from living eye.

And over them sad Horror with grim hew
 Did alwaies sore, beating his yron wings;
 And after him owles and night-ravens flew,
 The hatefull messengers of heavy things,
 Of death and dolor telling sad tidings;
 Whiles sad Celeno, sitting on a clifte,
 A song of bale and bitter sorrow sings,
 That hart of flint asonder could have riste;
 Which having ended after him she flyeth swifte.

All these before the gates of Pluto lay;
 By whom they passing spake unto them nought.
 But th' Elfin knight with wonder all the way
 Did feed his eyes, and fild his inner thought.
 At last him to a little dore he brought,
 That to the gate of hell, which gaped wide,
 Was next adioyning, ne them parted ought:
 Betwixt them both was but a little stride,
 That did the House of Richesse from Hell-mouth divide.

Before the dore sat selfe-consuming Care,
 Day and night keeping wary watch and ward,
 For feare least Force or Fraud should unaware
 Break in, and spoile the treasure there in gard:
 Ne would he suffer Sleepe once thether-ward
 Approach, albe his drowy den were next;
 For next to Death is Sleepe to be compard;
 Therefore his house is unto his annex:
 Here Sleep, there Richesse, and Hel-gate them both betwext.

So soon as Mammon there arrivd, the dore
 To him did open and affoorded way:
 Him followed eke Sir Guyon evermore,
 Ne darknesse him ne daunger might dismay.
 Soone as he entred was, the dore streightway
 Did shutt, and from behind it forth there lept
 An ugly feend, more fowle then dismall day;
 The which with monstrous stalke behind him stept,
 And ever as he went dew watch upon him kept.

Well hoped hee, ere long that hardy guest,
 If ever covetous hand, or lustfull eye,
 Or lips he layd on thing that likt him best,
 Or ever sleepe his eie-strings did untie,
 Should be his pray: and therefore still on bye
 He over him did hold his cruell clawes,
 Threatning with greedy gripe to doe him dye;
 And rend in peeces with his ravenous pawes,
 If ever he transgrest the fatall Stygian lawes.

That houses forme within was rude and strong,
 Lyke an huge cave hewne out of rocky clifte,
 From whose rough vault the ragged breaches hong
 Embost with massy gold of glorious guiste,
 And with rich metall loaded every ritte,
 That heavy ruine they did seeme to threat:
 And over them Arachne high did lifte
 Her cunning web, and spred her subtile nett,
 Enwrapped in fowle smoke and clouds more black than ictt.

Both roose, and floore, and walls, were all of gold,
 But overgrowne with dust and old decay,
 And hid in darknes, that none could behold
 The hew thereof; for vew of cherefull day
 Did never in that house itselfe display,
 But a faint shadow of uncertein light;
 Such as a lamp, whose life does fade away;
 Or as the moone, cloathed with clowdy night,
 Does shew to him that walkes in feare and sad affright.

In all that rowme was nothing to be seene
 But huge great yron chests, and coffers strong,
 All bard with double bends, that none could weene
 Them to enforce by violence or wrong;
 On every side they placed were along.
 But all the grownd with sculs was scattered
 And dead mens bones, which round about were slong;
 Whose lives, it seemed, whilome there were shed,
 And their vile carcasses now left unburied.

They forward passe; ne Guyon yet spoke word,
 Till that they came unto an yron dore,
 Which to them opened of his owne accord,
 And shewd of richesse such exceeding store,
 As eie of man did never see before,
 Ne ever could within one place be fownd,
 Though all the wealth, which is or was of yore,
 Could gatherd be through all the world arownd,
 And that above were added to that under grownd.

The charge thereof unto a covetous spright
 Commaunded was, who thereby did attend,
 And warily awaited day and night,
 From other covetous feends it to defend,
 Who it to rob and ransacke did intend.
 Then Mammon, turning to that warriour, said;
 "Loe, here the worldes blis! loe, here the end
 To which al men do ayme, rich to be made!
 Such grace now to be happy is before thee laid."

"Certes," sayd he, "I n'll thine offred grace,
 Ne to be made so happy doe intend!
 Another blis before mine eyes I place,
 Another happines, another end.
 To them, that list, these base regards I lend:
 But I in armes, and in atchievements brave,
 Do rather choose my sitting houres to spend,
 And to be lord of those that riches have,
 Then them to have my selfe, and be their servile slave."

Thereat the feend his gnashing teeth did grate,
 And griev'd, so long to lacke his greedie pray;
 For well he weened that so glorious bayte
 Would tempt his guest to take thereof assay:
 Had he so doen, he had him snatcht away,
 More light than culver in the faulcons fist:
 Eternall God thee save from such decay!
 But, whenas Mammon saw his purpose mist,
 Him to entrap unwares another way he wist.

Thence, forward he him ledd, and shortly brought
 Unto another rowme, whose dore forthright
 To him did open as it had beene taught:
 Therein an hundred raunges weren pight,
 And hundred founaces all burning bright:
 By every founace many feends did byde,
 Deformed creatures, horrible in sight;
 And every feend his busie paines applyde
 To melt the golden metall, ready to be tryde.

One with great bellows gathered filling ayre,
 And with forst wind the fewell did inflame;
 Another did the dying bronds repayre
 With yron tongs, and sprinckled ofte the same
 With liquid waves, siers Vulcans rage to tame,
 Who, maystring them, renewd his former heat:
 Some scumd the drosse that from the metall came;
 Some stird the molten owre with ladles great:
 And every one did swinke, and every one did sweat.

But, when an earthly wight they present saw,
 Glistring in armes and battailous aray,
 From their whot work they did themselves withdraw
 To wonder at the sight; for, till that day,
 They never creature saw that cam that way:
 Their staring eyes sparckling with fervent fyre
 And ugly shapes did nigh the man dismay,
 That, were it not for shame, he would retyre;
 Till that him thus bespake their soveraine lord and syre:

"Behold, thou Faeries sonne, with mortall eye,
That living eye before did never see!
The thing, that thou didst crave so earnestly,
To weet whence all the wealth late shewd by mee
Proceeded, lo! now is reveald to thee.
Here is the fountaine of the world's good!
Now therefore, if thou wilt enriched bee,
Avisé thee well, and chaunge thy wilful mood;
Least thou perhaps hereafter wish, and be withstood."

"Suffise it then, thou money-god," quoth hee,
"That all thine ydle offers I refuse.
All that I need I have; what needeth mee
To covet more then I have cause to use?
With such vaine shewes thy worldlinges vyle abuse:
But give me leave to follow mine emprise."
Mammon was much displeasd, yet no'te he chuse
But beare the rigour of his bold mesprise:
And thence him forward ledd, him further to entise.

He brought him, through a darksom narrow strait,
To a broad gate all built of beaten gold:
The gate was open; but therein did wayt
A sturdie villein, stryding stiffe and bold,
As if the Highest God defy he would:
In his right hand an yron club he held,
But he hunselve was all of golden mould,
Yet had both life and sence, and well could weld
That cursed weapon, when his cruell foes he queld.

Disdayne he called was, and did disdayne
To be so cald, and who so did him call:
Sterne was his looke, and full of stomacke wayne;
His portaunce terrible, and stature tall,
Far passing th' hight of men terrestriall;
Like an huge gyant of the Titans race;
That made him scorne all creatures great and small,
And with his pride all others powre deface:
More fitt emonst black fiendes then men to have his place.

Soone as those glitterand armes he did espye,
That with their brightnesse made that darknes light,
His harmefull club he gan to hurtle hye,
And threaten batteill to the Faery knight;
Who likewise gan himselve to batteill dight,
Till Mammon did his hasty hand withhold,
And counseld him abstaine from perilous fight;
For nothing might abash the villein bold,
Ne mortall steele emperce his miscreated mould.

So having him with reason pacifyde,
 And that fiers carle commaunding to forbeare,
 He brought him in. The rowme was large and wyde,
 As it some gyeld or solemne temple weare;
 Many great golden pillours did upheare
 The massy rooffe, and riches huge sustayne;
 And every pillour decked was full deare
 With crownes, and diademes, and titles vaine,
 Which mortall princes wore whiles they on earth did rayne.

A route of people there assembled were,
 Of every sort and nation under skye,
 Which with great uprore preaced to draw nere
 To th' upper part, where was advaunced hye
 A stately siege of soveraine maiestye;
 And thereon satt a woman gorgeous gay,
 And richly cladd in robes of royaltie,
 That never earthly prince in such aray
 His glory did enhaunce, and pompous pryde display.

Her face right wondrous faire did seeme to bee,
 That her broad beauties beam great brightnes threw
 Through the dim shade, that all men might it see;
 Yet was not that same her owne native hew,
 But wrought by art and counterfetted shew,
 Thereby more lovers unto her to call;
 Nath'lesse most heavenly faire in deed and vew
 She by creation was, till she did fall;
 Thenceforth she sought for helps to cloke her crime withall.

There, as in glistring glory she did sitt,
 She held a great gold chaine ylincked well,
 Whose upper end to highest heaven was knitt,
 And lower part did reach to lowest hell;
 And all that preace did rownd about her swell
 To catchen hold of that long chaine, thereby
 To climbe aloft, and others to excell:
 That was Ambition, rash desire to sty,
 And every linck thereof a step of dignity.

Some thought to raise themselves to high degree
 By riches and unrighteous reward;
 Some by close shouldring; some by flatteree;
 Others through friendes; others for base regard;
 And all, by wrong waies, for themselves prepar'd:
 Those, that were up themselves, kept others low;
 Those, that were low themselves, held others hard,
 Ne suffred them to ryse or greater grow;
 But every one did strive his fellow downe to throw.

Which whenas Guyon saw, he gan inquire,
 What meant that preace about that ladies throne,
 And what she was that did so high aspyre?
 Him Mammon answered; "That goodly one,
 Whom all that folke with such contention
 Doe flock about, my deare, my daughter is:
 Honour and dignitie from her alone
 Derived are, and all this world's blis,
 For which ye men doe strive; fow gett, but many mis:

"And fayre Philotimé she rightly hight,
 The fairest wight that wonneth under skie,
 But that this darksom neather world her light
 Doth dim with horror and deformity,
 Worthie of heven and hye felicitie,
 From whence the gods have her for envy thrust:
 But, sith thou hast found favour in mine eye,
 Thy spouse I will her make, if that thou lust;
 That she may thee advance for works and merits iust."

"Gramercy, Mammon," said the gentle knight,
 "For so great grace and oilred high estate;
 But I, that am fraile flesh and earthly wight,
 Unworthy match for such immortall mate
 Myselfe well wote, and mine unequal fate:
 And were I not, yet is my trowth yplight,
 And love avowd to other lady late,
 That to remove the same I have no might:
 To chaunge love causelesse is reproch to warlike knight."

Mammon enmoved was with inward wrath;
 Yet, forcing it to fayne, him forth thence ledd,
 Through griesly shadowes by a beaten path,
 Into a gardin goodly garnished
 With hearbs and fruits, whose kinds mote not be redd:
 Not such as earth out of her fruitfull woomb,
 Throwes forth to men, sweet and well savored,
 But direfull deadly black, both leafe and bloom,
 Fitt to adorne the dead and deck the drery toombe.

There mournfull cypresse grew in greatest store;
 And trees of bitter gall; and heben sad;
 Dead sleeping poppy; and black hellebore;
 Cold colocintida; and tetra mad;
 Mortall samnitis; and cicuta bad,
 With which th' uniust Atheniens made to dy
 Wise Socrates, who, thereof quaffing glad,
 Poured out his life and last philosophy
 To the fayre Critias, his dearest belamy!

Infinite moe tormented in like paine
He there beheld, too long here to be told:
Ne Mammon would there let him long remayne,
For terrour of the tortures manifold,
In which the damned soules he did behold,
But roughly him bespake: "Thou fearefull foole,
Why takest not of that same fruite of gold?
Ne sittest downe on that same silver stoele,
To rest thy weary person in the shadow coole?"

All which he did to do him deadly fall
In frayle intemperaunce through sinfull bayt;
To which if he inclyned had at all,
That dreadfull fecnd, which did behinde him wayt,
Would him have rent in thousand peeces strait:
But he was wary wise in all his way,
And wel perceived his deceitfull sleight,
Ne suffred lust his safety to betray:
So goodly did beguile the guyler of his pray.

And now he has so long remained theare,
That vitall powres gan wexe both weake and wan
For want of food and sleepe, which two upbeare,
Like mightie pillours, this frayle life of man,
That none without the same enduren can:
For now three dayes of men were full outwrought,
Since he this hardy enterprize began:
Forthy great Mammon fayrely he besought
Into the world to guyde him backe, as he him brought.

The god, though loth, yet was constraynd t' obay;
For lenger time, then that, no living wight
Below the earth might suffred be to stay:
So backe againe him brought to living light.
But all so soone as his enfeebled spright
Gan sucke this vitall ayre into his brest,
As overcome with too exceeding might,
The life did flit away out of her nest,
And all his sences were with deadly fit opprest.

CANTO VIII.

Sir Guyon, layd in swowne, is by
 Acrates sonnes despoild;
 Whom Arthure soone hath reskewed,
 And Paynim brethren soyld.

AND is there care in heaven? And is there love
 In heavenly spirits to these creatures base,
 That may compassion of their evils move?
 There is:—else much more wretched were the cace
 Of men then beasts: but O! th' exceeding grace
 Of highest God, that loves his creatures so,
 And all his workes with mercy doth embrace,
 That blessed angels he sends to and fro,
 To serve to wicked man, to serve his wicked foe!

How oft do they their silver bowers leave
 To come to succour us that succour want!
 How oft do they with golden pineons cleave
 The flitting skyes, like flying pursuivant,
 Against fowle feedes to ayd us militant!
 They for us fight, they watch and dewly ward,
 And their bright squadrons round about us plant;
 And all for love and nothing for reward:
 O, why should Hevenly God to men have such regard!

During the while that Guyon did abide
 In Mammons house, the palmer, whom whylcare
 That wanton mayd of passage had denide,
 By further search had passage found elsewhere;
 And, being on his way, approached neare
 Where Guyon lay in traunce; when suddainly
 He heard a voyce that called lowd and cleare,
 "Come hether, come hether, O! come hastily!"
 That all the fields resounded with the ruefull cry.

The palmer lent his care unto the noyce,
 To weet who called so impörtunely:
 Againe he heard a more efforced voyce,
 That bad him come in haste: he by and by
 His feeble feet directed to the cry;
 Which to that shady delve him brought at last,
 Where Mammon earst did sunne his threasury:
 There the good Guyon he found slumbring fast
 In senceles dreame; which sight at first him sore aghast.

Beside his head there satt a faire young man,
 Of wondrous beauty and of freshest yeares,
 Whose tender bud to blossome new began,
 And florish faire above his equall peares:
 His snowy front, curled with golden heares,
 Like Phoebus face adorn'd with sunny rayes,
 Divinely shone; and two sharpe winged sheares,
 Deeked with diverse plumes, like painted jayes,
 Were fixed at his backe to cut his ayery wayes.

Like as Cupido on Idæan hill,
 When having laid his cruell bow away
 And mortall arrowes, wherewith he doth fill
 The world with murdrous spoiles and bloody pray,
 With his faire mother he him dights to play,
 And with his goodly sisters, Graces three;
 The goddesse, pleased with his wanton play,
 Suffers herselfe through sleepe beguild to bee,
 The whiles the other ladies mind theyr mery glee.

Whom when the palmer saw, abasht he was
 Through fear and wonder, that he nought could say,
 Till him the childe bespoke; "Long lackt, alas,
 Hath bene thy faithfull aide in hard assay!
 Whiles deadly fitt thy pupill doth dismay,
 Behold this heavy sight, thou reverend sire!
 But dread of death and dolor doe away;
 For life ere long shall to her home retire,
 And he that breathlesse seems shal corage bold respire.

"The charge, which God doth unto me arrett,
 Of his deare safety I to thee commend;
 Yet will I not forgoe, ne yet forgett
 The care thereof myselfe unto the end,
 But evermore him succour, and defend
 Against his foe and mine: watch thou, I pray;
 For evill is at hand him to offend."
 So having said, eftsoones he gan display
 His painted nimble wings, and vanisht quite away.

The palmer seeing his lefte empty place,
 And his slow eies beguiled of their sight,
 Woxe sore afraid, and standing still a space
 Gaz'd after him, as fowle escapt by flight:
 At last, him turning to his charge behight,
 With trembling hand his troubled pulse gan try;
 Where finding life not yet dislodged quight,
 He much reioyst, and coud it tenderly,
 As chicken newly hacht, from dreaded destiny.

At last he spide where towards him did pace
 Two Paynim knights al armd as bright as skie,
 And them beside an aged sire did trace,
 And far before a light-foote page did flic,
 That breathed strife and troublous enmitie.
 Those were the two sonnes of Acrates old,
 Who, meeting earst with Archimago slie
 Foreby that Idle Strond, of him were told
 That he, which earst them combattad, was Guyon bold.

Which to avenge on him they dearly vowd,
 Wherever that on ground they mote him find:
 False Archimago provokt their corage prowde,
 And stryful Atin in their stubborne mind
 Coles of contention and whot vengeance find.
 Now bene they come whereas the palmer sate,
 Keeping that slombred corse to him assind:
 Well knew they both his person, sith of late
 With him in bloody armes they rashly did debate.

Whom when Pyrochles saw, inflam'd with rage
 That sire he fowl bespake; "Thou dotard vile,
 That with thy brutenesse shendst thy comely age,
 Abandon soone, I read, the caytive spoile
 Of that same outcast carcas, that erewhile
 Made itselke famous through false trechery,
 And crownd his coward crest with knightly stile;
 Loe! where he now inglorious doth lye,
 To proove he lived il, that did thus fowly dye."

To whom the palmer fearlesse answered;
 "Certes, sir knight, ye bene too much to blame,
 Thus for to blott the honor of the dead,
 And with fowle cowardize his carcas shame
 Whose living handes immortalizd his name.
 Vile is the vengeance on the ashes cold;
 And envy base to barke at sleeping fame;
 Was never wight that treason of him told;
 Yourselfe his prowesse prov'd, and found him fiers and bold."

Then sayd Cymochles; "Palmer, thou doest dote,
 Ne canst of prowesse ne of knighthood deeme,
 Save as thou seest or hearst: but well I wote,
 That of his puissance tryall made extreme:
 Yet gold all is not that doth golden seeme;
 Ne al good knights that shake well speare and shield:
 The worth of all men by their end esteeme;
 And then dew praise or dew reproch them yield:
 Bad therefore I him deeme that thus lies dead on field."

"Good or bad," gan his brother fiers reply,
 "What do I recke, sith that he dide entire?
 Or what doth his bad death now satisfy
 The greedy hunger of revenging yre,
 Sith wrathfull hand wrought not her owne desire?
 Yet, since no way is leste to wreake my spight,
 I will him reave of armes, the victors hire.
 And of that shield, more worthy of good knight;
 For why should a dead dog be deckt in armour bright?"

"Fayr sir," said then the palmer suppliaunt,
 "For knighthoods love doe not so fowle a deed,
 Ne blame your honor with so shamefull vaunt
 Of vile revenge: to spoile the dead of weed
 Is sacrilege, and doth all sinnes exceed:
 But leave these relicks of his living might
 To decke his herce, and trap his tomb-blacke steed."
 "What herce or steed," said he, "should he have dight,
 But be entombed in the raven or the kight?"

With that, rude hand upon his shield he laid,
 And th' other brother gan his helme unlace;
 Both fiercely bent to have him disaraid:
 Till that they spyde where towards them did pace
 An armed knight, of bold and bounteous grace,
 Whose squire bore after him an heben launce
 And coverd shield: well kend him so far space
 Th' enchaunter by his armes and amenaunce,
 When under him he saw his Lybian steed to prauunce;

And to those brethren sayd; "Rise, rise bylive,
 And unto batteil doe yourselves addresse;
 For yonder comes the prowest knight alive,
 Prince Arthur, flowre of grace and nobillesse,
 That hath to Paynim knights wrought gret distresse,
 And thousand Sar'zins fowly donne to dye."
 That word so deepe did in their harts impresse,
 That both eftsoones upstarte furiously,
 And gan themselves prepare to batteill greedily.

But fiers Pyrochles, lacking his owne sword,
 The want thereof now greatly gan to plaine,
 And Archimage besought, him that afford
 Which he had brought for Braggadochio vaine.
 "So would I," said th' enchaunter, "glad and faine
 Beteeme to you this sword, you to defend,
 Or ought that els your honour might maintaine;
 But that this weapons powre I well have kend
 To be contrary to the worke which ye intend:

"For that same knights owne sword this is, of yore
Which Merlin made by his almightie art
For that his noursling, when he knighthood swore,
Therewith to doen his foes eternall smart.
The metall first he mixt with medæwart,
That no enchantment from his dint might save;
Then it in flames of Aetna wrought apart,
And seven times dipped in the bitter wave
Of heetish Styx, which hidden vertue to it gave.

"The vertue is, that nether steele nor stone
The stroke thereof from entraunce may defend;
Ne ever may be used by his fone;
Ne forst his rightfull owner to offend;
Ne ever will it breake, ne ever bend;
Wherefore Morddure it rightfully is hight.
In vaine, therefore, Pyrochles, should I lend
The same to thee, against his lord to fight;
For sure yt would deceive thy labor and thy might."

"Foolish old man," said then the Pagan wroth.
"That weenest words or charms may force withstond.
Soone shalt thou see, and then beleve for troth,
That I can carve with this inchaunted brond
His lords owne flesh." Therewith out of his hond
That vertuous steele he rudely snatcht away;
And Guyons shield about his wrest he bond:
So ready dight, fierce battaile to assay,
And match his brother proud in battailous aray.

By this, that straunger knight in presence came,
And goodly salved them; who nought againe
Him answered, as courtesie became;
But with sterne lookes, and stomachous disdaine,
Gave signes of grudge and discontentment vaine:
Then, turning to the palmer, he gan spy
Where at his feet, with sorrowfull demayne
And deadly hew, an armed corse did lye.
In whose dead face he redd great magnanimitie.

Said he then to the palmer; "Reverend syre,
What great misfortune hath betidd this knight?
Or did his life her fatall date expyre,
Or did he fall by treason, or by fight?
However, sure I rew his pitteous plight."
"Not one, nor othel," sayd the palmer grave,
"Hath him befallne; but cloudes of deadly night
Awhile his heavy eyelids cover'd have,
And all his sences drowned in deep sencelesse wave:

"Which those his cruell foes, that stand hereby,
 Making advantage, to revenge their spight,
 Would him disarm and treaten shamefully;
 Unworthie usage of redoubted knight!
 But you, faire sir, whose honourable sight
 Doth promise hope of helpe and timely grace,
 Mote I beseech to succour his sad plight,
 And by your powre protect his feeble case!
 First prayse of knighthood is, fowle outrage to deface."

"Palmer," said he, "no knight so rude, I weene,
 As to doen outrage to a sleeping ghost:
 Ne was there ever noble corage scene,
 That in advauntage would his puissaunce bost:
 Honour is least, where oddes appeareth most.
 May bee, that better reason will aswage
 The rash revengers heat. Words, well dispost,
 Have secrete powre t' appease inflamed rage:
 If not, leave unto me thy knights last patronage."

Thc, turning to those brethren, thus bespoke;
 "Ye warlike payre, whose valorous great might,
 It seemes, iust wronges to vengeaunce doe provoke,
 To wreake your wrath on this dead-seeming knight,
 Mote ought allay the storme of your despight,
 And settle patience in so furious heat?
 Not to debate the chalenge of your right,
 But for his carkas pardon I entreat,
 Whom fortune hath already laid in lowest seat."

To whom Cymochles said; "For what art thou,
 That mak'st thyselfe his dayes-man, to prolong
 The vengeaunce prest? Or who shall let me now
 On this vile body from to wreak my wrong,
 And make his carkas as the outcast dong?
 Why should not that dead carrion satisfye
 The guilt, which, if he lived had thus long,
 His life for dew revenge should deare aby?e?
 The trespass still doth live, albee the person dye."

"Indeed," then said the prince, "the evill donno
 Dyes not, when breath the body first doth leave;
 But from the grandsyre to the nephewes sonne
 And all his seede the curse doth often cleave,
 Till vengeaunce utterly the guilt bereave:
 So streightly God doth iudge. But gentle knight,
 That doth against the dead his hand upcare,
 His honour staines with rancour and despight,
 And great disparagment makes to his former might."

Pyrochles gan reply the second tyme,
 And to him said; "Now, felon, sure I read.
 How that thou art partaker of his cryme:
 Therefore by Termagaunt thou shalt be dead."
 With that, his hand, more sad than lomp of lead,
 Uplifting high, he weened with Morddure,
 His owne good sword Morddure, to cleave his head.
 The faithfull steele such treason no'uld endure.
 But, swarving from the marke, his lordes life did assure.

Yet was the force so furious and so fell,
 That horse and man it made to reele asyde:
 Nath'lesse the prince would not forsake his sell,
 (For well of yore he learned had to ryde,)
 But full of anger fiersly to him cryde;
 "False traitour, miscreaunt, thou broken hast
 The law of armes, to strike foe undefide:
 But thou thy treasons fruit I hope shall taste
 Right sowre, and feele the law, the which thou hast defast."

With that his balefull speare he fiercely bent
 Against the Pagans brest, and therewith thought
 His cursed life out of her lodg have rent:
 But, ere the point arrived where it ought,
 That seven-fold shield, which he from Guyon brought,
 He cast between to ward the bitter stownd:
 Through all those foldes the steelehead passago wrought,
 And through his shoulder perst; wherwith to ground
 He groveling fell, all gored in his gushing wound.

Which when his brother saw, fraught with great griefe
 And wrath, he to him leaped furiously,
 And fowly saide; "By Mahoune, cursed thiefe,
 That direfull stroke thou dearely shalt aby."
 Then, hurling up his harmefull blade on hy,
 Smote him so hugely on his haughtie crest,
 That from his saddle forced him to fly:
 Els mote it needes downe to his manly brest
 Have cleft his head in twaine, and life thence disposscest.

Now was the prince in daungerous distresse,
 Wanting his sword, when he on foot should fight:
 His single speare could doe him small redresse
 Against two foes of so exceeding might,
 The least of which was match for any knight.
 And now the other, whom he earst did daunt,
 Had reard himselfe againe to cruel fight,
 Three times more furious and more puissaunt,
 Unmindfull of his wound, of his fate ignoraunt.

So both attonce him charge on either syde
 With hideous strokes and importable powre,
 That forced him his ground to traverse wyde,
 And wisely watch to ward that deadly stowre:
 For on his shield, as thicke as stormie showre,
 Their strokes did raine; yet did he never quaille,
 Ne backward shrink; but as a stedfast towre,
 Whom foe with double battry doth assaile,
 Them on her bulwarke beares, and bids them nought availe.

So stoutly he withstood their strong assay;
 Till that at last, when he advantage spyde,
 His poynant speare he thrust with puissant sway
 At proud Cymochles, whiles his shield was wyde,
 That through his thigh the mortall steele did gryde:
 He, swarving with the force, within his flesh
 Did breake the launce, and let the head abyde:
 Out of the wound the red blood flowed fresh,
 That underneath his feet soone made a purple plesh.

Horribly then he gan to rage and rayle,
 Cursing his gods, and himselfe damning deepe:
 Als when his brother saw the red blood rayle
 Adowne so fast, and all his armour steepe,
 For very felnesse lowd he gan to weepe,
 And said; "Caytive, curse on thy cruell hond,
 That twise hath spedd; yet shall it not thee keepe
 From the third brunt of this my fatall brond:
 Lo, where the dreadfull Death behynd thy backe doth stond!"

With that he strooke, and th' other strooke withall,
 That nothing seemd mote beare so monstrous might:
 The one upon his covered shield did fall,
 And glauncing downe would not his owner byte:
 But th' other did upon his troncheon smyte;
 Which hewing quite asunder, further way
 It made, and on his hacqueton did lyte,
 The which dividing with impórtune sway,
 It seizd in his right side, and there the dint did stay.

Wyde was the wound, and a large lukewarme flood,
 Red as the rose, thence gushed grievously;
 That when the Paynym spyde the streaming blood,
 Gave him great hart and hope of victory.
 On th' other side, in huge perplexity
 The prince now stood, having his weapon broke;
 Nought could he hurt, but still at warde did ly:
 Yet with his troncheon he so rudely stroke
 Cymochles twise, that twise him forst his foot revoke.

Whom when the palmer saw in such distresse,
 Sir Guyons sword he lightly to him raught,
 And said; "Fayre sonne, great God thy right hand blesse,
 To use that sword so well as he it ought!"
 Glad was the knight, and with fresh courage fraught,
 When as againe he armed felt his hond:
 Then like a lyon, which had long time saught
 His robbed whelpes, and at the last them fond [yond:
 Emongst the shepheard swaynes, then wexeth wood and

So fierce he laid about him, and dealt blowes
 On either side, that neither mayle could hold,
 No shield defend the thunder of his throwes:
 Now to Pyrochles many strokes he told;
 Eft to Cymochles twise so many fold;
 Then, backe againe turning his busie hond,
 Them both attonce compeld with courage bold
 To yield wide way to his hart-thrilling brond; [stond.
 And though they both stood stiffe, yet could not both with-

As salvage bull, whom two fierce mastives bayt,
 When rancour doth with rage him once engorge,
 Forgets with wary warde them to awayt,
 But with his dreadfull hornes them drives afore,
 Or flings aloft, or treads downe in the flore,
 Breathing out wrath, and bellowing disdaine,
 That all the forest quakes to hear him rore:
 So rag'd Prince Arthur twixt his foemen twaine,
 That neither could his mightie puissance sustaine.

But ever at Pyrochles when he smitt,
 (Who Guyons shield cast ever him before,
 Whereon the Faery Queenes pourtract was writt,)
 His hand relented and the stroke forbore,
 And his deare hart the picture gan adore;
 Which oft the Paynim sav'd from deadly stowre:
 But him henceforth the same can save no more;
 For now arrived is his fatall howre.
 That no'te avoyded be by earthly skill or powre.

For when Cymochles saw the fowle reproch,
 Which them appeached; prickt with guiltie shame
 And inward griefe, he fiercely gan approach,
 Resolv'd to put away that loathly blame,
 Or dye with honour and desert of fame;
 And on the haubergh stroke the prince so sore,
 That quite disparted all the linked frame,
 And pierced to the skin, but bit no more;
 Yet made him twise to reele, that never moov'd afore.

Whereat renfierst with wrath and sharp regret,
 He stroke so hugely with his borrowd blade,
 That it empierst the Pagans burganet;
 And, cleaving the hard Steele, did deepe invade
 Into his head, and cruell passage made
 Quite through his brayne: he, tumbling downe on ground,
 Breath'd out his ghost, which, to th' infernall shade
 Fast flying, there eternall torment found
 For all the sinnes wherewith his lewd life did abound.

Which when his german saw, the stony feare
 Ran to his hart, and all his sence dismayd;
 Ne thenceforth life ne corage did appeare.
 But, as a man whom hellish feedes have frayd,
 Long trembling still he stooode; at last thus sayd;
 "Traytour, what hast thou doen! How ever may
 Thy cursed hand so cruelly have swayd
 Against that knight! Harrow and well away!
 After so wicked deede why liv'st thou lenger day!"

With that all desperate, as loathing light,
 And with revenge desyring soone to dye,
 Assembling all his force and utmost might,
 With his owne swerd he fierce at him did flye,
 And strooke, and soynd, and lasht outrageously,
 Withouten reason or regard. Well knew
 The prince, with patience and sufferance sly,
 So hasty heat soone cooled to subdew:
 Tho, when this breathlesse woxe, that batteil gan renew.

As when a windy tempest bloweth hye,
 That nothing may withstand his stormy stowre,
 The clowdes, as thinges affrayd, before him flye;
 But, all so soone as his outrageous powre
 Is layd, they fiercely then begin to showre:
 And, as in scorne of his spent stormy spight,
 Now all attonce their malice forth do poure:
 So did Prince Arthur beare himselfe in fight,
 And suffred rash Pyrochles waste his ydle might.

At last whenas the Sarazin perceiv'd
 How that straunge sword refusd to serve his neede,
 But, when he stroke most strong, the dint deceiv'd;
 He flong it from him; and, devoyd of dreed,
 Upon him lightly leaping without heed,
 Twixt his two mighty armes engrasped fast,
 Thinking to overthrowe and downe him tred:
 But him in strength and skill the prince surpast,
 And through his nimble sleight did under him down cast.

Nought booted it the Paynim then to strive;
 For as a bittur in the eagles clawe,
 That may not hope by flight to scape alive,
 Still waytes for death with dread and trembling aw;
 So he, now subject to the victours law,
 Did not once move, nor upward cast his eye,
 For vile disdain and rancour, which did gnaw
 His hart in twaine with sad melánccholy;
 As one that loathed life, and yet despysed to dye.

But, full of princely bounty and great mind,
 The conqueror nought cared him to slay;
 But, casting wronges and all revenge behind,
 More glory thought to give life then decay,
 And sayd; "Paynim, this is thy dismall day;
 Yet if thou wilt renounce thy misereauunce,
 And my true liegeman yield thyselfe for ay,
 Life will I graunt thee for thy valiaunce,
 And all thy wronges will wipe out of my sovenaunce."

"Foole," said the pagan, "I thy gift desye;
 But use thy fortune, as it doth befall;
 And say, that I not overcome doe dye,
 But in despight of life for death doe call."
 Wroth was the prince, and sory yet withall,
 That he so wilfully refused grace;
 Yet, sith his fate so cruelly did fall,
 His shining helmet he gan soone unlace,
 And lefte his headlesse body bleeding all the place.

By this, Sir Guyon from his traunce awakt,
 Life having maystered her senceless foe;
 And looking up, whenas his shield he lakt
 And sword saw not, he wexed wondrous woe:
 But when the palmer, whom he long ygoe
 Had lost, he by him spyde, right glad he grew,
 And saide; "Deare sir, whom wandering to and fro
 I long have lakt, I ioy thy face to vew!
 Firme is thy faith, whom daunger never fro me drew.

"But read what wicked hand hath robbed mee
 Of my good sword and shield?" The palmer, glad
 With so fresh hew uprysing him to see,
 Him answered: "Fayre sonne, be no whit sad
 For want of weapons; they shall soone be had."
 So gan he to discourse the whole debate,
 Which that straunge knight for him sustained had,
 And those two Sarazins confounded late,
 Whose carcases on ground were horribly prostráte.

Which when he heard, and saw the tokens trew,
 His hart with great affection was embayd,
 And to the prince, with bowing reverence dew,
 As to the patrone of his life, thus sayd;
 "My lord, my liege, by whose most gracious ayd
 I live this day, and see my foes subdewd,
 What may suffice to be for meede repayd
 Of so great graces as ye have me shewd,
 But to be ever bound"—

To whom the infant thus: "Fayre sir, what need
 Good turnes be counted, as a servile bond,
 To bind their doers to receive their meed?
 Are not all knightes by oath bound to withstond
 Oppressours powre by armes and puissant hond?
 Suffise, that I have done my dew in place."
 So goodly purpose they together fond
 Of kindnesse and of courteous aggrace;
 The whiles false Archimage and Atin fled apaco.

CANTO IX.

The House of Temperaunce, in which
 Doth sober Alma dwell,
 Besiegd of many foes, whom straunge-
 er knightes to flight compell.

Of all Gods workes, which doe this worlde adorne,
 There is no one more faire and excellent
 Then is mans body, both for powre and forme,
 Whiles it is kept in sober government;
 But none then it more fowle and indecent,
 Distempred through misrule and passions bace;
 It grows a monster, and incontinent
 Doth lose his dignity and native grace:
 Behold, who list, both one and other in this place.

After the Paynim brethren conquer'd were,
 The Briton prince recov'ring his stolne sword,
 And Guyon his lost shield, they both yfere
 Forth passed on their way in fayre accord,
 Till him the prince with gentle court did bord;
 "Sir knight, mote I of you this court'sy read,
 To weet why on your shield, so goodly scord,
 Beare ye the picture of that ladies head?
 Full lively is the semblaunt, though the substance dead."

"Fayre sir," sayd he, "if in that picture dead
Such life ye read, and vertue in vaine shew;
What mote ye weene, if the trew lively-head
Of that most glorious visage ye did vew!
But yf the beauty of her mind ye knew,
That is, her bounty, and imperiall powre,
Thousand times fairer then her mortall hew,
O! how great wonder would your thoughts deuoure,
And infinite desire into your spirite poure!"

"She is the mighty Queene of Faëry,
Whose faire retraits I in my shield doe beare;
Shee is the flowre of grace and chastity,
Throughout the world renowned far and neare,
My life, my liege, my soveraine, my deare,
Whose glory shineth as the morning starre,
And with her light the earth enlumines cleare;
Far reach her mercies, and her praises farre,
As well in state of peace, as puissance in warre."

"Thrise happy man," said then the Briton knight,
"Whom gracious loff and thy great valiaunee
Have made thee soldier of that princesse bright,
Which with her bounty and glad countenaunee
Doth blesse her servaunts, and them high aduancee!
How may straunge knight hope ever to aspire,
By faithfull service and meete amenaunee
Unto such blisse? suffieient were that hire
For losse of thousand lives, to die at her desire."

Said Guyon, "Noble lord, what meed so great,
Or grace of earthly prince so soveraine,
But by your wondrous worth and warlike feat
Ye well may hope, and easely attaine?
But were your will her sold to entertaine,
And numbred be mongst Knights of Maydenhed,
Great guerdon, well I wote, should you remaine,
And in her favor high bee reckoned,
As Arthegall and Sophy now beene honored."

"Certes," then said the prince, "I God avow,
That sith I armes and knighthood first did plight,
My whole desire hath beene, and yet is now,
To serve that queene with al my powre and might.
Now hath the sunne with his lamp-burning light
Walkt round about the world, and I no lesse,
Sith of that goddessse I have sought the sight,
Yet no where can her find: such happinesse
Heven doth to me envy and fortune favourlesse."

"Fortune, the foe of famous chevisaunce,
Seldom," said Guyon, "yields to vertue aide.
But in her way throwes mischief and mischaunce,
Whereby her course is stopt and passage staid.
But you, faire sir, be not herewith dismaid,
But constant keepe the way in which ye stand;
Which were it not that I am els delaid
With hard adventure, which I have in hand,
I labour would to guide you through al Fary land."

"Gramercy sir," said he; "but mote I weete
What straunge adventure doe ye now pursue?
Perhaps my succour or advizement meete
Mote stead you much your purpose to subdew."
Then gan Sir Guyon all the story shew
Of false Acrasia, and her wicked wiles;
Which to avenge, the palmer him forth drew
From Faery court. So talked they, the whiles
They wasted had much way, and measurd many miles.

And now faire Phoebus gan decline in haste
His weary wagon to the westerne vale.
Whenas they spide a goodly castle, plaste
Foreby a river in a pleasaunt dale;
Which choosing for that evenings hospitale,
They thether marcht: but when they came in sight,
And from their sweaty coursers did avale,
They found the gates fast barred long ere night.
And every loup fast lockt, as fearing foes despight.

Which when they saw, they weened fowle reproch
Was to them doen, their entraunce to forstall;
Till that the squire gan nigher to approach,
And wind his horne under the castle wall.
That with the noise it shooke as it would fall.
Eftsoones forth looked from the highest spire
The watch, and lowd unto the knights did call,
To weete what they so rudely did require:
Who gently answered, they entraunce did desire.

"Fly, fly, good knights," said he, "fly fast away,
If that your lives ye love, as meete ye should;
Fly fast, and save yourselves from neare decay;
Here may ye not have entraunce, though we would:
We would and would againe, if that we could;
But thousand enemies about us rave,
And with long siege us in this castle hould:
Seven yeares this wize they us besieged have,
And many good knights slaine that have us sought to save."

Thus as he spoke, loe! with outrageous cry
 A thousand villeins rownd about them swarmd.
 Out of the rockes and caves adioyning nye;
 Vile caitive wretches, ragged, rude, deformd,
 All threatning death, all in straunge manner armd;
 Some with unweldy clubs, some with long speares,
 Some rusty knives, some staves in fier warnd:
 Sterne was their looke; like wild amazed steares,
 Staring with hollow eies, and stiff upstanding heares.

Fiersly at first those knights they did assayle,
 And drove them to recoile: but, when againe
 They gave fresh charge, their forces gan to sayle,
 Unhable their encounter to sustaine;
 For with such puissance and impetuous maine
 Those champions broke on them, that forst them fly,
 Like scattered sheepe, whenas the shepherds swaine
 A lion and a tigre doth espye
 With greedy pace forth rushing from the forest nye.

A while they fled, but soone retournd againe
 With greater fury then before was found;
 And evermore their cruell capitaine
 Sought with his raskall routs t'enclose them rownd,
 And overronne to tread them to the grownd:
 But soone the knights with their bright-burning blades
 Broke their rude troupes, and orders did confownd,
 Hewing and slashing at their idle shades; [fades.
 For though they bodies seem, yet substaunce from them

As when a swarme of gnats at eventide
 Out of the fennes of Allan doe arise,
 Their murmuring small trompetts sownden wide,
 Whiles in the aire their clustring army flies,
 That as a cloud doth seeme to dim the skies;
 Ne man nor beast may rest or take repast
 For their sharpe wounds and noyous iniuries,
 Till the fierce northerne wind with blustering blast
 Doth blow them quite away, and in the ocean cast.

hus when they had that troublous rout disperst,
 Unto the castle gate they come againe,
 And entraunce crav'd, which was denied erst.
 Now when report of that their perlous paine,
 And combrous conflict which they did sustaine,
 Came to the ladies eare which there did dwell,
 Shee forth isséwed with a goodly traine
 Of squires and ladies equipaged well,
 And entertained them right fairely, as befell.

Alma she called was; a virgin bright,
 That had not yet felt Cupides wanton rage;
 Yet was shee woo'd of many a gentle knight,
 And many a lord of noble parentage,
 That sought with her to lincke in marriage:
 For shee was faire, as faire mote ever bee,
 And in the flowre now of her freshest age;
 Yet full of grace and goodly modestee.
 That even heven reioyced her sweete face to see.

In robe of lilly white she was arayd,
 That from her shoulder to her heele downe raught;
 The traine whereof loose far behind her strayd,
 Braunched with gold and perle most richly wrought,
 And borne of two faire damself which were taught
 That service well: her yellow golden beare
 Was trimly woven, and in tresses wrought,
 Ne other tire she on her head did weare,
 But crowned with a garland of sweete rosiere.

Goodly shee entertaind those noble knights,
 And brought them up into her castle hall;
 Where gentle court and gracious delight
 Shee to them made, with mildnesse virginall,
 Shewing herselfe both wise and liberall.
 There when they rested had a season dew,
 They her besought of favour speciall
 Of that faire castle to affoord them vew:
 Shee graunted; and, them leading forth, the same did shew.

First she them led up to the castle wall,
 That was so high as foe might not it clime,
 And all so faire and fensible withall;
 Not built of bricke, ne yet of stone and lime,
 But of thing like to that Ægyptian slime,
 Whereof king Nine whilome built Babell towre:
 But O great pitty, that no lenger time
 So goodly workmanship should not endure!
 Soone it must turne to earth: no earthly thing is sure.

The frame thereof seemd partly circulare,
 And part triangulare: O worke divine!
 Those two the first and last proportions are;
 The one imperfect, mortall, fæminine;
 Th' other immortall, perfect, masculine;
 And twixt them both a quadrate was the base,
 Proportiond equally by seven and nine;
 Nine was the circle sett in heavens place:
 All which compacted, made a goodly diapase.

Therein two gates were placed seemly well:
 The one before, by which all in did pas,
 Did th'other far in workmanship excell;
 For not of wood, nor of enduring bras,
 But of more worthy substance fram'd it was:
 Doubly disparted, it did locke and close,
 That, when it locked, none might thorough pas,
 And, when it opened, no man might it close;
 Still opened to their friendes, and closed to their foes.

Of hewen stone the porch was fayrely wrought,
 Stone more of valew. and more smooth and fine,
 Then iett or marble far from Ireland brought;
 Over the which was east a wandring vine,
 Enchaced with a wanton yvie twine:
 And over it a fayre porteullis hong,
 Which to the gate directly did incline
 With comely compasse and compacture strong,
 Nether unseemly short, nor yet exceeding long.

Within the barbican a porter sate,
 Day and night duely keeping watch and ward;
 Nor wight nor word mote passe out of the gate,
 But in good order, and with dew regard;
 Utterers of secrets he from thence debard,
 Bablers of folly, and blazers of cryme:
 His larum-bell might lowd and wyde be hard
 When cause requyrd, but never out of time;
 Early and late it rong, at evening and at prime.

And rownd about the porch on every syde
 Twise sixteene warders satt, all armed bright
 In glistring steele, and strongly fortifyde:
 Tall yeomen seemed they and of great might,
 And were enraunged ready still for fight.
 By them as Alma passed with her gwestes,
 They did obeysaunce, as besceemed right,
 And then againe retourned to their restes:
 The porter eke to her did lout with humble gestes.

Thence she them brought into a stately hall,
 Wherein were many tables fayre dispred,
 And ready dight with drapets festivall,
 Against the viaundes should be ministred.
 At th' upper end there sate, yclad in red
 Downe to the ground, a comely personage,
 That in his hand a white rod menaged;
 He steward was, hight Diet; rype of age,
 And in demeanure sober, and in counsell sage.

And through the hall there walked to and fro
 A iolly yeoman, marshall of the same,
 Whose name was Appetite; he did bestow
 Both guesstes and meate, whenever in they came,
 And knew them how to order without blame,
 As him the steward badd. They both attone
 Did dewty to their lady, as became;
 Who, passing by, forth ledd her guesstes anone
 Into the kitchin rowme, ne spard for nicenesse none.

It was a vaut ybuilt for great dispence,
 With many raunges reard along the wall,
 And one great chimney, whose long tonnell thenceo
 The smoke forth threw: and in the midst of all
 There placed was a caudron wide and tall
 Upon a mightie fornace, burning whott,
 More whott then Aetn', or flaming Mongiball:
 For day and night it brent, ne ceased not,
 So long as any thing it in the caudron gott.

But to delay the heat, least by mischaunce
 It might breake out and set the whole on fyre,
 There added was by goodly ordinaunce
 An huge great payre of bellowes, which did styro
 Continually, and cooling breath inspyre.
 About the caudron many cookes accoyld
 With hookes and ladles, as need did requyre;
 The whyles the viaundes in the vessell boyld,
 They did about their businesse sweat, and sorely toyld.

The maister cooke was cald Concoction;
 A carefull man, and full of comely guyse:
 The kitchin clerke, that hight Digestion,
 Did order all th' achâtes in seemely wise,
 And set them forth, as well he could devise.
 The rest had severall offices assynd;
 Some to remove the scum as it did rise;
 Others to beare the same away did mynd;
 And others it to use according to his kynd.

But all the liquour, which was fowle and waste,
 Not good nor serviceable elles for ought,
 They in another great rownd vessell plaste,
 Till by a conduit pipe it thence were brought;
 And all the rest, that noyous was and nought,
 By secret wayes, that none might it espy,
 Was close convoid, and to the backgate brought,
 That cleped was Port Esquiline, whereby
 It was avoided quite, and throwne out privily.

Which goodly order and great workmans skill
 Whenas those knights beheld, with rare delight
 And gazing wonder they their mindes did fill;
 For never had they scene so straunge a sight.
 Thence backe againe faire Alma led them right,
 And soone into a goodly parlour brought,
 That was with royall arras richly dight,
 In which was nothing pourtrahed nor wrought;
 Not wrought nor pourtrahed, but easie to be thought:

And in the midst thereof upon the floure
 A lovely bevy of faire ladies sate,
 Courted of many a iolly paramoure,
 The which them did in modest wise amate,
 And each one sought his lady to aggrate:
 And eke emongst them little Cupid playd
 His wanton sportes, being retourned late
 From his fierce warres, and having from him layd
 His cruell bow, wherewith he thousands hath dismayd.

Diverse delights they fownd themselves to please;
 Some song in sweet consórt; some laught for ioy;
 Some plaid with strawes; some ydly satt at ease;
 But others some could not abide to toy,
 All pleasaunce was to them grieve and annoy:
 This frownd; that faund; the third for shame did blush;
 Another seemd envious, or coy;
 Another in her teeth did gnaw a rush:
 But at these straungers presence every one did hush.

Soone as the gracious Alma came in place,
 They all attonce out of their seates arose,
 And to her homage made with humble grace:
 Whom when the knights beheld, they gan dispose
 Themselves to court, and each a damzell chose:
 The prince by chaunce did on a lady light,
 That was right faire and fresh as morning rose,
 But somewhat sad and solemne eke in sight,
 As if some pensive thought constrained her gentle spright.

In a long purple pall, whose skirt with gold
 Was fretted all about, she was arayd;
 And in her hand a poplar braunch did hold:
 To whom the prince in courteous maner sayd;
 "Gentle Madame, why beene ye thus dismayd,
 And your faire beautie doe with sadnes spill?
 Lives any that you hath this ill apayd?
 Or doen you leue, or doen you lack your will?
 Whatever bee the cause, it sure beseemes you ill."

"Fayre sir," said she, halfe in disdaineſul wiſe,
 "How is it that this word in me ye blame,
 And in yourſelfe doe not the ſame adviſe?
 Him ill beſeemes anothers fault to name,
 That may unware be blotted with the ſame:
 Penſive I yeeld I am, and ſad in mind,
 Through great deſire of glory and of fame;
 Ne ought I weene are ye therein behynd, [find."
 That have twelve monthſ ſought one, yet no where can her

The prince was inly moved at her ſpeech,
 Well weeting trew what ſhe had rashiſly told;
 Yet with faire ſemblaunt ſought to hyde the breach,
 Which chaunge of colour did perforce unfold,
 Now ſeeming flaming whott, now ſtony cold:
 Tho, turning ſoft aſide, he did inquire
 What wight ſhe was that poplar braunch did hold:
 It answered was, her name was Prays-deſire,
 That by well doing ſought to honour to aſpyre.

The whiles the Faery knight did entertaine
 Another damſell of that gentle crew,
 That was right fayre and moodeſt of demayne,
 But that too oft ſhe chaung'd her native hew:
 Straunge was her tyre, and all her garment blew,
 Cloſe rownd about her tuckt with many a plight:
 Upon her fiſt the bird which ſhonneth vew,
 And keeps in covertſ cloſe from living wight.
 Did ſitt, as yet aſhamd how rude Pan did her dight.

So long as Guyon with her communed,
 Unto the grownd ſhe caſt her moodeſt eye,
 And ever and anone with roſy red
 The baſhfull blood her ſnowy cheekes did dye,
 That her became as poliſht yvory
 Which cunning craſtesman hand hath overlayd
 With fayre vermillion or pure caſtory.
 Great wonder had the knight to ſee the mayd
 So ſtraungely paſſioned, and to her gently ſaid;

"Fayre damzell, ſeemeth by your troubled cheare,
 That either me too bold ye weene, this wiſe
 You to moleſt, or other ill to feare
 That in the ſecret of your hart cloſe lyes,
 From whence it doth, as cloud from ſea, ariſe:
 If it be I, of pardon I you pray;
 But, if ought elſe that I mote not devyſe,
 I will, if pleaſe you it diſcure, aſſay
 To eaſe you of that ill, ſo wiſely as I may."

She answerd nought, but more abasht for shame
 Held downe her head, the whiles her lovely face
 The flashing blood with blushing did inflame,
 And the strong passion mard her modest grace,
 That Guyon mervayld at her uncouth eace;
 Till Alma him bespake; "Why wonder yee,
 Faire sir, at that which ye so much embrace?
 She is the fountaine of your modestee;
 You shamefast are, but Shamefastnes itselfe is shee."

Thereat the Elfe did blush in privitee,
 And turnd his face away; but she the same
 Dissembled faire, and saynd to overseer.
 Thus they awhile with court and goodly game
 Themselves did solace each one with his dame,
 Till that great lady thence away them sought
 To vew her castles other wondrous frame:
 Up to a stately turret she them brought,
 Ascending by ten steps of alabaster wrought.

That turrets frame most admirable was,
 Like highest heaven compassed around,
 And lifted high above this earthly masse,
 Which it survewd, as hills doen lower ground:
 But not on ground mote like to this be found;
 Not that, which antique Cadmus whylome built
 In Thebes, which Alexander did confound;
 Nor that proud towre of Troy, though richly guilt, [spilt.
 From which young Hector's blood by cruell Greekes was

The rooffe hereof was arched over head,
 And deckt with flowres and herbars daintily;
 Two goodly beacons, set in watches stead,
 Therein gave light, and flamd continually:
 For they of living fire most subtilly
 Were made, and set in silver sockets bright,
 Cover'd with lids deviz'd of substance sly,
 That readily they shut and open might.
 O, who can tell the prayes of that makers might!

Ne can I tell, ne can I stay to tell,
 This parts great workmanship and wondrous powre;
 That all this other worldes worke doth excell,
 And likest is unto that heavenly towre
 That God hath built for his owne blessed bowre.
 Therein were divers rowmes, and divers stages;
 But three the chiefest and of greatest powre,
 In which there dwelt three honorable sages,
 The wisest men, I weene, that lived in their ages.

Not he, whom Greece, the nourse of all good arts,
 By Phœbus doome the wisest thought alive,
 Might be compar'd to these by many parts:
 Nor that sage Pylian syre, which did survive
 Three ages, such as mortall men contrive,
 By whose advise old Priams cittie fell,
 With these in praise of pollicies mote strive.
 These three in these three rowmes did sondry dwell,
 And counselled faire Alma how to governe well.

The first of them could things to come foresee;
 The next could of thinges present best advize;
 The third things past could keep in memoree:
 So that no time nor reason could arize,
 But that the same could one of these comprize.
 Forthy the first did in the forepart sit,
 That nought mote hinder his quicke preiudize;
 He had a sharpe foresight and working wit
 That never idle was, ne once would rest a whit.

His chamber was disappointed all within
 With sondry colours, in the which were writ
 Infinite shapes of thinges dispersed thin;
 Some such as in the world were never yit,
 Ne can devized be of mortall wit;
 Some daily seene and knowen by their names,
 Such as in idle fantasies do slit;
 Infernall hags, centaurs, feendes, hippodames,
 Apes, lions, aegles, owles, fooles, lovers, children, dames.

And all the chamber filled was with flyes
 Which buzzed all about, and made such sound
 That they encombred all mens eares and eyes;
 Like many swarmes of bees assembled round,
 After their hives with honny do abound.
 All those were idle thoughtes and fantasies,
 Devices, dreames, opinions unsound,
 Shewes, visions, sooth-sayes, and prophesies;
 And all that fained is, as leasings, tales, and lies.

Emongst them all sate he which wonned there,
 That hight Phantastes by his nature trew;
 A man of yeares yet fresh, as mote appere,
 Of swarth complexion, and of crabbed hew,
 That him full of melâcholy did shew;
 Bent hollow beetle browes, sharpe staring eyes
 That mad or foolish seemd: one by his vew
 Mote deeme him borne with ill-disposed skyes,
 When oblique Saturne sate in th' house of agones.

Whom Alma having shewed to her guesates,
 Thence brought them to the second rowme, whose wals
 Were painted faire with memorable gestic
 Of famous wisards; and with picturals
 Of magistrates, of courts, of tribunals,
 Of commen wealthes, of states, of pollicy,
 Of lawes, of iudgementes, and of décretals,
 All artes, all science, all philosophy,
 And all that in the world was ay thought wittily.

Of those that rowme was full; and them among
 There sate a man of ripe and perfect age,
 Who did them meditate all his life long,
 That through continuall praotise and uságe
 He now was growne right wise and wondrous sage:
 Great plesure had those straunger knightes to see
 His goodly reason and grave personage,
 That his disciples both desyrd to bee:
 But Alma thence them led to th' hindmost rowme of three.

That chamber seemed ruinous and old,
 And therefore was removed far behind,
 Yet were the wals, that did the same uphold,
 Right firme and strong, though somewhat they declind;
 And therein sat an old old man, halfe blind,
 And all decrepit in his feeble corse,
 Yet lively vigour rested in his mind,
 And recompensd them with a better scorse:
 Weake body well is chang'd for minds redoubled forse.

This man of infinite remembraunce was,
 And things foregone through many ages held,
 Which he recorded still as they did pas,
 Ne suffred them to perish through long eld,
 As all things els the which this world doth weld;
 But laid them up in his immortall scrine,
 Where they for ever incorrupted dweld:
 The warres he well remembered of king Nine,
 Of old Assaracus, and Inachus divine.

The yeares of Nestor nothing were to his,
 Ne yet Mathusalem, though longest liv'd;
 For he remembered both their infancis:
 Ne wonder then if that he were depriv'd
 Of native strength now that he them surviv'd.
 His chamber all was hangd about with rolls
 And old recórd's from auncient times derivd,
 Some made in books, some in long parchment scrolls,
 That were all worm-eaten and full of canker holes.

Amidst them all he in a chaire was sett,
 Tossing and turning them withouten end;
 But for he was unhable them to fett,
 A little boy did on him still attend
 To reach, whenever he for ought did send;
 And oft when thinges were lost, or laid amis,
 That boy them sought and unto him did lend:
 Therefore he Anamnestes cleped is;
 And that old man Eumnestes, by their propertis.

The knightes there entring did him reverence dew,
 And wondred at his endlesse exercise.
 Then as they gan his library to vew,
 And antique regesters for to avise,
 There chaunced to the princes hand to rize
 An auncient booke, hight Briton Moniments,
 That of this lands first conquest did devise,
 And old division into regiments,
 Till it reduced was to one mans governements.

Sir Guyon chaunst eke on another booke,
 That hight Antiquitee of Faery Lond:
 In which whenas he greedily did looke,
 Th' ofspring of Elves and Faryes there he fond,
 As it delivered was from hond to hond:
 Whereat they, burning both with fervent fire
 Their countreys auncestry to understand,
 Crav'd leave of Alma and that aged sire
 To read those bookes; who gladly graunted their desire.

CANTO X.

A chronicle of Briton kings,
 From Brute to Uthers rayne;
 And rolls of Elfin emperours,
 Till time of Gloriane.

Who now shall give unto me words and sound
 Equall unto this haughty enterprise?
 Or who shall lend me wings, with which from ground
 My lowly verse may loftily arise,
 And lift itselfe unto the highest skyes?
 More ample spirit than hetherto was wount
 Here needes me, whiles the famous auncestries
 Of my most dreaded soveraigne I recount,
 By which all earthly princes she doth far surmount.

Ne under sunne that shines so wide and faire,
 Whence all that lives does borrow life and light,
 Lives ought that to her linage may compaire;
 Which though from earth it be derived right,
 Yet doth it selfe stretch forth to heavens hight,
 And all the world with wonder overspred;
 A labor huge, exceeding far my might!
 How shall fraile pen, with fear disparaged,
 Conceive such souveraine glory and great bountyhed!

Argument worthy of Mæonian quill;
 Or rather worthy of great Phoebus rote,
 Whereon the ruines of great Ossa hill,
 And triumphes of Phlegrean Iove, he wrote,
 That all the gods admird his lofty note.
 But, if some relish of that heavenly lay
 His learned daughters would to me report
 To deeke my song withall, I would assay
 Thy name, O souveraine Queene, to blazon far away.

Thy name, O souveraine Queene, thy realm, and race,
 From this renowned prince derived arre,
 Who mightily upheld that royall mace
 Which now thou bear'st, to thee descended farre
 From mighty kings and conquerours in warre,
 Thy fathers and great grandfathers of old,
 Whose noble deeds above the northern starre
 Immortall Fame for ever hath enrold;
 As in that old mans booke they were in order told.

The land which warlike Britons now possesse,
 And therein have their mighty empire raysd,
 In antique times was salvage wilderness,
 Unpeopled, unmannurd, unprovd, unpraysd;
 Ne was it island then, ne was it payzd
 Amid the ocean waves, ne was it sought
 Of merchants farre for profits therein prayzd;
 But was all desolate, and of some thought
 By sea to have bene from the Celticke mayn-land brought.

Ne did it then deserve a name to have,
 Till that the venturous mariner that way
 Learning his ship from those white rocks to save,
 Which all along the southerne sea-coast lay
 Threatning unheedy wrecke and rash decay,
 For saftety that same his sea-marke made.
 And nam'd it ALBION: but later day,
 Finding in it fit ports for fishers trade,
 Gan more the same frequent, and further to invade.

But far in land a salvage nation dwelt
 Of hideous giaunts, and halfe-beastly men,
 That never tasted grace, nor goodnes felt;
 But wild like beastes lurking in loathsome den,
 And flying fast as roebucke through the fen,
 All naked without shame or care of cold,
 By hunting and by spoiling livened;
 Of stature huge, and eke of corage bold,
 That sonnes of men amazd their sternesse to behold.

But whence they sprong, or how they were begott,
 Uneath is to assure; uneath to wene
 That monstrous error which doth some assott,
 That Dioclesians fifty daughters shene
 Into this land by chaunce have driven bene;
 Where, companing with feends and filthy sprights
 Through vaine illusion of their lust unelene,
 They brought forth geaunts, and such dreadful wights
 As far exceeded men in their immeasurd mights.

They held this land, and with their filthinesse
 Polluted this same gentle soyle long time;
 That their owne mother loathd their beastlinesse,
 And gan abhorre her broods unkindly crime.
 All were they borne of her owne native slime:
 Until that Brutus, anciently deriv'd
 From roiall stocke of old Assaracs line,
 Driven by fatall error here arriv'd,
 And them of their unjust possession depriv'd.

But ere he had established his throne,
 And spred his empire to the utmost shore,
 He fought great batteils with his salvage fone;
 In which he them defeated evermore,
 And many giaunts left on groning flore:
 That well can witness yet unto this day
 The westernne Hogh, besprincled with the gore
 Of mighty Goëmot, whome in stout fray
 Corineus conquered, and cruelly did slay.

And eke that ample pitt, yet far renownd
 For the large leape which Debon did compell
 Coulin to make, being eight lugs of grownd,
 Into the which retourning backe he fell:
 But those three monstrous stones doe most excell
 Which that huge sonne of hideous Albion,
 Whose father Hercules in Fraunce did quell,
 Great Godmer threw, in fierce contention,
 At bold Canutus; but of him was slaine anon.

In meed of these great conquests by them gott,
 Corineus had that province utmost west
 To him assigned for his worthy lott,
 Which of his name and memorable gest
 He called Cornwaile, yet so called best:
 And Debons shayre was, that is Devonshyre:
 But Canute had his portion from the rest,
 The which he cald Canutium, for his hyre;
 Now Cantium, which Kent we comenly inquiryre.

Thus Brute this realme unto his rule subdewd,
 And raigned long in great felicity,
 Lov'd of his freends, and of his foes eschewd:
 He left three sonnes, his famous progeny,
 Borne of fayre Inogene of Italy;
 Mongst whom he parted his imperiall state,
 And Loerine left chiefe lord of Britany.
 At last ripe age bad him surrender late
 His life, and long good fortune, unto finall fate.

Loerine was left the souveraine lord of all;
 But Albanact had all the northerne part,
 Which of himselfe Albania he did call;
 And Camber did possesse the westerne quart,
 Which Severne now from Logris doth depart:
 And each his portion peaceably enioyd,
 Ne was there outward breach, nor grudge in hart,
 That once their quiet government annoyd;
 But each his paynes to others profit still employd.

Untill a nation straung, with visage swart
 And corage fierce that all men did affray,
 Which through the world then swarmd in every part,
 And overflowd all countries far away,
 Like Noyes great flood, with their importune sway,
 This land invaded with like violence,
 And did themselves through all the north display:
 Untill that Loerine for his realmes defence,
 Did head against them make and strong munificence.

He them encountred, in confused rout,
 Foreby the river that whylome was hight
 The ancient Abus, where with courage stout
 He them defeated in victorious fight,
 And chaste so fiercely after fearefull flight,
 That forst their chiefetain, for his safeties sako,
 (Their chiefetain Humber named was aright,)
 Unto the mighty streame him to betake,
 Where he an end of batteill and of life did make.

The king retourned proud of victory,
 And insolent wox through unwonted ease,
 That shortly he forgot the ieopardy,
 Which in his land he lately did appease,
 And fell to vaine voluptuous disease:
 He lov'd faire Ladie Estrild, leudly lov'd,
 Whose wanton pleasures him too much did please,
 That quite his hart from Guendolene remov'd,
 From Guendolene his wife, though alwaies faithful prov'd.

The noble daughter of Corinëus
 Would not endure to bee so vile disdaind,
 But, gathering force and corage valorous,
 Encountred him in batteill well ordaind,
 In which him vanquisht she to fly constraind:
 But she so fast pursewd, that him she tooke
 And threw in bands, where he till death remaind:
 Als his faire leman flying through a brooke
 She overhent, nought moved with her piteous lookc.

But both herselfe, and eke her daughter deare
 Begotten by her kingly paramoure,
 The faire Sabrina, almost dead with feare,
 She there attached, far from all succoure:
 The one she slew in that impatient stoure;
 But the sad virgin innocent of all,
 Adowne the rolling river she did poure,
 Which of her name now Severne men do call:
 Such was the end that to disloyall love did fall.

Then for her sonne, which she to Locrin bore,
 (Madan was young, unmeet the rule to sway,)
 In her owne hand the crowne she kept in store,
 Till ryper years he raught and stronger stay:
 During which time her powre she did display
 Through all this realme, the glory of her sex,
 And first taught men a woman to obay:
 But, when her sonne to mans estate did wex,
 She it surrendred, ne her selfe would lenger vex.

The Madan raignd, unworthie of his race;
 For with all shame that sacred throne he fild.
 Next Memprise, as unworthy of that place,
 In which being consorted with Manild,
 For thirst of single kingdom him he kild.
 But Ebranck salved both their infamies
 With noble deedes, and warreyd on Brunchild
 In Henault, where yet of his victories
 Brave monuments remaine, which yet that land envies.

An happy man in his first dayes he was,
 And happy father of faire progeny :
 For all so many weekes, as the yeare has,
 So many children he did multiply ;
 Of which were twentie sonnes, which did apply
 Their mindes to prayse and chevalrous desyre :
 Those germans did subdew all Germany,
 Of whom it hight ; but in the end their syre
 With foule repulse from Fraunce was forced to retyre.

Which blott his sonne succeeding in his seat,
 The second Brute, the second both in name
 And eke in semblaunce of his puissaunce great,
 Right well recur'd, and did away that blamo
 With recompence of everlasting fame :
 He with his victour sword first opened
 The bowels of wide Fraunce, a forlorne dame,
 And taught her first how to be conquered ;
 Since which, with sondrie spoiles she hath been ransacked.

Let Scaldis tell, and let tell Hania,
 And let the marsh of Esthambruges tell,
 What colour were their waters that same day,
 And all the moore twixt Elversham and Dell,
 With blood of Henalois which therein fell.
 How oft that day did sad Brunchildis see
 The greene shield dyde in dolorous vermell ?
 That not scuith quiridh it mote seeme to bee,
 But rather y scuith gogh, signe of sad crueltee.

His sonne king Leill, by fathers labour long,
 Enioyd an heritage of lasting peace,
 And built Cairleill, and built Cairleon strong.
 Next Huddibras his realme did not encrease,
 But taught the land from wearie wars to cease.
 Whose footsteps Bladud following, in artes
 Excelld at Athens all the learned preace,
 From whence he brought them to these salvage parts,
 And with sweet science mollifide their stubborne harts.

Ensample of his wondrous faculty,
 Behold the boyling baths at Cairdabon,
 Which seeth with secret fire eternally,
 And in their entrailles, full of quick brimstón,
 Nourish the flames which they are warmd upon,
 That to their people wealth they forth do well,
 And health to every forreyne nation :
 Yet he at last, contending to excell
 The reach of men, through flight into fond chieff fell.

Next him king Leyr in happie peace long raynd,
 But had no issue male him to succeed,
 But three faire daughters, which were well uptraind
 In all that seemed fitt for kingly seed;
 Mongst whom his realme he equally decreed
 To have divided: tho, when feeble age
 Nigh to his utmost date he saw proceed,
 He cald his daughters, and with speeches sage
 Inquyrd, which of them most did love her parentage.

The eldest Gonorill gan to protest,
 That she much more than her owne life him lov'd;
 And Regan greater love to him profest
 Then all the world, whenever it were proof'd;
 But Cordeill said she loved him as behoov'd:
 Whose simple answer, wanting colours fayre
 To paint it forth, him to displeasaunce moov'd,
 That in his crown he counted her no hayre,
 But twixt the other twain his kingdom whole did shayre.

So wedded th' one to Maglan king of Scottes,
 And th' other to the king of Cambria,
 And twixt them shayrd his realme by equall lottes;
 But, without dowre, the wise Cordelia
 Was sent to Aganip of Celtica:
 Their aged syre, thus eased of his crowne,
 A private life ledd in Albania
 With Gonorill, long had in great renowne,
 That nought him griev'd to beene from rule deposed downe.

But true it is that, when the oyle is spent,
 The light goes out, and weeke is throwne away;
 So, when he had resign'd his regiment,
 His daughter gan despise his drouping day,
 And wearie wax of his continuall stay;
 Tho to his daughter Regan he repayrd,
 Who him at first well used every way;
 But, when of his departure she despayrd,
 Her bountie she abated, and his cheare empayrd.

The wretched man gan then avise too late,
 That love is not where most it is profest;
 Too truely tryde in his extremest state!
 At last, resolv'd likewise to prove the rest,
 He to Cordelia himselfe addrest,
 Who with entyre affection him receav'd,
 As for her syre and king her seemed best;
 And after all an army strong she leav'd,
 To war on those which him had of his realme bereav'd.

So to his crowne she him restord againe;
 In which he dyde, made ripe for death by eld,
 And after wild it should to her remaine:
 Who peaceably the same long time did weld,
 And all mens harts in dew obedience held;
 Till that her sisters children, woxen strong,
 Through proud ambition against her rebeld,
 And overcommen kept in prison long.
 Till weary of that wretched life herselfe sho hong.

Then gan the bloody brethren both to raine:
 But fierce Cundah gan shortly to envy
 His brother Morgan, prikt with proud disdaine
 To have a pere in part of soverainty;
 And, kindling coles of cruell enmity,
 Raisd warre, and him in batteill overthrew:
 Whence as he to those woody hilles did fly,
 Which hight of him Glamorgan, there him slew:
 Then did he raigne alone, when he none equal knew.

His sonne Rivall' his dead rowme did supply;
 In whose sad time blood did from heaven rayne.
 Next great Gurgustus, then faire Cæcily,
 In constant peace their kingdomes did contayne,
 After whom Lago and Kinmarke did rayne,
 And Gorbogud, till far in years he grew:
 Then his ambitious sonnes unto them twayne
 Arraught the rule, and from their fater drew;
 Stout Ferrex and sterne Porrex him in prison threw.

But O! the greedy thirst of royall crowne,
 That knowes no kinred, nor regards no right,
 Stird Porrex up to put his brother downe;
 Who, unto him assembling forreigne might,
 Made warre on him, and fell himselfe in sight:
 Whose death t' avenge, his mother mercilesse,
 Most mercilesse of women, Wyden hight,
 Her other sonne last sleeping did oppresse,
 And with most cruell hand him murdred pittilesse.

Here ended Brutus sacred progeny.
 Which had seven hundred years this sceptre borne
 With high renowme and great felicity:
 The noble braunch from th' antique stocke was torne
 Through discord, and the roiall throne forlorne.
 Thenceforth this realme was into factions rent,
 Whilest each of Brutus boasted to be borne,
 That in the end was left no monument
 Of Brutus, nor of Britons glorie auncient.

Then up arose a man of matchlesse might,
 And wondrous wit to menage high affayres,
 Who, stird with pittie of the stressed plight
 Of this sad realme, cut into sondry shayres
 By such as claynd themselves Brutes rightfull hayres,
 Gathered the princes of the people loose
 To taken counsell of their common cares;
 Who, with his wisdom won, him streight did choose
 Their king, and swore him fealty to win or loose.

Then made he head against his enimes,
 And Ymner slew of Logris miscreate;
 Then Ruddoc and proud Stater, both allies,
 This of Albány newly nominate,
 And that of Cambry king confirmed late,
 He overthrew through his owne valiaunce;
 He overthrew through his owne valiaunce;
 Whose countries he redus'd to quiet state,
 And shortly brought to civile governaunce,
 Now one, which earst were many made through variaunce.

Then made he sacred lawes, which some men say
 Were unto him reveald in vision;
 By which he freed the travelers high-way,
 The churches part, and ploughmans portion,
 Restraining stealth and strong extortion;
 The gracious Numa of great Britany:
 For, till his dayes, the chiefe dominion
 By strength was wielded without pollicy:
 Therefore he first wore crowne of gold for dignity.

Donwallo dyde, (for what may live for ay?)
 And left two sonnes, of pearelesse prowess<sup>e</sup> both,
 That sacked Rome too dearely did assay,
 The recompence of their periured oth;
 And ransackt Greece wel tryde, when they were wroth,
 Besides subiected France and Germany,
 Which yet their praises speake, all be they loth,
 And inly tremble at the memory
 Of Brennus and Belinus, kinges of Britany.

Next them did Gurgunt, great Belinus sonne,
 In rule succeede, and eke in fathers praise;
 He Easterland subdewd, and Denmarke wonne,
 And of them both did foy and tribute raise,
 The which was dew in his dead fathers daies:
 He also gave to fugitives of Spayne,
 Whom he at sea found wandring from their waies,
 A seate in Ireland safely to remayne,
 Which they should hold of him as subiect to Britayne.

After him raigned Guitheline his hayre,
 The iustest man and trewest in his daies,
 Who had to wife Dame Mertia the fayre,
 A woman worthy of immortall praise,
 Which for this realme found many goodly layes,
 And wholesome statutes to her husband brought:
 Her many deemd to have beene of the Fayes,
 As was Aegeriô that Numa tought:
 Those yet of her be Mertian lawes both nam'd and thought.

Her sonne Sifillius after her did rayne;
 And then Kimarus; and then Danius:
 Next whom Morindus did the crowne sustayne;
 Who, had he not with wrath outrageous
 And cruell rancour dim'd his valorous
 And mightie deedes, should matched have the best
 As well in that same field victorious
 Against the forreine Morands he exprest;
 Yet lives his memorie, though carcase sleepe in rest.

Five sonnes he left begotten of one wife,
 All which successively by turnes did rayne:
 First Gorboman, a man of virtuous life;
 Next Archigald, who for his proud disdayne
 Deposed was from princeedome soverayne,
 And pitteous Elidure put in his sted;
 Who shortly it to him restord agayne,
 Till by his death he it recovered;
 But Peridure and Vigent him disthronized:

In wretched prison long he did remaine,
 Till they out-raigned had their utmost date,
 And then therein reseized was againe,
 And ruled long with honorable state,
 Till he surrendred realme and life to fate.
 Then all the sonnes of these five brethren raynd
 By dew successe, and all their nephewes late;
 Even thrise eleven descents the crowne retaynd,
 Till aged Hely by dew heritage it gaynd.

He had two sonnes, whose eldest, called Lud,
 Left of his life most famous memory,
 And endlesse monuments of his great good:
 The ruin'd wals he did reädifye
 Of Troynovant, gainst force of enemy,
 And built that gate which of his name is hight,
 By which he lyes entombed solemnly:
 He left two sonnes, too young to rule aright,
 Androgeus and Tenantius, pictures of his might.

Whilst they were young, Cassiballane their eme
 Was by the people chosen in their sted,
 Who on him tooke the roiall diademe,
 And goodly well long time it governed;
 Till the prowde Romanes him disquieted,
 And warlike Cæsar, tempted with the name
 Of this sweet island never conquered,
 And envying the Britons blazed fame,
 (O hideous hunger of dominion!) hether came.

Yet twise they were repulsed backe againe,
 And twise renfort backe to their ships to fly;
 The whiles with blood they all the shore did staine,
 And the gray ocean into purple dy:
 Ne had they footing found at last perdie,
 Had not Androgeus, false to native soyle,
 And envious of uncles soveraintie,
 Betrayd his country unto forreine spoyle.
 Nought els but treason from the first this land did foyle!

So by him Cæsar got the victory,
 Through great bloodshed and many a sad assay,
 In which himselfe was charged heavily
 Of hardy Nennius, whom he yet did slay,
 But lost his sword, yet to be seene this day.
 Thenceforth this land was tributarie made
 T' ambitious Rome, and did their rule obay,
 Till Arthur all that reckoning defrayd:
 Yet oft the Briton kings against them strongly swayd.

Next him Tenantius raignd; then Kimbeline,
 What time th' Eternall Lord in fleshly slime
 Enwombed was, from wretched Adams line
 To purge away the guilt of sinful crime.
 O ioyous memorie of happy time.
 That heavenly grace so plenteously displayd!
 O too high ditty for my simple rime!—
 Soone after this the Romanes him warrayd;
 For that their tribute he refusd to let be payd.

Good Claudius, that next was emperour,
 An army brought, and with him batteile fought,
 In which the king was by a treachetour
 Disguised slaine, ere any thereof thought:
 Yet ceased not the bloody fight for ought:
 For Arvirage his brothers place supplyde
 Both in his armes and crowne, and by that draught
 Did drive the Romanes to the weaker syde,
 That they to peace agreed. So all was pacifyde.

Was never king more highly magnifide,
 Nor dredd of Romanes, then was Arrirage:
 For which the emperour to him allide
 His daughter Genuiss' in marriage:
 Yet shortly he renounst the vassallage
 Of Rome againe, who hether hastily sent
 Vespasian, that with great spoile and rage
 Forwasted all, till Genuissa gent
 Persuaded him to ceasse, and her lord to relent.

He dide; and him succeeded Marius,
 Who ioyd his dayes in great tranquillity.
 Then Coyll; and after him good Lucius,
 That first received Christianity,
 The sacred pledge of Christes Evangely,
 Yet true it is, that long before that day
 Hither came Ioseph of Arimathy,
 Who brought with him the Holy Grayle, (they say,)
 And preacht the truth; but since it greatly did decay.

This good king shortly without issew dide,
 Whereof great trouble in the kingdome grew,
 That did herselfe in sondry parts divide,
 And with her powre her owne selfe overthrew,
 Whilest Romanes daily did the weake subdew:
 Which seeing, stout Bunduca up arose,
 And taking armes the Britons to her drew;
 With whom she marched straight against her foes,
 And them unwares besides the Severne did enclose.

There she with them a cruell batteill tryde,
 Not with so good successe as shee deserv'd;
 By reason that the captaines on her syde,
 Corrupted by Paulinus, from her swerv'd:
 Yet such, as were through former flight preserv'd,
 Gathering againe, her host she did renew,
 And with fresh corage on the victor serv'd:
 But being all defeated, save a few,
 Rather than fly, or be captiv'd, herselfe she slew.

O famous moniment of womens prayse!
 Matchable either to Semiramis,
 Whom antique history so high doth rayse,
 Or to Hypsiphil', or to Thomiris:
 Her host two hundred thousand numbred is,
 Who, whiles good fortune favoured her might,
 Triumphed oft against her enemies;
 And yet, though overcome in haplesse fight,
 Shee triumphed on death, in enemies despight.

Her reliques Fulgent having gathered,
 Fought with Severus, and him overthrew;
 Yet in the chace was slaine of them that fled:
 So made them victors whome he did subdew.
 Then gan Carausius tirannize anew,
 And gainst the Romanes bent their proper powre;
 But him Allectus treacherously slew,
 And tooke on him the robe of emperoure;
 Nath'lesse the same enioyed but short happy howre.

For Asclepiodate him overcame,
 And left inglorious on the vanquisht playne,
 Without or robe or rag to hide his shame:
 Then afterwards he in his stead did raigne;
 But shortly was by Coyll in batteill slaine:
 Who after long debate, since Lucies tyme,
 Was of the Britons first crownd souveraine:
 Then gan this realme renew her passed prime:
 He of his name Coylchester built of stone and lime.

Which when the Romanes heard, they hether sent
 Constantius, a man of mickle might,
 With whome king Coyll made an agreëment,
 And to him gave for wife his daughter bright,
 Faire Helena, the fairest living wight,
 Who in all godly thewes and goodly praise
 Did far excell, but was most famous hight
 For skil in musicke of all in her daies,
 As well in curious instruments as cunning laics:

Of whome he did great Constantine begett,
 Who afterward was emperour of Rome;
 To which whiles absent he his mind did sett,
 Octavius here lept into his roome,
 And it usurped by unrighteous doome:
 But he his title iustifide by might,
 Slaying Traherne, and having overcome
 The Romane legion in dreadfull fight:
 So settled he his kingdome, and confirmd his right:

But, wanting yssew male, his daughter deare
 He gave in wedlocke to Maximian,
 And him with her made of his kingdome heyrc,
 Who soone by meanes thereof the empire wan,
 Till murdered by the freends of Gratian.
 Then gan the Hunnes and Picts invade this land,
 During the raigne of Maximinian;
 Who dying left none heire them to withstand:
 But that they overran all parts with easy hand.

The weary Britons, whose war-hable youth
 Was by Maximian lately ledd away,
 With wretched miseries and woefull ruth
 Were to those pagans made an open pray,
 And daily spectacle of sad decay:
 Whome Romane warres, which now fowr hundred yeares
 And more had wasted could no whit dismay;
 Til, by consent of Commons and of Peares,
 They crownd the second Constantine with ioyous teares.

Who having oft in batteill vanquished
 Those spoylefull Picts, and swarming Easterlings,
 Long time in peace his realme established,
 Yet oft annoyd with sondry bordragings
 Of neighbour Scots, and forrein scatterlings
 With which the world did in those dayes abound,
 Which to outbarre, with painefull pyonings
 From sea to sea he heapt a mighty mound,
 Which from Alcluid to Panwelt did that border bownd.

Three sonnes he dying left, all under age;
 By meanes whereof their uncle Vortigere
 Usurpt the crowne during their pupillage;
 Which th' infants tutors gathering to feare,
 Them closely into Armorick did beare:
 For dread of whom, and for those Picts annoyes,
 He sent to Germany straunge aid to reare;
 From whence eftsoones arrived here three hoyes
 Of Saxons, whom he for his safety imployes.

Two brethren were their capitayns, which hight
 Hengist and Horsus, well approv'd in warre,
 And both of them men of renown'd might;
 Who making vantage of their civile iarre,
 And of those forreyners which came from farre.
 Grew great, and got large portions of land,
 That in the realme ere long they stronger arre
 Then they which sought at first their helping hand,
 And Vortiger enforst the kingdome to aband.

But, by the helpe of Vortimere his sonne,
 He is againe unto his rule restord;
 And Hengist, seeming sad for that was donne,
 Received is to grace and new accord,
 Through his faire daughters face and flattering word:
 Soone after which, three hundred lords he slew
 Of British blood, all sitting at his bord;
 Whose dolefull monuments who list to rew,
 Th' eternall marks of treason may at Stonheng vew.

By this the sonnes of Constantine, which fled,
 Ambrose and Uther, did ripe yeares attayne,
 And, here arriving, strongly challenged
 The crowne which Vortiger did long detainne:
 Who, flying from his guilt, by them was slayne;
 And Hengist eke soone brought to shamefull death.
 Thenceforth Aurelius peaceably did rayne,
 Till that through poyson stopped was his breath;
 So now entombd lies at Stoneheng by the heath.

After him Uther, which Pendragon hight,
 Succeeding—There abruptly it did end,
 Without full point, or other cesure right;
 As if the rest some wicked hand did rend,
 Or th' author selfe could not at least attend
 To finish it: that so untimely breach
 The prince himselfe halfe seemed to offend;
 Yet secret pleasure did offence empeach,
 And wonder of antiquity long stopt his speach.

At last, quite ravisht with delight to heare
 The royall offspring of his native land,
 Cryde out; "Deare countrey! O how dearely deare
 Ought thy remembraunce and perpetuall band
 Be to thy foster child, that from thy hand
 Did commun breath and nouriture receave!
 How brutish is it not to understand
 How much to her we owe, that all us gave;
 That gave unto us all whatever good we have!"

But Guyon all this while his booke did read,
 Ne yet has ended: for it was a great
 And ample volume, that doth far exceed
 My leasure so long leaves here to repeat:
 It told how first Prometheus did create
 A man, of many parts from beasts deryv'd,
 And then stole fire from heven to animate
 His worke, for which he was by Iove depryv'd
 Of life himselfe, and hart-strings of an aegle ryv'd.

That man so made he called Elfe, to weet
 Quick, the first author of all Elfin kynd;
 Who, wandring through the world with wearie feet,
 Did in the gardins of Adonis fynd
 A goodly creature, whom he deemd in mynd
 To be no earthly wight, but either spright,
 Or angell, th' authour of all woman kynd;
 Therefore a Fay he her according hight,
 Of whom all Faryes spring, and fetch their lignage right.

Of these a mighty people shortly grew,
 And puissant kinges, which all the world warrayd,
 And to themselves all nations did subdew:
 The first and eldest, which that scepter swayd,
 Was Elfin; him all India obeyd,
 And all that now America men call:
 Next him was noble Elfinan, who laid
 Cleopolis foundation first of all:
 But Elfiline enclosed it with a golden wall.

His sonne was Elfinell, who overcame
 The wicked Gobbelines in bloody field:
 But Elfant was of most renowned fame,
 Who all of christall did Panthea build:
 Then Elfar, who two brethren gyauntes kild,
 The one of which had two heades, th' other three:
 Then Elfinor, who was in magick skild;
 He built by art upon the glassy see
 A bridge of bras, whose sound hevrens thunder seem'd to be.

He left three sonnes, the which in order raynd,
 And all their offspring, in their dew descents;
 Even seven hundred princes, which maintaynd
 With mightie deedes their sondry governments;
 That were too long their infinite contents
 Here to record, ne much materiall:
 Yet should they be most famous moniments,
 And brave ensample, both of martiall
 And civil rule, to kinges and states imperiall.

After all these Elfcleos did rayne,
 The wise Elfcleos in great maiestie,
 Who mightily that scepter did sustayne,
 And with rich spoyles and famous victorie
 Did high advaunce the crowne of Faëry:
 He left two sonnes, of which faire Elferon,
 The eldest brother did untimely dy;
 Whose emptie place the mightie Oberon
 Doubly supplide, in spousall and dominion.

Great was his power and glorie over all
 Which, him before, that sacred seate did fill
 That yet remains his wide memoriall:
 He dying left the fairest Tanaquill,
 Him to succede therein, by his last will:
 Fairer and nobler liveth none this howre,
 Ne like in grace, ne like in learned skill;
 Therefore they Glorian call that glorious flowre:
 Long mayst thou, Glorian, live in glory and great powre!

Beguyld thus with delight of novelties,
 And naturall desire of countryes state,
 So long they redd in those antiquities,
 That how the time was fled they quite forgate;
 Till gentle Alma, seeing it so late,
 Perforce their studies broke, and them besought
 To thinke how supper did them long awaite:
 So halfe unwilling from their bookes them brought,
 And fayrely feasted, as so noble knightes she ought.

CANTO XI.

*The enimies of Temperaunce
 Besiege her dwelling place;
 Prince Arthure them repelles, and fowle
 Maleger doth deface.*

• WHAT warre so cruel, or what siege so sore,
 As that which strong Affections doe apply
 Against the forte of Reason evermore,
 To bring the sowle into captivity!
 Their force is fiercer through infirmity
 Of the fraile flesh, relenting to their rage;
 And exercise most bitter tyranny
 Upon the partes, brought into their bondáge:
 No wretchednesse is like to sinfull vellenage.

But in a body which doth freely yeeld
 His partes to Reasons rule obedient,
 And letteth her that ought the scepter weeld,
 All happy peace and goodly government
 Is settled there in sure establishment.
 There Alma, like a Virgin Queene most bright,
 Doth florish in all beautie excellent;
 And to her gwestes doth bounteous banket dight,
 Attempted goodly well for health and for delight.

Early, before the morne with cremosin ray
 The windowes of bright heaven opened had,
 Through which into the world the dawning day
 Might looke, that maketh every creature glad,
 Uprose Sir Guyon in bright armour clad,
 And to his purposd iourney him prepar'd:
 With him the palmer eke in habit sad
 Himselfe address to that adventure hard:
 So to the rivers syde they both together far'd:

Where them awaited ready at the ford
 The Ferriman, as Alma had behight,
 With his well-rigged bote : they goe aboard,
 And he eftsoones gan launch his barke forthright.
 Ere long they rowed were quite out of sight,
 And fast the land behynd them fled away.
 But let them pas, whiles winde and wether right
 Doe serve their turnes : here I a while must stay,
 To see a cruell fight doen by the Prince this day.

For, all so soone as Guyon thence was gon
 Upon his voyage with his trustie guyde,
 That wicked band of villeins fresh begon
 That castle to assaile on every side,
 And lay strong siege about it far and wyde.
 So huge and infinite their numbers were,
 That all the land they under them did hyde ;
 So fowle and ugly, that exceeding feare
 Their visages imprest, when they approached neare.

Them in twelve troupes their captein did dispart,
 And round about in fittest steades did place,
 Where each might best offend his proper part,
 And his contráry obiect most deface,
 As every one seem'd meetest in that cace.
 Seven of the name against the castle-gate
 In strong entrenchments he did closely place,
 Which with incessaunt force and endlesse hate
 They battred day and night, and entraunce did awate.

The other five, five sondry wayes he sett
 Against the five great bulwarkes of that pyle,
 And unto each a bulwarke did arrett,
 T' assaile with open force or hidden guyle,
 In hope thereof to win victorious spoile.
 They all that charge did fervently apply
 With greedie malice and importune toyle,
 And planted there their huge artillery,
 With which they dayly made most dreadfull battery.

The first troupe was a monstrous rablement
 Of fowle misshapen wightes, of which some were
 Headed like owles, with beekes uncomely bent ;
 Others like dogs ; others like gryphons dreare ;
 And some had wings, and some had clawes to teare :
 And every one of them had lynces eyes ;
 And every one did bow and arrowes beare :
 All those were lawless Lustes, and corrupt Envyces,
 And covetous Aspécts, all cruel enimyces.

Those same against the bulwarke of the Sight
 Did lay strong siege and battailous assault,
 Ne once did yield it respitt day nor night;
 But soone as Titan gan his head exault,
 And soone againe as he his light withhault,
 Their wicked engins they against it bent;
 That is, each thing by which the eyes may fault:
 But two then all more huge and violent,
 Beautie and Money, they that bulwarke sorely rent.

The second bulwarke was the Hearing Sence,
 Gainst which the second troupe dessignment makes,
 Deformed creatures, in straunge difference:
 Some having heads like harts, some like to snakes,
 Some like wild bores late rouzd out of the brakes:
 Slaunderous Reproches, and fowle Infamies,
 Leasinges, Backbytinges, and vain-glorious Crakes,
 Bad Counsels, Prayses, and false Flatteries:
 All those against that fort did bend their batteries.

Likewise that same third fort, that is the Smell,
 Of that third troupe was cruelly assayd;
 Whose hideous shapes were like to feedes of hell,
 Some like to houndes, some like to apes, dismayd;
 Some like to puttockes, all in plumes arayd;
 All shap't according their conditions:
 For, by those ugly formes, weren pourtrayd
 Foolish Delights and fond Abusions,
 Which doe that sence besiege with fond illusions.

And that fourth band which cruell battry bent
 Against the fourth bulwarke, that is the Taste,
 Was as the rest, a grysie rablement;
 Some mouth'd like greedy oystreges; some faste
 Like loathly toades; some fashioned in the waste
 Like swine: for so deformd is Luxury,
 Surfeat. Misdiet, and unthriftie Waste,
 Vaine Feastes, and ydle Superfluity:
 All those this sences fort assayle incessantly.

But the fift troupe, most horrible of hew
 And ferce of force, is dreadfull to report;
 For some like snailes, some did like spyders shew,
 And some like ugly urchins thick and short:
 Cruelly they assayled that fift fort,
 Armed with dartes of sensuall Delight,
 With stinges of carnall Lust, and strong effort
 Of feeling Pleasures, with which day and night
 Against that same fift Bulwarke they continued fight.

Thus these twelve troupes with dreadfull puissance
 Against that castle restlesse siege did lay,
 And evermore their hideous ordinaunce
 Upon the bulwarkes cruelly did play,
 That now it gan to threaten neare decay:
 And evermore their wicked capitayn
 Provoked them the breaches to assay,
 Sometimes with threats, sometimes with hope of gay,
 Which by the ransack of that peece they should attayn.

On th' other syde, th' assieged castles ward
 Their steadfast stonds did mightily maintaine,
 And many bold repulse, and many hard
 Atchievement wrought, with perill and with payne,
 That goodly frame from ruine to sustaine:
 And those two brethren gyauntes did defend
 The walles so stoutly with their sturdie mayne,
 That never entraunce any durst pretend,
 But they to direfull death their groning ghosts did send.

The noble virgin, ladie of the place,
 Was much dismayed with that dreadful sight,
 (For never was she in so evill case.)
 Till that the prince, seeing her wofull plight,
 Gan her recomfort from so sad affright,
 Offring his service and his dearest life
 For her defence against that earle to fight,
 Which was their chiefe and th' author of that strife:
 She him remerciéd as the patrone of her life.

Eftsoones himselfe in glitterand armes he dight,
 And his well proved weapons to him hent;
 So taking courteous congé, he behight
 Those gates to be unbar'd, and forth he went.
 Farye mote he thee, the prowest and most gent,
 That ever brandished bright steele on hye!
 Whom soone as that unruly rablement
 With his gay squire issewing did espye,
 They reard a most outrageous dreadfull yelling cry:

And therewithall attonce at him let fly
 Their fluttring arrowes, thicke as flakes of snow,
 And round about him flocke impetuously,
 Like a great water-flood, that tomling low
 From the high mountaines, threatens to overflow
 With suddein fury all the fertile playne,
 And the sad husbandmans long hope doth throw
 Adowne the streame, and all his vowes make vayne:
 Nor bounds nor banks his headlong ruine may sustayne.

Upon his shield their heaped hayle he bore,
 And with his sword disperst the raskall flockes,
 Which fled asonder, and him fell before;
 As withered leaves drop from their dried stockes,
 When the wroth western wind does reave their lockes.
 And underneath him his courageous steed,
 The fierce Spumador, trode them down like docks;
 The fierce Spumador borne of heavenlie seed;
 Such as Laomedan of Phœbus race did breed.

Which suddaine horroure and confused cry
 Whenas their capteine heard, in haste he yode
 The cause to weet, and fault to remedy:
 Upon a tygre swift and fierce he rode,
 That as the winde ran underneath his lode,
 Whiles his long legs nigh raught unto the ground:
 Full large he was of limbe, and shoulders brode;
 But of such subtile substance and unsound, [bound:
 That like a ghost he seem'd whose grave-clothes were un-

And in his hand a bended bow was scene,
 And many arrowes under his right side,
 All deadly daungerous, all cruell keene,
 Headed with flint, and fethers bloody dide;
 Such as the Indians in their quivers hide:
 Those could he well direct and streight as line,
 And bid them strike the marke which he had cyde;
 Ne was there salve, ne was there medicine,
 That mote recure their woundes; so inly they did tine.

As pale and wan as ashes was his looke;
 His body leane and meagre as a rake;
 And skin all withered like a dried rooke;
 Thereto as cold and drery as a snake;
 That seemd to tremble evermore and quake:
 All in a canvas thin he was bedight,
 And girded with a belt of twisted brake:
 Upon his head he wore an helmet light,
 Made of a dead mans skull, that seemd a ghastly sight.

Maleger was his name: and after him
 There follow'd fast at hand two wicked hags,
 With hoary lockes all loose, and visage grim;
 Their feet unshod, their bodies wrapt in rags,
 And both as swift on foot as chased stags;
 And yet the one her other legge had lame,
 Which with a staffe all full of litle snags
 She did support, and Impotence her name:
 But th' other was Impatience, armd with raging flame.

Soone as the earle from far the prince espyde
 Glistring in armes and warlike ornament,
 His beast he felly priekt on either syde,
 And his mischiévous bow full readie bent,
 With which at him a cruell shaft he sent:
 But he was warie, and it warded well
 Upon his shield, that it no further went,
 But to the ground the idle quarrell fell:
 Then he another and another did expell.

Which to prevent, the prince his mortall speare
 Soone to him raught, and fierce at him did ride,
 To be avenged of that shot whyleare:
 But he was not so hardy to abide
 That bitter stownd, but, turning quicke aside
 His light-foot beast, fled fast away for feare:
 Whom to pursue, the Infant after hide
 So fast as his good courser could him beare:
 But labour lost it was to weene approach him neare.

Far as the winged wind his tigre fled,
 That vew of eye could scarse him overtake,
 Ne scarse his feet on ground were seene to tread;
 Through hils and dales he speedy way did make,
 Ne hedge ne ditch his readie passage brake,
 And in his flight the villeine turn'd his face,
 (As wonts the Tartar by the Caspian lake,
 Whenas the Russian him in fight does chace,)
 Unto his tygres taile, and shot at him apace.

Apace he shot, and yet he fled apace,
 Still as the greedy knight nigh to him drew;
 And oftentimes he would relent his pace,
 That him his foe more fiercely should poursew:
 But, when his uncouth manner he did vew,
 He gan avize to follow him no more,
 But keepe his standing, and his shaftes eschew,
 Until he quite had spent his perlous store,
 And then assayle him fresh, ere he could shift for more.

But that lame hag, still as abroad he strew
 His wicked arrowes, gathered them againe,
 And to him brought, fresh batteill to renew;
 Which he espying cast her to restraine
 From yielding succour to that cursed swaine,
 And her attaching thought her hands to tye;
 But, soone as him dismounted on the plaine
 That other hag did far away espye
 Binding her sister, she to him ran hastily;

And catching hold of him, as downe he lent,
 Him backward overthrow, and downe him stayd
 With their rude handes and gryesly grapement;
 Till that the villein, comming to their ayd,
 Upon him fell, and lode upon him layd:
 Full litle wanted, but he had him slaine,
 And of the battell balefull end had made,
 Had not his gentle squire beheld his paine,
 And commen to his reskew ere his bitter bane.

So greatest and most glorious thing on ground
 May often need the helpe of weaker hand;
 So feeble is mans state, and life unsound,
 That in assuraunce it may never stand,
 Till it dissolved be from earthly band!
 Proove be thou, prince, the prowtest man alyve,
 And noblest borne of all in Briton land;
 Yet thee fierce Fortune did so nearely drive,
 That had not Grace thee blest, thou shouldest not survive.

The squire arriving, fiercely in his armes
 Snatcht first the one, and then the other jade,
 His chiefest letts and authors of his harmes,
 And them perforce withheld with threatned blade,
 Least that his lord they should behinde invade;
 The whiles the prince, prickt with reprochful shame
 As one awakte out of long slombring shade,
 Revivying thought of glory and of fame,
 United all his powres to purge himselfe from blame.

Like as a fire, the which in hollow cave
 Hath long bene underkept and down suppress,
 With murmurous disdayne doth inly rave,
 And grudge, in so streight prison to be prest,
 At last breakes forth with furious unrest,
 And strives to mount unto his native seat;
 All that did earst it hinder and molest,
 Yt now devoures with flames and scorching heat,
 And carries into smoake with rage and horror great.

So mightely the Briton prince him roud
 Out of his holde, and broke his caytive bands;
 And as a beare, whom angry cures have touzd,
 Having off-shakt them and escapt their hands,
 Becomes more fell, and all that him withstands
 Treads down and overthrowes. Now had the carle
 Alighted from his tigre, and his hands
 Discharged of his bow and deadly quar'le,
 To seize upon his foe flatt lying on the marle.

Which now him turnd to disavantage deare ;
 For neither can he fly, nor other harme,
 But trust unto his strength and manhood meare,
 Sith now he is far from his monstrous swarme,
 And of his weapons did himselfe disarme.
 The knight yet wrothfull for his late disgrace,
 Fiercely advaunst his valorous right arme,
 And him so sore smott with his yron mace,
 That groveling to the ground he fell, and fild his place.

Wel weened hee that field was then his owne,
 And all his labor brought to happy end ;
 When suddain up the villeine overthrowne
 Out of his swowne arose, fresh to contend,
 And gan himselfe to second battaill bend,
 As hurt he had not beene. Thereby there lay
 An huge great stone, which stood upon one end,
 And had not bene removed many a day :
 Some land-marke seemd to be, or signe of sundry way :

The same he snatcht, and with exceeding sway
 Threw at his foe, who was right well aware
 To shonne the engine of his meant decay ;
 It booted not to thinke that throw to beare,
 But grownd he gave, and lightly lept areare ;
 Est fierce retourning, as a fouleon fayre,
 That once hath failed of her souse full neare,
 Remounts againe into the open ayre,
 And unto better fortune doth herselfe prepayre :

So brave retourning, with his brandisht blade,
 He to the carle himselfe agayn addrest,
 And strooke at him so sternely, that he made
 An open passage through his riven brest,
 That halfe the steele behind his backe did rest ;
 Which drawing backe, he looked evermore
 When the hart blood should gush out of his chest,
 Or his dead corse should fall upon the flore ;
 But his dead corse upon the flore fell nathemore :

Ne drop of blood appeared shed to bee.
 All were the wownd so wide and wonderous
 That through his carcas one might playnly see.
 Halfe in amaze with horror hideous,
 And halfe in rage to be deluded thus,
 Again through both the sides he strooke him quight,
 That made his spright to grone full piteous ;
 Yet nathemore forth fled his groning spright.
 But freshly, as at first, prepard himselfe to fight.

Thereat he smitten was with great affright,
 And trembling terror did his hart appall;
 Ne wist he what to thinke of that same sight,
 Ne what to say, ne what to doe at all:
 He doubted least it were some magicall
 Illusion that did beguile his sense,
 Or wandring ghost that wanted funerall,
 Or aery spirite under false pretence,
 Or hellish seend raysd up through diuelish science.

His wonder far exceeded reasons reach,
 That he began to doubt his dazeled sight,
 And oft of error did himselfe appeach:
 Flesh without blood, a person without spright,
 Wounds without hurt, a body without might,
 That could doe harme, yet could not harmed bee,
 That could not die, yet seemd a mortall wight,
 That was most strong in most infirmittee;
 Like did he never heare, like did he never see.

Awhile he stood in this astonishment,
 Yet would he not for all his great dismay
 Give over to effect his first intent,
 And th' utmost meanes of victory assay,
 Or th' utmost yssew of his owne decay.
 His owne good sword Mordure, that never fayld
 At need till now, he lightly threw away,
 And his bright shield that nought him now awayld;
 And with his naked hands him forcibly assayld.

Twixt his two mighty armes him up he snatcht,
 And crusht his carcas so against his brest,
 That the disdainfull sowle he thence dispatcht,
 And th' ydle breath all utterly exprest:
 Tho, when he felt him dead, adowne he kest
 The lumpish corse unto the sencelesse grownd;
 Adowne he kest it with so puissant wrest,
 That backe againe it did alofte rebownd,
 And gave against his mother Earth a gronefull sownd.

As when Ioves harnesse-bearing bird from hye
 Stoupes at a flying heron with proud disdayne,
 The stone-dead quarrey falls so forcibly,
 That yt rebownds against the lowly playne,
 A second fall redoubling backe agayne.
 Then thought the prince all peril sure was past,
 And that he victor onely did remayne;
 No sooner thought, then that the carle as fast
 Gan heap huge strokes on him, as ere he down was cast.

Nigh his wits end then woxe th' amazed knight,
 And thought his labor lost, and travell vayne,
 Against this lifelesse shadow so to fight :
 Yet life he saw, and felt his mighty mayne,
 That, whiles he marveild still, did still him payne ;
 Forthy he gan some other wayes advize,
 How to take life from that dead-living swayne,
 Whom still he marked freshly to arize
 From th' earth, and from her womb new spirits to reprize.

He then remembred well, that had bene sayd.
 How th' Earth his mother was, and first him bore ;
 She eke, so often as his life decayd,
 Did life with usury to him restore,
 And reysd him up much stronger than before,
 So soone as he unto her wombe did fall :
 Therefore to grownd he would him cast no more,
 Ne him committ to grave terrestriall.
 But beare him farre from hope of succour usuall.

Tho up he caught him twixt his puissant hands,
 And having scruzd out of his carrion corse
 The lothfull life, now loosd from sinfull bands,
 Upon his shoulders carried him perforce
 Above three furlongs, taking his full course,
 Until he came unto a standing lake :
 Him thereinto he threw without remorse,
 Ne stird, till hope of life did him forsake :
 So end of that carles dayes and his owne paynes did make.

Which when those wicked hags from far did spye,
 Like two mad dogs they ran about the lands ;
 And th' one of them with dreadfull yelling crye,
 Throwing awaye her broken chaines and bands,
 And having quencht her burning fier-brands,
 Hedlong herselfe did cast into that lake ;
 But Impotence with her owne wilfull hands
 One of Malegers cursed dartes did take,
 So ryv'd her trembling hart, and wicked end did make.

Thus now alone he conqueror remaines :
 Tho, cumming to his squire that kept his steed,
 Thought to have mounted ; but his feeble vaines
 Him faild thereto and served not his need,
 Through losse of blood which from his wounds did bleed,
 That he began to faint, and life decay :
 But his good squire, him helping up with speed,
 With stedfast hand upon his horse did stay,
 And led him to the castle by the beaten way.

Where many groomes and squiers ready were
 To take him from his steed full tenderly;
 And eke the fayrest Alma mett him there
 With balme, and wine, and costly spicery,
 To comfort him in his infirmity:
 Eftsoones she causd him up to be conveyd,
 And of his armes despoyled easily;
 In sumptuous bed shee made him to be layd;
 And, al the while his wounds were dressing, by him stayd.

CANTO XII.

Guyon by palmers governaunce,
 Passing through perilles great,
 Doth overthrow the Bowre of Bliss,
 And Acrasy defeat.

Now ginnes that goodly frame of Temperaunce
 Fayrely to rise, and her adorned hed
 To pricke of highest prayse forth to advaunce,
 Formerly grounded and fast setteled
 On firme foundation of true bountyhed:
 And this brave knight, that for this vertue fightes,
 Now comes to point of that same perilous sted,
 Where Pleasure dwelles in sensuall delights,
 Mongst thousand dangers and ten thousand magick nightes.

Two dayes now in that sea he sayled has,
 Ne ever land beheld, ne living wight,
 Ne ought save perill, still as he did pas:
 Tho, when appeared the third morrow bright
 Upon the waves to spred her trembling light,
 An hideous roaring far away they heard,
 That all their sences filled with affright;
 And streight they saw the raging surges reard
 Up to the skyes, that them of drowning made afeard.

Said then the boteman, "Palmer, stere aright
 And keepe an even course; for yonder way
 We needes must pas (God doe us well acquight!)
 That is the Gulfe of Greedinesse, they say,
 That deepe engorgeth all this world's pray;
 Which having swallowd up excessively,
 He soone in vomit up againe doth lay,
 And belcheth forth his superfluity,
 That all the seas for feare doe seeme away to fly.

"On th' other syde an hideous rock is pight
 Of mighty magnes stone, whose craggie clift
 Depending from on high, dreadfull to sight,
 Over the waves his rugged armes doth lift,
 And threatneth downe to throw his ragged rift
 On whoso cometh nigh: yet nigh it drawes
 All passengers, that none from it can shift:
 For, whiles they fly that gulfe's devouring iawes,
 They on the rock are rent, and sunck in helpeles wawes."

Forward they passe, and strongly he them rowes,
 Untill they nigh unto that gulle arryve,
 Where streame more violent and greedy growes:
 Then he with all his puisaunce doth stryve
 To strike his oares, and mightily doth dryve
 The hollow vessell through the threatfull wave;
 Which, gaping wide to swallow them alyve
 In th' huge abyasse of his engulging grave,
 Doth rore at them in vaine, and with great terrour rave.

They, passing by, that grisely mouth did see
 Sucking the seas into his entralles deepe,
 That seemd more horrible than hell to bee,
 Or that darke dreadfull hole of Tartare steepe,
 Through which the damned ghosts doen often creep
 Backe to the world, bad livers to torment:
 But nought that falles into this direfull deepe,
 Ne that approacheth nigh the wyde descent,
 May backe retourne, but is condemned to be drent.

On th' other side they saw that perilous rocke,
 Threatning itselfe on them to ruinate,
 On whose sharp cliftes the ribs of vessels broke;
 And shivered ships, which had beene wrecked late,
 Yet stuck with carcasses exanimate
 Of such, as having all their substance spent
 In wanton ioyes and lustes intemperate,
 Did afterwarde make shipwrack violent
 Both of their life and fame for ever fowly blent.

Forthy this hight the Rock of vile Reproch,
 A dangerous and détestable place,
 To which nor fish nor fowle did once approach,
 But yelling meawes, with seagulles, hoars, and bace,
 And cormoyraunts, with birds of ravenous race,
 Which still sat wayting on that wastfull clift
 For spoile of wretches, whose unhappy cace,
 After lost credit and consumed thrift,
 At last them driven hath to this despairefull drift.

The palmer, seeing them in safetie past,
 Thus saide: "Behold th' ensamples in our sightes
 Of lustfull luxurie and thriftlesse wast!
 What now is left of miserable wightes,
 Which spent their looser daies in leud delightes,
 But shame and sad reproch, here to be red
 By these rent reliques speaking their ill-plithtes!
 Let all that live hereby be counselled
 To shunne Rock of Reproch, and it as death to dread!"

So forth they rowed: and that ferryman
 With his stiffe oares did brush the sea so strong,
 That the hoare waters from his frigot ran,
 And the light bubbles daunced all along,
 Whiles the salt brine out of the billowes sprong.
 At last, far off, they many islandes spy
 On every side floting the floodes among:
 Then said the knight; "Lo! I the land descry;
 Therefore, old syre, thy course doe thereunto apply."

"That may not bee," said then the ferryman,
 "Least wee unweeting hap to be fordonne:
 For those same islands, seeming now and than,
 Are not firme land, nor any certein wonne,
 But stragling plots, which to and fro doe ronne
 In the wide waters: therefore are they hight
 The Wandering Islands: therefore doe them shonne;
 For they have oft drawne many a wandring wight
 Into most deadly daunger and distressed plight.

"Yet well they seeme to him, that farre doth vew,
 Both faire and fruitfull, and the grownd dispred
 With grassy greene of délectable hew;
 And the tall trees with leaves appareled
 Are deckt with blossoms dyde in white and red,
 That mote the passengers thereto allure;
 But whosoever once hath fastened
 His foot thereon, may never it recure,
 But wandreth eyermore uncertein and unsure,

"As th' isle of Delos whylome, men report,
 Amid th' Aegæan sea long time did stray,
 Ne made for shipping any certeine port,
 Till that Latona travailing that way,
 Flying from Iunoës wrath and hard assay,
 Of her fayre twins was there delivered,
 Which afterwards did rule the night and day:
 Thenceforth it firmly was established,
 And for Apollqes temple highly herried."

They to him hearken, as beseemeth meete;
 And passe on forward: so their way does ly,
 That one of those same islands, which doe flect
 In the wide sea, they needes must passen by,
 Which seemd so sweet and pleasaunt to the eye,
 That it would tempt a man to touchen there:
 Upon the banck they sitting did espy
 A daintie damsell dressing of her heare,
 By whom a little skippet floting did appeare.

She them espying, loud to them gan call,
 Bidding them nigher draw unto the shore,
 For she had cause to busie them withall;
 And therewith lowdly laught; but nathemore
 Would they once turne, but kept on as afore:
 Which when she saw, she left her lockes undight,
 And running to her boat withouten ore,
 From the departing land it launched light,
 And after them did drive with all her power and might.

Whom overtaking, she in merry sort
 Then gan to bord, and purpose diversly;
 Now iaining dalliaunce and wanton sport,
 Now throwing forth lewd wordes immodestly;
 Till that the palmer gan full bitterly
 Her to rebuke, for being loose and light:
 Which not abiding, but more scornfully
 Scoffing at him that did her iustly wite,
 She turnd her bote about, and from them rowed quite.

That was the wanton Phædria, which late
 Did ferry him over the Idle Lake:
 Whom nought regarding they kept on their gate,
 And all her vaine allurements did forsake;
 When them the wary boteman thus bespake;
 "Here now behoveth us well to avyse,
 And of our safety good heede to take;
 For hero before a perlon passage lyes,
 Where many mermayds haunt, making false melodics.

"But by the way there is a great quicksand,
 And a whirlepoole of hidden icopardy;
 Therefore, Sir Palmer, keepe an even hand;
 For twixt them both the narrow way doth ly."
 Scarse had he saide, when hard at hand they spy,
 That quicksand nigh with water covered;
 But by the checked wave they did descry
 It plaine, and by the sea discoloured:
 It called was the Quickesand of Unthriftyhed.

They, passing by, a goodly ship did see
 Laden from far with precious merchandize,
 And bravely furnished as ship might bee,
 Which through great disaventure, or mesprize,
 Herselfe had ronne into that hazardize;
 Whose mariners and merchants with much toyle
 Labour'd in vaine to have recur'd their prize,
 And the rich wares to save from pitteous spoyle;
 But neither toyle nor traveill might her backe recoyle.

On th' other side they see that perilous poole,
 That called was the Whirlepoole of Decay;
 In which full many had with haplesse doole
 Beene suncke, of whom no memorie did stay:
 Whose circled waters rapt with whirling sway,
 Like to a restlesse wheele, still ronning round,
 Did covet, as they passed by that way,
 To draw their bote within the utmost bound
 Of his wide labyrinth, and then to have them dround.

But th' heedful boteman strongly forth did stretch
 His brawnie armes, and all his bodie straine,
 That th' utmost sandy breach they shortly fetch,
 Whiles the dredd daunger does behind remaine.
 Suddene they see from midst of all the maine
 The surging waters like a mountaine rise,
 And the great sea, puft up with proud disdaine,
 To swell above the measure of his guise,
 As threatning to devoure all that his powre despise.

The waves come rolling, and the billowes rore
 Outragiously, as they enraged were,
 Or wrathfull Neptune did them drive before
 His whirling charet for exceeding feare;
 For not one pufte of winde there did appeare;
 That all the three theeat woxe much afayd,
 Unweeting what such horreur straunge did reare.
 Eftsoones they saw an hideous hoast arrayd
 Of huge sea-monsters, such as living sence dismayd;

Most ugly shapes and horrible aspécts,
 Such as dame Nature selfe mote feare to see,
 Or shame, that ever should so fowle defects
 From her most cunning hand escaped bee:
 All dreadfull pourtraicts of deformitee:
 Spring-headed hydres; and sea-shouldring whales;
 Great whirlpooles, which all fishes make to flee;
 Bright scolopendraes arm'd with silver scales;
 Mighty monoceros with immeasured tayles;

The dreadful fish, that hath deserv'd the name
 Of Death, and like him lookes in dreadfull hew;
 The griesly wasserman, that makes his game
 The flying ships with swiftnes to pursew;
 The horrible sea-satyre, that doth shew
 His fearefull face in time of greatest storme;
 Huge ziffius, whom mariners eschew
 No lesse than rockes, as travellers informe;
 And greedy rosmarines with visages deforme:

● All these, and thousand thousands many more,
 And more deformed monsters thousand fold,
 With dreadfull noise and hollow rombling rore
 Came rushing, in the fomy waves euroid,
 Which seem'd to fly for feare them to behold:
 Ne wonder, if these did the knight appall;
 For all that here on earth we dreadfull hold,
 Be but as bugs to fearen babes withall,
 Compared to the creatures in the seas entrall.

"Feare nought," then aside the palmer well aviz'd,
 "For these same monsters are not these in deed,
 But are into these fearefull shapes disguiz'd
 By that same wicked witch, to worke us dread,
 And draw from on this iourney to proceed."
 Tho, lifting up his vertuous staffe on hye,
 He smote the sea, which calmed was with speed,
 And all that dreadfull armie fast gan flye
 Into great Tethys bosome, where they hidden lye.

Quit from that danger forth their course they kept;
 And as they went they heard a ruefull cry
 Of one that wayld and pittifully wept,
 That through the sea th' resounding plaints did fly:
 At last they in an island did espy
 A seemely maiden, sitting by the shore,
 That with great sorrow and sad agony
 Seemed some great misfortune to deplore,
 And lowd to them for succour called evermore.

Which Guyon hearing, streight his palmer bad
 To stere the bote towards that dolefull mayd,
 That he might know and ease her sorrow sad:
 Who, him avizing better, to him sayd;
 "Faire sir, be not displeasd if disobayd:
 For ill it were to hearken to her cry;
 For she is inly nothing ill apayd;
 But onely womanish fine forgery,
 Your stubborne hart t'affect with fraile infirmity:

"To which when she your courage hath inclin'd
Through foolish pittie, then her guilefull bayt
She will embosome deeper in your mind,
And for your ruine at the last awayt."

The knight was ruled, and the boteman strayt
Held on his course with stayd stedfastnesse,
Ne ever shroncke, ne ever sought to bayt
His tyred armes for toylesome wearinesse;
But with his oares did sweepe the watry wildernessse.

And now they nigh approched to the sted
Whereas those mermayds dwelt: it was a still
And calmy bay, on th' one side sheltered
With the brode shadow of an hoarie hill;
On th' other side an high rocke toured still,
That twixt them both a pleasaunt port they made,
And did like an halfe theatre fulfill:
There those five sisters had continuall trade,
And usd to bath themselves in that deceiptfull shade.

They were faire ladies, till they fondly striv'd
With th' Heliconian Maides for maystery;
Of whom they over-comen were depriv'd
Of their proud beautie, and th' one moyity
Transform'd to fish for their bold surquedry;
But th' upper halfe their hew retayned still,
And their sweet skill in wonted melody;
Which ever after they abusd to ill,
T' allure weake travcillers, whom gotten they did kill.

So now to Guyon, as he passed by,
Their pleasaunt tunes they sweetly thus applyde;
"O thou fayre sonne of gentle Faëry,
That art in mightie armes most magnifyde
Above all knights that ever batteil tryde,
O turne thy rudder hetherward awhile:
Here may thy storme-bett vessell safely ryde;
This is the port of rest from troublous toyle,
The worlds sweet in from paine and wearisome turmoyle."

With that the rolling sea, resounding soft,
In his big base them fitly answered;
And on the rocke the waves breaking aloft
A solemne meane unto them measured;
The whiles sweet Zephyrus lowd whistled
His treble, a straunge kinde of harmony;
Which Guyons senses softly tickeled,
That he the boteman bad row easily,
And let him heare some part of their rare melody.

But him the palmer from that vanity
 With temperate advice discoursell'd,
 That they it past, and shortly gan descry
 The land to which their course they levelled;
 When suddenly a grosse fog over spred
 With his dull vapour all that desert has,
 And heavens chearefull face enveloped,
 That all things one, and one as nothing was,
 And this great universe seemd one confused mas.

Thereat they greatly were dismayd, ne wist
 How to direct theyr way in darkenes wide,
 But feard to wander in that wastefull mist,
 For tomling into mischiefes unespide:
 Worse is the daunger hidden then descride.
 Suddenly an innumerable flight
 Of harmefull fowles about them fluttering cride,
 And with their wicked wings them ofte did smight,
 And sore annoyed, groping in that griesly night.

Even all the nation of unfortunate
 And fatall birds about them flocked were,
 Such as by nature men abhorre and hate;
 The ill-faste owle, deaths dreadfull messengere;
 The hoars night-raven, trump of dolefull drere;
 The lether-winged batt, dayes enemy;
 The ruefull strich, still waiting on the bere;
 The whistler shrill, that whoso heares doth dy;
 The hellish harpyes, prophets of sad destiny:

All those, and all that els does horror breed,
 About them flew, and fild their sayles with feare:
 Yet stayd they not, but forward did proceed,
 Whiles th' one did row, and th' other stifly steare;
 Till that at last the weather gan to cleare,
 And the faire land itselfe did playnly show..
 Said then the palmer; "Lo! where does appeare
 The sacred soile where all our perills grow!
 Therefore, Sir Knight, your ready arms about you throw."

He hearkned, and his armes about him tooke,
 The whiles the nimble bote so well her sped,
 That with her crooked keele the land she strooke;
 Then forth the noble Guyon sallied,
 And his sage palmer that him governed;
 But th' other by his bote behind did stay.
 They marched fayrly forth, of nought ydred,
 Both firmly armd for every hard assay,
 With constancy and care, gainst daunger and dismay.

Ere long they heard an hideous bellowing
 Of many beasts, that roard outrageously,
 As if that hungers poynt or Venus sting
 Had them enraged with fell surquedry;
 Yet nought they feard, but past on hardily,
 Untill they came in vew of those wilde beasts,
 Who all attonce, gaping full greedily,
 And rearing fiercely their upstaring crests,
 Ran towards to devour those unexpected guests.

But, soone as they approcht with deadly threat,
 The palmer over them his staffe upheld,
 His mightie staffe, that could all charmes defeat:
 Eftsoones their stubborne corages were queld,
 And high aduanced crests downe meekely feld;
 Instead of fraying they themselves did feare,
 And trembled, as them passing they beheld:
 Such wondrous powre did in that staffe appeare,
 All monsters to subdew to him that did it beare.

Of that same wood it fram'd was cunningly,
 Of which Caducæus whilome was made,
 Caducæus, the rod of Mercury,
 With which he wonts the Stygian realmes invade
 Through ghastly horror and eternall shade;
 Th' infernall seends with it he can asswage,
 And Orcus tame, whome nothing can persuade,
 And rule the Furies when they most doe rage;
 Such vertue in his staffe had eke this palmer sage.

Thence passing forth, they shortly doe arryve
 Whereas the Bowre of Bliss was situate;
 A place pickt out by choyce of best alyve,
 That natures worke by art can imitate:
 In which whatever in this worldly state
 Is sweete and pleasing unto living sense,
 Or that may dayntest fantasy aggrate,
 Was poured forth with plentiful dispencc,
 And made there to abound with lavish affluence.

Goodly it was enclosed rownd about,
 As well their entred guesstes to keep within,
 As those unruly beasts to hold without;
 Yet was the fence thereof but weake and thin;
 Nought feard their force, that fortilage to win,
 But Wisedomes powre, and Temperaunces might,
 By which the mightiest things efforced bin:
 And eke the gate was wrought of substaunce light,
 Rather for pleasure then for battery or fight.

Yt framed was of precious yvory,
 That seemd a worke of admirable witt;
 And therein all the famous history
 Of Iason and Medæa was ywritt;
 Her mighty charmes, her furious loving fitt;
 His goodly conquest of the golden fleece,
 His falsed fayth, and love too lightly flitt;
 The wondred Argo, which in venturous peece
 First through the Euxine seas bore all the flowr of Greecc.

Ye might have seen the frothy billowes fry
 Under the ship as thorough them she went,
 That seemd the waves were into yvory,
 Or yvory into the waves were sent;
 And otherwhere the snowy substaunce sprent
 With vermell, like the boyes blood therein shed,
 A piteous spectacle did represent;
 And otherwhiles with gold besprinkeled
 Yt seemed th' enchaunted flame, which did Cræusa wed.

All this and more might in that goodly gate
 Be red, that ever open stood to all
 Which thether came: but in the porch there sate
 A comely personage of stature tall,
 And semblaunce pleasing, more than naturall,
 That traueilers to him seemd to entize;
 His looser garment to the ground did fall,
 And flew about his heeles in wanton wize,
 Not fitt for speedy pace or manly exercise.

They in that place him Genius did call:
 Not that celestiall Powre, to whom the care
 Of life, and generation of all
 That lives, pertaines in charge particulare,
 Who wondrous things concerning our welfare,
 And straunge phantomes, doth lett us ofte foresee,
 And ofte of secret ills bids us beware:
 That is our Selfe, whom though we do not see,
 Yet each doth in himselfe it well perceiue to bee:

Therefore a god him sage Antiquity
 Did wisely make, and good Agdistes call;
 But this same was to that quite contrary,
 The foe of life, that good envyes to all,
 That secretly doth us procure to fall
 Through guilefull semblants, which he makes us see:
 He of this gardin had the governall,
 And Pleasures porter was devisd to bee,
 Holding a staffe in hand for more formalitee.

With diuerse flowres he daintily was deckt,
 And strowed rownd about; and by his side
 A mighty mazer bowle of wine was sett,
 As if it had to him bene sacrificide;
 Wherewith all new-come guests he gratyfide:
 So did he eke Sir Guyon passing by;
 But he his ydle curtesie defide,
 And overthrew his bowle disdainfully,
 And broke his staffe, with which he charmed semblants sly.

Thus being entred they behold arownd
 A large and spacious plaine, on every side
 Strowed with pleasauns; whose fayre grassy grownd
 Mantled with greene, and goodly beautifide
 With all the ornaments of Floraes pride.
 Wherewith her mother Art, as halfe in scorne
 Of niggard Nature, like a pompous bride
 Did deeke her, and too lavishly adorne,
 When forth from virgin bowre she comes in th' early morne.

Thereto the heuens alwayes ioyiall
 Lookte on them lovely, still in stedfaste state,
 Ne suffred storme nor frost on them to fall,
 Their tender buds or leaves to violate:
 Nor seorching heat, nor cold intemperate,
 T' afflict the creatures which therein did dwell;
 But the milde ayre with season moderate
 Gently attempred, and disposd so well,
 That still it breathed forth sweet spirit and holesom smell:

More sweet and holesome then the pleasaunt hill
 Of Rhodope, on which the nymphe, that bore
 A gyaunt babe, herselfe for grieffe did kill;
 Or the Thessalian Tempe, where of yore
 Fayre Daphne Phœbus hart with love did gore;
 Or Ida, where the gods lov'd to repayre,
 Whenever they their heavenly bowres forlore;
 Or sweet Parnasse the haunt of muses fayre:
 Or Eden selfe, if ought with Eden mote compayre.

Much wondred Guyon at the fayre aspéct
 Of that sweet place, yet suffred no delight
 To sincke into his sence nor mind affect;
 But passed forth, and lookt still forward right,
 Brydling his will and maystering his might:
 Till that he came unto another gate;
 No gate, but like one, being goodly dight
 With bowes and braunches, which did broad dilate
 Their clasping armes in wanton wreathings intricate.

So fashioned a porch with rare device,
 Archt over head with an embracing vine,
 Whose bounches hanging downe seemd to entice
 All passers-by to taste their luscious wine,
 And did themselves into their hands incline,
 As freely offering to be gathered;
 Some deepe empurpled as the hyacine,
 Some as the rubine laughing sweetely red,
 Some like faire emeraudes, not yet well ripened:

And them amongst some were of burnisht gold,
 So made by art to beautify the rest,
 Which did themselves amongst the leaves enfold,
 As lurking from the vew of covetous guest,
 That the weake boughes with so rich load opprest
 Did bow adowne as overburdened.
 Under that porch a comely dame did rest
 Clad in fayre weedes but fowle disordered,
 And garments loose that seemd unmeet for womankind:

In her left hand a cup of gold she held,
 And with her right the riper fruit did reach,
 Whose sappy liquor, that with fulnesse sweld,
 Into her cup she scruzd with daintie breach
 Of her fine fingers, without fowle empeach,
 That so faire winepresse made the wine more sweet:
 Thereof she usd to give to drinke to each,
 Whom passing by she happened to meet:
 It was her guise all straungers goodly so to greet.

So she to Guyon offred it to tast;
 Who, taking it out of her tender hond,
 The cup to ground did violently cast,
 That all in peeces it was broken fond,
 And with the liquor stained all the lond:
 Whereat Excesse exceedingly was wroth,
 Yet no'te the same amend, no yet withstond,
 But suffered him to passe. all were she loth;
 Who, nought regarding her displeasure, forward goth.

There the most daintie paradise on ground
 Itselfe doth offer to his sober eye,
 In which all pleasures plenteously abownd,
 And none does others happinesse envye;
 The painted flowres; the trees upshooting hye;
 The dales for shade; the hilles for breathing space;
 The trembling groves; the christall running by;
 And, that which all faire workes doth most aggrace,
 The art, which all that wrought, appeared in no place.

One would have thought, (so cunningly the rude
 And scorned partes were mingled with the fine,)
 That Nature had for wantonesse ensude
 Art, and that Art at Nature did repine;
 So striving each th' other to undermine,
 Each did the others worke more beautify;
 So diff'ring both in willes agreed in fine:
 So all agreed, through sweete diversity,
 This gardin to adorne with all variety.

And in the midst of all a fountaine stood,
 Of richest substance that on earth might bee,
 So pure and shiny that the silver flood
 Through every channell running one might see;
 Most goodly it with curious ymageree
 Was over-wrought, and shapes of naked boyes,
 Of which some seemd with lively iollitee
 To fly about, playing their wanton toyes,
 Whylest others did themselves embay in liquid ioyes.

And over all of purest gold was spred
 A trayle of yvie in his native hew;
 For the rich metall was so coloured,
 That wight, who did not well avis'd it vew,
 Would surely deeme it to bee yvie trew:
 Low his lascivious armes adown did creepe,
 That themselves dipping in the silver dew
 Their fleecy flowres they fearfully did steepe,
 Which drops of christall seemd for wantones to weep.

Infinit streames continually did well
 Out of this fountaine, sweete and faire to see,
 The which into an ample laver fell,
 And shortly grew to so great quantitie,
 That like a litle lake it seemd to bee;
 Whose depth exceeded not three cubits hight,
 That through the waves one might the bottom see,
 All pav'd beneath with jasper shining bright,
 That seemd the fountaine in that sea did sayle upright.

And all the margent round about was sett
 With shady laurell trees, thence to defend
 The sunny beames which on the billowes bett,
 And those which therein bathed mote offend.
 As Guyo hapned by the same to wend,
 Two naked damzelles he therein espyde,
 Which therein bathing seemed to contend
 And wrestle wantonly, ne car'd to hyde
 Their dainty partes from vew of any which them eyd.

Sometimes the one would lift the other quight
 Above the waters, and then downe againe
 Her plong, as over-maystered by night,
 Where both awhile would covered remaine,
 And each the other from to rise restraine;
 The whiles their snowy limbes, as through a vele,
 So through the christall waves appeared plaine:
 Then suddenly both would themselves unhele,
 And th' amorous sweet spoiles to greedy eyes revele.

As that faire starre, the messenger of morne,
 His dewy face out of the sea doth reare:
 Or as the Cyprian goddess, newly borne
 Of th' ocean's fruitfull froth, did first appeare:
 Such seemed they, and so their yellow heare
 Christalline humor dropped downe apace.
 Whom such when Guyon saw, him drew him neare,
 And somewhat gan relent his earnest pace;
 His stubborne brest gan secret pleasaunce to embrace.

The wanton maidens him espying, stood
 Gazing awhile at his unwonted guise;
 Then th' one herselfe low ducked in the flood,
 Abasht that her a straunger did avise:
 But th' other rather higher did arise,
 And her two lilly paps aloft displayd,
 And all, that might his melting hart entyse
 To her delights, she unto him bewrayd;
 The rest, hidd underneath, him more desirous made.

With that the other likewise up arose,
 And her faire lockes, which formerly were bownd
 Up in one knott, she low adowne did lose,
 Which flowing long and thick her cloth'd arownd,
 And th' yvorie in golden mantle gownd:
 So that faire spectacle from him was rest.
 Yet that which rest it no lesse faire was fownd:
 So hidd in lockes and waves from lookers theft,
 Nought but her lovely face she for his looking left.

Withall she laughed, and she blusht withall,
 That blushing to her laughter gave more grace,
 And laughter to her blushing, as did fall.
 Now when they spyde the knight to slacke his pace
 Them to behold, and in his sparkling face
 The secrete signes of kindled lust appeare,
 Their wanton merriments they did encrease,
 And to him beckned to approach more neare,
 And shewd him many sights that corage cold could reare:

On which when gazing him the palmer saw,
 He much rebuk't those wandring eyes of his,
 And counsell'd well him forward thence did draw.
 Now are they come nigh to the Bowre of Bliss,
 Of her fond favorites so nam'd amis;
 When thus the palmer; "Now, sir, well advise;
 For here the end of all our travaill is:
 Here wonnes Acrasia, whom we must surprise,
 Els she will slip away, and all our drift despise."

Eftsoones they heard a most melodious sound,
 Of all that mote delight a daintie care,
 Such as attonce might not on living ground,
 Save in this paradise, be heard elsewhere:
 Right hard it was for wight which did it heare,
 To read what manner musicke that mote bee;
 For all that pleasing is to living eare
 Was there consorted in one harmonie;
 Birdes, voices, instruments, windes, waters, all agree:

The ioyous birdes, shrouded in chearefull shade,
 Their notes unto the voice attemptred sweet;
 Th' angelicall soft trembling voyces made
 To th' instruments divine response meet;
 The silver-sounding instruments did meet
 With the base murmure of the waters fall;
 The waters fall with difference discreet,
 Now soft, now loud, unto the wind did call;
 The gentle warbling wind low answered to all.

There, whence that musick seemed heard to bee,
 Was the faire witch herselfe now solacing
 With a new lover, whom, through sorceree
 And witchcraft, she from farre did thether bring:
 There she had him now laid a slombering
 In secret shade after long wanton ioyes;
 Whilst round about them pleasauntly did sing
 Many faire ladies and lascivious boyes,
 That ever mixt their song with light licentious toyes.

And all that while right over him she hong
 With her false eyes fast fixed in his sight,
 As seeking medicine whence she was stong,
 Or greedily depasturing delight;
 And oft inclining downe with kisses light,
 For feare of waking him, his lips bedewd,
 And through his humid eyes did sucke his spright,
 Quite molten into lust and pleasure lewd;
 Wherewith she sighed soft, as if his case she rew'd.

The whiles some one did chaunt this lovely lay;
Ah! see, whoso fayre thing doest faine to see,
In springing flowre the image of thy day!
Ah! see the virgin rose, how sweetly shce
Doth first peepe foorth with bashfull modestee,
That fairer seemes the lesse ye see her may!
Lo! see, soone after how more bold and free
Her bared bosome she doth broad display;
Lo! see soone after how she fades and falls away!

So passeth, in the passing of a day,
Of mortall life the lease, the bud, the flowre;
Ne more doth flourish after first decay,
That earst was sought to deck both bed and bowre
Of many a lady, and many a paramoure!
Gather therefore the rose whilst yet is prime,
For soone comes age that will her pride deflowre:
Gather the rose of love whilst yet is time,
Whilst loving thou mayst loved be with equall crime.

He ceast; and then gan all the quire of birdes
 Their diverse notes t'attune unto his lay,
 As in approvaunce of his pleasing wordes.
 The constant payre heard all that he did say,
 Yet swarved not, but kept their forward way
 Through many covert groves and thickets close,
 In which they creeping did at last display
 That wanton lady, with her lover lose,
 Whose sleepeie head she in her lap did soft dispose.

Upon a bed of roses she was layd,
 As faint through heat, or dight to pleasant sin;
 And was arayd, or rather disarayd,
 All in a vele of silke and silver thin,
 That hid no whit her alablaster skin,
 But rather shewd more white, if more might bee:
 More subtile web Arachne cannot spin;
 Nor the fine nets, which oft we woven see
 Of scorched deaw, do not in th' ayre more lightly flee.

Her snowy brest was bare to ready spoyle
 Of hungry eies, which n'ote therewith be fild;
 And yet, through languour of her late sweet toyle,
 Few drops, more cleare then nectar, forth distild,
 That like pure orient perles adowne it trild;
 And her faire eyes, sweet smyling in delight,
 Moystened their fierie beames, with which she thrild
 Fraile harts, yet quenched not; like starry light, [bright.
 Which, sparkling on the silent waves, does seeme more

The young man, sleeping by her, seemd to be
 Some goodly swayne of honorable place;
 That certes it great pittie was to see
 Him his nobility so fowle deface:
 A sweet regard and amiable grace,
 Mixed with manly sternesse, did appeare,
 Yet sleeping, in his well-proportiond face;
 And on his tender lips the downy heare
 Did not but freshly spring, and silken blossoms beare.

His warlike armes, the ydle instruments
 Of sleeping praise, were hong upon a tree:
 And his brave shield, full of old moniments,
 Was fowly ras't, that none the signes might see;
 Ne for them ne for honour cared hee,
 Ne ought that did to his advauncement tend;
 But in lewd loves, and wastfull luxuree,
 His dayes, his goods, his bodie he did spend:
 O horrible enchantment, that him so did blend!

The noble elfe and carefull palmer drew
 So nigh them, minding nought but lustfull game,
 That sudden forth they on them rusht, and threw
 A subtile net, which only for that same
 The skilfull palmer formally did frame:
 So held them under fast; the whiles the rest
 Fled all away for feare of fowler shame.
 The faire enchauntresse, so unwares opprest,
 Tryde all her arts and all her sleights thence out to wrest;

And eke her lover strove; but all in vaine:
 For that same net so cunningly was wound,
 That neither guile nor force might it distraine.
 They tooke them both, and both them strongly bound
 In captive bandes, which there they readie found:
 But her in chaines of adamant he tyde;
 For nothing else might keepe her safe and sound:
 But Verdant (so he hight) he soone untyde,
 And counsell sage in steed thereof to him applyde.

But all those pleasaunt bowres, and pallace brave,
 Guyon broke downe with rigour pittlesse:
 Ne ought their goodly workmanship might save
 Them from the tempest of his wrathfulnesse,
 But that their blisse he turn'd to balefulnesse,
 Their groves he feld; their gardins did deface;
 Their arbers spoyle; their cabinets suppress-
 Their banket-houses burne; their buildings race;
 And, of the fayrest late, now made the fowlest place.

Then led they her away, and eke that knight
 They with them led, both sorrowfull and sad:
 The way they came, the same retourn'd they right,
 Till they arrived where they lately had
 Charm'd those wild beasts that rag'd with furie mad;
 Which, now awaking, fierce at them gan fly,
 As in their mistresse reskew, whom they lad;
 But them the palmer soone did pacify. [did ly.
 Then Guyon askt, what meant those beastes which there

Sayd he; "These seeming beasts are men in deed,
 Whom this enchauntresse hath transformed thus,
 Whylome her lovers, which her lustes did feed,
 Now turned into figures hideous,
 According to their mindes like monstruous."
 "Sad end," quoth he, "of life intemperate,
 And mourneful meed of ioyes delicious!
 But, palmer, if it mote thee so aggrate,
 Let them returned be unto their former state."

Streightway he with his virtuous staffe them strooke,
 And streight of beastes they comely men became;
 Yet being men they did unmanly looke,
 And stared ghastly; some for inward shame,
 And some for wrath to see their captive dame:
 But one above the rest in speciall,
 That had an hog beene late, hight Grylle by name,
 Repyned greatly, and did him miscall
 That had from hoggish forme him brought to naturall.

Saide Guyon; "See the mind of beastly man,
 That hath so soone forgot the excellence
 Of his creation, when he life began,
 That now he chooseth with vile difference
 To be a beast, and lacke intelligence!"
 To whom the palmer thus; "The donghill kinde
 Delightes in filth and fowle incontinence:
 Let Gryll be Gryll, and have his hoggish minde:
 But let us hence depart whilst wether serves and winde."

THE THIRDE BOOKE
THE FAERIE QUEENE,

CONTAYNING

The Legend of Britomartis, or of Chastity.

---

IT falls me here to write of Chastity,
That sayrest vertue, far above the rest;
For which what needes me fetch from Faëry
Forreine ensamples it to have exprest?
Sith it is shrined in my souveraines brest,
And formd so lively in each perfect part,
That to all ladies, which have it profest,
Need but behold the pourtraict of her hart;
If pourtrayd it might bee by any living art:

But living art may not least part expresse,
Nor life-resembling pencill it can paynt:
All were it Zeuxis or Praxiteles,
His dædale hand would faile and greatly faynt,
And her perfections with his error taynt: .
Ne poets witt, that passeth painter farre
In picturing the parts of beauty daynt,
So hard a workemanship adventure darre,
For feare through want of words her excellence to marre.

How then shall I, apprentice of the skill
That whilome in divinest wits did rayne,
Presume so high to stretch mine humble quill?
Yet now my lucklesse lott doth me constrayne
Hereto perforce: but, O dredd soverayne,
Thus far forth pardon, sith that choicest witt
Cannot your glorious pourtraict figure playne,
That I in colourd shoves may shadow itt,
And antique praises unto present persons fitt.

But if in living colours, and right hew,
Thyselfe thou covet to see pictured,
Who can it doe more lively, or more trew,
Then that sweete verse, with nectar sprinckeled,
In which a gracious servaunt pictured
His Cynthia, his heavens fayrest light?
That with his melting sweetnes ravished,
And with the wonder of her beames bright,
My senses lulled are in slomber of delight.

But let that same delitious poet lend
 A little leave unto a rusticke muse
 To sing his mistresse prayse; and let him mend,
 If ought amis her liking may abuse:
 Ne let his fayrest Cynthia refuse
 In mirrours more then one herselfe to see;
 But either Gloriana let her chuse,
 Or in Belphebe fashioned to bee;
 In th' one her rule, in th' other her rare chastitee.

CANTO I.

Guyon encountreth Britomart:
 Fayre Florimell is chaced:
 Ducssaes traines and Malecas-
 taes champions are defaced.

THE famous Briton prince and Faery knight,
 After long ways and perilous paines endur'd,
 Having their weary limbes to perfect plight
 Restord, and sory wounds right well recur'd,
 Of the faire Alma greatly were procur'd
 To make there lenger sojourne and abode;
 But, when thereto they might not be allur'd
 From seeking praise and deedes of armes abrode,
 They courteous congé tooke, and forth together yode.

But the captiv'd Acrasia he sent,
 Because of traveill long, a nigher way,
 With a strong gard, all reskew to prevent,
 And her to Faery court safe to convey;
 That her for witnes of his hard assay
 Unto his Faery Queene he might present:
 But he himselfe betooke another way,
 To make more triall of his hardiment,
 And seek adventures, as he with Prince Arthure went.

Long so they traveled through wastefull wayes,
 Where daungers dwelt, and perils most did wonne,
 To hunt for glory and renownmed prayse:
 Full many countreyes they did overrone,
 From the uprising to the setting sunne,
 And many hard adventures did atchieve;
 Of all the which they honour ever wonne,
 Seeking the weake oppressed to relieve,
 And to recover right for such as wrong did grieve.

At last, as through an open plaine they yode,
 They spide a knight that towards pricked fayre;
 And him beside an aged squire there rode,
 That seemd to couch under his shield three-square,
 As if that age badd him that burden spare,
 And yield it those that stouter could it wield:
 He, them espying, gau himselfe prepare,
 And on his arme addresse his goodly shield
 That bore a lion passant in a golden field.

Which seeing good Sir Guyon deare besought
 The Prince, of grace, to let him ronne that turne.
 He graunted: then the Faery quickly raught
 His poynant speare, and sharply gan to spurne
 His fomy steed, whos fiery feete did burne
 The verdant gras as he thereon did tread;
 Ne did the other backe his foote returne,
 But fiercely forward came withouten dread,
 And bent his dreadful speare against the others head.

They beene ymett, and both theyr points arriv'd;
 But Guyon drove so furious and fell,
 That seemd both shield and plate it would have riv'd;
 Nathelesse it bore his foe not from his sell,
 But made him stagger, as he were not well:
 But Guyon selfe, ere well he was aware,
 Nigh a speares length behind his crouper fell;
 Yet in his fall so well himselfe he bare,
 That mischievous mischaunce his life and limbs did spare.

Great shame and sorrow of that fall he tooke;
 For never yet, sith warlike armes he bore,
 And shivering speare in bloody field first shooke,
 He fownd himselfe dishonoured so sore.
 Ah! gentlest knight, that ever armor bore,
 Let not thee grieve dismounted to have beene,
 And brought to grownd, that never wast before;
 For not thy fault, but secret powre unseene;
 That speare enchaunted was which layd thee on the greene!

But weenedst thou what wight thee overthrew,
 Much greater grieve and shamefuller regrett
 For thy hard fortune then thou wouldst renew,
 That of a single damzell thou wert mett
 On equall plaine, and there so hard besett:
 Even the famous Britomart it was,
 Whom straunge adventure did from Britayne fett
 To seeke her lover (love far sought alas!)
 Whose image shee had seene in Venus looking-glas.

Fall of disdainfull wrath, he fierce uprose.
 For to revenge that fowle reprochefull shame,
 And, snatching his bright sword, began to close
 With her on foot, and stoutly forward came;
 Dye rather would he then endure that same.
 Which when his palmer saw, he gan to feare
 His toward perill, and untoward blame,
 Which by that new rencounter he should reare;
 For Death sate on the point of that enchaunted speare:

And hasting towards him gan sayre perswade
 Not to provoke misfortune, nor to weene
 His speares default to mend with cruell blade;
 For by his mightie science he had scene
 The secrete vertue of that weapon keene,
 That mortall puissaunce mote not withstond:
 Nothing on earth mote alwaies happy beene!
 Great hazard were it, and adventure fond,
 To loose long-gotten honour with one evill hond.

By such good meanes he him discoursell'd
 From prosecuting his revenging rage:
 And eke the prince like treaty handeled,
 His wrathfull will with reason to aswage;
 And laid the blame, not to his carriage,
 But to his starting steed that swarv'd asyde,
 And to the ill purveyaunce of his page,
 That had his furuitures not firmly tyde:
 So is his angry corage fayrly pacifyde.

Thus reconcilment was betweene them knitt,
 Through goodly temperaunce and affection chaste;
 And either vowd with all their power and witt
 To let not others honour be defast
 Of friend or foe, whoever it embaste,
 Ne armes to bear against the others syde:
 In which accord the prince was also plaste,
 And with that golden chaine of concord tyde:
 So goodly all agreed, they forth yfere did ryde.

O, goodly usage of those antique tymes,
 In which the sword was servaunt unto right;
 When not for malice and contentious crymes,
 But all for prayse and prooffe of manly might,
 The martiall brood accustomed to fight:
 Then honour was the meed of victory,
 And yet the vanquished had no despyght:
 Let later age that noble use envy,
 Vyle rancor to avoid and cruell surquedry!

Long they thus traueiled in friendly wise,
 Through countreyes waste, and eke well edifyde,
 Seeking adventures hard, to exercise
 Their puissaunce, whylome full dernly tryde:
 At length they came into a forest wyde,
 Whose hideous horror and sad trembling sownd
 Full griesly seemed: therein they long did ryde,
 Yet tract of living creature none they fownd,
 Save beares, lyons, and buls, which romed them arownd.

All suddenly out of the thickest brush,
 Upon a milk-white palfrey all alone,
 A goodly lady did foreby them rush,
 Whose face did seeme as cleare as christall stone,
 And eke, through feare, as white as whalës bone:
 Her garments all were wrought of beaten gold,
 And all her steed with tinsell trappings shone,
 Which fledd so fast that nothing mote him hold,
 And scarce them leasure gave her passing to behold.

Still as she fledd her eye she backward threw,
 As fearing evill that poursewed her fast;
 And her faire yellow locks behind her flew,
 Loosely disperst with puff of every blast:
 All as a blazing starre doth farre outcast
 His hearie beames, and flaming locks dispredd,
 At sight whereof the people stand aghast;
 But the sage wisard telles as he has redd,
 That it impörtunes death and dolefull dreryhedd.

So as they gazed after her awhyle,
 Lo! where a griesly foster forth did rush,
 Breathing out beastly lust her to defyle:
 His tyreling jade he fiersly forth did push
 Through thicke and thin, both over banek and bush,
 In hope her to attaine by hooke or crooke,
 That from his gory sydes the blood did gush:
 Large were his limbes, and terrible his looke,
 And in his clownish hand a sharp bore-speare he shooke.

Which outrage when those gentle knights did see,
 Full of great envy and fell gealosy,
 They stayd not to avise who first should bee,
 But all spurd after, fast as they mote fly,
 To reskew her from shamefull villany.
 The prince and Guyon equally bylive
 Herselfe pursewd, in hope to win thereby
 Most goodly meede, the fairest dame alive:
 But after the foule foster Timias did strive.

The whiles faire Britomart, whose constant mind
 Would not so lightly follow beauties chace,
 Ne reekt of ladies love, did stay behynd;
 And them awaited there a certaine space,
 To weete if they would turne backe to that place:
 But when she saw them gone, she forward went,
 As lay her iourney, through that perlous pace,
 With stedfast corage and stout hardiment;
 Ne evil thing she feard, ne evill thing she ment.

At last, as nigh out of the wood she came,
 A stately castle far away she spyde,
 To which her steps directly she did frame.
 That castle was most goodly edifyde,
 And plaste for pleasure nigh that forrest syde:
 But faire before the gate a spacious playne,
 Mantled with greene, itselſe did spredden wyde,
 On which she saw six knights, that did darrayne
 Fiers battaill against one with cruell might and mayne.

Mainely they all attonce upon him laid,
 And sore besett on every side arownd,
 That nigh he breathlesse grew, yet nought dismaid,
 Ne ever to them yielded foot of grownd,
 All had he lost much blood through many a wownd;
 But stoutly dealt his blowes, and every way,
 To which he turned in his wrathfull stownd,
 Made them recoile, and fly from dredd decay,
 That none of all the six before him durst assay:

Like dastard cures, that, having at a bay
 The salvage beast embost in wearie chace,
 Dare not adventure on the stubborne pray,
 Ne byte before, but rome from place to places
 To get a snatch when turned is his face.
 In such distresse and doubtfull ieopardy
 When Britomart him saw, she ran apace
 Unto his reskew, and with earnest cry
 Badd those same six forbear that single enemy.

But to her cry they list not lenden eare,
 Ne ought the more their mightie strokes surceasse;
 But, gathering him rownd about more neare,
 Their direfull rancour rather did encrease;
 Till that she, rushing through the thickest preasse,
 Perforce disparted their compacted gyre,
 And soone compeld to hearken unto peace:
 Tho gan she myldly of them to inquire
 The cause of their dissention and outrageous yre.

Whereto that single knight did answere frame;
 "These six would me enforce, by oddes of might,
 To chaunge my lief, and love another dame;
 That death me liefer were then such despight,
 So unto wrong to yield my wrested right:
 For I love one, the truest one on grownd,
 Ne list me chaunge; she th' errant damzell hight;
 For whose deare sake full many a bitter stownd
 I have endurd, and tasted many a bloody wound."

"Certes," said she, "then beene ye sixe to blame,
 To weene your wrong by force to iustify:
 For knight to leave his lady were great shame
 That faithfull is; and better were to dy.
 All losse is lesse, and lesse the infamy,
 Then losse of love to him that loves but one:
 Ne may love be compeld by maistery;
 For, soone as maistery comes, sweet love anone
 Taketh his nimble winges, and soone away is gone."

Then spake one of those six; "There dwelleth here
 Within this castle-wall a lady fayre,
 Whose soveraine beautie hath no living pere;
 Thereto so bounteous and so debonayre,
 That never any mote with her compayre:
 She hath ordaind this law, which we approve,
 That every knight which doth this way repayre,
 In case he have no lady nor no love,
 Shall doe unto her service, never to remove:

"But if he have a lady or a love,
 Then must he her forgoe with fowle defame,
 Or els with us by dint of sword approve,
 That she is fairer than our fairest dame;
 As did this knight, before ye hether came."
 "Perdy," said Britomart, "the choise is hard!
 But what reward had he that overcame?"
 "He should advaunced bee to high regard,"
 Said they, "and have our ladies love for his reward."

"Therefore aread, 'sir, if thou have a love."
 "Love have I sure," quoth she, "but lady none;
 Yet will I not fro mine owne love remove,
 Ne to your lady will I service done,
 But wreake your wronges wrought to this knight alon
 And prove his cause." With that, her mortall speare
 She mightily aventred towards one,
 And downe him smot ere well aware he weare;
 Then to the next she rode, and downe the next did beare.

Ne did she stay till three on ground she layd,
 That none of them himselfe could reare againe:
 The fourth was by that other knight dismayd,
 All were he wearie of his former paine;
 That now there do but two of six remaine;
 Which two did yield before she did them smight.
 "Ah!" said she then, "now may ye all see plaine,
 That truth is strong, and trew love most of might,
 That for his trusty servaunts doth so strongly fight."

"Too well we see," saide they, "and prove too well
 Our faulty weakness, and your matchlesse might:
 Forthy, faire sir, yours be the damozell,
 Which by her owne law to your lot doth light,
 And we your liegemen faith unto you plight."
 So underneath her feet their swords they mard,
 And, after, her besought, well as they might,
 To enter in and reape the dew reward:
 She graunted; and then in they all together far'd."

Long were it to describe the goodly frame
 And stately port of Castle Ioyeous,
 (For so that castle hight by common name,)
 Where they were entertaynd with courteous
 And comely glee of many gracious
 Faire ladies, and of many a gentle knight;
 Who, through a chamber long and spacious,
 Eftsoones them brought unto their ladies sight,
 That of them cleeped was the lady of delight.

But, for to tell the sumptuous aray
 Of that great chamber, should be labour lost;
 For living wit, I weene, cannot display
 The roiall riches and exceeding cost
 Of every pillour and of every post,
 Which all of purest bullion framed were,
 And with great perles and pretious stones embost;
 That the bright glister of their beames cleare
 Did sparckle forth great light, and glorious did appeare.

These stranger knights, through passing, forth were led
 Into an inner rowme, whose royaltee
 And rich purveyance might uneth be red;
 Mote Princes place beseme so deckt to bee,
 Which stately manner whenas they did see,
 The image of superfluous riotize,
 Exceeding much the state of meane degree,
 They greatly wondred whence so sumptuous guize
 Might be maintaynd, and each gan diversely devize.

The wals were round about apparelled
 With costly clothes of Arras and of Toure;
 In which with cunning hand was pourtrahed
 The love of Venus and her paramoure,
 The sayre Adonis, turned to a flowre;
 A work of rare device and wondrous wit.
 First did it shew the bitter balefull stowre,
 Which her essayd with many a fervent sit,
 When first her tender hart was with his beautie smit.

Then with what sleights and sweet allurements she
 Entyst the boy, as well that art she knew,
 And wooed him her paramoure to bee;
 Now making girlonds of each flowre that grew,
 To crowne his golden lockes with honour dew;
 Now leading him into a secret shade
 From his beauperes, and from bright heavens vew,
 Where him to sleepe she gently would perswade,
 Or bathe him in a fountaine by some covert glade:

And, whilst he slept, she over him would spread
 Her mantle colour'd like the starry skyes,
 And her soft arme lay underneath his hed,
 And with ambrosiall kisses bathe his eyes;
 And, whilst he bath'd, with her two crafty speys
 She secretly would search each daintie lim,
 And throw into the well sweet rosemaryes,
 And fragrant violets, and paunces trim;
 And ever with sweet nectar she did sprinkle him.

So did she steale his beedelesse hart away,
 And ioyd his love in secret unespyde:
 But for she saw him bent to cruell play,
 To hunt the salvage beast in forrest wyde,
 Dreadfull of daunger that mote him betyde,
 She oft and oft adviz'd him to refraine
 From chase of greater beastes, whose brutish pryde
 Mote breede him seath unwares: but all in vaine;
 For who can shun the chance that dest'ny doth ordaine?

Lo! where beyond he lyeth languishing,
 Deadly engored of a great wilde bore;
 And by his side the goddesse groveling
 Makes for him endlesse mone, and evermore
 With her soft garment wipes away the gore
 Which staynes his snowy skin with hatefull hew:
 But, when she saw no helpe might him restore,
 Him to a dainty flowre she did transmew,
 Which in that cloth was wrought, as if it lively grew.

So was that chamber clad in goodly wize:
 And rownd about it many beds were dight,
 As whylome was the antique worldës guize,
 Some for untimely ease, some for delight,
 As pleased them to use that use it might:
 And all was full of damzels and of squyres,
 Dauncing and reveling both day and night,
 And swimming deepe in sensuall desyres;
 And Cupid still emongest them kindled lustfull fyres.

And all the while sweet musicke did divide
 Her looser notes with Lydian harmony;
 And all the while sweete birdes thereto applide
 Their daintie layes and dulcet melody,
 Ay caroling of love and iollity,
 That wonder was to heare their trim consòrt.
 Which when those knights beheld, with scornefull eye
 They sdeigned such lascivious disport,
 And loath'd the loose demeanure of that wanton sort.

Thence they were brought to that great ladies vew,
 Whom they found sitting on a sumptuous bed,
 That glistred all with gold and glorious shew,
 As the proud Persian queenes accustomed:
 She seemd a woman of great bountihed
 And of rare beautie, saving that askaunce
 Her wanton eyes (ill signes of womanhed)
 Did roll too lightly, and too often glaunce,
 Without regard of grace or comely amenaunce.

Long worke it were, and needlesse, to devize
 Their goodly entertainment and great glee:
 She caused them be led in courteous wize
 Into a bowre, disarmed for to be,
 And cheared well with wine and spicerec:
 The Redcrosse Knight was soon disarmed there;
 But the brave mayd would not disarmed bee,
 But onely vented up her umbrière,
 And so did let her goodly visage to appere.

As when fayre Cynthia, in darksome night,
 Is in a noyous cloud enveloped,
 Where she may finde the substance thin and light,
 Breakes forth her silver beames, and her bright hed
 Discovers to the world discomfited;
 Of the poore traveller that went astray
 With thousand blessings she is heried:
 Such was the beautie and the shining ray,
 With which fayre Britomart gave light unto the day.

And eke those six, which lately with her fought,
 Now were disarmd, and did themselves present
 Unto her vew, and company unsought;
 For they all seemed courteous and gent,
 And all sixe brethren, borne of one parent,
 Which had them traynd in all civillitee,
 And goodly taught to tilt and turnament;
 Now were they liegmen to this ladie free,
 And her knights-service ought, to hold of her in fee.

The first of them by name Gardantè hight,
 A iolly person, and of comely vew;
 The second was Parlantè, a hold knight;
 And next to him Iocantè did ensue;
 Basciantè did himselfe most courteous shew;
 But fierce Bacchantè seemd too fell and keene;
 And yett in armes Noctantè greater grew:
 All were faire knights, and goodly well besene;
 But to faire Britomart they all but shadowes beene.

For shee was full of amiable grace
 And manly terror mixed therewithall;
 That as the one stird up affections bace,
 So th' other did mens rash desires apall,
 And hold them backe that would in error fall:
 As hee that hath espide a vermeill rose,
 To which sharp thornes and breres the way forstall,
 Dare not for dread his hardy hand expose,
 But, wishing it far off, his ydle wish doth lose.

Whom when the lady saw so faire a wight,
 All ignorant of her contráry sex,
 (For shee her weend a fresh and lusty knight,)
 Shee greatly gan enamoured to wex,
 And with vaine thoughts her falsed fancy vex:
 Her fickle hart conceived hasty fyre,
 Like sparkes of fire which fall in selender flex,
 That shortly brent into extreme desyre,
 And ransackt all her veines with passion entyre.

Estsoones shee grew to great impatience,
 And into termes of open outrage brust,
 That plaine discovered her incontinence;
 Ne reekt shee who her meaning did mistrust;
 For she was given all to fleshly lust,
 And poured forth in sensuall delight,
 That all regard of shame she had discust,
 And meet respect of honor put to flight:
 So shamelesse beauty soone becomes a loathly sight.

Faire ladies, that to love captiued arre,
 And chaste desires doe nourish in your mind,
 Let not her fault your sweete affections marre;
 Ne blott the bounty of all womankind
 'Mongst thousands good, one wanton dame to find:
 'Emongst the roses grow some wicked weeds:
 For this was not to love, but lust, inclin'd;
 For love does alwaies bring forth bounteous deeds,
 And in each gentle hart desire of honor breeds.

Nought so of love this looser dame did skill,
 But as a cole to kindle fleshly flame,
 Giving the bridle to her wanton will,
 And treading under foote her honest name:
 Such love is hate, and such desire is shame.
 Still did she rove at her with crafty glaunce
 Of her false eies, that at her hart did ayme,
 And told her meaning in her countenaunce;
 But Britomart dissembled it with ignoraunce.

Supper was shortly dight, and downe they satt;
 Where they were served with all sumptuous fare,
 Whiles fruitfull Ceres and Lyæus fatt
 Poured out their plenty, without spight or spare;
 Nought wanted there that dainty was and rare:
 And aye the cups their baneks did overflow:
 And aye betweene the cups she did prepare
 Way to her love, and secret darts did throw;
 But Britomart would not such guilfull message know.

So, when they slaked had the fervent heat
 Of appetite with meates of every sort,
 The lady did faire Britomart entreat
 Her to disarm, and with delightfull sport
 To loose her warlike limbs and strong effort:
 But when shee mote not thereunto be wounne,
 (For shee her sexe under that straunge purpört
 Did use to hide, and plaine apparaunce shonne,)
 In playner wise to tell her grievance she begonne;

And all attonce discovered her desire
 With sighes, and sobs, and plaints, and piteous grieve,
 The outward sparkes of her in-burning fire:
 Which spent in vaine, at last she told her brieve,
 That, but if she did lend her short reliefe
 And doe her comfort, she mote algates dye.
 But the chaste damzell, that had never priefe
 Of such malengine and fine forgerye,
 Did easely beleewe her strong extremitye.

Full easy was for her to have beliefe,
 Who by self-feeling of her feeble sexe,
 And by long triall of the inward grieve
 Wherewith imperious love her hart did vexe,
 Could iudge what paines doe loving harts perplexe.
 Who means no guile, be guiled soonest shall,
 And to faire semblaunce doth light faith annexe;
 The bird, that knowes not the false fowlers call,
 Into his hidden nett full easely doth fall.

Forthy she would not in discourteise wise
 Scorne the faire offer of good will profest;
 For great rebuke it is love to despise,
 Or rudely sdeigne a gentle harts request;
 But with faire countenaunce, as besecm'd best,
 Her entertaynd; nath'lesse shee inly deemd
 Her love too light, to wooe a wandring guest.
 Which she misconstruing, thereby esteemd
 That from like inward fire that outward smoke had steemd.

Therewith awhile she her flit fancy fedd,
 Till she mote winne fit time for her desire;
 But yet her wound still inward freshly bledd,
 And through her bones the false instilled fire
 Did spred itselfe, and venime close inspire.
 Tho were the tables taken all away;
 And every knight, and every gentle squire,
 Gan choose his dame with bascioman gay,
 With whom he ment to make his sport and courtly play.

Some fell to daunce; some fell to hazardry;
 Some to make love; some to make meryment;
 As diverse witts to diverse things apply:
 And all the while faire Malecasta bent
 Her crafty engins to her close intent.
 By this th' eternall lampes, wherewith high Iove
 Doth light the lower world, were halfe yspent,
 And the moist daughters of huge Atlas strove
 Into the ocean deepe to drive their weary drove.

High time it seemed then for everie wight
 Them to betake unto their kindly rest:
 Estesoones long waxen torches weren light
 Unto their bowres to guyden every guest:
 Tho, when the Britonesse saw all the rest
 Avoided quite, she gan herselfe despoile,
 And safe committ to her soft fethered nest;
 Wher through long watch, and late daies weary toile,
 She soundly slept, and carefull thoughts did quite assoile.

Now whenas all the world in silence deepe
 Yshrowded was, and every mortall wight
 Was drowned in the depth of deadly sleepe;
 Faire Malecasta, whose engrieved spright
 Could find no rest in such perplexed plight,
 Lightly arose out of her wearie bed,
 And, under the blacke vele of guilty night,
 Her with a scarlott mantle covered,
 That was with gold and ermines faire enveloped.

Then panting softe, and trembling every ioynt,
 Her fearefull feete towards the bowre she mov'd
 Where she for secret purpose did appoynt
 To lodge the warlike maide, unwisely loov'd;
 And, to her bed approching, first she proov'd
 Whether she slept or wakte: with her softe hand
 She softly felt if any member moov'd,
 And lent her wary eare to understand
 If any puffle of breath or signe of sence shee fond.

Which whenas none she fond, with easy shifte,
 For feare least her unwares she should abrayd,
 Th' embroder'd quilt she lightly up did lifte,
 And by her side herselfe she softly layd,
 Of every finest fingers touch affrayd;
 Ne any noise she made, ne worde she spake,
 But inly sighd. At last the royall mayd
 Out of her quiet slomber did awake,
 And chaungd her weary side the better ease to take.

Where feeling one close couched by her side,
 She lightly lept out of her filed bedd,
 And to her weapon ran, in minde to gride
 The loathed leachour: but the dame, halfe dedd
 Through suddaine feare and ghastly drerihedd,
 Did shrieke alowd, that through the hous it rong,
 And the whole family therewith adredd
 Rashly out of their rouzed couches sprong,
 And to the troubled chamber all in armes did throng.

And those sixe knightes, that ladies champions,
 And eke the Redcrosse knight ran to the stownd,
 Halfe armd and halfe unarmd, with them attons;
 Where when confusedly they came, they fownd
 Their lady lying on the sencelesse grownd;
 On th' other side they saw the warlike mayd
 Al in her snow-white smocke, with locks unbownd,
 Threatning the point of her avenging blade;
 That with so troublous terror they were all dismayd.

About their ladye first they flockt arownd;
Whom having laid in comfortable couch,
Shortly they reard out of her frozen swownd;
And afterwarde they gan with fowle reproch
To stirre up strife, and troublous contecke broch:
But, by ensample of the last dayes losse,
None of them rashly durst to her approach,
Ne in so glorious spoile themselves embosse:
Her succourd eke the champion of the bloody crosse.

But one of those sixe knights, Gardantè hight,
Drew out a deadly bow and arrow keene,
Which forth he sent with felonous despight
And fell intent against the virgin sheene:
The mortall steele stayd not till it was seene
To gore her side; yet was the wound not deepe,
But lightly rased her soft silken skin,
That drops of purple blood thereout did weepe,
Which did her lily smock with staines of vermeil steep.

Wherewith enrag'd she fiercely at them flew,
And with her flaming sword about her layd,
That none of them foule mischief could eschew,
But with her dreadfull strokes were all dismayd:
Here, there, and every where, about her swayd.
Her wrathfull steele, that none mote it abyde;
And eke the Redcrosse knight gave her good ayd,
Ay ioyning foot to foot, and syde to syde;
That in short space their foes they have quite terrifyde.

Tho, whenas all were put to shamefull flight,
The noble Britomartis her arayd,
And her bright armes about her body dight;
For nothing would she lenger there be stayd,
Where so loose life and so ungentle trade
Was usd of knightes and ladies seeming gent:
So, earely, ere the grosse earthes gryesy shade,
Was all disperst out of the firmament,
They tooke their steeds, and forth upon their iourney went.

CANTO II.

The Redcrosse knight to Britomart

Describeth Artegall:

The wondrous myrrhour, by which she
In love with him did fall.

HERE have I cause in men iust blame to find,
That in their proper praise too partiall bee,
And not indifferent to woman kind,
To whom no share in armes and chevalree
They doe impart, ne maken memoree.
Of their brave gestes and prowesse martiall:
Scarse do they spare to one, or two or three,
Rowme in their writtes; yet the same writing small
Does all their deedes deface, and dims their glories all.

But by recórd of ántique times I finde
That women wont in warres to beare most sway,
And to all great exploites themselves inclin'd,
Of which they still the girlond bore away;
Till envious men, fearing their rules decay,
Gan coyne streight lawes to curb their liberty:
Yet, sith they warlike armes have laide away,
They have exceld in artes and pollicy,
That now we foolish men that prayse gin eke t' envy.

Of warlike puissaunce in ages spent,
Be thou, faire Britomart, whose prayse I wryte;
But of all wisdom be thou preecedent,
O souveraine Queene whose prayse I would endyte,
Endite I would as dewtie doth exeyte;
But ah! my rymes too rude and rugged arre,
When in so high an object they doe lyte,
And, striving fit to make, I feare doe marre:
Thyselfe thy prayses tell, and make them knowen farre.

She, traveling with Guyon, by the way
Of sondry thinges faire purpose gan to find,
T'abridg their iourney long and lingring day:
Mongst which it fell into that Fairies mind
To aske this Briton Maid, what uncouth wind
Brought her into those partes, and what inquest
Made her dissemble her disguised kind:
Faire lady she him seemd like lady drest,
But fairest knight alive when armed was her brest.

Thereat she sighing softly had no powre
 To speake awhile. ne ready answere make ;
 But with hart-thrilling throbs and bitter slowre,
 As if she had a fever fitt, did quake,
 And every daintie limbe with horreur shake ;
 And ever and anone the rosy red
 Flasht through her face, as it had beene a flake
 Of lightning through bright heven fulmined :
 At last, the passion past, she thus him answered :

“ Faire sir, I let you weete, that from the howre
 I taken was from nourses tender pap,
 I have been trained up in warlike stowre,
 To tossen speare and shield, and to affrap
 The warlike ryder to his most mishap ;
 Sithence I loathed have my life to lead,
 As ladies wont, in pleasures wanton lap,
 To finger the fine needle and nyce thread,
 Me lever were with point of foemans speare be dead.

“ All my delight on deedes of armes is sett,
 To hunt out perilles and adventures hard,
 By sea, by land, whereso they may be met
 Onely for honour and for high regard,
 Without respect of richesse or reward :
 For such intent into these partes I came,
 Withouten compasse or withouten card,
 Far fro my native soyle, that is by name
 The Greater Brytayne, here to seeke for praise and fame.

“ Fame blazed hath, that here in Faery Lond
 Doe many famous knightes and ladies wonne,
 And many straunge adventures to bee foud,
 Of which great worth and worship may be wonne :
 Which to prove, I this voyage have begonne.
 But mote I weet of you, right courteous knight,
 Tydings of one that hath unto me donne
 Late foule dishonour and reprochfull spight,
 The which I seek to wreake, and Arthegall he hight.”

The worde gone out she backe againe would call,
 As her repenting so to have missayd,
 But that he, it uptaking ere the fall,
 Her shortly answered ; “ Faire martiall mayd,
 Certes ye misavised beene t' upbrayd
 A gentle knight with so unknightly blame ;
 For, weet ye well, of all that ever playd
 At tilt or tourney, or like warlike game,
 The noble Arthegall hath ever borne the name.

I am not to please. Write.
 I have a fine needle and a
 I have a fine point of needle.

I am not to please. Write.
 I have a fine needle and a
 I have a fine point of needle.
 When I am not to please.
 I am not to please. Write.
 I have a fine needle and a
 I have a fine point of needle.

I am not to please. Write.
 I have a fine needle and a
 I have a fine point of needle.
 When I am not to please.

"Forthy great wonder were it, if such shame
Should ever enter in his bounteous thought,
Or ever doe that mote deservén blame:
The noble corage never weeneth ought
That may unworthly of itselfe be thought.
Therefore, faire damzell, be ye well aware,
Least that too farre ye have your sorrow sought:
You and your country both I wish welfare,
And honour both; for each of other worthy are."

The royall maid woxe inly wondrous glad,
To heare her love so highly magnifyde;
And ioyd that ever she affixed had
Her hart on knight so goodly-glorifyde,
However finely she it fained to hyde.
The loving mother, that nine monethes did beare
In the deare closett of her painefull syde
Her tender babe, it seeing safe appeare,
Doth not so much reioyce as she reioycéd theare.

But to occasion him to further talke,
To feed her humor with his pleasing style,
Her list in stryfull termes with him to balke,
And thus replyde; "However, sir, ye fyle
Your courteous tongue his prayses to compyle,
It ill beseemes a knight of gentle sort,
Such as ye have him boasted, to beguyle
A simple maide, and worke so hainous tort,
In shame of knighthood, as I largely can report.

"Let bee therefore my vengeance to disswade,
And read, where I that Faytour false may find."
"Ah! but if reason faire might you perswade
To slake your wrath, and mollify your mind,"
Said he, "perhaps ye should it better find:
For hardie thing it is, to weene by might
That man to hard conditions to bind;
Or ever hope to match in equall fight.
Whose prowess paragone saw never living wight.

"Ne soothlich is it easie for to read
Where now on earth, or how, he may be fownd;
For he ne wonneth in one certeine stead,
But restlesse walketh all the world arownd,
Ay doing thinges that to his fame redownd,
Defending ladies cause and orphans right,
Whereso he heares that any doth confownd
Them comfortlesse through tyranny or might;
So is his souveraine honour raisde to hevén's hight."

His feeling wordes her feeble-sence much pleased,
 And softly sunck into her molten hart :
 Hart, that is inly hurt, is greatly eased
 With hope of thing that may allegge his smart ;
 For pleasing wordes are like to magick art,
 That doth the charmed snake in slomber lay :
 Such secrete ease felt gentle Britomart,
 Yet list the same efforce with faind gainesay ;
 (So dischord ofte in musick makes the sweeter lay ;)

And sayd ; " Sir knight, these ydle termes forbear ;
 And, sith it is uncathe to find his haunt,
 Tell me some markes by which he may appeare,
 If chaunce I may him encounter paravaunt ;
 For perdy one shall other slay, or daunt : [stedd,
 What shape, what shield, what armes, what steed, what
 And whatso else his person most may vaunt ?"
 All which the Rederosse knight to point ared,
 And him in everie part before her fashioned.

Yet him in everie part before she knew,
 However list her now her knowledge sayne,
 Sith him whylome in Britayne she did vew,
 To her revealed in a mirrhour playne :
 Whereof did grow her first engrafted payne,
 Whose root and stalke so bitter yet did taste,
 That, but the fruit more sweetnes did contayne,
 Her wretched dayes in dolour she mote waste,
 And yield the pray of love to lothsome death at last.

By straunge occasion she did him behold,
 And much more straungely gan to love his sight,
 As it in bookes hath written beene of old.
 In Deheubarth, that now South-Wales is hight,
 What time King Ryence raign'd and dealed right,
 The great magitian Merlin had deviz'd,
 By his deepe science and hell-dreaded might
 A looking-glasse, right wondrously aguiz'd, [niz'd.
 Whose vertues through the wyde worlde soone were solem-

It vertue had to shew in perfect sight
 Whatever thing was in the world contaynd,
 Betwixt the lowest earth and hevens hight,
 So that it to the looker appertaynd :
 Whatever foe had wrought, or frend had faynd,
 Therein discovered was, ne ought mote pas,
 Ne ought in secret from the same remaynd ;
 Forthy it round and hollow shaped was,
 Like to the world itselfe, and seemd a world of glas.

Who wonders not, that reades so wonderous worke?
 But who does wonder, that has red the towre
 Wherein th' Aegyptian Phao long did lurke
 From all mens vew, that none might her discoure,
 Yet she might all men vew out of her bowre?
 Great Ptolomæe it for his Lemans sake
 Ybuidled all of glasse, by magicke powre,
 And also it impregnable did make;
 Yet, when his love was false, he with a peaze it brake.

Such was the glassy globe that Merlin made,
 And gave unto King Ryence for his gard,
 That never foes his kingdome might invade,
 But he it knew at home before he hard
 Tydings thereof, and so them still debar'd:
 It was a famous present for a prince,
 And worthy worke of infinite reward,
 That treasons could bewray, and foes convince:
 Happy this realme, had it remaind ever since!

One day it fortun'd fayre Britomart
 Into her fathers closet to repayre;
 For nothing he from her reserv'd apart,
 Being his onely daughter and his hayre;
 Where when she had espyde that mirrhour fayre,
 Herselfe awhile therein she vewd in vaine:
 Tho, her avizing of the vertues rare
 Which thereof spoken were, she gan againe
 Her to bethinke of that mote to herselfe pertaine.

But as it falleth, in the gentlest harts
 Imperious Love hath highest set his throne,
 And tyrannizeth in the bitter smarts
 Of them, that to him buxome are and prone:
 So thought this mayd (as maydens use to done)
 Whom fortune for her husband would allot;
 Not that she lusted after any one,
 For she was pure from blame of sinfull blott;
 Yet wist her life at last must lincke in that same knot.

Eftsoones there was presented to her eye
 A comely knight, all arm'd in complete wize,
 Through whose bright ventayle lifted up on hye
 His manly face, that did his foes agrize
 And frends to termes of gentle truce entize,
 Lookt foorth, as Phœbus face out of the east
 Betwixt two shady mountaynes doth arise:
 Portly his person was, and much increast
 Through his heroicke grace and honorable gest.

His crest was covered with a couchant hownd,
 And all his armour seemd of antique mould,
 But wondrous massy and assured sould,
 And round about yfretted all with gold,
 In which there written was, with cyphers old,
Achilles armes which Arthegall did win:
 And on his shield enveloped sevenfold
 He bore a crowned little ermlin,
 That deckt the azure field with her fayre pouldred skin.

The damzell well did vew his personage,
 And liked well; ne further fastned not,
 But went her way; ne her unguilty age
 Did weene, unwares, that her unlucky lot
 Lay hidden in the bottome of the pot:
 Of hurt unwist most daunger doth redound:
 But the false archer which that arrow shot
 So slyly that she did not feele the wound,
 Did smyle full smoothly at her weetlesse wofull stound.

Thenceforth the fether in her lofty crest,
 Ruffed of love, gan lowly to availe;
 And her prowd portaunce and her princely gest,
 With which she earst tryumphed, now did quaille:
 Sad, solemne, sowre, and full of fancies fraile,
 She woxe; yet wist she nether how, nor why;
 She wist not, silly mayd, what she did aile,
 Yet wist she was not well at ease perdy;
 Yet thought it was not love, but some meláneholy.

So soone as Night had with her pallid hew
 Defaste the beautie of the shyning skye,
 And reft from men the worldes desired vew,
 She with her nourse adowne to sleepe did lye;
 But sleepe full far away from her did fly:
 Instead thereof sad sighes and sorrowes deepe
 Kept watch and ward about her warily;
 That nought she did but wayle, and often steepe
 Her dainty couch with teares which closely she did weepe.

And if that any drop of slombring rest
 Did chaunce to still into her weary spright,
 When feeble nature felt herselfe opprest,
 Streightway with dreames, and with fantastick sight
 Of dreadfull things, the same was put to flight;
 That oft out of her bed she did astart,
 As one with vew of ghastly feends affright:
 Tho gan she to renew her former smart,
 And thinke of that fayre visage written in her hart.

One night, when she was tost with such unrest,
 Her aged nurse, whose name was Glaucè hight,
 Feeling her leape out of her loathed nest,
 Betwixt her feeble armes her quickly keight,
 And downe againe in her warme bed her digue:
 "Ah! my deare daughter, ah! my dearest dread,
 What uncouth fit," sayd she, "what evill plight
 Hath thee opprest, and with sad drearyhead
 Chaunged thy lively cheare, and living made thee dead?"

"For not of nought these suddein ghastly feares
 All night afflict thy naturall repose:
 And all the day, whenas thine equall peares
 Their fit disports with faire delight doe chose,
 Thou in dull corners doest thyself inclose;
 Ne tastest princes pleasures, ne doest spread
 Abroad thy fresh youths sayrest flowre, but lose
 Both leafe and fruite, both too untimely shed,
 As one in wilfull bale for ever buried.

"The time that mortall men their weary cares
 Do lay away, and all wilde beastes do rest,
 And every river eke his course forbeares,
 Then doth this wicked evill thee infest,
 And rive with thousand throbs thy thrilled brest:
 Like an huge Actn' of deepe engulfed gryefe,
 Sorrow is heaped in thy hollow chest,
 Whence foorth it breakes in sighes and anguish ryfe,
 As smoke and sulphure mingled with confused stryfe.

"Ay me! how much I feare least love it bee!
 But if that love it be, as sure I read
 By known signes and passions which I see,
 Be it worthy of thy race and royall seed,
 Then I avow, by this most sacred head
 Of my dear foster childe, to ease thy griefe
 And win thy will: therefore away doe dread:
 For death nor daunger from thy dew reliefe
 Shall me debarre: tell me, therefore, my liefest lief!"

So having sayd, her twixt her armès twaine
 Shee streightly straynd, and colled tenderly;
 And every trembling ioynt and every vaine
 Shee softly felt, and rubbed busily,
 To doe the frosen cold away to fly;
 And her faire dewy eies with kisses deare
 Shee ofte did bathe, and ofte againe did dry:
 And ever her impòrtund not to feare
 To let the secret of her hart to her appeare.

The damzell pauzd; and then thus fearfully;
 "Ah! nurse, what needeth thee to eke my payne?
 Is not enough that I alone doe dye,
 But it must doubled bee with death of twaine?
 For nought for me but death there doth remaine!"
 "O daughter deare," said she, "despeire no whit;
 For never sore but might a salve obtaine:
 That blinded god, which hath ye blindly smit,
 Another arrow hath your lovers hart to hit."

"But mine is not," quoth she, "like other wownd;
 For which no reason can finde remedy."
 "Was never such, but mote the like be fownd,"
 Said she; "and though no reason may apply
 Salve to your sore, yet love can higher stye
 Then reasons reach, and oft hath wonders donne."
 "But neither god of love nor god of skye
 Can doe," said she, "that which cannot be donne."
 "Things oft impossible," quoth she, "seeme ere begonne."

"These idle wordes," said she, "doe nought aswage
 My stubborne smart, but more annoiaunce breed:
 For no, no usuall fire, no usuall rage
 Yt is, O nourse, which on my life doth feed,
 And sucks the blood which from my hart doth bleed.
 But since thy faithfull zeale lets me not hyde
 My crime, (if crime it be,) I will it reed.
 Nor prince nor pere it is, whose love hath gryde
 My feeble brest of late, and launched this wound wyde.

"Nor man it is, nor other living wight;
 For then some hope I might unto me draw;
 But th' only shade and semblant of a knight,
 Whose shape or person yet I never saw,
 Hath me subiected to loves cruell law:
 The same one day, as me misfortune led,
 I in my fathers wondrous mirrhour saw,
 And, pleased with that seeming goodlyhed,
 Unwares the hidden hooke with baite I swallowed:

"Sithens it hath infixed faster hold,
 Within my bleeding bowells, and so sore
 Now ranckleth in this same fraile fleshy mould,
 That all mine entrailes flow with poisonous gore,
 And th' ulcer groweth daily more and more;
 Ne can my ronning sore finde remedec,
 Other than my hard fortune to deplore,
 And languish as the leafe faln from the tree,
 Till death make one end of my daies and miseree."

"Daughter," said she, "what need ye be dismayd?
 Or why make ye such monster of your minde?
 Of much more uncouth thing I was affrayd:
 Of filthy lust, contráry unto kinde:
 But this affection nothing straunge I finde;
 For who with reason can you aye reprove
 To love the semblaunt pleasing most your minde,
 And yield your heart whence ye cannot remove?
 No guilt in you, but in the tyranny of love.

"Not so th' Arabian Myrrhe did sett her mynd;
 Nor so did Biblis spend her pining hart;
 But lov'd their native flesh against al kynd,
 And to their purpose used wicked art:
 Yet playd Pasiphaë a more monstrous part,
 That lov'd a bull, and learnd a beast to bee:
 Such shamefull lustes who loaths not, which depart
 From course of nature and of modestee?
 Swete love such lewdnes bands from his faire companee.

"But thine, my deare, (welfare thy heart, my deare!)
 Though straunge beginuing had, yet fixed is
 On one that worthy may perhaps appeare;
 And certes seemes bestowed not amis:
 Joy thereof have thou and eternall blis!"
 With that, upleaning on her elbow weake,
 Her alablaster brest she soft did kis,
 Which all that while shee felt to pant and quake,
 As it an earth-quake were: at last she thus bespake;

"Beldame, your words doe worke me litle ease;
 For though my love be not so lewdly bent
 As those ye blame, yet may it nought appease
 My raging smart, ne ought my flame relent,
 But rather doth my helpelesse grieve augment.
 For they, however shamefull and unkinde,
 Yet did possesse their horrible intent:
 Short end of sorrowes they therby did finde;
 So was their fortune good, though wicked were their minde.

"But wicked fortune mine, though minde be good,
 Can have no end nor hope of my desire,
 But feed on shadowes whiles I die for food,
 And like a shadow wexe, whiles with entire
 Affection I doe languish and expire.
 I, fonder then Cephisus foolish chyld,
 Who, having vewed in a fountaine shere
 His face, was with the love thereof beguyld;
 I, fonder, love a shade, the body far exyld."

"Nought like," quoth shee; "for that same wretched boy
 Was of himselfe the ydle paramoure,
 Both love and lover, without hope of ioy;
 For which he faded to a watry flowre.
 But better fortune thine, and better howre,
 Which lov'st the shadow of a warlike knight;
 No shadow, but a body bath in powre:
 That body, wheresoever that it light,
 May learned be by cyphers, or by magicke night.

"But if thou may with reason yet repress
 The growing evill, ere it strength have gott,
 And thee abandond wholly do possesse;
 Against it strongly strive, and yield thee nott
 Til thou in open fielde adowne be smott:
 But if the passion mayster thy fraile might,
 So that needs love or death must be thy lott,
 Then I avow to thee, by wrong or right
 To compas thy desire, and find that loved knight."

Her chearefull words much cheard the feeble spright
 Of the sicke virgin, that her downe she layd
 In her warme bed to sleepe, if that she might;
 And the old-woman carefully displayd
 The clothes about her round with busy ayd;
 So that at last a litle creeping sleepe
 Surprizd her sence: shee, therewith well apayd,
 The drunken lamp down in the oyl did steepe,
 And sett her by to watch, and sett her by to weepe.

Earely, the morrow next, before that Day
 His ioyous face did to the world revele,
 They both uprose and tooke their ready way
 Unto the church, their praiers to appele,
 With great devotion, and with litle zeale:
 For the faire damzell from the holy herse
 Her love-sicke hart to other thoughts did steale:
 And that old dame said many an idle verse,
 Out of her daughters hart fond fancies to reverse.

Retourned home, the royall infant fell
 Into her former fitt; for why? no powre
 Nor guidaunce of herselfe in her did dwell.
 But th' aged nourse, her calling to her bowre,
 Had gathered rew, and savine, and the flowre
 Of camphora, and calamint, and dill;
 All which she in a earthen pot did poure,
 And to the brim with coltwood did it fill,
 And many drops of milk and blood through it did spill.

Then, taking thrise three heares from off her head,
 Them trebly breaded in a threefold lace,
 And round about the pots mouth bound the thread;
 And, after having whispered a space
 Certain sad words with hollow voice and bace,
 Shee to the virgin sayd, thrise sayd she itt;
 "Come, daughter, come; come, spit upon my face,
 Spitt thrise upon me, thrise upon me spitt;
 Th' uneven number for this busines is most fitt."

That sayd, hef rownd about she from her turnd,
 She turned her contráry to the sunne;
 Thrise she her turnd contráry, and returnd
 All cóntrary; for she the right did shunne;
 And ever what she did was streight undonne.
 So thought she to undoe her daughter's love:
 But love, that is in gentle brest begonne,
 No ydle charmes so lightly may remove;
 That well can witnesse, who by tryall it does prove.

Ne ought it mote the noble mayd awayle,
 Ne slake the fury of her cruell flame,
 But that shee still did waste, and still did wayle,
 That, through long languour and hart-burning brame,
 She shortly like a pyned ghost became
 Which long hath waited by the Stygian strond;
 That when old Glaucè saw, for feare least blame
 Of her miscarriage should in her be fond,
 She wist not how t'amend, nor how it to withstond.

CANTO III.

Merlin bewrayes to Britomart
 The state of Arthegall:
 And shewes the famous progeny,
 Which from them springen shall.

Most sacred fyre, that burnest mightily
 In living breasts, ykindled first above
 Emongst th' eternall spheres and lamping sky,
 And thence poud into men, which men call Love;
 Not that same, which doth base affections move
 In brutish mindes, and filthy lust inflame;
 But that sweete fit that doth true beautie love,
 And choseth Vertue for his dearest dame,
 Whence spring all noble deedes and never-dying fame:

Well did Antiquity a god thee deeme,
 That over mortall mindes hast so great might,
 To order them as best to thee doth seeme,
 And all their actions to direct aright:
 The fatall purpose of divine foresight
 Thou doest effect in destined descents,
 Through deepe impression of thy secret might,
 And stirredst up th' heroës high intents,
 Which the late world admyres for wondrous moniments.

But thy dredd dartes in none doe triumph more,
 Ne braver prooffe in any of thy powre
 Shewd'st thou, then in this royall maid of yore,
 Making her seeke an unknowne paramoure,
 From the worlds end, through many a bitter stowre;
 From whose two loynes thou afterwarde did rayse
 Most famous frutes of matrimoniall bowre,
 Which through the earth have spredd their living prayse,
 That fame in tromp of gold eternally displayes.

Begin then, O my dearest sacred dame,
 Daughter of Phœbus and of Memorye,
 That doest ennoble with immortal name
 The warlike worthies, from antiquitye,
 In thy great volume of eternitye:
 Begin, O Clio, and recount from hence
 My glorious souveraines goodly Auncestrye,
 Till that by dew degrees, and long pretense,
 Thou have it lastly brought unto her excellence.

Full many wayes within her troubled mind
 Old Glaucè cast to cure this ladies grieve;
 Full many wayes she sought but none could finde,
 Nor herbes, nor charmes, nor counsel that is chiefe
 And choisest med'cine for sick harts reliefe:
 Forthy great care she tooke, and greater feare,
 Least that it should her turne to fowle reprieft
 And sore reproch, whenso her father deare
 Should of his dearest daughters hard misfortune heare.

At last she her avisde, that he which made
 That mirrhour, wherein the sicke damosell
 So straungely vewed her straunge lovers shade,
 To weet, the learned Merlin, well could tell
 Under what coast of heaven the man did dwell,
 And by what means his love might best be wrought:
 For, though beyond the Africk Ismaël,
 Or th' Indian Peru he were, she thought
 Him forth through infinite endeavour to have sought.

Forthwith themselves disguising both in straunge
 And base attyre, that none might them bewray,
 To Maridunum, that is now by chaunge
 Of name Cayr-Merdin cald, they tooke their way:
 There the wise Merlin whylome wont (they say)
 To make his wonne, low underneath the ground,
 In a deepe delve, farre from the vew of day,
 That of no living wight he mote be found,
 Whenso he counseld with his sprights encompass round.

And, if thou ever happen that same way
 To traveill, go to see that dreadfull place:
 It is an hideous hollow cave (they say)
 Under a rock that lyes a little space
 From the swift Barry, tumbling down apace
 Emongst the woody hilles of Dyneuowre:
 But dare thou not, I charge, in any case
 To enter into that same balefull bowre,
 For feare the cruell feendes should thee unwares devowre:

But standing high aloft low lay thine care,
 And there such ghastly noyse of yron chaines
 And brasen caudrons thou shalt rombling heare,
 Which thousand sprights with long enduring paines
 Doe tosse, that it will stonn thy feeble braines;
 And oftentimes great grones, and grievous stownds,
 When too huge toile and labour them constraines;
 And oftentimes loud strokes and ringing sowndes
 From under that deepe rock most horribly rebowndes.

The cause, some say, is this: a litle while
 Before that Merlin dyde, he did intend
 A brasen wall in compas to compyle
 About Cairmardin, and did it commend
 Unto these sprights to bring to perfect end:
 During which worke the Lady of the Lake,
 Whom long he lov'd, for him in hast did send;
 Who, thereby forst his workemen to forsake,
 Them bownd, till his retourne, their labour not to slake.

In the mean time through that false ladies traine
 He was surprisd, and buried under beare,
 Ne ever to his worke returnd againe:
 Nath'lesse those feends may not their worke forbear,
 So greatly his commandement they feare,
 But there doe toyle and traveile day and night,
 Untill that brasen wall they up doe reare:
 For Merlin had in magick more insight
 Then ever him before or after living wight:

For he by wordes could call out of the sky
 Both sunne and moone, and make them him obay;
 The land to sea, and sea to maineland dry,
 And darksom night he eke could turne to day;
 Huge hostes of men he could alone dismay,
 And hostes of men of meanest thinges could frame
 Whenso him list his enimies to fray:
 That to this day, for terror of his fame,
 The feendes do quake when any him to them does name.

And, sooth, men say that he was not the sonne
 Of mortall syre or other living wight,
 But wondrously begotten, and begonne
 By false illusion of a guilefull spright
 On a faire lady Nonne, that whilome hight
 Matilda, daughter to Pubidius,
 Who was the lord of Marthtraval by right,
 And coosen unto king Ambrosius;
 Whence he indued was with skill so marveilous.

They, here arriving, staid awhile without,
 Ne durst adventure rashly in to wend,
 But of their first intent gan make new dout
 For dread of daunger, which it might portend:
 Untill the hardy mayd (with Love to frend)
 First entering, the dreadfull Mage there fownd
 Deepe busied 'bout worke of wondrous end,
 And writing straunge charácters in the grownd,
 With which the stubborne feendes he to his service bownd.

He nought was moved at their entraunce bold,
 For of their coming well he wist afore;
 Yet list them bid their businesse to unfold,
 As if ought in this world in secrete store
 Were from him hidden, or unknowne of yore.
 Then Glaucè thus; "Let not it thee offend,
 That we thus rashly through thy darksom dore,
 Unwares have prest; for either fatall end,
 Or other mightie cause, us two did hether send."

He bad tell on: and then she thus began;
 "Now have three moones with borrowd brothers light
 Thrise shined faire, and thrise seemd dim and wan,
 Sith a sore evill, which this virgin bright
 Tormenteth and doth plunge in dolefull plight,
 First rooting tooke; but what thing it mote bee,
 Or whence it sprong, I cannot read aright:
 But this I read, that, but if remedee
 Thou her afford, full shortly I her dead shall see."

Therewith th' enchaunter softly gan to smyle
 At her smooth speeches, weeting inly well
 That she to him dissembled womanish guyle,
 And to her said; "Beldame, by that ye tell
 More neede of leach-crafte hath your Damozell,
 Then of my skill: who helpe may have elsewhere,
 In vaine seekes wonders out of magick spell."
 Th' old woman wox half blanck those wordes to heare:
 And yet was loth to let her purpose plaine appeare;

And to him said: "Yf any leaches skill,
 Or other learned meanes, could have redrest
 This my deare daughters deepe-engrafted ill,
 Certes I should be loth thee to molest:
 But this sad evill, which doth her infest,
 Doth course of naturall cause farre exceed,
 And housed is within her hollow brest,
 That either seemes some cursed witches deed,
 Or evil spright, that in her doth such torment breed."

The wisard could no lenger beare her bord,
 But, bursting forth in laughter, to her sayd;
 "Glaucè, what needes this colourable word
 To cloke the cause that hath itselſe bewrayd?
 Ne ye, fayre Britomartis, thus arayd.
 More hidden are then sunne in cloudy vele;
 Whom thy good fortune, having fate obayd,
 Hath hether brought for succour to appele;
 The which the powres to thee are pleased to revele."

The doubtfull mayd, seeing herselfe descryde,
 Was all abasht, and her pure yvory
 Into a cleare carnation suddeine dyde;
 As fayre Aurora, rysing hastily,
 Doth by her blushing tell that she did lye
 All night in old Tithonus frozen bed,
 Whereof she seemes ashamed inwardly:
 But her old nurse was nought dishartened,
 But vauntage made of that which Merlin had ared;

And sayd; "Sith then thou knowest all our griefe,
 (For what doest not thou knowe?) of grace I pray,
 Pitty our playnt, and yield us meet reliefe!"
 With that the prophet still awhile did stay,
 And then his spirite thus gan foorth display;
 "Most noble virgin, that by fatall lōre
 Hast learn'd to love, let no whit thee dismay
 The hard beginne that meetes thee in the dore,
 And with sharpe fits thy tender hart oppresseth sore:

"For so must all things excellent begin;
 And eke enrooted deepe must be that tree,
 Whose big embodied braunches shall not lin
 Till they to heavens hight forth stretched bee.
 For from thy wombe a famous progenee
 Shall spring out of the auncient Trojan blood,
 Which shall revive the sleeping memoree
 Of those same antique peres, the heavens brood,
 Which Greeke and Asian rivers stayned with their blood.

"Renowned kings, and sacred emperours,
 Thy fruitfull offspring, shall from thee descend;
 Brave captaines, and most mighty warriours,
 That shall their conquests through all lands extend,
 And their decayed kingdomes shall amend:
 The feeble Britons, broken with long warre,
 They shall upreare, and mightily defend
 Against their forren foe that commes from farre,
 Till universall peace compound all civill iarre.

"It was not, Britomart, thy wandring eye
 Glauncing unwares in charmed looking-glas,
 But the streight course of heavenly destiny,
 Led with Eternall Providence, that has
 Guyded thy glaunce, to bring his will to pas:
 Ne is thy fate, ne is thy fortune ill,
 To love the prowest knight that ever was:
 Therefore submit thy wayes unto his will,
 And doe, by all dew meanes, thy destiny fulfill."

"But read," said Glauce, "thou magitian,
 What meanes shall she out-seeke, or what waies take?
 How shall she know, how shall she finde the man?
 Or what needes her to toyle, sith fates can make Way for themselves their purpose to pertake?"
 Then Merlin thus; "Indeede the fates are firme,
 And may not shrink, though all the world do shake:
 Yet ought mens good endeavours them confirme,
 And guyde the heavenly causes to their constant terme.

"The man, whom heavens have ordaynd to bee
 The spouse of Britomart, is Arthegall:
 He wonneth in the land of Fayëree,
 Yet is no Fay borne, ne sib at all
 To Elfes, but sprong of seed terrestriall,
 And whylome by false Faries stolen away,
 Whyles yet in infant cradle he did crall;
 Ne other to himselfe is knowne this day,
 But that he by an Elfe was gotten of a Fay:

"But sooth he is the sonne of Gorlois.
 And brother unto Cador, Cornish king;
 And for his warlike feates renowned is,
 From where the day out of the sea doth spring,
 Untill the closure of the evening:
 From thence him, firmly bound with faithfull band,
 To this his native soyle thou back shalt bring,
 Strongly to ayde his countrey to withstand
 The powre of forreine paynims which invade thy land.

"Great ayd thereto his mighty puissaunce
 And dreaded name shall give in that sad day;
 Where also prooffe of thy prow valiaunce
 Thou then shalt make, t' increase thy lover's pray:
 Long time ye both in armes shall beare great sway,
 Till thy wombes burden thee from them do call,
 And his last fate him from thee take away;
 Too rathe cut off by practise criminall
 Of secrete foes, that him shall make in mischief fall.

"With thee yet shall he leave, for memory
 Of his late puissaunce, his ymage dead,
 That living him in all activity
 To thee shall represent: he, from the head
 Of his coosen Constantius, without dread
 Shall take the crowne that was his fathers right,
 And therewith crowne himselfe in th' others stead:
 Then shall he issew forth with dreadfull might
 Against his Saxon foes in bloody field to fight.

"Like as a lyon that in drowsie cave
 Hath long time slept, himselfe so shall he shake;
 And, comming forth, shall spred his banner brave
 Over the troubled south, that it shall make
 The warlike Mertians for feare to quake:
 Thrise shall he fight with them, and twise shall win;
 But the third time shall fayre accordaunce make:
 And, if he then with victorie can lin,
 He shall his dayes with peace bring to his earthly in.

"His sonne, hight Vortipore, shall him succede
 In kingdome, but not in felicity:
 Yet shall he long time warre with happy speed
 And with great honour many batteills try;
 But at the last to th' importunity
 Of froward fortune shall be forst to yield:
 But his sonne Malgo shall full mightily
 Avenge his fathers losse with speare and shield,
 And his proud foes discomfit in victorious field.

"Behold the man! and tell me, Britomart,
 If ay more goodly creature thou didst see?
 How like a gyaunt in each manly part
 Beares he himselfe with portly maiestee,
 That one of th' old heroës seemes to bee!
 He the six islands, comprovinciall
 In auncient times unto great Britaince,
 Shall to the same reduce, and to him call
 Their sondry kings to do their homage severall.

"All which his sonne Careticus awhile
 Shall well defend, and Saxons powre suppress;
 Untill a straunger king, from unknowne soyle
 Arriving, him with multitude oppresse;
 Great Gormond, having with huge mightnesse
 Ireland subdewd, and therein fixt his throne,
 Like a swift otter, fell through emptinesse,
 Shall overswim the sea with many one
 Of his Norweyses, to assist the Britons sone.

"He in his furie all shall over-ronne,
 And holy church with faithlesse bandes deface,
 That thy sad people, utterly fordonne,
 Shall to the utmost mountaines fly apace:
 Was never so great waste in any place,
 Nor so fowle outrage doen by living men;
 For all thy citties they shall sacke and race,
 And the greene grasse that groweth they shall bren,
 And even the wilde beast shall dy in starved den.

"Whiles thus thy Britons doe in languour pine,
 Proud Etheldred shall from the north arise,
 Serving th' ambitious will of Augustine,
 And, passing Dee, with hardy enterprise
 Shall backe repulse the valiaunt Brockwell twise,
 And Bangor with massâered martyrs fill;
 But the third time shall rew his fool-hardise:
 For Cadwan, pittying his peoples ill,
 Shall stoutly him defeat, and thousand Saxons kill.

"But, after him, Cadwallin mightily
 On his sonne Edwin all those wrongs shall wreake;
 Ne shall availe the wicked sorcery
 Of false Pellite his purposes to breake,
 But him shall slay, and on a gallowes bleak
 Shall give th' enchaunter his unhappy hire:
 Then shall the Britons, late dismayd and weake,
 From their long vassallage gin to respire,
 And on their Paynim foes avenge their ranckled ire.

"Ne shall he yet his wrath misfigate,
 Till both the sonnes of Edwin he have slayne,
 Offricke and Osricke, twinnes unfortunate,
 Both slaine in battaile upon Layburne playne,
 Together with the King of Louthiane,
 Hight Adin, and the King of Orkeny,
 Both ioynt partakers of their fatall payne:
 But Penda, feurefull of like destency,
 Shall yield himselfe his liegeman, and sweare fealty:

"Him shall he make his fatall instrument
 T' afflict the other Saxons unsubdewd:
 He marching forth with fury insolent
 Against the good King Oswald, who indewd
 With heavenly powre, and by angels reskewd,
 All holding crosses in their hands on hye,
 Shall him defeate withouten blood imbrawd:
 Of which that field for endlesse memory
 Shall Hevenfield be cald to all posterity.

"Whereat Cadwallin wroth shall forth issew,
 And an huge hoste in Northumber lead,
 With which he godly Oswald shall subdew,
 And crowne with martiredome his sacred head:
 Whose brother Oswin, daunted with like dread,
 With price of silver shall his kingdome buy;
 And Penda seeking him adowne to tread,
 Shall tread adowne, and doe him fowly dye;
 But shall with gifts his lord Cadwallin pacify.

"Then shall Cadwallin die; and then the raine
 Of Britons eke with him attonce shall dye;
 No shall the good Cadwallader, with paine
 Or powre, be hable it to remedy,
 When the full time, prefixt by destiny,
 Shall be expird of Britons regiment:
 For heven itselfe shall their successe envy,
 And them with plagues and murrins pestilent
 Consume, till all their warlike puissaunce be spent.

"Yet after all these sorrowes, and hugo hills
 Of dying people, during eight yeares space,
 Cadwallader, not yielding to his ills,
 From Armoricke, where long in wretched cace
 He liv'd, retourning to his native place,
 Shall be my vision staide from his intent:
 For th' heavens have decreed to displace
 The Britons for their sinnes dew punishment,
 And to the Saxons over-give their government.

"Then woe, and woe, and everlasting woe,
 Be to the Briton babe that shal be borne,
 To live in thraldom of his fathers foe!
 Late king, now captive; late lord, now forlorne;
 The worlds reproch; the cruell victors scorne;
 Banisht from princely bowre to wasteful wood!
 O! who shall helpe me to lament and mourne
 The royall seed, the antique Trogan blood,
 Whose empire lenger here then ever any stood!"

The damzell was full deepe empassioned
 Both for his griefe, and for her peoples sake,
 Whose future woes so plaine he fashioned;
 And sighing sore, at length him thus bespake;
 "Ah! but will heavens fury never slake,
 Nor vengeance huge relent itselfe at last?
 Will not long misery late mercy make,
 But shall their name for ever be defaste,
 And quite from off the earth their memory be raste?"

"Nay but the terme," said he, "is limited,
 That in this thraldome Britons shall abide;
 And the iust revolution measured
 That they as straungers shall be notifide:
 For twise fowre hundreth yeares shal be supplide,
 Ere they to former rule restor'd shal bee,
 And their impörtune fates all satisfide:
 Yet, during this their most obscuritee,
 Their beames shall ofte breake forth, that men [may see.
 them faire

"For Rhodoricke, whose surname shal be Great,
 Shall of himselfe a brave ensample shew,
 That Saxon kings his friendship shall intreat;
 And Howell Dha shall goodly well indew
 The salvage minds with skill of iust and trew:
 Then Griffyth Conan also shall upreare
 His dreaded head, and the old sparkes renew
 Of native corage, that his foes shall feare
 Least back againe the kingdom he from them should beare.

"Ne shall the Saxons selves all peaceably
 Enioy the crowne, which they from Britons wonne
 First ill, and after ruled wickedly:
 For, ere two hundred yeares be full outronne,
 There shall a raven, far from rising sunne,
 With his wide wings upon them fiercely fly,
 And bid his faithlesse chickens overronne
 The fruitfull plaines, and with fell cruelty
 In their avenge tread downe the victors surquedry.

"Yet shall a third both these and thine subdew:
 There shall a lion from the sea-bord wood
 Of Neustria come roring, with a crew
 Of hungry whelpes, his battailous bold brood,
 Whose clawes were newly dipt in cruddy blood,
 That from the Daniske Tyrants head shall rend
 Th' usurped crowne, as if that he were wood,
 And the spoile of the countrey conquered
 Amongst his young ones shall divide with bountyhed.

"Tho, when the terme is full accomplishid,
 There shall a sparke of fire, which hath longwhile
 Bene in his ashes raked up and hid,
 Beo freshly kindled in the fruitfull ile
 Of Mona, where it lurked in exile;
 Which shall breake forth into bright burning flame,
 And reach into the house that beares the stile
 Of royall maiesty and soveraine name:
 So shall the Briton blood their crowne againe reclaime.

"Thenceforth eternall union shall be made
 Betweene the nations different afore,
 And sacred peace shall lovingly persuade
 The warlike minds to learne her goodly lore,
 And civile armes to exercise no more:
 Then shall a royall virgin raine, which shall
 Stretch her white rod over the Belgicke shore,
 And the great castle smite so sore withall,
 That it shall make him shake, and shortly learn to fall:

"But yet the end is not."—There Merlin stayd,
 As overcomen of the spirites powre,
 Or other ghastly spectacle dismayd,
 That secretly he saw, yet note discourse:
 Which suddein fitt and halfe extaticke stoure
 When the two fearefull women saw, they grew
 Greatly confused in behavcoure:
 At last, the fury past, to former hiew
 He turnd againe, and chearfull looks as earst did show.

Then, when themselves they well instructed had
 Of all that needed them to be inquired,
 They both, conceiving hope of comfort glad,
 With lighter hearts unto their home retired;
 Where they in secret counsell close conspird,
 How to effect so hard an enterprize,
 And to possesse the purpose they desird:
 Now this, now that, twixt them they did devise,
 And diverse plots did frame to maske in strange disguise.

At last the nourse in her fool-hardy wit
 Conceiv'd a bold devise, and thus bespake;
 "Daughter, I deeme that counsel aye most fit,
 That of the time doth dew aduantage take:
 Ye see that good king Uther now doth make
 Strong warre upon the Paynim brethren, hight
 Oeta and Oza, whome hee lately brake
 Beside Cayr Verolame in victorious fight.
 That now all Britany doth burne in armes bright.

"That therefore nought our passage may empeach,
 Let us in feigned armes ourselves disguise,
 And our weake hands (need makes good schollers) teach
 The dreadful speare and shield to exercise:
 Ne certes, daughter, that same warlike wize,
 I weene, would you mesceme; for ye beene tall
 And large of limbe t'atchieve an hard emprise;
 Ne ought ye want but skil, which practize small
 Will bring, and shortly make you a mayd martiall.

"And sooth, it ought your corage much inflame
 To heare so often, in that royall hous,
 From whence to none inferior ye came,
 Bards tell of many wemen valorous,
 Which have full many feats adventurous
 Perform'd, in paragone of proudest men:
 The bold Bunduca, whose victorious
 Exploits made Rome to quake; stout Guendolen;
 Renowmed Martia; and redoubted Emmilen;

"And that which more then all the rest may sway,
 Late dayes ensample, which these eies beheld:
 In the last field before Menevia,
 Which Uther with those forrein Pagans held,
 I saw a Saxon virgin, the which feld
 Great Ulfin thrise upon the bloody playne;
 And, had not Carados her hand withheld
 From rash revenge, she had him surely slayne;
 Yet Carados himselfe from her escapt with payne."

"Ah! read," quoth Britomart, "how is she hight?"
 "Fayre Angela," quoth she, "men do her call,
 No whit lesse fayre then terrible in fight:
 She hath the leading of a martiall
 And mightie people, dreaded more then all
 The other Saxons, which doe, for her sake
 And love, themselves of her name Angles call.
 Therefore, faire infant, her ensample make
 Unto thyselfe, and equall corage to thee take."

Her harty wordes so deepe into the mynd
 Of the young damzell sunke, that great desire
 Of warlike armes in her forthwith they tynd,
 And generous stout courage did inspyre,
 That she resolv'd, unweeting to her syre,
 Advent'rous knighthood on herselfe to don;
 And counsell'd with her nourse her maides attyre
 To turne into a massy habergeon;
 And bad her all things put in readiness anon.

Th' old woman nought that needed did omit;
 But all thinges did conveniently purway.
 It fortun'd (so time their turne did fitt)
 A band of Britons, ryding on forray
 Few dayes before, had gotten a great pray
 Of Saxon goods; emongst the which was seene
 A goodly armour, and full rich aray,
 Which long'd to Angela, the Saxon quene,
 All fretted round with gold and goodly wel besene.

The same, with all the other ornaments,
 King Ryence caused to be hanged by
 In his chiefe church, for endlesse monuments
 Of his successe and gladfull victory:
 Of which herselfe avising readily
 In th' evening late old Glaucè thether led
 Faire Britomart, and, that same armory
 Downe taking, her therein appareled
 Well as she might, and with brave bauldrick garnished.

Beside those armes there stood a mightie speare,
 Which Bladud made by magicke art of yore,
 And usd the same in batteill aye to beare;
 Sith which it had beene here preserv'd in store,
 For his great virtues proved long afore;
 For never wight so fast in sell could sit,
 But him perforce unto the ground it bore:
 Both speare she tooke and shield which hong by it;
 Both speare and shield of great powre, for her purpose fit.

Thus when she had the virgin all arayd,
 Another harnessse which did hang thereby
 About herselfe she dight, that the yong mayd
 She might in equall armes accompany,
 And as her squire attend her carefully:
 Tho to their ready steedes they clombe full light;
 And through back waies, that none might them espy,
 Covered with secret cloud of silent night,
 Themselves they forth convaid. and passed forward right.

Ne rested they, till that to Faery Lond
 They came, as Merlin them directed late;
 Where meeting with this Redcrosse knight she fond
 Of diverse thinges discourses to dilate,
 But most of Arthegall and his estate.
 At last their wayes so fell, that they mote part:
 Then each to other, well affectionate
 Friendship professed with unfained hart:
 The Redcrosse knight diverst; but forth rode Britomart.

CANTO IV.

Bold Marinell of Britomart
 Is throwne on the Rich Strand;
 Faire Florimell of Arthur is
 Long followed, but not fond.

WHERE is the antique glory now become,
 That whylome wont in wemen to appeare?
 Where be the brave atchievements doen by some?
 Where be the batteilles, where the shield and speare,
 And all the conquests which them high did reare,
 That matter made for famous poets verse,
 And boastfull men so oft abasht to heare?
 Beene they all dead, and laide in dolefull herse?
 Or doen they onely sleepe, and shall againe reverse?

If they be dead, then woe is me therefore;
 But if they sleepe, O let them soone awake!
 For all too long I burne with envy sore
 To heare the warlike feates which Homere spake
 Of bold Penthesilee, which made a lake
 Of Greekish blood so oft in Trojan plaine;
 But when I reade, how stout Debora strake
 Proud Sisera, and how Camill' hath slaine
 The huge Orsilochus, I swell with great disdaine.

Yet these, and all that els had puissaunce,
 Cannot with noble Britomart compare,
 Aswell for glorie of great valiaunce,
 As for pure chastitee and vertue rare,
 That all her goodly deedes doe well declare.
 Well worthie stock, from which the branches sprong
 That in late yeares so faire a blossome bare,
 As thee, O queene, the matter of my song,
 Whose lignage from this lady I derive along!

Who when, through speaches with the Redcrosse knight,
 She learned had th' estate of Arthegall,
 And in each point herselfe informd aright,
 A friendly league of love perpetuall
 She with him bound, and conge tooke withall.
 Then he forth on his iourney did proceede,
 To seeke adventures which mote him befall,
 And win him worship through his warlike deed,
 Which alwaies of his paines he made the chiefest meed.

But Britomart kept on her former course,
 Ne ever dofte her armes; but all the way
 Grew pensive through that amorous discourse,
 By which the Redcrosse knight did earst display
 Her lovers shape and cheualrous aray:
 A thousand thoughts she fashiond in her mind;
 And in her feigning fancie did pourtray
 Him, such as fittest she for love could find,
 Wise, warlike personable, courteous, and kind.

With such selfe-pleasing thoughts her wound she fedd,
 And thought so to beguile her grievous smart;
 But so her smart was much more grievous bredd,
 And the deepe wound more deep engorgd her hart,
 That nought but death her dolour mote depart.
 So forth she rode, without repose or rest,
 Searching all lands and each remotest part,
 Following the guydance of her blinded guest,
 Till that to the sea-coast at length she her address.

There she alighted from her light-foot beast,
 And, sitting down upon the rocky shore,
 Badd her old squire unlace her lofty creast:
 Tho, having vewd awhile the surges hore
 That gainst the craggy cliffs did loudly rore,
 And in their raging surquedry disdaynd
 That the fast earth affronted them so sore,
 And their devouring covetize restrynd,
 Thereat she sighed deepe, and after thus complaynd:

"Huge sea of sorrow and tempestuous grieve,
 Wherein my feeble barke is tossed long
 Far from the hoped haven of reliefe,
 Why doe thy cruel billowes beat so strong,
 And thy moyst mountaines each on others throng,
 Threatning to swallow up my fearefull lyfe?
 O, doe thy cruell wrath and spightfull wrong
 At length allay, and stint thy stormy strife,
 Which in these troubled bowels raignes and rageth ryfe!

"For els my feeble vessell, crazd and crackt
Through thy strong buffets and outrageous blowes,
Cannot endure, but needes it must be wrackt
On the rough rocks, or on the sandy shallôwes,
The whiles that Love it steres, and Fortune rowes.
Love, my lewd pilott, hath a restlesse minde;
And Fortune, boteswaine, no assuraunce knowes;
But saile withouten starres gainst tyde and winde:
How can they other doe, sith both are bold and blinde!

"Thou god of windes, that raignest in the seas,
That raignest also in the continent,
At last blow up some gentle gale of ease,
The which may bring my ship, ere it be rent,
Unto the gladsome port of her intent!
Then, when I shall myselfe in safety see,
A table, for eternall monument
Of thy great grace and my great icopardee,
Great Neptune, I avow to hallow unto thee!"

Then sighing softly sore, and inly deepe,
She shut up all her plaint in privy grieve;
(For her great courage would not let her weepe);
Till that old Glaucè gan with sharpe repriefe
Her to restraints, and give her good reliefe
Through hope of those, which Merlin had her told
Should of her name and nation be chiefe,
And fetch their being from the sacred mould
Of her immortall womb, to be in heaven enrold.

Thus as she her recomforted, she spyde
Where far away one, all in armour bright,
With hasty gallop towards her did ryde:
Her dolour soone she ceast, and on her dight
Her helmet, to her courser mounting light:
Her former sorrow into sudden wrath
(Both coosen passions of distroubled spright)
Converting, forth she beates the dusty path:
Love and despyght attonce her corage kindled hath.

As, when a foggy mist hath overcast
The face of heven and the cleare ayre engroste,
The world in darknes dwels; till that at last
The watry southwinde from the seaborde coste
Ublowing doth disperse the vapour lo'ste,
And poures itselke forth in a stormy showre;
So the fayre Britomart, having discloste
Her cloudy care into a wrathfull stowre,
The mist of grieve dissolv'd did into vengeance powre.

Eftsoones, her goodly shield addressing fayre,
 That mortall speare she in her hand did take,
 And unto battaill did herselfe prepayre.
 The knight, approaching, sternely her bespake :
 " Sir Knight, that doest thy voyage rashly make
 By this forbidden way in my despight,
 Ne doest by others death ensample take ;
 I read thee soone retyre, whiles thou hast night,
 Least afterwards it be too late to take thy flight."

Ythrild with deepe disdain of his proud threat,
 She shortly thus ; " Fly they, that need to fly ;
 Wordes fearen babes : I meane not thee entreat
 To passe ; but maugre thee will passe or dy :"
 Ne lenger stayd for th' other to reply,
 But with sharpe speare the rest made dearly knowne.
 Strongly the straunge knight ran, and sturdily
 Strooke her full on the breast, that made her downe
 Decline her head, and touch her crouper with her crown.

But she againe him in the shield did smite
 With so fierce furie and great puissaunce,
 That, through his three-square seuchin percing quite
 And through his mayled hauberque, by mischaunce
 The wicked steele through his left side did glaunce :
 Him so transfixed she before her bore
 Beyond his croupe, the length of all her launce ;
 Till, sadly soucing on the sandy shore,
 He tombled on an heape, and wallowd in his gore.

Like as the sacred oxe that carelesse stands
 With gilden hornes and flowry girlonds crownd,
 Proud of his dying honor and deare bandes,
 Whiles th' altars fume with frankincense arownd
 All suddenly with mortall stroke astownd
 Doth groveling fall, and with his streaming gore
 Distaines the pillours and the holy grownd,
 And the faire flowres that decked him afore :
 So fell proud Marinell upon the pretious shore.

The martiall mayd stayd not him to lament,
 But forward rode, and kept her ready way
 Along the Strond : which, as she over-went,
 She saw bestrowed all with rich aray
 Of pearles and pretious stones of great assay,
 And all the gravell mixt with golden owre :
 Whereat she wondred much, but would not stay
 For gold, or perles, or pretious stones, an howre,
 But them despised all ; for all was in her powre.

Whiles thus he lay in deadly stonishment,
 Tydings hereof came to his mothers eare;
 His mother was the blacke-browd Cymoënt,
 The daughter of great Nereus, which did beare
 This warlike sonne unto an earthly peare,
 The famous Dumarin; who on a day
 Finding the nymph asleepe in secret wheare,
 As he by chaunce did wander that same way,
 Was taken with her love, and by her closely lay.

There he this knight of her begot, whom borne
 She, of his father, Marinell did name;
 And in a rocky cave as wight forlorne
 Long time she fostred up, till he became
 A mighty man at armes, and mickle fame
 Did get through great adventures by him donne:
 For never man he suffred by that same
 Rich Strond to travell, whereas he did wonne,
 But that he must do battail with the sea-nymphes sonne.

An hundred knights of honorable name
 He had subdew'd, and them his vassals made:
 That through all Farie Lond his noble fame
 Now blazed was, and feare did all invade,
 That none durst passen through that perilous glade:
 And, to aduance his name and glory more,
 Her sea-god syre she dearely did perswade
 T' endow her sonne with threasure and rich store
 Bove all the sonnes that were of earthly wombes ybore.

The god did graunt his daughters deare demaund,
 To doen his nephew in all riches flow:
 Eftsoones his heaped waves he did commaund
 Out of their hollow bosome forth to throw
 All the huge threasure, which the sea below
 Had in his greedy gulfe devoured deepe,
 And him enriched through the overthrow
 And wreckes of many wretches, which did weepe
 And often wayle their wealth which he from them did keepe.

Shortly upon that shore there heaped was
 Exceeding riches and all pretious things,
 The spoyle of all the world; that it did pas
 The welth of th' East, and pompe of Persian kings:
 Gold, amber, yvorie, perles, owches, rings,
 And all that els was pretious and deare,
 The sea unto him voluntary brings;
 That shortly he a great lord did appeare,
 As was in all the lond of Faery, or elsewheare.

Thereto he was a doughty dreaded knight,
 Tryde often to the scath of many deare,
 That none in equall armes him matchen might:
 The which his mother seeing gan to feare
 Least his too haughtie hardines might reare
 Some hard mishap in hazard of his life:
 Forth she oft him counseld to forbear
 The bloody batteill, and to stirre up strife,
 But after all his warre to rest his wearie knife:

And, for his more assuraunce, she inquir'd
 One day of Proteus by his mighty spell
 (For Proteus was with prophecy inspir'd)
 Her deare sonnes destiny to her to tell,
 And the sad end of her sweet Marinell:
 Who, through foresight of his eternall skill,
 Bad her from womankind to keepe him well;
 For of a woman he should have much ill;
 A virgin straunge and stout him should dismay or kill.

Forth she gave him warning ever day
 The love of women not to entertaine;
 A lesson too too hard for living clay,
 From love in course of nature to refraine!
 Yet he his mothers lore did well retaine,
 And ever from fayre ladies love did fly;
 Yet many ladies fayre did oft complaine,
 That they for love of him would algates dy:
 Dy, whoso list for him, he was loves enemy.

But ah! who can deceive his destiny,
 Or weene by warning to avoyd his fate?
 That, when he sleepes in most security
 And safest scemes, him soonest doth amate,
 And findeth dew effect or soone or late;
 So feeble is the powre of fleshly arme!
 His mother bad him womens love to hate,
 For she of womans force did feare no harme;
 So weening to have arm'd him, she did quite disarm.

This was that woman, this that deadly wound,
 That Proteus prophecide should him dismay;
 The which his mother vainely did expound
 To be hart-wounding love, which should assay
 To bring her sonne unto his last decay.
 So tickle be the termes of mortall state
 And full of subtile sophismes, which doe play
 With double sences, and with false debate,
 T' approve the unknownen purpose of eternall fate.

Too trew the famous Marinell it fownd;
 Who, through late triall, on that wealthy strond
 Inglorious now lies in sencelesse swownd,
 Through heavy stroke of Britomartis hond.
 Which when his mother deare did understand,
 And heavy tidings heard, whereas she playd
 Amongst her watry sisters by a pond,
 Gathering sweete daffadillyes, to have made
 Gay girlonds from the sun their foreheads fayr to shade;

Eftesoones both flowres and girlonds far away
 She flong, and her faire deawy lockes yrent;
 To sorrow huge she turnd her former play,
 And gamesom merth to grievous dreriment:
 Shee threw herselfe downe on the continent,
 Ne word did speake, but lay as in a swowne,
 Whiles all her sisters did for her lament
 With yelling outeries, and with shrieking sowne;
 And every one did teare her girlond from her crowne.

Soone as she up out of her deadly fitt
 Arose, she bad her charett to be brought;
 And all her sisters, that with her did sitt,
 Bad eke attonce their charettis to be sought:
 Tho, full of bitter grieve and pensive thought,
 She to her wagon clombe; clombe all the rest,
 And forth together went, with sorow fraught:
 The waves obedient to theyre behest
 Them yielded ready passage, and their rage surceast.

Great Neptune stode amazed at their sight,
 Whiles on his broad rownd backe they softly slid,
 And eke himselfe mournd at their mournful plight,
 Yet wist not what their wailing ment, yet did,
 For great compassion of their sorow, bid
 His mighty waters to them buxome bee:
 Eftesoones the roaring billowes still abid,
 And all the griesly monsters of the see
 Stood gaping at their gate, and wondred them to see.

A teme of dolphins raunged in aray
 Drew the smooth charett of sad Cymoënt;
 They were all taught by Triton to obay
 To the long raynes at her commaundement:
 As swifte as swallowes on the waves they went,
 That their brode flaggy finnes no fome did reare,
 Ne bubling rowndell they behinde them sent;
 The rest, of other fishes drawen weare,
 Which with their finny oars the swelling sea did sheare.

Soone as they bene arris'd upon the brim
 Of the rich strond, their charets they forlore,
 And let their temed fishes softly swim
 Along the margent of the fomy shore,
 Least they their finnes should bruze, and surbate sore
 Their tender feete upon the stony grownd:
 And comming to the place, where all in gore
 And cruddy blood enwallowed they fownd
 The lucklesse Marinell lying in deadly swownd.

His mother swowned thrise, and the third time
 Could scarce recovered bee out of her paine;
 Had she not beene deuoid of mortall slime,
 She should not then have bene relyv'd againe:
 But, soone as life recovered had the raine,
 Shee made so piteous mone and deare wayment,
 That the hard rocks could scarce from tears refraine:
 And all her sister nymphes with one consent
 Supplide her sobbing breaches with sad complement.

"Deare image of my selfe," she sayd, "that is
 The wretched sonne of wretched mother borne,
 Is this thine high aduancement? O! is this
 Th' immortal name, with which thee yet unborne
 Thy grandsire Nereus promist to adorne?
 Now lyst thou of life and honor reste;
 Now lyst thou a lumpe of earth forlorne;
 Ne of thy late life memory is lefte;
 Ne can thy irrevocable destiny bee weste!

"Fond Proteus, father of false prophecis!
 And they more fond that credit to thee give!
 Not this the worke of womans hand ywis,
 That so deepe wound through these deare members drive.
 I feared love; but they that love doe live;
 But they that dye, doe nether love nor hate:
 Nath'lesse to thee thy folly I forgive;
 And to my selfe, and to accursed fate,
 The guilt I doe ascribe: deare wisdom bought too late!

"O! what avails it of immortal seed
 To beene ybredd and never borne to dye?
 Farre better I it deeme to die with speed
 Then waste in woe and wayfull miserye:
 Who dyes, the utmost dolor doth aby;e;
 But who that lives, is lefte to waile his losse:
 So life is losse, and death felicity:
 Sad life worse then glad death; and greater crosse
 To see friends grave, then dead the grave selfe to engrosse.

"But if the heavens did his days envie,
 And my short blis maligne; yet mote they well
 Thus much afford me, ere that he did die,
 That the dim eies of my deare Marinell
 I mote have closed, and him bed farewell.
 Sith other offices for mother meet
 They would not graunt——
 Yett! maulgre them, farewell, my sweetest sweet!
 Farewell, my sweetest sonne, sith we no more shall meet!"

Thus when they all had sorrowed their fill,
 They softly gan to search his griesly wovnd:
 And, that they might him handle more at will,
 They him disarmd; and, spredding on the grownd
 Their watchet mantles frindgd with silver rownd,
 They softly wipt away the gelly blood
 From th' orifice; which having well upbownd
 They pourd in soveraine balme and nectar good,
 Good both for erthly med'cine and for hevenly food.

Tho, when the lilly-handed Liagore
 (This Liagore whilome had learned skill
 In leaches craft, by great Apolloes lore,
 Sith her whilome upon high Pindus hill
 He loved, and at last her wombe did fill
 With hevenly seed, whereof wise Pæon sprong,)
 Did feele his pulse, shee knew there staid still
 Some little life his feeble sprites emong;
 Which to his mother told, despeyre she from her slong.

Tho, up him taking in their tender hands,
 They easely unto her charett beare:
 Her teme at her commaundement quiet stands,
 Whiles they the corse into her wagon reare,
 And strowe with flowres the lamentable beare:
 Then all the rest into their coches clim,
 And through the brackish waves their passage sheare;
 Upon great Neptunes necke they softly swim,
 And to her watry chamber swiftly carry him.

Deepe in the bottome of the sea, her bowre
 Is built of hollow billowes heaped hye,
 Like to thicke clouds that threat a stormy showre.
 And vaulted all within like to the skye,
 In which the gods doe dwell eternally:
 There they him laide in easy couch well dight;
 And sent in haste for Tryphon, to apply
 Salves to his wounds, and medicines of might:
 For Trypon of sea-gods the soveraine leach in hight.

The whiles the nymphes sit all about him rownd,
 Lamenting his mishap and heavy plight;
 And ofte his mother, vewing his wide wound,
 Cursed the hand that did so deadly smight
 Her dearest sonne, her dearest harts delight:
 But none of all those curses overtooke
 The warlike maide, th' ensample of that might;
 But fayrely well shee thryvd, and well did brooke
 Her noble deedes, ne her right course for ought forsooke.

Yet did false Archimage her still pursew,
 To bring to passe his mischievous intent,
 Now that he had her singled from the crew
 Of courteous knights, the prince and Fary gent,
 Whom late in chace of beauty excellent
 Shee lefte, pursewing that same foster strong;
 Of whose fowle outrage they impatient,
 And full of firy zeale, him followed long,
 To reskew her from shame, and to revenge her wrong.

Through thick and thin, through mountains and through
 Those two great champions did attonce pursew [playns,
 The fearfull damzell with incessant payns;
 Who from them fled, as light-foot hare from vew
 Of hunter swifte and sent of howndes trew.
 At last they came unto a double way;
 Where, doubtfull which to take, her to reskew,
 Themselves they did dispart, each to assay
 Whether more happy were to win so goodly pray.

But Timias, the princes gentle squire,
 That ladies love unto his lord forlent,
 And with proud envy and indignant yro
 After that wicked foster fiercely went:
 So beene they three three sondry wayes ybent:
 But fayrest fortune to the prince befell;
 Whose chaunce it was, that soone he did repent,
 To take that way in which that damozell
 Was fledd afore, affraid of him as feend of hell.

At last of her far off he gained vew:
 Then gan he freshly pricke his fomy steed,
 And ever as he nigher to her drew, *
 So evermore he did increase his speed,
 And of each turning still kept wary heed:
 Alowd to her he oftentimes did call
 To doe away vaine doubt and needlesse dread:
 Full myld to her he spake, and oft let fall
 Many meeke wordes to stay and comfort her withall.

But nothing might relent her hasty flight;
 So deepe the deadly feare of that foul swaine
 Was earst impressed in her gentle spright:
 Like as a fearefull dove, which through the raine
 Of the wide ayre her way does cut amaine,
 Having farre off espyde a tassell gent,
 Which after her his nimble winges doth straine,
 Doubleth her hast for feare to bee for-hent,
 And with her pineons cleaves the liquid fermament.

With no lesse hast, and eke with no lesse dreed
 That fearefull ladie fledd from him that ment
 To her no evill thought nor evill deed;
 Yet former feare of being fowly shent
 Carried her forward with her first intent:
 And though, oft looking backward, well she vewde
 Herselfe freed from that foster insolent,
 And that it was a knight which now her sewde,
 Yet she no lesse the knight feared then that villein rude.

His uncouth shield and straunge armes her dismayd,
 Whose like in Faery Lond were seldom seene;
 That fast she from him fledd, no lesse afraide
 Then of wilde beastes if she had chased beene:
 Yet he her followd still with corage keene
 So long, that now the golden Hesperus
 Was mounted high in top of heaven sheene,
 And warnd his other brethren ioyeous
 To light their blessed lamps in Ioves eternall hous.

All suddenly dim wox the dampish ayre,
 And griesly shadowes covered heaven bright,
 That now with thousand starres was decked fayre:
 Which when the prince beheld, a lothfull sight,
 And that perforce, for want of lenger light,
 He mote surceasse his suit and lose the hope
 Of his long labour; he gan fowly wyte
 His wicked fortune that had turnd aslope,
 And cursed night that reft from him so goodly scope.

Tho, when her wayes he could no more descry,
 But to and fro at disaventure strайд;
 Like as a ship, whose lodestar suddenly
 Covered with clouds her pilott hath dismayd;
 His wearisome pursuit perforce he stayd,
 And from his loftie steed dismounting low
 Did let him forage: downe himselfe he layd
 Upon the grassy ground to sleepe a throw;
 The cold earth was his couch, the hard steele his pillow.

But gentle Sleepe envye him any rest;
 Instead thereof sad sorrow and disdaine
 Of his hard hap did vex his noble brest,
 And thousand fancies bett his ydle brayne
 With their light wings, the sights of semblants vaine:
 Oft did he wish that lady faire mote bee
 His Faery Queene, for whom he did complaine;
 Or that his Faery Queene were such as shee:
 And ever hasty Night he blamed bitterlie:

"Night! thou foule mother of annoyaunce sad,
 Sister of heavie Death, and nourse of Woe,
 Which wast begot in heaven, but for thy bad
 And brutish shape thrust downe to hell below,
 Where, by the grim flood of Coeytus slow,
 Thy dwelling is in Herebus black hous,
 (Black Herebus, thy husband, is the foe
 Of all the gods,) where thou ungratious
 Halfe of thy dayes doest lead in horror hideous:

"What had th' Eternall Maker need of thee
 The world in his continuall course to keepe,
 That doest all thinges deface, ne letttest see
 The beautie of his worke? Indeed in sleepe
 The slouthfull body that doth love to steepe
 His lustlesse limbes, and drowne his baser mind,
 Doth praise thee oft, and oft from Stygian deepe
 Calls thee his goddessse, in his errour blind,
 And great dame Natures handmaide clearing every kind

"But well I wote that to an heavy hart
 Thou art the roote and nourse of bitter cares,
 Breeder of new, renewer of old smart:
 Instead of rest thou lendest rayling teares;
 Instead of sleepe thou sendest troublous feares
 And dreadfull visions, in the which alive
 Tho dreary image of sad Death appeares:
 So from the wearie spirit thou doest drive
 Desired rest, and men of happinesse deprive.

"Under thy mantle black there hidden lye
 Light-shonning Theft, and traiterous Intent,
 Abhorred Bloodshed, and vile Felony,
 Shamefull Deceipt, and Daunger imminent,
 Fowle Horror, and eke hellish Dreriment:
 All these I wote in thy protection bee,
 And light doe shonne, for feare of being shent:
 For light ylike is loth'd of them and thee;
 And all, that lewdnesse love, do hate the light to see;

"For day discovers all dishonest wayes,
 And sheweth each thing as it is in deed :
 The prayes of High God he faire displayes,
 And His large bountie rightly doth areed :
 Dayes dearest children be the blessed seed
 Which Darknesse shall subduc and heaven win :
 Truth is his daughter; he her first did breed
 Most sacred virgin without spot of sinne :
 Our life is day; but death with darknesse doth begin.

"O, when will Day then turne to me againe,
 And bring with him his long-expected light!
 O Titan! hast to reare thy ioyous waine;
 Speed thee to spred abroad thy beames bright,
 And chace away this too long lingring Night;
 Chace her away, from whence she came, to hell:
 She, she it is, that hath me done despite:
 There let her with the damned spirits dwell,
 And yield her rowme to Day, that can it governe well."

Thus did the prince that wearie night outweare
 In restlesse anguish and unquiet paine;
 And earely, ere the Morrow did upreare
 His deawy head out of the ocean maine,
 He up arose, as halfe in great disdaine,
 And clombe unto his steed: so forth he went
 With heavy looke and lumpish pace, that plaine
 In him bewraid great grudge and maltalent:
 His steed eke seemd t' apply his steps to his intent.

CANTO V.

Prince Arthur hears of Florimell:
 Three fosters Timias wound;
 Belphebe findes him almost dead,
 And reareth out of swownd.

WONDER it is to see in diverse mindes
 How diversly Love doth his pageaunts play
 And shewes his powre in variable kindes:
 The baser wit, whose ydle thoughts alway
 Are wont to cleave unto the lowly clay,
 It stirreth up to sensuall desire,
 And in lewd slouth to wast his carelesse day;
 But in brave sprite it kindles goodly fire,
 That to all high desert and honour doth aspire.

Ne suffereth it uncomely Idlenesse
 In his free thought to build her sluggish nest;
 Ne suffereth it thought of ungentlenesse
 Ever to creepe into his noble brest;
 But to the highest and the worthiest
 Lifteth it up that els would lowly fall:
 It lettes not fall, it lettes it not to rest;
 It lettes not scarce this prince to breath at all,
 But to his first poursuit him forward still doth call:

Who long time wandred through the forest wyde
 To finde some issue thence; till that at last
 He met a dwarfe that seemed terrifyde
 With some late perill which he hardly past,
 Or other accident which him aghast;
 Of whom he asked, whence he lately came,
 And whether now he traueiled so fast:
 For sore he swat, and, ronning through that same
 Thicke forest, was bescracht and both his feet nigh lame.

Panting for breath, and almost out of hart,
 The dwarfe him answerd; "Sir, ill mote I stay
 To tell the same: I lately did depart
 From Faery court, where I have many a day
 Served a gentle lady of great sway
 And high accompt throughout all Elfin Land,
 Who lately left the same, and tooke this way:
 Her now I seeke; and if ye understand
 Which way she fared hath, good sir, tell out of hand."

"What mister wight," saide he, "and how arayd?"
 "Royally clad," quoth he, "in cloth of gold,
 As meetest may besee me a noble mayd;
 Her faire lockes in rich circlet be enrold,
 A fayrer wight did never sunne behold;
 And on a palfrey rydes more white then snow,
 Yet she herselfe is whiter manifold;
 The surest signe, whereby ye may her know
 Is, that she is the fairest wight alive, I trow."

"Now certes, swaine," saide he, "such one, I weene,
 Fast flying through this forest from her fo,
 A foule ill-favoured foster, I have scene;
 Herselfe, well as I might, I reskewd tho,
 But could not stay; so fast she did foregoe,
 Carried away with wings of speedy feare."
 "Ah! dearest God," quoth he, "that is great woe,
 And wondrous ruth to all that shall it heare:
 But can ye read, sir, how I may her finde, or where?"

"Perdy me lever were to weeten that,"
 Saide he, "then ransome of the richest knight,
 Or all the good that ever yet I gat:
 But froward fortune, and too forward night,
 Such happinesse did, maulgre, to me spight,
 And fro me reft both life and light attone.
 But, dwarfe, aread what is that lady bright
 That through this forest wandreth thus alone;
 For of her errour straunge I have great ruth and mone."

"That ladie is," quoth he, "whereso she bee,
 The bountiest virgin and most debonaire
 That ever living eye, I weene, did see:
 Lives none this day that may with her compare
 In stedfast chastitie and vertue rare,
 The goodly ornaments of beauty bright;
 And is yeled Florimell the sayre,
 Faire Florimell belov'd of many a knight,
 Yet she loves none but one, that Marinell is hight;

"A sea-nymphes sonne, that Marinell is hight,
 Of my deare dame is loved dearly well;
 In other none, but him, she sets delight;
 All her delight is set on Marinell;
 But he sets nought at all by Florimell:
 For ladies love his mother long ygoe
 Did him, they say, forwarne through sacred spell:
 But fame now flies, that of a forreine foe
 He is valaine, which is the ground of all our woe.

"Five daies there be since he (they say) was slaine,
 And fowre since Florimell the court forwent,
 And vowed never to returne againe
 Till him alive or dead she did invent.
 Therefore, faire sir, for love of knighthood gent
 And honour of trew ladies, if ye may
 By your good counsell, or bold hardiment,
 Or succour her, or me direct the way,
 Do one or other good, I you most humbly pray:

"So may ye gaine to you full great renowme
 Of all good ladies through the worlde so wide,
 And haply in her hart finde highest rowme
 Of whom ye seeke to be most magnifide!
 At least eternall meede shall you abide."
 To whom the prince; "Dwarfe, comfort to thee take;
 For, till thou tidings learne what her betide,
 I here avow thee never to forsake:
 Ill weares he armes, that nill them use for ladies sake.

So with the dwarfe he back retourn'd againe,
 To seeke his lady, where he mote her finde;
 But by the way he greatly gan complaine
 The want of his good squire late left behinde,
 For whom he wondrous pensive grew in minde,
 For doubt of daunger which mote him betide;
 For him he loved above all mankinde,
 Having him trew and faithfull ever tride,
 And bold, as ever squyre that waited by knights side:

Who all this while full hardly was assayd
 Of deadly daunger which to him betidd:
 For, whiles his lord pursewd that noble mayd,
 After that foster fowle he fiercely ridd
 To bene avenged of the shame he did
 To that faire damzell: him he chaced long
 Through the thicke woods wherein he would have hid
 His shamefull head from his avengement strong,
 And oft him threatned death for his outrageous wrong.

Nathelesse the villain sped himselve so well,
 Whether through swiftnesse of his speedie beast,
 Or knowledge of those woods where he did dwell;
 That shortly he from daunger was releast,
 And out of sight escaped at the least;
 Yet not escaped from the dew reward
 Of his bad deedes, which daily he increast,
 Ne ceased not, till him oppressed hard
 The heauey plague that for such leachours is prepard.

For, soone as he was vanisht out of sight,
 His coward courage gan emboldned bee,
 And cast t'avenge him of that fowle despight
 Which he had borne of his bold enimee:
 Tho to his brethren came, (for they were three Ungratious children of one gracelesse syre,<sup>1</sup>
 And unto them complayned how that he
 Had used beene of that fool-hardie squyre:
 So them with bitter words he stird to bloodie yre.

Forthwith themselves with their sad instruments
 Of spoyle and murder they gan arme bylive,
 And with him foorth into the forrest went
 To wreake the wrath, which he did earst revive
 In there sterne breasts, on him which late did drive
 Their brother to reproch and shamefull flight:
 For they had vow'd that never he alive
 Out of that forest should escape their might;
 Vile rancour their rude harts had filld with such despight.

Within that wood there was a covert glade,
 Foreby a narrow foord, to them well knowne,
 Through which it was uneath for wight to wade;
 And now by fortune it was overflowne:
 By that same way they knew that squire unknowne
 Mote algates passe; forthy themselves they set
 There in await with thicke woods overgrowne,
 And all the while their malice they did whet
 With cruell threats his passage through the ford to let.

It fortun'd, as they devized had,
 The gentle squire came ryding that same way,
 Unweeting of their wile and treason bad,
 And through the ford to passen did assay;
 But that fierce foster, which late fled away,
 Stoutly forth stepping on the further shore,
 Him boldly bad his passage there to stay,
 Till he had made amends, and full restore
 For all the damage which he had him doen afore.

With that, at him a quiv'ring dart he threw
 With so fell force, and villeinous despite,
 That through his haberieon the forkehead flew,
 And through the linked mayles empierced quite,
 But had no powre in his soft flesh to bite:
 That stroke the hardy squire did sore displease,
 But more that him he could not come to smite;
 For by no meanes the high banke he could sease,
 But labour'd long in that deepe ford with vaine disease.

And still the foster with his long bore-speare
 Him kept from landing at his wished will:
 Anone one sent out of the thicket neare
 A cruell shaft headed with deadly ill,
 And fethered with an unlucky quill;
 The wicked steele stayd not till it did light
 In his left thigh, and deepely did it thrill:
 Exceeding grieve that wound in him empight,
 But more that with his foes he could not come to fight.

At last, through wrath and vengeance, making way
 He on the bancke arryved with mickle payne;
 Where the third brother him did sore assay,
 And drove at him with all his his might and mayne
 A forest-bill, which both his hands did strayne;
 But warily he did avoide the blow,
 And with his speare requited him agayne,
 That both his sides were thrilled with the throw,
 And a large streame of bloud out of the wound did flow.

He, tombling downe, with gnashing teeth did bite
 The bitter earth, and bad to lett him in
 Into the balefulle house of endlesse night,
 Where wicked ghosts doe waile their former sin.
 Tho gan the battaile freshly to begin;
 For nathemore for that spectácle bad
 Did th' other two their cruell vengeance blin,
 But both attonce on both sides him bestad,
 And load upon him lavd, his life for to have had.

Tho when that villayn he aviz'd, which late
 Affrighted had the fairest Florimell,
 Full of fiers fury and indignant hate
 To him he turned, and with rigor fell
 Smote him so rudely on the pannikell,
 That to the chin he clefte his head in twaine:
 Downe on the ground his carkas groveling fell;
 His sinfull sowle with desperate disdaine
 Out of her fleshly ferme fled to the place of paine.

That seeing, now the only last of three
 Who with that wicked shafte him wounded had,
 Trembling with horror, (as that did foresee
 The fearefull end of his avengement sad,
 Through which he follow should his brethren bad,)
 His bootelesse bow in feeble hand upcaught,
 And therewith shott an arrow at the lad;
 Which fayntly fluttring scarce his helmet raught,
 And glauncing fel to ground, but him annoyed naught.

With that, he would have fled into the wood;
 But Timias him lightly overhent,
 Right as he entring was into the flood,
 And strooke at him with force so violent,
 That headlesse him into the foord he sent;
 The carcas with the streame was carried downe,
 But th' head fell backward on the continent;
 So mischief fel upon the meaners crowne: [nowne:
 They three be dead with shame; the squire lives with re.

He lives, but takes small ioy of his renowne;
 For of that cruell wound he bled so sore,
 That from his steed he fell in deadly swowne;
 Yet still the blood forth gusht in so great store
 That he lay wallowed all in his owne gore.
 Now God thee keepe! thou gentlest squire alive,
 Els shall thy loving lord thee see no more;
 But both of comfort him thou shalt deprive,
 And eke thyselfe of honor which thou didst atchive.

Providence heavenly passeth living thought,
 And doth for wretched mens reliefe make way:
 For loe! great grace or fortune thether brought
 Comfort to him that comfortlesse now lay.
 In those same woods ye well remember may
 How that a noble hunteresse did wanne,
 Shee, that base Braggadochio d d affray,
 And made him fast out of the forest ronne;
 Belpheobe was her name, as faire as Phoebus sunne.

Shee on a day, as shee pursewd the chace
 Of some wilde beast, which with her arrowes keeneo
 She wounded had, the same along did trace
 By tract of blood, which she had freshly sceneo
 To have besprinkled all the grassy greene;
 By the great persue which she there perceay'd
 Well hoped shee the beast engor'd had beene,
 And made more haste th life to have bereav'd:
 But ah! her expectation greatly was deceiv'd.

Shortly she came whereas that woefull squire
 With blood deformed lay in deadly swound;
 In whose faire eyes, like lamps of quenched fire
 The christall humor stood congealed rownd;
 His locks, like faded leaves fallen to grownd,
 Knotted with blood in bouches rudely ran;
 And his sweete lips, on which be'ore that stownd
 The bud of youth to blossome faire began,
 Spoild of their rosy red were woxen pale and wan.

Saw never living eie more heavy sight,
 That could have made a rocke of s one to rew,
 Or rive in twaine: which when that lady bright,
 Besides all hope, with melting eies did vew,
 All suddainly abasht shee chaunged hew,
 And with sterne horror backward gan to start:
 But, when she better him beheld, shee grew
 Full of soft passion and unwonted smart:
 The point of pittie perced through her tender hart.

Meekly shee bowed downe, to weete if life
 Yett in his frozen members did remaine;
 And, feeling by his pulses beating rise
 That the weake sowle her seat did yett retaine,
 Shee cast to comfort him with busy paine:
 His double-folded necke she reard upright,
 And rubd his temples and each trembling vaine;
 His mayled haberieon she did undight,
 And from his head his heavy burganet did light.

Into the woods thenceforth in haste shee went,
 To seeke for hearbes that mote him remedy;
 For shee of herbes had great intendiment,
 Taught of the nymphe which from her infancy
 Her nourced had in trew nobility:
 There, whether yt divin · tobacco were,
 Or panachæa, or polygony,
 She fownd, and brought it to her patient deare,
 Who al this while lay bleding out his hart-blood neare.

The soveraine weede betwixt two marbles plaine
 Shee pownded small, and did in peeces bruze;
 And then atweene her lilly handes twaine
 Into his wound the juice thereof did scruze;
 And round about, as she could well it uze,
 The flesh therewith she suppld and did steepe,
 T' abate all spasme and soke the swelling bruze;
 And, after having searcht the intuse deepe,
 She with her scarf d d bind the wound, from cold to keepe.

By this he ha l sweet life recur'd agayne,
 And, groning inly deepe, at last his eies,
 His watry eies drizling like deawy rayne,
 He up gan lifte toward the azure skies,
 From whence descend all hopelesse remedies;
 Therewith he sigh'd; and, turning him aside,
 The goodly maide full of divinities
 And gifts of heavenly graco he by him spide,
 Her bow and gilden quiver lying him beside.

"Mercy! deare Lord," said he, "what grace is this
 That thou hast shewed to me sinfull wight,
 To send thine angell from her bowre of blis
 To comfort me in my distressed plight!
 Angell, or goddesse doe I call thee right?
 What service may I doe unto thee meete,
 That hast from darkenes me returnd to light,
 And with thy hevenly salves and medicines sweete
 Hast drest my sinfull wounds! I kisse I thy blessed feete."

Thereat she blushing said; "Ah! gentle squire,
 Nor goddesse I, nor angell; but the mayd
 And daughter of a woody nymphe, desire
 No service but thy safety and ayd;
 Which if thou gaue, I shal be well apayd.
 Wee mortall wights, whose lives and fortunes bee
 To common accidents stil open layd,
 Are bownd with commun bond of frailtee,
 To succor wretched wights whom ye captived see."

By this her damzells, which the former chace
 Had undertaken after her, arryv'd,
 As did Belphebe, in the bloody place,
 And thereby deemd the beast had been depriv'd
 Of life, whom late their ladies arow ryv'd:
 Fortly the bloody tract they followd fast,
 And every one to ronne the swiftest stryv'd;
 But two of them the rest far overpast,
 And where their lady was arrived at the last.

Where when they saw that goodly boy with blood
 Defowled, and their lady dresse his wound,
 They wondred much; and shortly understood
 How him in deadly cace their lady fownd,
 And reskewed out of the heavy stownd.
 Eftsoones his warlike courser, which was strayd
 Farre in the wood s whiles that he lay in swownd,
 She made those damzels search; which being stayd,
 They did him set thereon, and forth with them conveyd.

Into that forest farre they thence him led
 Where was their dwelling; in a pleasant glade
 With mountaines rownd about environed
 And mightie woodes, which did the valley shade,
 And like a stately theatre it made
 Spreading itselfe into a spacious plaine;
 And in the midst a little river plaide
 Emongst the pumy stones, which seemed to plaine
 With gentle murmure that his course they did restraine.

Beside the same a dainty place there lay,
 Planted with mirtle trees and laurells greene,
 In which the birds song many a lovely lay
 Of Gods high praise, and of th ir loves sweet teene,
 As it an earthly paradise had beene:
 In whose enclosed shadow there was pight
 A faire pavilion, scarcely to be scene,
 The which was al within most richly dight,
 That greatest princes living it mote well delight.

Thether they brought that wounded squire, and layd
 In casie couch his feeble limbes to rest.
 He rested him awhile; and then the mayd
 His readie wound with better salves new drest:
 Daily she dressed him, and did the best,
 His grievous hurt to guarish, that she might;
 That shortly she his dolour hath redrest,
 And his foule sore reduced to faire plight:
 It she reduced, but himselfe destroyed quight.

O foolish physick, and unfruitfull paine,
 That heales up one, and makes another wound!
 She his hurt thigh to him recurd againe,
 But hurt his hart, the which before was sound,
 Through an unwary dart which did rebownd
 From her faire eyes and gracious countenaunce.
 What bootes it him from death to be unbownd,
 To be captiued in endlesse duraunce
 Of sorrow and despeyre without aleggaunce!

Still as his wound did gather, and grow hole,
 So still his hart woxe sore, and health decayd:
 Madnesse to save a part, and lose the whole!
 Still whenas he beheld the heavenly mayd,
 Whiles daily playsters to his wovnd she layd,
 So still his malady the more increast,
 The whiles her matchlesse beautie him dismayd.
 Ah God! what other could he do at least,
 But love so fayre a lady that his life releast!

Long while he strove in his corageous brest
 With reason dew the passion to subdew,
 And love for to dislodge out of his nest:
 Still when her excellencies he did vew,
 Her souveraine bountie and celestially hew,
 The same to love he strongly was constraýnd:
 But, when his meane estate he did rewey,
 He from such hardy boldnesse was restraynd,
 And of his lucklesse lott and cruell love thus playnd:

"Unthankfull wretch," said he, "is this the meed,
 With which her souverain mercy thou doest quight?
 Thy life she saved by her gracious deed;
 But thou doest weene with villeinous despight
 To blott her honour and her heavenly light:
 Dye; rather dye then so disloyally
 Deeme of her high desert, or seeme so light:
 Fayre death it is, to shonne more shame, to dy:
 Dye; rather dye than ever love disloyally.

"But if, to love, disloyalty it bee,
 Shall I then hate her that from deathës dore
 Me brought? ah! farre be such reproach fro mee!
 What can I lesse doe then her love therefore,
 Sith I her dew reward cannot restore?
 Dye; rather dye, and dyeing doe her serve;
 Dying her serve, and living her adore;
 Thy life she gave, thy life she doth deserve:
 Dye; rather dye then ever from her service swerve.

"But, foolish boy, what bootes thy service bace
 To her, to whom the heavens doe serve and scw?
 Thou, a meane squyre, of meeke and lowly place;
 She, heavenly borne and of celestiall hew.
 How then? of all love taketh equall vew:
 And doth not highest God vouchsafe to take
 The love and service of the basest crew?
 If she will not; dye meekly for her sake:
 Dye; rather dye then ever so faire love forsake!"

Thus warreid he long time against his will;
 Till that through weakness he was forst at last
 To yield himselfe unto the mightie ill,
 Which, as a victour proud, gan ransack fast
 His inward partes and all his entrayles wast,
 That neither blood in face nor life in hart
 It left, but both did quite drye up and blast;
 As percing levin, which the inner part
 Of every thing consumes and calcineth by art.

Which seeing fayre Belphebe gan to feare,
 Least that his wound were inly well not heald,
 Or that the wicked steele empoysned were:
 Litle shee weend that love he close concealed.
 Yet still he wasted, as the snow congeald
 When the bright sunne his beams thereon doth beat
 Yet never he his hart to her reveald;
 But rather chose to dye for sorow great
 Then with dishonorable termes her to entreat.

She, gracious lady, yet no paines did spare
 To doe him ease, or doe him remedy:
 Many restoratives of vertues rare
 And costly cordialles she did apply,
 To mitigate his stubborne malady:
 But that sweet cordiall, which can restore
 A love-sick hart, she did to him envy;
 To him, and to all th' unworthy world forlore,
 She did envy that soveraine salve in secret store.

That daintie rose, the daughter of her morne,
 More deare then life she tendered, whose flowre
 The girlond of her honour did adorne:
 Ne suffred she the middayes scorching powre,
 Ne the sharp northerne wind thereon to showre;
 But lapped up her silken leaves most chayre,
 Whenso the froward skye began to lowre;
 But, soone as calmed was the cristall ayre,
 She did it fayre dispred and let to florish fayre.

Eternall God, in his almightie powre,
 To make ensample of his heavenly grace,
 In paradize whylome did plant this flowre;
 Whence he it fetcht out of her native place,
 And did in stocke of earthly flesh enrace,
 That mortall men her glory should admyre.
 In gentle ladies breste and bounteous race
 Of woman-kind it sayrest flowre doth spyre,
 And beareth fruit of honour and all chast desyre.

Fayre ympes of beautie, whose bright shining beames
 Adorne the world with like to heavenly light,
 And to your willes both royalties and reames
 Subdow, through conquest of your wondrous might;
 With this fayre flowre your goodly girlonds dight
 Of chastity and vertue virginnall,
 That shall embellish more your beautie bright,
 And crowne your heades with heavenly coronall,
 Such as the angels weare before God's tribunall!

To youre faire selves a faire ensample frame
 Of this faire virgin, this Belphebe fayre;
 To whom, in perfect love and spotless fame
 Of chastitie, none living may compayre
 No poysnous envy iustly can empayre
 The prayse of her fresh-flowring maydenhead;
 Forthly she standeth on the highest stayre
 Of th' honourable stage of womanhead,
 That ladies all may follow her ensample dead.

In so great prayse of stedfast chastity
 Nathlesse she was so courteous and kynde,
 Tempred with grace and goodly modesty,
 That seemed those two vertues strove to fynd
 The higher place in her heroick mynd:
 So striving each did other more augment,
 And both encreast the prayse of womankynd
 And both encreast her beautie excellent:
 So all did make in her a perfect complement.

CANTO VI.

The birth of fayre Belphebe and
Of Amorett is told :

The gardins of Adonis fraught
With pleasures manifold.

WELL may I weene, faire ladies, all this while
Ye wonder how this noble damozell
So great perfections did in her compile,
Sith that in salvage forests she did dwell,
So farre from court and royal citadell,
The great schoolmaistresse of all courtesy:
Seemeth that such wilde woodes should far expell
All civile usage and gentility,
And gentle sprite deforme with rude rusticity.

But to this faire Belphebe in her berth
The hevens so favourable were and free,
Looking with myld aspéct upon the earth
In th' horoscope of her nativitee,
That all the gifts of grace and chastitee
On her they poured forth of plenteous horne:
Love laught on Venus from his soverayne see,
And Phœbus with faire beames did her adorne.
And all the graces rockt her cradle being borne.

Her berth was of the wombe of morning dew,
And her conception of the ioyous prime;
And all her whole creation did her shew
Pure and unspotted from all loathly crime
That is ingenerate in fleshly slime.
So was this virgin borne, so was she bred;
So was she trayned up from time to time
In all chaste vertue and true bountihed,
Till to her dew perfection she were ripened.

Her mother was the faire Chrysogonee,
The daughter of Amphisa, who by race
A Faerie was, yborne of high degree:
She bore Belphebe; she bore in like cace
Fayre Amoretta in the second place:
These two were twinnes, and twixt them two did share
The heritage of all celestiaall grace;
That all the rest it seemd they robbed bare
Of bounty, and of beautie, and all vertues rare.

It were a goodly storie to declare
 By what straunge accident faire Chrysogone
 Conceiv'd these infants, and how them she bare
 In this wilde forrest wandring all alone,
 After she had nine moneths fulfilled and gone:
 For not as other wemens commune brood
 They were enwomb'd in the sacred throne
 Of her chaste bodie; nor with commune food,
 As other wemens babes, they sucked vitall blood:

But wondrously they were begot and bred
 Through influence of th' hevens fruitfull ray,
 As it in antique bookes is mentioned.
 It was upon a sommers shinie day,
 When Titian faire his beames did display,
 In a fresh fountaine, far from all mens vew,
 She bath'd her brest the boyling heat t' allay;
 She bath'd with roses red and violets blew,
 And all the sweetest flowers that in the forrest grew.

Till faint through yrkesome werines adowne
 Upon the grassy ground herselfe she layd
 To sleepe, the whiles a gentle slumbring swowne
 Upon her fell all naked bare displayd:
 The sunbeames bright upon her body playd,
 Being through former bathing mollified,
 And pierst into her wombe; where they embayd
 With so sweet sence and secret powre unspide,
 That in her pregnant flesh they shortly fructified.

Miraculous may seeme to him that reades
 So straunge ensample of conception;
 But reason teacheth that the fruitfull seades
 Of all things living, through impression
 Of the sunbeames in moyst complexion,
 Doe life conceive and quickned are by kynd:
 So, after Nilus inundation,
 Infinite shapes of creatures men doe fynd
 Informed in the mud on which the sunne bath shynd.

Great father he of generation
 Is rightly cald, th' authour of life and light;
 And his faire sister for creation
 Ministreth matter fit, which, tempred right
 With heate and humour, breeds the living wight.
 So sprong these twinnes in womb of Chrysogone;
 Yet wist she nought thereof, but sore affright
 Wondred to see her belly so upblowne,
 Which still increast till she her terme had full outgone.

Whereof conceiving shame and foule disgrace,
 Albe her guiltlesse conscience her cleard,
 She fled into the wilderness a space,
 Till that unweeldy burden she had reard,
 And shund dishonor which as death she teard:
 Where, wearie of long traveill, downe to rest
 Herselfe she set, and comfortably cheard;
 There a sad cloud of sleepe her overkest,
 And seized every sence with sorrow sore opprest.

It fortun'd, faire Venus having lost
 Her little sonne, the winged god of love,
 Who for some light displeasure, which him crost,
 Was from her fled as flit as ayery dove,
 And left her blisfull bowre of ioy above;
 (So from her often he had fled away,
 When she for ought him sharpely did reprove,
 And wandred in the world in straunge aray,
 Disguiz'd in thousand shapes, that none might him bewray;)

Him for to seeke, she left her heavenly hous,
 The house of goodly formes and faire aspécts,
 Whence all the world derives the glorious
 Features of beautie and all shapes select,
 With which high God his workmanship hath deckt;
 And searched everie way through which his wings
 Had borne him, or his tract she mote detect:
 She promist kisses sweet, and sweeter things.
 Unto the man that of him tydings to her brings.

First she him sought in court; where most he us'd
 Whylome to haunt, but there she found him not;
 But many there she found which sore accus'd
 His falshood, and with fowle infamous blot
 His cruell deedes and wicked wyles did spot:
 Ladies and lordes she every where mote heare
 Complayning, how with his empoysoned shot
 Their wofull harts he wounded had whyleare,
 And so had left them languishing twixt hope and feare.

She then the cities sought from gate to gate,
 And everie one did aske, Did he him see?
 And everie one her answerd, that too late
 He had him scene, and felt the crueltee
 Of his sharp dartes and whot artillcree:
 And every one threw forth reproches rife
 Of his mischiévous deedes and sayd that hee
 Was the disturber of all civill life,
 The enemy of peace, and authour of all strife.

Then in the countrey she abroad him sought,
 And in the rurall cottages inquir'd;
 Where also many plaintes to her were brought,
 How he their heedlesse harts with love had fir'd,
 And his false venom through their veines inspir'd;
 And eke the gentle shepherd swaynes, which sat
 Keeping their fleecy flockes as they were hyr'd,
 She sweetly heard complaine both how and what
 Her sonne had to them doen; yet she did smile therat.

But, when in none of all these she him got,
 She gan avize where els he mote him hyde:
 At last she her bethought that she had not
 Yet sought the salvage woods and forests wyde,
 In which full many lovely nymphes abyde;
 Mongst whom might be that he did closely lye,
 Or that the love of some of them him tyde:
 Forthy she thether cast her course t' apply,
 To search the secret haunts of Diances company.

Shortly unto the wastefull woods she came,
 Whereas she found the goddesse with her crew,
 After late chace of their embrewed game,
 Sitting beside a fountaine in a rew;
 Some of them washing with the liquid dew
 From off their dainty limbs the dusty sweat
 And soyle, which did deforme their lively hew,
 Others lay shaded from the scorching heat;
 The rest upon her person gave attendance great.

She, having hong upon a bough on high
 Her bow and painted quiver, had unlaste
 Her silver buskins from her nimble thigh,
 And her lunc loynes ungirt, and breasts unbraste,
 After her heat the breathing cold to taste;
 Her golden lockes, that late in tresses bright
 Embreaded were for hindring of her haste,
 Now loose about her shoulders hong undight,
 And were with sweet ambrosia all besprinkled light.

Soone as she Venus saw behinde her backe,
 She was asham'd to be so loose surpriz'd;
 And woxe halfe wroth against her damzels slacke,
 That had not her thereof before aviz'd,
 But suffred her so carelessly disguiz'd
 Be overtaken: soone her garments loose
 Upgath'ring, in her bosome she compriz'd
 Well as she might, and to the goddesse rose;
 Whiles all her nymphes did like a girlond her enclose.

Goodly she gan faire Cytherea greet,
 And shortly asked her what cause her brought,
 Into that wilderness for her unmeet,
 From her sweete bowres and beds with pleasures fraught:
 That suddein chaung she straung adventure thought.
 To whom halfe weeping she thus answered;
 That she her dearest sonne Cupido sought
 Who in his frowardness from her was fled;
 That she repented sore to have him angered.

Thereat Diana gan to smile, in scorne
 Of her vaine playnt, and to her scoffing sayd;
 "Great pittie sure that ye be so forlorne
 Of your gay sonne, that gives you so good ayd
 To your disports; ill mote ye bene apayd!"
 But she was more engrieved, and replide:
 "Faيرة sister, ill besemes it to upbrayd
 A dolefull heart with so disdainfull pride;
 The like that mine may be your paine another tide.

"As you in woods and wanton wilderness
 Your glory sett to chace the salvage beasts;
 So my delight is all in ioyfulnesse,
 In beds, in bowres, in banckets, and in feasts:
 And ill becomes you, with your lofty creasts,
 To scorne the ioy that love is glad to seeke:
 We both are bound to follow heavens beheasts
 And tend our charges with obeisance meek;
 Spare, gentle sister, with reproch my paine to seeke,

"And tell me if that ye my sonne have heard
 To lurke amongst your nimphes in secret wize,
 Or keepe their cabins: much I am affeard
 Lest he like one of them himselfe disguise,
 And turne his arrows to their exercise:
 So may he long himselfe full easie hide;
 For he is faire, and fresh in face and guize
 As any nimphe; let not it be envide."
 So saying every nimph full narrowly shee eide.

But Phoebe therewith sore was angered,
 And sharply saide; "Goe, dame; goe seeke your boy,
 Where you him lately left, in Mars his bed:
 He comes not here; we scorne his foolish ioy,
 Ne lend we leisure to his idle toy:
 But, if I catch him in this company,
 By Stygian lake I vow, whose sad annoy
 The gods doe dread, he dearly shall aby: :
 Ile clip his wanton wings that he no more shall flye."

Whom whenas Venus saw so sore displeas'd,
 Shee inly sory was, and gan relent
 What shee had said: so her shee soone appeas'd
 With sugred words and gentle blandishment,
 Which as a fountaine from her sweete lips went
 And welled goodly forth, that in short space
 She was well pleas'd, and forth her damzells sent
 Through all the woods, to search from place to place
 If any tract of him or tidings they mote trace.

To search the god of love her nimphes she sent
 Throughout the wandering forest every where: .
 And after them herselfe eke with her went
 To seeke the fugitive both farre and nere.
 So long they sought, till they arrived were
 In that same shady covert whereas lay
 Faire Crysogone in slombry traunce whilere;
 Who in her sleepe (a wondrous thing to say)
 Unwares had borne two babes as faire as springing day.

Unwares she them conceiv'd, unwares she bore:
 She bore withouten paine, that she conceiv'd
 Withouten pleasure; ne her need implore
 Lucinaes aide: which when they both perceiv'd,
 They were through wonder nigh of sence berev'd,
 And gazing each on other nought bespake:
 At last they both agreed her seeming griev'd
 Out of her heavie swowne not to awake,
 But from her loving side the tender babes to take.

Up they them tooke, each one a babe uptooke,
 And with them carried to be fostered:
 Dame Phœbe to a nymphe her babe betooke
 To be upbrought in perfect maydenhed,
 And, of herselfe, her name Belphœbe red;
 But Venus hers thence far away conveyd,
 To be upbrought in goodly womanhed;
 And, in her little Loves stead which was strayd,
 Her Amoretta cald, to comfort her dismayd.

She brought her to her ioyous paradize
 Wher most she wonnes, when she on earth does dwell,
 So faire a place as nature can devise:
 Wether in Paphos, or Cytheron hill,
 Or it in Gnidus bee, I wote not well;
 But well I wote by triall, that this same
 All other pleasaunt places doth excell,
 And called is, by her lost lovers name,
 The gardin of Adonis, far renowmd by fame.

In that same gardin all the goodly flowres,
 Wherewith dame Nature doth her beautify
 And decks the girlonds of her paramoures,
 Are fetcht: there is the first seminary
 Of all things that are borne to live and dye,
 According to their kynds. Long worke it were
 Here to account the endlesse progeny
 Of all the weeds that bud and blossome there;
 But so much as doth need must needs be counted here.

It sited was in fruitfull soyle of old,
 And girt in with two walls on either side;
 The one of yron, the other of bright gold,
 That none might thorough breake, nor overstride;
 And double gates it had which opened wide,
 By which both in and out men moten pas;
 Th' one faire and fresh, the other old and dride:
 Old Genius the porter of them was,
 Old Genius, the which a double nature has.

He letteth in, he letteth out to wend
 All that to come into the world desire:
 A thousand thousand naked babes attend
 About him day and night, which doe require
 That he with fleshly weeds would them attire:
 Such as him list, such as eternall fate
 Ordained hath, he clothes with sinfull mire,
 And sendeth forth to live in mortall state,
 Till they agayn retorne backe by the hinder gate.

After that they againe retourned beene,
 They in that gardin planted bee agayne,
 And grow afresh, as they had never scene
 Fleshly corruption nor mortall payne:
 Some thousand yeares so doen they there remayne,
 And then of him are clad with other hew,
 Or sent into the chaungefull world agayne,
 Till thether they retourne where first they grew:
 So, like a wheele, arownd they ronne from old to new.

Ne needs there gardiner to sett or sow,
 To plant or prune; for of their owne accord
 All things, as they created were, doe grow,
 And yet remember well the mighty word
 Which first was spoken by th' Almighty Lord,
 That bad them to increase and multiply:
 Ne doe they need, with water of the ford
 Or of the clouds, to moysten their roots dry;
 For in themselves eternall moisture they imply.

Infinite shapes of creatures there are bred,
 And uncouth formes, which none yet ever knew :
 And every sort is in a sondry bed
 Sett by itselfe, and ranckt in comely row:
 Some fitt for reasonable sowles t'indew;
 Some made for beasts, some made for birds to weare;
 And all the fruitfull spawn of fishes hew
 In endlesse rancks along enraunged were,
 That seemd the ocean could not containe them there.

Daily they grow, and daily forth are sent
 Into the world, it to replenish more;
 Yet is the stocke not lessened nor spent,
 But still remains in everlasting store
 As it at first created was of yore:
 For in the wide wombe of the world there lyes,
 In hatefull darknes and in deep horróre,
 An huge eternall chaos, which supplies,
 The substaunces of natures fruitfull progenyes.

All things from thence doe their first being fetch,
 And borrow matter whereof they are made;
 Which, whenas forme and fecture it does ketch,
 Becomes a body, and doth then invade
 The state of life out of the griesly shade.
 That substaunce is eterne, and bideth so;
 Ne, when the life decayes and forme does fade
 Doth it consume and into nothing goe,
 But chaunged is and often altdred to and free.

The substaunce is not chaungd nor altered,
 But th' only forme and outward fashion;
 For every substaunce is conditioned
 To chaunge her hew, and sondry formes to don,
 Meet for her temper and complexion:
 For formes are variable, and decay
 By course of kinde and by occasion;
 And that faire flowre of beautie fades away,
 As doth the lilly fresh before the sunny ray.

Great enemy to it, and to all the rest
 That in the gardin of Adonis springs,
 Is wicked Time; who with his scyth addrest
 Does mow the flowring herbes and goodly things,
 And all their glory to the ground downe flings,
 Where they do wither and are fowly mard:
 He flies about, and with his flaggy wings
 Beates downe both leaves and buds without regard,
 Ne ever pittty may relent his malice hard.

Yet pittie often did the gods relent,
 To see so faire thinges mard and spoiled quight:
 And their great mother Venus did lament
 The losse of her deare brood, her deare delight:
 Her hart was pierst with pittie at the sight.
 When walking through the gardin them she spyde,
 Yet no'te she find redresse for such despyght:
 For all that lives is subiect to that law:
 All thinges decay in tyme, and to their end doe draw.

But were it not that Time their troubler is,
 All that in this delightfull gardin growes
 Should happy bee, and have immortall blis:
 For here all plenty and all pleasure flowes;
 And sweete Love gentle fitts amongst them throwes
 Without fell rancor or fond gealosy:
 Franckly each paramour his leman knowes;
 Each bird his mate; ne any does envy
 Their goodly meriment and gay felicity.

There is continuall spring, and harvest there
 Continuall, both meeting at one tyme:
 For both the boughes doe laughing blossoms beare,
 And with fresh colours decke the wanton pryme,
 And eke attonce the heavy trees they clyme.
 Which seeme to labour under their fruites lode:
 The whiles the ioyous birdes make their pastyme
 Emongst the shady leaves, their sweet abode,
 And their trew loves without suspition tell abrode.

Right in the midst of that Paradise
 There stood a stately mount, on whose round top
 A gloomy grove of mirtle trees did rise,
 Whose shady boughes sharp steele did never lop,
 Nor wicked beastes their tender buds did crop,
 But like a girlond compassed the hight,
 And from their fruitfull sydes sweet gum did drop,
 That all the ground, with pretious deaw bedight,
 Threw forth most dainty odours and most sweet delight.

And in the thickest covert of that shade
 There was a pleasant arber, not by art
 But of the trees owne inclination made,
 Which knitting their rancke braunches part to part,
 With wanton yvie-twine entrayld athwart,
 And eglantine and caprifole emong,
 Fashiond above within their inmost part,
 That nether Phœbus beams could through them throng
 Nor Aeolus sharp blast could worke them any wrong.

And all about grew every sorte of flowre,
 To which sad lovers were transformde of yore;
 Fresh Hyacinthus, Phœbus paramoure
 And dearest love;
 Foolish Narcisse, that likes the watry shore:
 Sad Amaranthus, made a flowre but late,
 Sad Amaranthus, in whose purple gore
 Me seemes I see Amintas wretched fate,
 To whom sweet poets verse hath given endless date.

There wont fayre Venus often to enioy
 Her deare Adonis ioyous company,
 And reap sweet pleasure of the wanton boy:
 There yet, some say, in secret he does ly,
 Lapped in flowres and pretious spycery,
 By her hid from the world, and from the skill
 Of Stygian gods, which doe her love envy:
 But she herselfe, whenever that she will,
 Possesseth him, and of his sweetnesse takes her fill:

And sooth, it seemes, they say; for he may not
 For ever dye, and ever buried bee
 In balefull night where all thinges are forgot;
 All be he subiect to mortalitie,
 Yet is eterne in mutabilitie,
 And by succession made perpetuall,
 Transformed oft, and chaunged diverslie:
 For him the father of all formes they call;
 Therefore needs mote he live, that living gives to all.

There now he liveth in eternal blis,
 Ioying his goddesse, and of her enioyd;
 Ne feareth he henceforth that foe of his,
 Which with his cruell tuske him deadly cloyd:
 For that wild bore, the which him once annoyd,
 She firmly hath emprisoned for ay,
 (That her sweet love his malice mote avoyd,)
 In a strong rocky cave, which is, they say,
 Hewen underneath that mount, that none him losen may.

There now he lives, in everlasting ioy,
 With many of the gods in company
 Which thether haunt, and with the winged boy,
 Sporting himselfe in safe felicity:
 Who when he hath with spoiles and cruelty
 Ransackt the world, and in the wofull harts
 Of many wretches set his triumphes hye,
 Thether resortes, and, laying his sad dartes
 Asyde, with faire Adonis playes his wanton partes.

And his trew love faire Psyche with him playes,
 Fayre Psyche to him lately reconcyld,
 After long troubles and unmeet upbrayes,
 With which his mother Venus her revyld,
 And eke himselfe her cruelly exyld:
 But now in stedfast love and happy state
 She with him lives, and hath him borne a chyld,
 Pleasure, that doth both gods and men aggrate,
 Pleasure, the daughter of Cupid and Pysche late.

Hether great Venus brought this infant sayre
 The younger daughter of Chrysogonee,
 And unto Psyche with great trust and care
 Committed her, yfostered to bee
 And trained up in trew feminitee:
 Who no lesse carefully her tendered
 Then her owne daughter Pleasure, to whom shee
 Made her companion, and her lessoned
 In all the lore of love and goodly womanhead.

In which when she to perfect ripeness grew,
 Of grace and beautie noble paragone,
 She brought her forth into the worldes vew,
 To be th' ensample of true love alone,
 And lodestarre of all chaste affectione
 To all fayre ladies that doe live on grownd,
 To Faery court she came; where many one
 Admyrd her goodly haveour, and fownd
 His feeble hart wide launched with loves cruel wownd.

But she to none of them her love did cast,
 Save to the noble knight Sir Scudamore,
 To whom her loving hart she linked fast
 In faithfull love, t' abide for evermore;
 And for his dearest sake endured sore,
 Sore trouble of an hainous enemy,
 Who her would forced have to have forlore
 Her former love and stedfast loialty:
 As ye may elsewhere reade that ruefull history.

But well I weene ye first desire to learne
 What end unto that fearefull damozell,
 Which fledd so fast from that same foster stearno
 Whom with his brethren Timias slew, befell:
 That was, to weet, the goodly Florimell;
 Who wandring for to seeke her lover deare,
 Her lover deare, her dearest Marinell,
 Into misfortune fell, as ye did heare,
 And from Prince Arthure fled with wings of idle feare.

CANTO VII.

The witches sonne loves Florimell;
 She flyes; he faines to dy.
 Satyrane saves the Squire of Dames
 From gyaunts tyranny.

LIKE as an hynd forth singled from the heard,
 That hath escaped from a ravenous beast,
 Yet flyes away of her owne feete afeard;
 And every leafe, that shaketh with the least
 Murmure of winde, her terror hath encreast:
 So fledd fayre Florimell from her vaine feare,
 Long after she from perill was releast:
 Each shade she saw, and each noyse she did heare,
 Did seeme to be the same which she escapt whileare.

All that same evening she in flying spent,
 And all that night her course continewd:
 Ne did she let dull sleepe once to relent
 Nor wearinesse to slack her hast, but fled
 Ever alike, as if her former dred
 Were hard behind, her ready to arrest:
 And her white palfrey, having conquered
 The maistring raines out of her weary wrest,
 Perforce her carried where ever he thought best.

So long as breath and hable puissaunce
 Did native corage unto him supply,
 His pace he freshly forward did advaunce,
 And carried her beyond all ieopardy;
 But nought that wanteth rest can long aby:
 He, having through incessant traveill spent
 His force, at last perforce adowne did ly,
 Ne foot could further move: the lady gent
 Thereat was suddein strook with great astonishment;

And, forst t' alight, on foot mote algates fare
 A traveiler unwonted to such way;
 Need teacheth her this lesson hard and rare,
That Fortune all in equall launce doth sway,
And mortall miseries doth make her play.
 So long she traveild, till at length she came
 To an hilles side, which did to her bewray
 A litle valley subiect to the same,
 All coverd with thick woodes that quite it overcame.

Through th' tops of the high trees she did descry
 A little smoke, whose vapour thin and light
 Reeking aloft uprolled to the sky:
 Which chearefull signe did send unto her sight
 That in the same did wonne some living wight.
 Eftsoones her steps she thereunto applyd,
 And came at last in weary wretched plight
 Unto the place, to which her hope did guyde
 To finde some refuge there, and rest her wearie syde.

There in a gloomy hollow glen she found
 A little cottage, built of stickes and reedes
 In homely wize, and wald with sods around;
 In which a witch did dwell, in loathly weedes
 And wilfull want, all carelesse of her needes;
 So choosing solitarie to abide
 Far from all neighbours, that her diuelish deedes
 And hellish arts from people she might hide,
 And hurt far off unknowne whomever she envide.

The damzell there arriving entred in;
 Where sitting on the flore the hag she found
 Busie (as seem'd) about some wicked gin:
 Who, soone as she beheld that suddeine stound,
 Lightly upstartd from the dustie ground,
 And with fell looke and hollow deadly gaze
 Stared on her awhile, as one astound,
 No had one word to speake for great amaze;
 But shewd by outward signes that dread her sence did daze.

At last, turning her feare to foolish wrath,
 She askt, What devill had her thether brought,
 And who she was, and what unwonted path
 Had guided her, unwelcomed, unsought?
 To which the damzell full of doubtfull thought
 Her mildly answer'd; "Beldame, be not wroth
 With silly virgin, by adventure brought
 Unto your dwelling, ignorant and loth,
 That crave but rowme to rest while tempest overblo'th."

With that adowne out of her christall eyne
 Few trickling teares she softly forth let fall,
 That like two orient perles did purely shyne
 Upon her snowy checke; and therewithall
 She sighed soft, that none so bestiall
 Nor salvage hart but ruth of her sad plight
 Would make to melt, or piteously appall;
 And that vile hag, all were her whole delight
 In mischiefe, was much moved at so pitteous sight;

And gan recomfort her, in her rude wyse,
 With womanish compassion of her plaint,
 Wiping the teares from her suffused eyes,
 And bidding her sit downe to rest her faint
 And wearie limbes awhile: she nothing quaint
 Nor 'sdeignfull of so homely fashion,
 Sith brought she was now to-so hard constraint,
 Sate downe upon the dusty ground anon;
 As glad of that small rest, as bird of tempest gon.

The gan she gather up her garments rent,
 And her loose lockes to dight in order dew
 With golden wreath and gorgeous ornament;
 Whom such whenas the wicked hag did vew,
 She was astonisht at her heavenly hew,
 And doubted her to deeme an earthly wight,
 But or some goddesse, or of Dianes crew,
 And thought her to adore with humble spright:
 T'adore thing so divine as beauty were but right.

This wicked woman had a wicked sonne,
 The comfort of her age and weary dayes,
 A laesy loord, for nothing good to donne,
 But stretched forth in ydlennesse alwayes,
 Ne ever cast his mind to covet prayse,
 Or ply himselfe to any honest trade;
 But all the day before the sunny rayes
 He us'd to slug, or sleepe in slothfull shade:
 Such laesienesse both lewd and poor attonce him made.

He, comming home at undertime, there found
 The fayrest creature that he ever saw
 Sitting beside his mother on the ground;
 The sight whereof did greatly him adaw,
 And his base thought with terrour and with aw
 So inly smot, that as one, which hath gaz'd
 On the bright sunne unwares, doth soone withdraw
 His feeble eyne with too much brightnes daz'd;
 So stared he on her, and stood long while amaz'd.

Softly at last he gan his mother aske,
 What mister wight that was, and whence deriv'd,
 That in so straunge disguizement there did maske,
 And by what accident she there arriv'd?
 But she, as one nigh of her wits depriv'd,
 With nought but ghastly looks him answered;
 Like to a ghost, that lately is reviv'd
 From Stygian shores where late it wandered:
 So both at her, and each at other wondered.

But the fayre virgin was so meeke and myld,
 That she to them vouchsafed to embrace
 Her goodly port, and to their senses yld
 Her gentle speach applyde, that in short space
 She grew familiare in that desert place.
 During which time the chorle, through her so kind
 And courtesie use, conceiv'd affection bace,
 And cast to love her in his brutish mind;
 No love, but brutish lust, that was so beastly tind.

Closely the wicked flame his bowels brent,
 And shortly grew into outrageous fire;
 Yet had he not the hart, nor hardiment,
 As unto her to utter his desire;
 His caytive thought durst not so high aspire:
 But with soft sighes and lovely semblaunces
 He ween'd that his affection entire
 She should aread; many resembaunces
 To her he made, and many kinde remembraunces.

Oft from the forrest wildings he did bring,
 Whose sides empurpled were with smyling red;
 And oft young birds, which he had taught to sing
 His maistresse praises sweetly caroled:
 Girlands of flowres sometimes for her faire hed
 He fine would dight; sometimes the squirrel wild
 He brought to her in bands, as conquered
 To be her thrall, his fellow-servant vild:
 All which she of him tooke with countenance meeke and mild.

But, past a while, when she fit season saw
 To leave that desert mansion, she cast
 In secret wize herselfe thence to withdraw,
 For feare of mischief, which she did forecast
 Might by the witch or by her sonne compact;
 Her wearie palfrey, closely as she might,
 Now well recovered after long repast,
 In his proud furnitures she freshly dight,
 His late miswandred wayes now to remeasure right.

And earely, ere the dawning day appear'd,
 She forth issewed, and on her iourney went;
 She went in perill, of each noyse affeard
 And of each shade that did itselfe present;
 For still she feared to be overhent
 Of that vile hag, or her uncivile sonne;
 Who when, too late awaking, well they kent
 That their fayre guest was gone, they both begonne
 To make exceeding mone as they had beene undonne.

But that lewd lover did the most lament
 For her depart, that ever man did heare;
 He knockt his brest with desperate intent,
 And scratcht his face, and with his teeth did teare
 His rugged flesh, and rent his ragged heare:
 That his sad mother seeing his sore plight
 Was greatly woe-begon, and gan to feare
 Least his fraile senses were emperisht quight,
 And love to frenzy turnd; sith love is franticke hight.

All wayes shee sought him to restore to plight,
 With herbs, with charms, with counsel, and with teares;
 But tears, nor charms, nor herbs, nor counsell might
 Asswage the fury which his entrails teares:
 So strong is passion that no reason heares!
 Tho, when all other helpes she saw to faile,
 She turnd herselfe backe to her wicked leares;
 And by her divelish arts thought to prevaile
 To bring her backe againe, or worke her final bale.

Eftsoones out of her hidden cave she cald
 An hideous beast of horrible aspéct,
 That could the stoutest corage have appald;
 Monstrous, mishapt, and all his backe was spect
 With thousand spots of colours queint elect;
 Thereto so swifte that it all beasts did pas:
 Like never yet did living eie detect;
 But likest it to an hyena was
 That feeds on wemens flesh, as others feede on gras.

It forth she cald, and gave it streight in charge
 Through thicke and thin her to poursew apace,
 Ne once to stay to rest, or breath at large,
 Till her he had attained and brought in place,
 Or quite devourd her beauties scornefull grace.
 The monster, swifte as word that from her went,
 Went forth in haste, and did her footing trace
 So sure and swiftly, through his perfect sent
 And passing speede, that shortly he her overhent.

Whom when the fearefull damzell nigh espide,
 No need to bid her fast away to flie;
 That ugly shape so sore her terrifide,
 That it she shund no lesse than dread to die;
 And her flitt palfrey did so well apply
 His nimble feet to her conceived feare,
 That whilst his breath did strength to him supply,
 From perill free he her away did beare;
 But, when his force gan faile, his pace gan wex areare.

Which whenas she perceiv'd, she was dismayd
 At that same last extremity ful sore,
 And of her safety greatly grew afraid:
 And now she gan approach to the sea shore,
 As it befell, that she could flee no more,
 But yield herselfe to spoile of greedinesse:
 Lightly she leaped, as a wight forlore,
 From her dull horse, in desperate distresse,
 And to her feet betooke her doubtfull sickennesse.

Not halfe so fast the wicked Myrrha fled
 From dread of her revenging fathers hond;
 Nor halfe so fast to save her maydenhed
 Fled fearefull Daphne on th' Ægean strond;
 As Florimell fled from that monster yond,
 To reach the sea ere she of him were raught:
 For in the sea to drowne herselfe she fond,
 Rather then of the tyrant to be caught:
 Thereto fear gave her wings, and need her corage taught.

It fortun'd (High God did so ordaine)
 As shee arrived on the roring shore,
 In minde to leape into the mighty maine
 A little bote lay hoving her before,
 In which there slept a fisher old and pore,
 The whiles his nets were drying on the sand:
 Into the same shee lept, and with the ore
 Did thrust the shallop from the floting strand:
 So safety fownd at sea, which she fownd not at land.

The monster, ready on the pray to sease,
 Was of his forward hope deceived quight;
 Ne durst assay to wade the perlous seas,
 But, greedily long gaping at the sight,
 At last in vaine was forst to turn his flight,
 And tell the idle tidings to his dame:
 Yet, to avenge his divelish despight,
 He set upon her palfrey tired lame,
 And slew him cruelly ere any reskew came:

And, after having him embowelled
 To fill his hellish gorge, it chaunst a knight
 To passe that way, as forth he traveiled:
 Yt was a goodly swaine, and of great might,
 As ever man that bloody field did fight;
 But in vain sheows, that wont yong knights bewitch.
 And courtly services, tooke no delight;
 But rather ioyed to bee than seemen sich:
 For both to be and seeme to him was labor lich.

It was to weete the good Sir Satyrane
 That raungd abroad to seek adventures wilde,
 As was his wont, in forest and in plaine:
 He was all armd in rugged steele unfilde,
 As in the smoky forge it was compilde,
 And in his scutchin bore a satyres hedd:
 He comming present, where the monster vilde
 Upon that milke-white palfreyes carcas fedd.
 Unto his reskew ran, and greedily him spedd.

There well perceivd he that it was the horse
 Whereon faire Florimell was wont to ride,
 That of that feend was rent without remorse:
 Much feared he least ought did ill betide
 To that faire maide, the flowre of wemens pride:
 For her he dearly loved, and in all
 His famous conquests highly magnifide:
 Besides, her golden girdle, which did fall
 From her in flight, he fownd, that did him sore apall.

Full of sad feare and doubtfull agony
 Fiercely he flew upon that wicked feend;
 And with huge strokes and cruell battery
 Him forst to leave his pray, for to attend
 Himselfe from deadly daunger to defend:
 Full many wounds in his corrupted flesh
 He did engrave, and muchell blood did spend,
 Yet might not doe him die; but aie more fresh
 And fierce he still appeared, the more he did him thresh.

He wist not how him to despoile of life,
 Ne how to win the wished victory,
 Sith him he saw still stronger grow through strife,
 And himself weaker through infirmity:
 Greatly he grew enrag'd, and furiously
 Hurling his sword away he lightly leapt
 Upon the beast, that with great cruelty
 Rored and raged to be underkept;
 Yet he perforce him held, and strokes upon him hept.

As he that strives to stoy a suddein flood,
 And in strong bancks his violence restraine,
 Forceth it swell above his wonted mood,
 And largely overflow the fruitfull plaine,
 That all the countrey seemes to be a maine
 And the rich furrowes flote, all quite fordonne:
 The wofull husbandman doth lowd complaine
 To see his whole yeares labor lost so soone,
 For which to God he made so many an idle boone.

So him he held, and di l through might amate:
 So long he held him, and him bett so long,
 That at the last his fiercenes gan abate,
 And meekely stoup unto the victor strong:
 Who, to avenge the implacable wrong
 Which he supposed donne to Florimell,
 Sought by all meanes his dolor to prolong.
 Sith dint of steele his carcas could not quell;
 His maker with her charmes had framed him so well.

The golden ribband, which that virgin wore
 About her selender waste, he tooke in hand,
 And with it bownd the beast that lowd did rore
 For great despight of that unwonted band,
 Yet dared not his victor to withstand.
 But trembled like a lambe fled from the pray;
 And all the way him followd on the strand
 As he had long bene learned to obay;
 Yet never learned he such service till that day.

Thus as he led the beast along the way,
 He spide far off a mighty giauntesse
 Fast flying, on a courser dapled gray,
 From a bold knight that with great hardnesse
 Her hard pursewd, and sought for to suppressse:
 She bore before her lap a dolefull squire,
 Lying athwart her horse in great distresse,
 Fast bounden hand and foote with cords of wire,
 Whome she did meane to make the thrall of her desiro.

Which whenas Satyrane beheld, in haste
 He lefte his captive beast at liberty,
 And crost the nearest way, by which he cast
 Her to encounter ere she passed by;
 But she the way shund nathemore forthy,
 But forward gallopt fast; which when he spyde,
 His mighty speare he couched warily,
 And at her ran; she, having him descryde,
 Herselfe to fight addrest, and threw her lode aside.

Like as a goshauke, that in foote doth beare
 A trembling culver, having spide on hight
 An eagle that with plummy wings doth sheare
 The subtile ayre stouping with all his might,
 The quarrey throwes to ground with fell despight,
 And to the batteill doth herselfe prepare:
 So ran the geauntesse unto the fight;
 Her fyrie eyes with furious sparkes did stare,
 And with blasphemous bannes High God in peeces tare

She caught in hand an huge great yron mace,
 Wherewith she many had of life depriv'd;
 But, ere the stroke could seize his aymed place,
 His speare amidst her sun-brode shield arriv'd;
 Yet nathemore the steele asonder riv'd,
 All were the beame in bignes like a mast,
 Ne her out of the stedfast saddle driv'd;
 But, glauncing on the tempred metall. brast
 In thousand shivers, and so forth beside her past.

Her steed did stagger with that puissaunt strooke;
 But she no more was moved with that might
 Then it had lighted on an aged oke,
 Or on the marble pillour that is pight
 Upon the top of mount Olympus light,
 For the brave youthly champions to assay
 With burning charet wheelles it nigh to smite;
 But who that smites it mars his ioyous play,
 And is the spectacle of ruinous decay.

Yet, therewith sore enrag'd, with sterne regard
 Her dreadfull weapon she to him addrest,
 Which on his helmet martelled so hard
 That made him low incline his lofty crest,
 And bowd his battred visour to his brest:
 Wherewith he was so stund that he n'ote ryde,
 But reeled to and fro from east to west:
 Which when his cruell enemy espyde,
 She lightly unto him adioyned syde to syde;

And, on his collar laying puissaunt hand,
 Out of his wavering seat him pluckt perforce,
 Perforce him pluckt unable to withstand
 Or helpe himselve; and laying thwart her horse,
 In loathly wise like to a carrion corse,
 She bore him fast away: which when the knight
 That her pursewed saw, with great remorse
 He neare was touched in his noble spright,
 And gan encrease his speed as she encreast her flight.

Whom whenas nigh approaching she espyde,
 She threw away her burden angrily;
 For she list not the batteill to abide,
 But made herselfe more light away to fly:
 Yet her the hardy knight persewd so nye
 That almost in the backe he oft her strake;
 But still, when him at hand she did espy,
 She turnd, and semblaunce of faire fight did make;
 But, when he stayd, to flight againe she did her take.

By this the good Sir Satyrane gan wake
 Out of his dreame that did him long entraunce,
 And, seeing none in place, he gan to make
 Exceeding mone, and curst that cruell chaunce
 Which rest from him so faire a chevisaunce:
 At length he spyde whereas that wofull squyre
 Whom he had reskewed from captivaunce
 Of his strong foe, lay tumbled in the myre,
 Unable to arise, or foot or hand to styre.

To whom approching, well he mote perceive
 In that fowle plight a comely personage
 And lovely face, made fit for to deceive
 Fraile ladies hart with loves consuming rage,
 Now in the blossome of his freshest age:
 He reard him up and loosed his yron bands,
 And after gan inquire his parentage,
 And how he fell into that gyaunts hands,
 And who that was which chaced her along the lands.

Then trembling yet through feare the squire bespake;
 "That geauntesse Argente is behight,
 A daughter of the Titans which did make
 Warre against heven, and heaped hils on hight
 To scale the skyes and put love from his right:
 Her syre Typhocus was; who, mad through merth,
 And dronke with blood of men slaine by his might,
 Through incest her of his owne mother Earth
 Whylome begot, being but halfe twin of that berth:

"For at that berth another babe she bore;
 To weet, the mightie Ollyphant, that wrought
 Great wreake to many errant knights of yore,
 And many hath to foule confusion brought.
 These twinnes, men say, (a thing far passing thought)
 Whiles in their mothers wombe enclosed they were,
 Ere they into the lightsom world were brought,
 In fleshly lust were mingled both yfere
 And in that monstrous wise did to the world appere.

"So liv'd they ever after in like sin,
 Gainst natures law and good behaveoure:
 But greatest shame was to that maiden twin;
 Who, not content so fowly to devoure
 Her native flesh and staine her brothers bowre,
 Did wallow in all other fleshly myre,
 And suffred beastes her body to deflowre;
 So whot she burned in that lustfull fyre:
 Yet all that might not slake her sensuall desyre:

"But over all the countrie she did raunge,
 To seeke young men to quench her flaming thrust,
 And feed her fancy with delightfull chaunge:
 Whom so she fittest findes to serve her lust,
 Through her maine strength, in which she most doth trust,
 She with her bringes into a secret ile,
 Where in eternall bondage dye he must,
 Or be the vassall of her pleasures vile,
 And in all shamefull sort himselfe with her defile.

"Me seely wretch she so at vauntage caught,
 After she long in waite for me did lye,
 And meant unto her prison to have brought,
 Her lothsom pleasure there to satisfye;
 That thousand deathes me lever were to dye
 Then breake the vow that to faire Columbello
 I plighted have, and yet keepe stedfastly:
 As for my name, it mistreth not to tell;
 Call me the Squyre of Dames: that me besecmeth well.

"But that bold knight, whom ye pursuing saw
 That geauntesse, is not such as she seemd,
 But a faire virgin that in martiall law
 And deedes of armes above all dames is deemd,
 And above many knightes is eke esteemd
 For her great worth; she Palladine is hight:
 She you from death, you me from dread, redeemd:
 Ne any may that monster match in fight,
 But she, or such as she, that is so chaste a wight."

"Her well beseemes that quest," quoth Satyrane:
 "But read, thou Squyre of Dames, what vow is this,
 Which thou upon thyselfe has lately ta'ne?"
 "That shall I you recount," quoth he, "ywis,
 So be ye pleas'd to pardon all amis.
 That gentle lady whom I love and serve,
 After long suit and wearie servicis,
 Did aske me how I could her love deserve,
 And how she might be sure that I would never swerve.

"I glad by any meanes her grace to gaine,
 Badd her commaund my life to save or spill:
 Eftsoones she badd me with incessaunt paine
 To wander through the world abroad at will.
 And every where, where with my power or skill
 I might doe service unto gentle dames,
 That I the same should faithfully fulfill;
 And at the twelve monethes end should bring their names
 And pledges, as the spoiles of my victorious games.

"So well I to faire ladies service did,
 And found such favour in their loving hartes,
 That, ere the yeare his course had compassid,
 Three hundred pledges for my good desartes,
 And thrice three hundred thanks for my good partes,
 I with me brought and did to her present:
 Which when she saw, more bent to eke my smartes
 Then to reward my trusty true intent,
 She gan for me devise a grievous punishment;

"To weet, that I my travcill should resume,
 And with like labour walke the world arownd,
 Ne ever to her presence should presume,
 Till I so many other dames had fownd,
 The which, for all the suit I could propownd,
 Would me refuse their pledges to afford,
 But did abide for ever chaste and sownd."
 "Ah! gentle squyre," quoth he, "tell at one word,
 How many fownd'st thou such to put in thy record?"

"Indeed, Sir Knight," said he, "one word may tell
 All that I ever fownd so wisely stayd,
 For onely three they were disposd so well;
 And yet three yeares I now abroad have strayd,
 To find them out." "Mote I," then laughing sayd
 The knight, "inquire of thee what were those three
 The which thy proffred curtesie denyd?
 Or ill they seemed sure avizd to bee,
 Or brutishly brought up, that nev'r did fashions see."

"The first which then refused me," said hee,
 "Certes was but a common courtesane;
 Yet flat refusd to have adoe with mee,
 Because I could not give her many a jane."
 (Thereat full hartely laughed Satyrane.)
 "The second was an holy nunne to chose,
 Which would not let me be her chappellane,
 Because she knew, she sayd, I would disclose
 Her counsell, if she should her trust in me repose.

"The third a damzell was of low degree,
 Whom I in countrey cottage fownd by chaunce:
 Full little weened I that chastitee
 Had lodging in so meane a maintenaunce;
 Yet was she fayre, and in her countenaunce
 Dwelt simple truth in seemely fashion:
 Long thus I woo'd her with due observance,
 In hope unto my pleasure to have won;
 But was as far at last, as when I first begon.

"Safe her, I never any woman found
 That chastity did for itselfe embrace,
 But were for other causes firme and sound;
 Either for want of handsome time and place,
 Or else for feare of shame and fowle disgrace.
 Thus am I hopelesse ever to attaine
 My ladies love, in such a desperate case,
 But all my dayes am like to waste in vaine,
 Seeking to match the chaste with th' unchaste ladies traine."

"Perdy," sayd Satyrane, "thou Squyre of Dames,
 Great labour fondly hast thou hent in hand,
 To get small thanks, and therewith many blames;
 That may emongst Alcides labours stand."
 Thence backe returning to the former land,
 Where late he left the beast he overcame,
 He found him not; for he had broke his band,
 And was returnd againe unto his dame,
 To tell what tydings of fayre Florimell became.

CANTO VIII.

The witch creates a snowy lady like to Florimell;
 Who wrong'd by Carle, by Proteus sav'd,
 Is sought by Paridell.

So oft as I this history record,
 My hart doth melt with meere compassion,
 To thinke how causelesse of her owne accord
 This gentle damzell, whom I write upon,
 Should plunged be in such affliction
 Without all hope of comfort or reliefe;
 That sure I weene the hardest hart of stone
 Would hardly finde to aggravate her griefe:
 For misery craves rather mercy then reprieve.

But that accursed hag, her hostesse late,
 Had so enranckled her malicious hart,
 That she desyrd th' abridgement of her fate,
 Or long enlargement of her painefull smart.
 Now when the beast, which by her wicked art
 Late foorth she sent, she backe retourning spyde
 Tyde with her golden girdle; it a part
 Of her rich spoyles whom he had earst destroyd
 She weend, and wondrous gladnes to her hart applyde:

And, with it ronning hea'ly to her sonne,
 Thought with that sight him much to have reliv'd;
 Who, thereby deeming sure the thing as donne,
 His former grieve with furie fresh reviv'd
 Much more than earst, and would have algates riv'd
 The hart out of his brest: for sith her dedd
 He surety dempt, himselfe he thought depriv'd
 Quite of all hope wherewith he long had fedd
 His foolish malady, and long time had misledd.

With thought whereof exceeding mad he grew,
 And in his rage his mother would have slaine,
 Had she not fled into a secret mew,
 Where she was wont her sprights to entertaine
 The maisters of her art: there was she faine
 To call them all in order to her ayde,
 And them conjure, upon eternall paine,
 To counsell her so carefully dismayd
 How she might heale her sonne whose senses were decayd.

By their advice, and her owne wicked wit,
 She there deviz'd a wondrous worke to frame,
 Whose like on earth was never framed yit;
 That even Nature selfe envide the same,
 And grudg'd to see the counterfet should shame
 The thing it selfe: In hand she boldly tooke
 To make another like the former dame,
 Another Florimell, in shape and looke
 So lively, and so like, that many it mistooke.

The substance, whereof she the body made,
 Was purest snow in massy mould congeald,
 Which she had gathered in a shady glade
 Of the Riphœan hills to her reveald
 By errant sprights, but from all men conceald:
 The same she tempred with fine mercury
 And virgin wax that never yet was seald.
 And mingled them with perfect vermily;
 That like a lively sanguine it seemd to the eye.*

Instead of eyes two burning lampes she set
 In silver sockets, shyning like the skyes,
 And a quicke moving spirit did arret
 To stirre and roll them like to womens eyes;
 Instead of yellow lockes she did devyse
 With golden wyre to weave her curled head:
 Yet golden wyre was not so yellow thryse
 As Florimells sayre heare: and, in the stead
 Of life, she put a spright to rule the carcas dead;

A wicked spright, yfraught with fawning guyle
 And fayre resemblance above all the rest,
 Which with the Prince of Darkenes fell somewhyle
 From heavens blis and everlasting rest:
 Him needed not instruct which way were best
 Himselfe to fashion likest Florimell,
 Ne how to speake, ne how to use his gest;
 For he in counterfesaunce did excell,
 And all the wyles of wemens wits knew passing well.

Him shaped thus she deckt in garments gay,
 Which Florimell had left behind her late:
 That whoso then her saw, would surely say
 It was herselfe whom it did imitate,
 Or sayrer then herselfe, if ought algate
 Might sayrer be. And then she forth her brought
 Unto her sonne that lay in feeble state;
 Who seeing her gan streight upstart, and thought
 She was the ladyselfe whom he so long had sought.

Tho, fast her clipping twixt his armēs twayne,
 Extremely ioyed in so happy sight,
 And soone forgot his former sickely payne:
 But she, the more to seeme such as she hight,
 Coyly rebutted his embracement light;
 Yet still, with gentle countenaunce, retain'd
 Enough to hold a foole in vaine delight:
 Him long she so with shadowes entertain'd,
 As her creatresse had in charge to her ordain'd:

Till on a day, as he disposed was
 To walke the woodes with that his idole faire,
 Her to disport and idle time to pas
 In th' open freshnes of the gentle aire,
 A knight that way there chaunced to reaire;
 Yet knight he was not, but a boastfull swaine
 That decdes of armes had ever in despaire,
 Proud Braggadorchio, that in vaunting vaine
 His glory did repose and credit did maintaine.

He, seeing with that chorle so faire a wight
 Deckt with many a costly ornament,
 Much marveiled thereat, as well he might,
 And thought that match a fowle disparagement:
 His bloody speare estesoones he boldly bent
 Against the silly clowne, who dead through feare
 Fell streight to ground in great astonishment:
 "Villain," sayd he, "this lady is my deare;
 Dy, if thou it gainesay: I will away her beare."

The fearefull chorle durst not gainesay nor dooe,
 But trembling stood, and yielded him the pray;
 Who, finding litle leasure her to wooe,
 On Tromparts steed her mounted without stay,
 And without reskew led her quite away.
 Proud man himselfe then Braggadochio deem'd,
 And next to none, after that happy day,
 Being possessed of that spoyle, which seem'd
 The fairest wight on ground and most of men esteem'd.

But, when he saw himselfe free from poursute,
 He gan make gentle purpose to his dame
 With termes of love and lewdnesse dissolute;
 For he could well his glozing speaches frame
 To such vaine uses that him best became:
 But she thereto would lend but light regard,
 As seeming sory that she ever came
 Into his powre, that used her so hard
 To reave her honor which she more then life prefard.

Thus as they two of kindnes treated long,
 There them by chaunce encountred on the way
 An armed knight upon a courser strong,
 Whose trampling feete upon the hollow lay
 Seemed to thunder, and did nigh affray
 That capons corage; yet he looked grim,
 And faynd to cheare his lady in dismay,
 Who seemd for feare to quake in every lim,
 And her to save from outrage meekely prayed him.

Fiercelly that straunger forward came; and, nigh
 Approaching, with bold words and bitter threat
 Bad that same boaster, as he mote on high,
 To leave to him that lady for excheat,
 Or bide him batteill without further treat.
 That challenge did too peremptory seeme,
 And fild his senses with abashment great;
 Yet, seeing nigh him ieopardy extreme,
 He it dissembled well, and light seemd to esteeme;

Saying, "Thou foolish knight, that weenst with words
 To steale away that I with blowes have wonne,
 And brought through points of many perilous swords!
 But if thee list to see thy courser ronne,
 Or prove thyselfe; this sad encounter shonne,
 And seeke els without hazard of thy hedd."
 At those prowd words that other knight begonno
 To wex exceeding wroth and him aredd
 To turne his steede about, or sure he should be dedd.

"Sith then," said Braggadochio, "needes thou wilt
 Thy daies abridge, through prooffe of puissance;
 Turne we our steeds; that both in equall tilt
 May meete again, and each take happy chaunce."
 This said, they both a furlongs mountaunce
 Retird their steeds, to ronne in even race:
 But Braggadochio with his bloody launce
 Once having turnd, no more returnd his face,
 But lefte his love to losse, and fled himselfe apace.

The knight, him seeing flie, had no regard
 Him to poursew, but to the lady rode;
 And, having her from Trompart lightly reard,
 Upon his courser sett the lovly lode,
 And with her fled away without abode:
 Well weened he, that fairest Florimell
 It was with whom in company he yode,
 And so herselfe did alwaies to him tell;
 So made him thinke himselfe in heven that was in hell.

But Florimell herselfe was far away,
 Driven to great distresse by fortune straunge,
 And taught the carefull mariner to play,
 Sith late mischaunce had her compeld to chaunge
 The land for sea, at random there to raunge:
 Yett there that cruell queene avengenesse,
 Not satisfyde so far her to estraunge
 From courtly blis and wonted happinesse,
 Did heape on her new waves of weary wretchednesse.

For, being fled into the fishers bote
 For refuge from the monsters cruelty,
 Long so she on the mighty maine did flote,
 And with the tide drove forward carelesly;
 For th' ayre was milde and cleared was the skie,
 And all his windes dan Aeolus did keepe
 From stirring up their stormy enmity,
 As pittying to see her waile and weepe;
 But all the while the fisher did securely sleepe.

At last when droncke with drowsinesse he woke,
 And saw his drover drive along the streame,
 He was dismayd; and thrise his brest he stroke,
 For marveill of that accident extreame:
 But when he saw that blazing beauties beame,
 Which with rare light his bote did beautifye,
 He marveild more, and thought he yet did dreame
 Not well awakte; or that some extasye,
 Assotted had his sence, or dazed was his eye.

But, when her well avizing hee perceiv'd
 To be no vision nor fantasticke sight,
 Great comfort of her presence he conceiv'd,
 And felt in his old corage new delight
 To gin awake, and stir his frozen spright:
 Tho rudely askte her, how she thither came?
 "Ah!" sayd she, "father, I note read aright
 What hard misfortune brought me to this same;
 Yet am I glad that here I now in safety ame.

"But thou, good man, sith far in sea we bee,
 And the great waters gin apace to swell,
 That now no more we can the mayn-land see,
 Have care, I pray, to guide the cock-bote well,
 Least worse on sea then us on land befell."
 Thereat th' old man did nought but fondly grin,
 And saide, his boat the way could wisely tell:
 But his deceitfull eyes did never lin
 To looke on her faire face and marke her snowy skin,

The sight whereof in his congealed flesh
 Infixt such secrete sting of greedy lust,
 That the drie withered stocke it gan refresh,
 And kindled heat, that soone in flame forth brust:
 The driest wood is soonest burnt to dust.
 Rudely to her he lept, and his rough hand,
 Where ill became him, rashly would have thrust;
 But she with angry scorne him did withstond,
 And shiamefully reproved for his rudenes fond.

But he, that never good nor maners knew,
 Her sharpe rebuke full litle did esteeme;
 Hard is to teach an old horse amble trew:
 The inward smoke, that did before but steeme,
 Broke into open fire and rage extreme;
 And now he strength gan adde unto his will,
 Foreyng to doe that did him fowle misseeme:
 Beastly he threwe her downe, ne ear'd to spill
 Her garments gay with scales of fish, that all did fill.

The silly virgin strove him to withstand
 All that she might, and him in vaine revild;
 Shee struggled strongly both with foote and hand
 To save her honor from that villaine vilde,
 And cride to heaven, from humane help exild.
 O! ye brave knights, that boast this ladies love,
 Where be ye now, when she is nigh defild
 Of filthy wretch! well may she you reprove
 Of falsehood or of slouth, when most it may behove.

But if that thou, Sir Satyran, didst weete,
 Or thou, Sir Peridure, her sory state,
 How soone would yee assemble many a fleete,
 To fetch from sea that ye at land lost late!
 Towres, citties, kingdomes, ye would ruinate
 In your avengement and despiteous rage,
 Ne ought your burning fury mote abate:
 But, if Sir Calidore could it presage,
 No living creature could his cruelty asswage.

But, sith that none of all her knights is nye,
 See how the heavens, of voluntary grace
 And soveraine favor towards chastity,
 Doe succor send to her distressed eace:
 So much High God doth innocence embrace!
 It fortun'd, whilst thus she stifly strove,
 And the wide sea importuned long space
 With shrilling shriekes, Proteus abroad did rove,
 Along the fomy waves driving his finny drove.

Proteus is shepheard of the seas of yore,
 And hath the charge of Neptune's mighty heard;
 An aged sire with head all frowy hore,
 And sprinkled frost upon his dewy beard:
 Who when those pittifull outeries he heard
 Through all the seas so ruefully resound,
 His charett swifte in hast he thether steard,
 Which with a teeme of scaly Phoenix bownd
 Was drawne upon the waves, that fomed him arownd;

And comming to that fishers wandring bote,
 That went at will withouten card or sayle,
 He therein saw that yrkesome sight, which smote
 Deepe indignation and compassion frayle
 Into his hart attonce: streight did he hayle
 The greedy villain from his hoped pray,
 Of which he now did very little fayle;
 And with his staffe, that drives his heard astray,
 Him bett so sore, that life and sence did much dismay.

The whiles the pittous lady up did ryse,
 Ruffled and fowly raid with filthy soyle,
 And blubbred face with teares of her faire eyes;
 Her heart nigh broken was with weary toyle,
 To save herselfe from that outrageous spoyle:
 But when she looked up, to weet what wight
 Had her from so infamous fact assoyld,
 For shame, but more for feare of his grim sight,
 Downe in her lap she hid her face, and lowdly shrighit.

Herselfe not saved yet from daunger dredd
 She thought, but chaung'd from one to other feare:
 Like as a fearefull partridge, that is fledd
 From the sharpe hauke which her attached neare,
 And fals to ground to seeke for succor theare,
 Whereas the hungry spaniells she does spye
 With greedy iawes her ready for to teare:
 In such distresse and sad perplexity
 Was Florimell, when Proteus she did see her by.

But he endevored with speeches milde
 Her to recomfort, and accourage bold,
 Bidding her feare no more her foeman vilde,
 Nor doubt himselfe; and who he was her told:
 Yet all that could not from affright her hold,
 Ne to recomfort her at all prevayld;
 For her faint hart was with the frozen cold
 Benumbd so inly that her wits nigh fayld,
 And all her sences with abashment quite were quayld.

Her up betwixt his rugged hands he reard,
 And with his frory lips full softly kist,
 Whiles the cold ysickles from his rough beard
 Dropped adowne upon her yvory brest:
 Yet he himselfe so busily addrest,
 That her out of astonishment he wrought;
 And, out of that same fishers filthy nest
 Removing her, into his charet brought,
 And there with many gentle termes her faire besought.

But that old leachour, which with bold assault
 That beautie durst presume to violate,
 He cast to punish for his hainous fault:
 Then tooke he him yet trembling sith of late
 And tyde behind his charet, to aggrate
 The virgin whom he had abusde so sore;
 So drag'd him through the waves in scornful state,
 And after cast him up upon the shore;
 But Florimell with him unto his bowre he bore.

His bowre is in the bottom of the maine,
 Under a mightie rocke gainst which doe rave
 The roring billowes in their proud disdaine,
 That with the angry working of the wave
 Therein is eaten out an hollow cave,
 That seemes rough masons hand with engines keene
 Had long while laboured it to engrave:
 There was his wonne; ne living wight was seene
 Save one old nymph, hight Panopé, to keepe it cleane.

Thether he brought the sory Florimell,
 And entertained her the best he might,
 (And Panopè her entertaind eke well,
 As an immortall mote a mortall wight,
 To winne her liking unto his delight:
 With flattering wordes he sweetly wooed her,
 And offered faire guiftes t' allure her sight;
 But she both offers and the offerer
 Despyde, and all the fawning of the flatterer.

Dayly he tempted her with this or that,
 And never suffred her to be at rest:
 But evermore she him refused flat,
 And all his fained kindnes did detest;
 So firmly she had sealed up her brest.
 Sometimes he boasted that a god he hight;
 But she a mortall creature loved best:
 Then he would make himselfe a mortall wight;
 But then she said she lov'd none but a Faery knight.

Then like a Faery knight himselfe he drest;
 For every shape on him he could endew:
 Then like a king he was to her exprest,
 And offred kingdoms unto her in vew
 To be his leman and his lady trew:
 But, when all this he nothing saw prevaile,
 With harder meanes he cast her to subdew,
 And with sharpe threatens her often did assaile:
 So thinking for to make her stubborne corage quayle.

To dreadfull shapes he did himselfe transforme:
 Now like a gyaunt; now like to a feend;
 Then like a centaure; then like to a storme
 Raging within the waves: thereby he weend
 Her will to win unto his wished eend:
 But when with feare, nor favour, nor with all
 He els could doe, he saw himselfe esteemd,
 Downe in a dongeon deepe he let her fall,
 And threatned there to make her his eternall thrall.

Eternall thraldome was to her more lise
 Then losse of chastitie, or chaunge of love:
 Dye had she rather in tormenting grieve
 Than any should of falsenesse her reprove,
 Or loosenes, that she lightly did remove.
 Most vertuous virgin! glory be thy meed,
 And crowne of heavenly prayse with saintes above,
 Where most sweet hymnes of this thy famous deed
 Are still emongst them song, that far my rymes ceed:

Fit song of angels caroled to bee!
 But yet whatso my feeble Muse can frame,
 Shall be t' advance thy goodly chastitee,
 And to enroll thy memorable name
 In th' heart of every honourable dame,
 That they thy vertuous deedes may imitate,
 And be partakers of thy endlesse fame.
 Yt yrkes me leave thee in this wofull state,
 To tell of Satyrane where I him left of late:

Who having ended with that Squire of Dames
 A long discourse of his adventures vayne,
 The which himselfe then ladies more defames,
 And finding not th' hyena to be slayne,
 With that same squire retourned backe againe
 To his first way: And, as they forward went,
 They spyde a knight sayre pricking on the playne,
 As if he were on some adventure bent,
 And in his port appeared manly hardiment.

Sir Satyrane him towards did addresse,
 To weet what wight he was, and what his quest:
 And, comming nigh, eftsoones he gan to gesse
 Both by the burning hart which on his brest
 He bare, and by the colours in his crest,
 That Paridell it was: Tho to him yode,
 And, him saluting as be seemed best,
 Gan first inquire of tydings farre abroad;
 And afterwarde on what adventure now he rode.

Who thereto answering said; "The tydings bad,
 Which now in Faery Court all men doe tell,
 Which turned hath great mirth to mourning sad
 Is the late ruine of proud Marinell,
 And suddein parture of faire Florimell
 To find him forth: and after her are gone
 All the brave knightes, that doen in armes excell,
 To savegard her ywandred all alone;
 Emongst the rest my lott (unworthy) is to be one."

"Ah! gentle knight," said then Sir Satyrane,
 "Thy labour all is lost, I greatly dread,
 That hast a thanklesse service on the ta'ne,
 And offrest sacrifice unto the dead:
 For dead, I surely doubt, thou maist aread
 Henceforth for ever Florimell to bee;
 That all the noble Knights of Maydenhead,
 Which her ador'd, may sore repent with mee,
 And all faire ladies may for ever sory bee."

Which wordes when Paridell had heard, his hew
 Gan greatly chaung, and seemd dismaid to bee:
 Then sayd; "Fayre sir, how may I weene it trew,
 That ye do tell in such uncerteintee?
 Or spake ye of report, or did ye see
 Iust cause of dread, that makes ye doubt so sore?
 For perdie elles how mote it ever bee,
 That ever hand should dare for to engore
 Her noble blood! The hevens such crueltie abhore.

"These eyes did see that they will ever rew
 T'have seene," quoth he, "whenas a monstrous beast
 The palfrey whereon she did travell slew,
 And of his bowels made his bloody feast:
 Which speaking token sheweth at the least
 Her certein losse, if not her sure decay:
 Besides, that more suspicion encreast,
 I found her golden girdle cast astray,
 Distaynd with durt and blood, as relique of the pray."

"Ah me!" said Paridell, "the signes be sadd;
 And, but God turne the same to good soothsay,
 That ladies safetie is sore to be dradd:
 Yet will I not forsake my forward way,
 Till triall doe more certeine truth bewray."
 "Faire sir," quoth he, "well may it you succeed!
 Ne long shall Satyrane behind you stay;
 But to the rest, which in this quest proceed,
 My labour adde, and be partaker of their speed."

"Ye noble knights," said then the Squire of Dames.
 "Well may yee speede in so praiseworthy payne!
 But sith the sunne now ginnes to slake his beames
 In dewy vapours of the westernne mayne,
 And lose the tyme out of his weary wayne.
 Mote not mislike you also to abate
 Your zealous hast, till morrow next againe
 Both light of heaven and strength of men relate:
 Which if ye please, to yonder castle turne your gate"

That counsell pleased well; so all yfere
 Forth marched to a castle them before;
 Where soone arriving they restrained were
 Of ready entraunce, which ought evermore
 To errant knights be commune: Wondrous sore
 Thereat displeased they were, till that young squire
 Gan them informe the cause why that same dore
 Was shut to all which lodging did desyre:
 The which to let you weet will further time requyre.

CANTO IX.

Malbecco will no straunge Knights host,
 For peevish gealosy:
 Paridell giusts with Britomart:
 Both shew their auncestry.

REDOUBTED knights and honorable dames,
 To whom I leuell all my labours end,
 Right sore I feare least with unworthy blames
 This odious argument my rymes should shend,
 Or ought your goodly patience offend,
 Whiles of a wanton lady I doe write,
 Which with her loose incontinence doth blend
 The shyning glory of your souveraine light;
 And knighthood fowle defaced by a faithlesse knight.

But never let th' ensample of the bad
 Offend the good: for good, by paragone
 Of evill, may more notably be rad;
 As white seemes fayrer macht with blacke attone:
 Ne all are shamed by the fault of one:
 For lo! in heven, whereas all goodnes is
 Emongst the angels, a whole legione
 Of wicked sprighes did fall from happy blis;
 What wonder then if one, of women all, did mis.

Then listen, lordlings, if ye list to weet
 The cause why Satyrane and Paridell
 Mote not be entertaynd, as seemed meet,
 Into that castle, as that squire does tell.
 "Therein a cancred crabbed carle does dwell,
 That has no skill of court nor courtesie,
 Ne cares what men say of him ill or well:
 For all his dayes he drownes in privitie,
 Yet has full large to live and spend at libertie.

"But all his mind is set on mucky pelfe,
 To hoord up heapes of evill-gotten masse,
 For which he others wrongs, and wreckes himselfe:
 Yet is he lincked to a lovely lasse,
 Whose beauty doth her bounty far surpass;e;
 The which to him both far unequall yeares
 And also far unlike conditions has;
 For she does ioy to play emongst her peares,
 And to be free from hard restraynt and gealous feares.

"But he is old, and withered like hay,
 Unfit faire ladies service to supply;
 The privie guilt whereof makes him alway
 Suspect her truth, and keepe continuall spy
 Upon her with his other blinkt eye;
 No suffreth he resort of living wight
 Approch to her, ne keep her company,
 But in close bowre her mewes from all mens sight,
 Depriv'd of kindly ioy and naturall d.light.

"Malbecco he, and Hellenore she hight;
 Unfitly yokt together in one teeme.
 That is the cause why never any knight
 Is suffred here to enter, but he seeme
 Such as no doubt of him he need misdeeme."
 Thereat Sir Satyrane gan smyle, and say;
 "Extremely mad the man I surely deeme
 That weenes, with watch and hard restraynt, to stay
 A womans will which is disposed to go astray.

"In vaine he feares that which he cannot shonne:
 For who wotes not, that womans subtiltyes
 Can guylen Argus, when she list misdonne?
 It is not yron bandes, nor hundred eyes
 Nor brasen walls, nor many wakefull spyes,
 That can withhold her wilfull-wandring feet;
 But fast goodwill, with gentle courtesyes,
 And timely service to her pleasures meet,
 May her perhaps containe that else would algates fleet."

"Then is he not more mad," sayd Paridell,
 "That hath himselfe unto such service sold,
 In dolefull thraldome all his dayes to dwell?
 For sure a foole I doe him firmly hold,
 That loves his fetters, though they were of gold.
 But why doe wee devise of others ill,
 Whyles thus we suffer this same dotard old
 To keepe us out in scorne, of his owne will,
 And rather do not ransack all, and himselfe kill?"

"Nay, let us first," sayd Satyrane, "entreat
 The man by gentle meanes, to let us in;
 And afterwarde affray with cruell threat,
 Ere that we to efforce it doe begin:
 Then, if all fayle, we will by force it win,
 And eke reward the wretch for his mesprise,
 As may be worthy of his haynous sin."
 That counsell pleasd: Then Paridell did rise,
 And to the castle-gate approcht in quiet wise:

Whereat soft knocking, entrance he desyrd,
 The good man selfe, which then the porter playd,
 Him answered, that all were now retyrd
 Unto their rest, and all the keyes conveyd
 Unto their maister who in bed was layd,
 That none him durst awake out of his dreame;
 And therefore them of patience gently prayd.
 Then Paridell began to chaunge his theme,
 And threatned him with force and punishment extreme.

But all in vaine; for nought mote him relent:
 And now so long before the wicket fast
 They wayted, that the night was forward spent,
 And the faire welkin fowly overcast
 Gan blowen up a bitter stormy blast,
 With showre and hayle so horrible and dred,
 That this faire many were compeld at last
 To fly for succour to a little shed,
 The which beside the gate for swyne was ordered.

It fortun'd, soone after they were gone,
 Another knight, whom tempest thether brought,
 Came to that castle, and with earnest mone,
 Like as the rest, late entrance deare besought;
 But, like so as the rest, he prayd for nought;
 For flatly he of entrance was refusd:
 Sorely thereat he was displeasd, and thought
 How to avenge himselfe so sore abusd,
 And evermore the carle of courtesie accusd.

But, to avoyde th' intollerable stowre,
 He was compeld to seeke some refuge neare,
 And to that shed, to shrowd him from the showre,
 He came, which full of guests he found whyleare,
 So as he was not let to enter there:
 Whereat he gan to wex exceeding wroth,
 And swore that he would lodge with them yfere
 Or them dislodg, all were they liefse or loth;
 And so defyde them each, and so defyde them both.

Both were full loth to leave that needfull tent,
 And both full loth in darkenesse to debate;
 Yet both full liefse him lodging to have lent,
 And both full liefse his boasting to abate:
 But chiefly Paridell his hart did grate
 To heare him threaten so despightfully,
 As if he did a dogge in kenell rate
 That durst not barke: and rather had he dy
 Then, when he was defyde, in coward corner ly.

Tho, hastily remounting to his steed,
 He forth issew'd ; like as a boystrous winde,
 Which in th' earthes hollow caves hath long ben hid
 And shut up fast within her prisons blind,
 Makes the huge element, against her kinde,
 To move and tremble as it were aghast,
 Untill that it an issew forth may finde ;
 Then forth it breakes, and with his furious blast
 Confounds both land and seas, and skyes doth overcast.

Their steel-hed speares they strongly coucht, and met
 Together with impetuous rage and forse,
 That with the terrour of their fierce aslret
 They rudely drove to ground both man and horse,
 That each awhile lay like a sencelesse corse.
 But Paridell sore brused with the blow
 Could not arise, the counterchafinge to scorse ;
 Till that young squyre him reared from below ;
 Then drew he his bright sword, and gan about him throw.

But Satyrane forth stepping did them stay,
 And with faire treaty pacifide their yre :
 Then, when they were accorded from the fray,
 Against that castles lord they gan conspire,
 To heape on him dew vengeance for his hire.
 They beene agreed, and to the gates they goo
 To burn the same with unquenchable fire,
 And that uncurteous earle, their commune foe,
 To doe fowle death to die, or wrap in grievous foe.

Malbecco seeing them resolv'd in deed
 To flame the gates, and hearing them to call
 For fire in earnest, ran with fearfull speed,
 And, to them calling from the castle wall,
 Besought them humbly him to beare withall,
 As ignorant of servants bad abuse
 And slacke attendaunce unto straungers call.
 The knights were willing all things to excuse.
 Though nought belev'd, and entraunce late did not refuse.

They beene ybrought into a comely bowre,
 And servd of all things that mote needfull bee ;
 Yet secretly their hoste did on them lowre,
 And welcomde more for feare than charitee ;
 But they dissembled what they did not see,
 And welcomed themselves. Each gan undight
 Their garments wett, and weary armour free,
 To dry themselves by Vulcanes flaming light,
 And eke their lately bruized parts to bring in plight.

And eke that straunger knight emongst the rest
 Was for like need enforst to disaray:
 Tho, whenas vailed was her lofty crest,
 Her golden locks, that were in tramells gay.
 Upbouden, did themselves adowne display
 And raught unto her heeles; like sunny beames,
 That in a cloud their light did long time stay,
 Their vapour vaded, shewe their golden gleames, [streames.
 And through the persant aire shoote forth their azure

Shee also dofte her heavy habericon,
 Which the faire feature of her limbs did hyde;
 And her well-plighted frock, which she did won
 To tucke about her short when she did ryde,
 Shee low let fall, that flowd from her lanck syde
 Downe to her foot with carelesse modestee.
 Then of them all she plainly was espyde
 To be a woman-wight, unwist to bee,
 The fairest woman-wight that ever eie did see.

Like as Bellona (being late returnd
 From slaughter of the giaunts conquered;
 Where proud Encelade, whose wide nostrils burnd
 With breathed flames like to a furnace redd,
 Transfixt with her speare downe tumbled dedd
 From top of Hemus by him heaped hye;)
 Hath loosd her helmet from her lofty hedd,
 And her Gorgonian shield gins to untye
 From her leste arme, to rest in glorious victorie.

Which whenas they beheld, they smitten were
 With great amazement of so wondrous sight;
 And each on other, and they all on her,
 Stood gazing; as if suddain great affright
 Had them surprizd: At last avizing right
 Her goodly personage and glorious hew,
 Which they so much mistooke, they tooke delight
 In their first error, and yett still anew
 With wonder of her beauty fed their hongry vew:

Yet n'ote their hongry vew be satisfide,
 But, seeing, still the more desir'd to see,
 And ever firmly fixed did abide
 In contemplation of divinitee:
 But most they mervaild at her chevalree
 And noble prowesse which they had approv'd,
 That much they faynd to know who she mote bee:
 Yet none of all them her thereof amov'd;
 Yet every one her likte, and every one her lov'd.

And Paridell, though partly discontent
 With his late fall and fowle indignity,
 Yet was soone wonne his malice to relent,
 Through gracious regard of her faire eye,
 And knightly worth, which he too late did try,
 Yet tried did adore. Supper was dight;
 Then they Malbecco prayd of courtesy,
 That of his lady they might have the sight
 And company at meat, to do them more delight.

But he, to shifte their curious request,
 Gan causen why she could not come in place;
 Her erased helth, her late recourse to rest,
 And humid evening ill for sicke folkes ease:
 But none of those excuses could take place;
 Ne would they eate, till she in presence came:
 Shee came in presence with right comely grace,
 And fairely them saluted, as became,
 And shewd herselfe in all a gentle courteous damo.

They sate to meat; and Satyrane his chaunce
 Was her before, and Paridell beside;
 But he himselfe sate looking still askaunce
 Gainst Britomart, and ever closely eide
 Sir Satyrane, that glaunces might not glide:
 But his blinde eie, that sided Paridell,
 All his demcasnure from his sight did hide:
 On her faire face so did he feede his fill,
 And sent close messages of love to her at will: .

And ever and anone, when none was ware,
 With speaking lookes, that close embassage bore,
 He rov'd at her, and told his secret care;
 For all that art he learned had of yore:
 Ne was she ignoraunt of that leud lore,
 But in his eye his meaning wisely redd,
 And with the like him aunswerd evermore:
 Shee sent at him one fyrie dart, whose hedd
 Empoisoned was with privy lust and gealous dredd.

He from that deadly throw made no defence,
 But to the wound his weake heart opened wyde:
 The wicked engine through false influence
 Past through his eies, and secretly did glyde
 Into his heart, which it did sorely gryde.
 But nothing new to him was that same paine,
 Ne paine at all; for he so ofte had tryde
 The powre thereof, and lov'd so oft in vaine,
 That thing of course he counted, love to entertaine.

Thenceforth to her he sought to intimate
 His inward grieve, by meanes to him well knowne;
 Now Bacchus fruite out of the silver plate
 He on the table dasht, as overthrowne,
 Or of the fruitfull liquor overflowne;
 And by the dauncing bubbles did drinke,
 Or therein write to let his love be showne;
 Which well she redd out of the learned line:
 A sacrament prophane in mistery of wine.

And, whenso of his hand the pledge she raught,
 The guilty cup she fained to mistake,
 And in her lap did shed her idle draught,
 Shewing desire her inward flame to slake.
 By such close signes they secret way did make
 Unto their wils, and one eies watch escape:
 Two eies him needeth, for to watch and wake,
 Who lovers will deceive. Thus was the ape,
 By their faire handling, put into Malbecco's cape.

Now, when of meats and drinks they had their fill,
 Purpose was moved by that gentle dame
 Unto those knights adventurous, to tell
 Of deeds of armes which unto them became,
 And every one his kindred and his name.
 Then Paridell, in whom a kindly pride
 Of gracious speach and skill his words to frame
 Abounded, being glad of so fitte tide
 Him to commend to her, thus spake, of al well eide.

"Troy, that art now nought but an idle name,
 And in thine ashes buried low dost lie,
 Though whilome far much greater then thy fame,
 Before that angry Gods and cruell skie
 Upon thee heapt a direful destinie;
 What boots it boast thy glorious descent,
 And fetch from heven thy great genealogie,
 Sith all thy worthie prayeses being blent
 Their ofspring hath embaste, and later glory shent!

"Most famous worthy of the world, by whome
 That warre was kindled which did Troy inflame,
 And stately towres of Ilion whilome
 Brought unto balefull ruine, was by name
 Sir Paris far renownd through noble fame,
 Who, through great prowesse and bold hardinesse,
 From Lacedaemon fetcht the fayrest dame
 That ever Greece did boast, or knight possesse,
 Whom Venus to him gave for meed of worthinesse;

"Fayre Helene, flowre of beautie excellent,
 And girlond of the mighty conquerours,
 That madest many ladies deare lament
 The heavie losse of their brave paramours,
 Which they far off beheld from Trojan toures,
 And saw the fieldes of faire Scamander strowne
 With carcasses of noble warrioures,
 Whose fruitlesse lives were under furrow sowne.
 And Xanthus sandy bankes with blood all overflowne!

"From him my lineage I derive aright,
 Who long before the ten yeares siege of Troy,
 Whiles yet on Ida he a shepeheard hight,
 On faire Oenone got a lovely boy,
 Whom, for remembrance of her passed ioy,
 She, of his father, Paris did name;
 Who, after Greekes did Priams realme destroy,
 Gathred the Trojan reliques sav'd from flame,
 And, with them sayling thence, to th' isle of Paros came.

"That was by him cald Paros, which before
 Hight Nausa; there he many yeares did raine,
 And built Nausicle by the Pontick shore;
 The which he dying lefte next in remaine
 To Paridas his sonne,
 From whom I Paridell by kin descend:
 But, for faire ladies love and glories gaine,
 My native soile have lefte, my dayes to spend
 In seewing deeds of armes, my lives and labors end."

Whenas the noble Britomart heard tell
 Of Trojan warres and Priams citie sackt,
 (The ruefull story of Sir Paridell.)
 She was empassioud at that piteous act,
 With zelous envy of Greekes cruell fact,
 Against that nation, from whose race of old
 She heard that she was lineally extract:
 For noble Britons sprong from Trojans bold,
 And Troynovant was built of old Troyes ashes cold.

Then sighing soft awhile, at last she thus:
 "O lamentable fall of famous towne,
 Which raignd so many yeares victorious,
 And of all Asie bore the soveraine crowne,
 In one sad night consumed and throwen downe!
 What stony hart, that heares thy haplesse fate,
 Is not empierst with deepe compassiowne,
 And makes ensample of mans wretched state,
 That floures so fresh at morne, and fades at evening late!

"Behold, sir, how your pitifull complaint
 Hath fownd another partner of your payne:
 For nothing may impresse so deare constraint
 As countrie cause, and commune foes disdayne.
 But, if it should not grieve you backe agayne
 To turne your course, I would to heare desyre
 What to Aeneas fell; sith that men sayne
 He was not in the cities wofull fyre
 Consum'd, but did himselfe to safety retyre."

"Anchyses sonne begott of Venus fayre,"
 Said he, "out of the flames for safegard fled,
 And with a remnant did to sea repayre;
 Where he, through fatall errour long was led
 Full many yeares, and weetlesse wandered
 From shore to shore amongst the Lybick sandes,
 Ere rest he fownd: Much there he suffered,
 And many perilles past in forreine landes,
 To save his people sad from victours vengefull handes:

"At last in Latium he did arryve,
 Where he with cruell warre was entertaind
 Of th' inland folke, which sought him backe to drive,
 Till he with old Latinus was constraind
 To contract wedlock, so the fates ordaind;
 Wedlocke contract in blood, and eke in blood
 Accomplished; that many deare complaind:
 The rivall slaine, the victour (through the flood Escaped hardly) hardly praised his wedlock good.

"Yet, after all, he victour did survive,
 And with Latinus did the kingdom part:
 But after, when both nations gan to strive
 Into their names the title to convert,
 His sonne Iulus did from thence depart
 With all the warlike youth of Troians bloud,
 And in long Alba plast his throne apart;
 Where faire it florished and long time stoud,
 Till Romulus, renewing it, to Rome removd."

"There; there," said Britomart, "afresh appeared
 The glory of the later world to spring,
 And Troy againe out of her dust was reard
 To sitt in second seat of soveraine king
 Of all the world, under her governing.
 But a third kingdom yet is to arise
 Out of the Troians scattered ofspring,
 That, in all glory and great enterprise,
 Both first and second Troy shall dare to equalise.

"It Troynovant is hight, that with the waves
Of wealthy Thamis washed is along,
Upon whose stubborne neck (whereat he raves
With roring rage, and sore himselfe does throng,
That all men feare to tempt his billowes strong,)
She fastned hath her foot; which stand so hy,
That it a wonder of the world is song
In forreine landes; and all, which passen by,
Beholding it from farre doe think it threatens the skye.

"The Troian Brute did first that citie fownd,
And Hygate made the meare thereof by West,
And Overt-gate by North: that is the bownd
Toward the land; two rivers bownd the rest.
So huge a scope at first him seemed best,
To be the compasse of his kingdomes seat:
So huge a mind could not in lesser rest,
Ne in small meares containe his glory great,
That Albion had conquered first by warlike feat."

"Ah! fairest lady-knight," said Paridell,
"Pardon I pray my heedlesse oversight,
Who had forgot that whylome I heard tell
From aged Mnemon; for my wits beene light.
Indeed he said, if I remember right,
That of the antique Troian stocke there grew
Another plant, that raught to wondrous hight,
And far abroad his mighty braunches threw
Into the utmost angle of the world he knew.

"For that same Brute, whom much he did advaunce
In all his speech, was Sylvius his sonne,
Whom having slain through luckles arrowes glaunce,
He fled for feare of that he had misdonne,
Or els for shame, so fowle reproch to shonne;
And with him ledd to see an youthly trayne;
Where wearie wandring they long time did wonne,
And many fortunes prov'd in th' ocean mayne,
And great adventures found, that now were long to sayne.

"At last by fatall course they driven were
Into an island spatious and brode,
The furthest North that did to them appeare:
Which, after rest, they, seeking farre abroad,
Found it the fittest soyle for their abode,
Fruitfull of all thinges fitt for living foode,
But wholly waste, and void of peoples trode,
Save an huge nation of the geaunts broode,
That fed on living flesh, and dronck mens vitall blood.

"Whom he, through wearie wars and labours long,
 Subdewd with losse of many Britons bold:
 In which the great Goëmagot of strong
 Corineus, and Coulin of Debon old,
 Were overthrowne and laide on th' earth full cold,
 Which quaked under their so hideous masse:
 A famous history to bee enrold
 In everlasting monuments of brasse,
 That all the antique worthies merits far did passe.

"His worke great Troynovant, his worke is eke
 Fair Lincolne, both renowned far away;
 That who from East to West will endlong seeke,
 Cannot two fairer cities find this day,
 Except Cleopolis: so heard I say
 Old Mnemon: Therefore, Sir, I greet you well
 Your countrey kin: and you entyrelly pray
 Of pardon for the strife, which late befell
 Betwixt us both unknowne." So ended Paridell.

But all the while that he these speeches spent,
 Upon his lips hong faire Dame Hellenore
 With vigilant regard and dew attent,
 Fashioning worldes of fancies evermore
 In her fraile witt, that now her quite forlore:
 The whiles unwares away her wondring eye
 And greedy eares her weake hart from her bore:
 Which he perceiving, ever privily,
 In speaking, many false belgardes at her let fly.

So long these knightes discoursed diversly
 Of straunge affaires, and noble hardiment,
 Which they had past with mickle ieopardy,
 That now the humid night was farforth spent,
 And hevenly lampes were halfendeale ybrent:
 Which th' old man seeing wel, who too long thought
 Every discourse, and every argument,
 Which by the hours he measured, besought
 Them go to rest. So all unto their bowres were brought.

CANTO X.

Paridell rapeth Hellenore ;
 Malbecco her poursewes ;
 Fynds amongst Satyres, whence with him
 To turne she doth refuse.

THE morrow next, so soone as Phœbus lamp
 Bewrayed had the world wit : early light,
 And fresh Aurōra had the shady damp
 Out of the goodly heven amoved quight,
 Faire Britomart and that same Faery knight
 Uprose, forth on their iourney for to wend :
 Fut Paridell complaynd, that his late fight
 With Britomart so sore did him offend,
 That ryde he could not till his hurts he did amend.

So forth they far'd ; but he behind them stayd
 Maulgre his host, who grudged grivously
 To house a guest that would be needes obayd,
 And of his owne him leste not liberty :
 Might wanting measure, moveth surquedry.
 Two things he feared, but the third was death ;
 That fiers youngmans unruly maystery ;
 His money, which he lov'd as living breath,
 And his faire wife, whom honest long he kept unceath.

But patience perforce; he must abie
 What fortune and his fate on him will lay :
 Fond is the feare that findes no remedie.
 Yet warily he watcheth every way,
 By which he feareth evill happen may ;
 So th' evill thinkes by watching to prevent :
 No doth he suffer her, nor night nor day,
 Out of his sight herselfe once to absent :
 So doth he punish her, and eke himself torment.

But Paridell kept better watch than hee,
 A fit occasion for his turne to finde.
 False love ! why do men say thou canst not see,
 And in their foolish fancy feigne thee blinde,
 That with thy charmes the sharpest sight doest binde,
 And to thy will abuse ? Thou walkest free,
 And seest every secret of the minde ;
 Thou seest all, yet none at all sees thee :
 All that is by the working of thy deitee.

So perfect in that art was Paridell,
 That he Malbecco's halfe eye did wyle;
 His halfe eye he wiled wondrous well,
 And Hellenors both eyes did eke beguyle,
 Both eyes and hart attonce, during the while
 That he there sojourned his woundes to heale;
 That Cupid selfe, it seeing, close did smyle
 To weet how he her love away did steale,
 And bad that none their ioyous treason should reveale.

The learned lover lost no time nor tyde
 That least advantage mote to him afford,
 Yet bore so faire a sayle, that none espyde
 His secret drift till her he layd aboard.
 Whenso in open place and commune bord
 He fortun'd her to meet, with commune speach
 He courted her; yet bayted every word,
 That his ungentle hoste n'ot him appeach
 Of vile ungentlenesse or hospitages breach.

But when apart (if ever her apart
 He found) then his false engins fast he plyde,
 And all the sleights unbosomd in his hart:
 He sigh'd, he sobd, he swoownd, he perdy dyde,
 And cast himselfe on ground her fast besyde:
 Tho' when againe he him bethought to live,
 He wept, and wayld, and false laments belyde,
 Saying, but if she mercie would him give,
 That he mote algates dye, yet did his death forgiue.

And otherwhyles with amorous delights
 And pleasing toyes he would her entertaine;
 Now singing sweetly to surprize her sprights,
 Now making layes of love and lovers paine,
 Bransles, ballads, virelayes, and verses vaine;
 Oft purposes, oft riddles, he devysd,
 And thousands like which flow'd in his braine,
 With which he fed her fancy, and entysd
 To take to his new love, and leave her old despyd.

And every where he might and everie while
 He did her service dewtifull, and sewd
 At hand with humble pride and pleasing guile;
 So closely yet, that none but she it vewd,
 Who well perceived all. and all indewd.
 Thus finely did he his false nets dispred,
 With which he many weake harts had subdewd
 Of yore, and many had ylike misled:
 What wonder then if she were likewise carried?

No fort so sensible, no wals so strong,
 But that continuall battery will rive,
 Or daily siege, through dispurvayauce long
 And lacke of reskewes, will to parley drive;
 And peece, that unto parley eare will give,
 Will shortly yield itselfe, and will be made
 The vassall of the victors will bylive:
 That stratageme had oftentimes assayd
 This crafty paramoure, and now it plaine display'd.

For through his traines he her entrapped hath,
 That she her love and hart hath wholly sold
 To him without regard of gaine, or seath,
 Or care of credite, or of husband old,
 Whom she hath vow'd to dub a fayre cucquold.
 Nought wants but time and place, which shortly shee
 Devized hath, and to her lover told.
 It pleased well: so well they both agree,
 So readie rype to ill, womens counsels bee!

Darke was the evening, fit for lovers stealth,
 When chaunst Malbecco busie be elsewhere,
 She to his closet went, where all his wealth
 Lay hid; thereof she countlesse summes did reare,
 The which she meant away with her to beare;
 The rest she fyr'd, for sport or for despight:
 As Hellene, when she saw aloft appeare
 The Troiano flames and reach to hevons hight,
 Did clap her hands, and ioyed at that doleful sight;

The second Hellenc, fayre Dame Hellenore,
 The whiles her husband ran with sory haste
 To quench the flames which she had tyn'd before,
 Laught at his foolish labour spent in waste,
 And ran into her lovers armes right fast;
 Where streight embraced she to him did cry
 And call aloud for helpe, ere helpe were past;
 For lo! that guest did beare her forcibly,
 And meant to ravish her, that rather had to dy!

The wretched man hearing her call for ayd,
 And ready seeing him with her to fly,
 In his disquiet mind was much dismayd:
 But when againe he backward cast his eye,
 And saw the wicked fire so furiously
 Consume his hart, and scorch his idoles face,
 He was therewith distressed diversely,
 Ne wist he how to turne, nor to what place:
 Was never wretched man in such a wofull cace.

Ay when to him she cryde, to her he turnd,
 And left the fire; love, money overcame:
 But, when he marked how his money burnd,
 He left his wife; money did love disclaime:
 Both was he loth to loose his loved dame,
 And loth to leave his liefest pelfe behinde;
 Yet, sith he no'te save both, he sav'd that same
 Which was the dearest to his dounghill minde,
 The god of his desire, the ioy of misers blinde.

Thus whilst all things in troublous uprore were,
 And all men busie to suppress the flame,
 The loving couple neede no reskew feare,
 But leasure had and liberty to frame
 Their purpost flight, free from all mens reclame;
 And Night, the patronesse of love-stealth sayre,
 Gave them safe conduct till to end they came:
 So beene they gone yfere, a wanton payre
 Of lovers loosely knit, where list them to repayre.

Soone as the cruell flames yslaked were,
 Malbecco, seeing how his losse did lye,
 Out of the flames which he had quencht whylere,
 Into huge waves of grieve and gealosye
 Full deepe emplonged was, and drowned nye
 Twixt inward doole and felonous despight:
 He rav'd, he wept, he stamp't, he lowd did cry;
 And all the passions that in man may light,
 Did him attonce oppresse, and vex his caytive spright.

Long thus he chawd the cud of inward grieve,
 And did consume his gall with anguish sore:
 Still when he mused on his late mischiefe,
 Then still the smart thereof increased more,
 And seemd more grievous then it was before;
 At last when sorrow he saw bootied nought,
 Ne grieve might not his love to him restore,
 He gan devise how her he reskew mought;
 Ten thousand wayes he cast in his confused thought.

At last resolving, like a pilgrim pore,
 To search her forth whereso she might be fond,
 And bearing with him treasure in close store,
 The rest he leaves in ground: so takes in hond
 To seeke her endlong both by sea and lond.
 Long he her sought, he sought her far and nere,
 And every where that he mote understand
 Of knightes and ladies any meetings were;
 And of each one he mett he tidings did inquere.

But all in vaine; his woman was too wise
 Ever to come into his clouch againe,
 And hee too simple ever to surprise
 The iolly Paridell, for all his paine.
 One day, as he forpassed by the plaine
 With weary pace, he far away espide
 A couple, seeming well to be his twaine,
 Which hived close under a forest side,
 As if they lay in wait, or els themselves did hide.

Well weened hee that those the same mote bee;
 And, as he better did their shape avize,
 Him seemed more their maner did agree;
 For th' one was armed all in warlike wize,
 Whom to be Paridell he did devize;
 And th' other, al yclad in garments light
 Discoloured like to womanish disguise,
 He did resemble to his lady bright;
 And ever his faint hart much earned at the sight:

And ever faine he towards them would goe,
 But yet durst not for dread approchen nee,
 But stood aloofe, unweeting what to doe;
 Till that prickt forth with loves extremity,
 That is the father of fowle gealosy,
 He closely nearer crept, the truth to weet:
 But, as he nigher drew, he easily
 Might scerne that it was not his sweetest sweet,
 Ne yet her Belamour, the partner of his sheet:

But it was scornefull Braggadochio,
 That with his servant Trompart hoverd there
 Sith late he fled from his too earnest foe:
 Whom such whenas Malbecco spyed clere,
 He turned backe, and would have fled arere;
 Till Trompart, ronning hastely, him did stay,
 And bad before his soveraine lord appeare.
 That was him loth, yet durst he not gainesay,
 And comming him before low louted on the lay.

The boaster at him sternely bent his browe,
 As if he could have kild him with his looke,
 That to the ground him meekly made to bowe
 And awfull terror deepe into him strooke,
 That every member of his body quooke.
 Said he, "Thou man of nought! what doest thou here,
 Unfitly furnisht with thy bag and booke,
 Where I expected one with shield and spere,
 To prove some deedes of armes upon an equall pere?"

The wretched man at his imperious speach
 Was all abasht, and low prostrating said;
 "Good sir, let not my rudeness be no breach
 Unto your patience, ne be ill ypaid;
 For I unwares this way by fortune straid,
 A silly pilgrim driven to distresse,
 That seeke a lady"—There he suddain staid,
 And did the rest with grievous sighes suppress.
 While teares stood in his eies, few drops of bitter

"What lady?"—"Man," said Trompart, "take good hart,
 And tell thy grieffe, if any hidden lye:
 Was never better time to shew thy smart
 Then now that noble succor is thee by,
 That is the whole worlds commune remedy."
 That chearful word his weak heart much did cheare,
 And with vaine hope his spirits faint supply,
 That bold he sayd, "O most redoubted Pere,
 Vouchsafe with mild regard a wretches case to heare."

Then sighing sore, "It is not long," saide hee,
 "Sith I enioyd the gentlest dame alive;
 Of whom a knight, (no knight at all perdee,
 But shame of all that doe for honor strive,)
 By treacherous deceit did me deprive;
 Through open outrage he her bore away,
 And with fowle force unto his will did drive;
 Which al good knights, that armes do bear this day,
 Are bownd for to revenge and punish if they may.

"And you, most noble lord, that can and dare
 Redresse the wrong of miserable wight,
 Cannot employ your most victorious speare
 In better quarrell then defence of right,
 And for a lady gainst a faithlesse knight:
 So shall your glory be advaunced much,
 And all faire ladies magnify your might,
 And eke myselfe, albee I simple such,
 Your worthy paine shall wel reward with guerdon rich."

With that, out of his bouget forth he drew
 Great store of treasure, therewith him to tempt;
 But he on it lookt scornefully askew,
 As much disdeigning to be so misdempt,
 Or a war-monger to be basely nempt;
 And sayd: "Thy offers base I greatly loth,
 And eke thy words uncourteous and unkempt:
 I tread in dust thee and thy money both;
 That, were it not for shame"—So turned from him wroth.

But Trompart, that his maistres humor knew
 In lofty looks to hide an humble minde,
 Was inly tickled with that golden vew,
 And in his eare him rownded close behinde,
 Yet stoupt he not, but lay still in the winde,
 Waiting advauntage on the pray to sease;
 Till Trompart, lowly to the grownd inclinde,
 Besought him his great corage to appease,
 And pardon simple man that rash did him displease.

Big looking like a doughty doucêpere,
 At last he thus; "Thou clod of vilest clay,
 I pardon yield, and with thy rudenes beare;
 But weete henceforth, that all that golden pray,
 And all that els the vaine world vaunten may,
 I loath as dounge, ne deeme my dew reward:
 Fame is my meed, and glory vertuous pay:
 But minds of mortall men are muchell mard
 And mov'd amisse with massy mucks unmeet regard.

"And more; I graunt to thy great misery
 Gracious respect; thy wife shall backe be sent:
 And that vile knight, whoever that he bee,
 Which hath thy lady reft and knighthood shent,
 By Sanglamort my sword, whose deadly dent
 The blood hath of so many thousands shedd,
 I sweare ere long shall dearely it repent;
 Ne he twixt heven and earth shall hide his hedd,
 But soone he shall be fownd, and shortly doen be dedd.

The foolish man thereat woxe wondrous blith,
 As if the word so spoken were halfe donne,
 And humbly thanked him a thousand sith
 That had from death to life him newly wonne.
 Tho forth the boaster marching brave begonne
 His stolen steed to thunder furiously,
 As if he heaven and hell would over-ronne,
 And all the world confound with cruelty;
 That much Malbecco ioyed in his iollity.

Thus long they three together traveiled,
 Through many a wood and many an uncouth way,
 To seeke his wife, that was far wandered:
 But those two sought nought but the present pray,
 To weete, the treasure which he did bewray,
 On which their eies and harts were wholly sett,
 With purpose how they might it best betray;
 For, sith the howre that first he did them lett
 The same behold, therewith their keene desires were whett.

It fortun'd, as they together far'd,
 They spide where Paridell came pricking fast
 Upon the plaine, the which himselfe prepar'd
 To giust with that brave straunger knight a cast,
 As on adventure by the way he past:
 Alone he rode without his paragone;
 For, having filcht her bells, her up he cast
 To the wide world, and lett her fly alone;
 He nould be clogd: so had he served many one.

The gentle lady, loose at random lefte,
 The greene-wood long did walke, and wander wide
 At wilde adventure, like a forlorne weste;
 Till on a day the Satyres her espide
 Straying alone, withouten groome or guide:
 Her up they tooke, and with them home her ledd,
 With them as housewife ever to abide,
 To milk their gotes, and make them cheese and bredd;
 And every one as commune good her handeled:

That shortly she Malbecco has forgott,
 And eke Sir Paridell all were he deare;
 Who from her went to seeke another lott,
 And now by fortune was arrived here,
 Where those two guilers with Malbecco were.
 Soone as the old man saw Sir Paridell,
 He fainted, and was almost dead with feare;
 Ne word he had to speake his grieve to tell,
 But to him louted low, and greeted goodly well;

And, after, asked him for Hellenore:
 "I take no keepe of her," sayd Paridell,
 "She wonneth in the forrest there before."
 So forth he rode as his adventure fell;
 The whiles the boaster from his loftie sell
 Faynd to alight, something amisse to mend;
 But the fresh swayne would not his leasure dwell,
 But went his way; whom when he passed kend,
 He up remounted light, and after faind to wend.

"Perdy nay," said Malbecco, "shall ye not;
 But let him passe as lightly as he came:
 For little good of him is to be got,
 And mickle perill to bee put to shame.
 But let us goe to seeke my dearest dame.
 Whom he hath left in yonder forest wyld:
 For of her safety in great doubt I ame,
 Least salvage beastes her person have despoild:
 Then all the world is lost, and we in vaine have toyld!"

"The jolly satyr, full of frosh delight,
Came dancing forth, and with them nimbly ledd
Fair Hellenore with girlonds all-bespridd."

Book III. Canto X. Ver 41.

They all agree, and forward them addrest:
 "Ah! but," said crafty Trompart, "weete ye well,
 That yonder in that wastefull wildernesse
 Huge monsters haunt, and many dangers dwell;
 Dragons, and minotaures, and feendes of hell,
 And many wilde woodmen which robbe and rend
 All travelers; therefore advise ye well,
 Before ye enterprise that way to wend:
 One may his iourney bring too soone to evill end."

Malbecco stopt in great astonishment,
 And, with pale eyes fast fixed on the rest,
 Their counsell crav'd in daunger imminent.
 Said Trompart; "You, that are the most opprest
 With burdein of great treasure, I thinke best
 Here for to stay in safetie behynd:
 My lord and I will search the wide forést."
 That counsell pleased not Malbeccoes mynd;
 For he was much afraid himselfe alone to synd.

"Then is it best," said he, "that ye doe leave
 Your treasure here in some security,
 Either fast closed in some hollow greave,
 Or buried in the ground from ieopardy,
 Till we returne againe in safety:
 As for us two, least doubt of us ye have,
 Hence farre away we will blyndfolded ly,
 Ne privy bee unto your treasures grave."
 It pleased; so he did: Then they march forward brave.

Now when amid the thickest woodes they were,
 They heard a noyse of many bagpipes shrill,
 And sliriekling lububs them approching nere,
 Which all the forest did with horreur fill:
 That dreadfull sound the bosters hart did thrill
 With such amazement, that in hast he fledd,
 Ne ever looked back for good or ill;
 And after him eke fearfull Trompart spedd:
 The old man could not fly, but fell to ground half dedd:

Yet afterwarde close creeping as he might,
 He in a bush did hyde his fearefull hedd.
 The iolly satyres, full of fresh delight,
 Came dauncing forth, and with them nimbly ledd
 Faire Helenore with girlonds all bespredd,
 Whom their May-lady they had newly made:
 She, proude of that new honour which they redd,
 And of their lovely fellowship full glade,
 Daunst lively, and her face did with a lawrell shade.

The silly man that in the thickett lay
 Saw all this goodly sport, and grieved sore;
 Yet durst he not against it doe or say,
 But did his hart with bitter thoughts engore,
 To see th' unkindnes of his Hellenore.
 All day they daunced with great lustyhedd,
 And with their horned feet the greene gras wore;
 The whiles their gotes upon the brouzes fedd,
 Till drouping Phœbus gan to hyde his golden hedd.

Tho up they gan their mery pypes to trusse,
 And all their goodly heardes did gather rownd;
 But every satyre first did give a busse
 To Hellenore; so busses did abound.
 Now gan the humid vapour shed the grownd
 With perly deaw, and th' earth's gloomy shade
 Did dim the brightnesse of the welkin rownd,
 That every bird and beast awarned made
 To shrowd themselves, while sleep their senses did invade.

Which when Malbecco saw, out of the bush
 Upon his handes and feete he crept full light,
 And like a gote emongst the gotes did rush;
 That through the helpe of his faire hornes on hight,
 And misty dampe of misconceyving night,
 And eke through likenesse of his gotish beard,
 He did the better counterfeite aright:
 So home he marcht emongst the horned heard,
 That none of all the satyres him espyde or heard.

At night, when all they went to sleepe, he vewd,
 Whereas his lovely wife emongst them lay,
 Embraced of a satyre rough and rude,
 Who all the night did mind his ioyous play:
 Nine times he heard him come aloft ere day,
 That all his hart with gealosy did swell;
 But yet that nights ensample did bewray
 That not for nought his wife them loved so well,
 When one so oft a night did ring his matins bell.

So closely as he could he to them crept,
 When wearie of their sport to sleepe they fell,
 And to his wife, that now full soundly slept,
 He whispered in her eare and did her tell,
 That it was he which by her side did dwell;
 And therefore prayd her wake to heare him plaine.
 As one out of a dreame not waked well
 She turnd her, and returned backe againe:
 Yet her for to awake he did the more constraîne.

At last with irkesom trouble she abrayd;
 And then perceiuing, that it was indeed
 Her old Malbecco, which did her upbrayd
 With loosenesse of her love and loathly deed,
 She was astonisht with exceeding dreed,
 And would have wakt the satyre by her syde;
 But he her prayd, for mercy or for meed,
 To save his life, ne let him be descryde,
 But hearken to his lore, and all his counsell hyde.

Tho gan he her persawde to leave that lewd
 And loathsom life, of God and man abhord,
 And home returne, where all should be renewd
 With perfect peace and bandes of fresh accord,
 And she receivd againe to bed and bord,
 As if no trespass ever had beene donne:
 But she it all refused at one word,
 And by no meanes would to his will be wonne,
 But chose emongst the iolly satyres still to wounne.

He wooed her till day-spring he espyde;
 But all in vaine: and then turnd to the heard,
 Who butted him with hornes on every syde,
 And trode downe in the durt, where his hore beard
 Was fowly dight, and he of death afeard.
 Early, before the heavens fairest light
 Out of the ruddy East was fully reard,
 The heardees out of their foldes were loosed quight,
 And he emongst the rest crept forth in sory plight.

So soone as he the prison-dore did pas,
 He ran as fast as both his feet could beare,
 And never looked who behind him was,
 Ne scarsely who before: like as a beare,
 That creeping close amongst the hives to reare
 An hony-combe, the wakefull dogs espy,
 And him assayling sore his carkas teare,
 That hardly he with life away does fly,
 Ne stayes, till safe himselfe he see from icopardy.

Ne stayd he, till he came unto the place
 Where late his treasure he entombed had;
 Where when he found it not, (for Trompart bare
 Had it purloyned for his maister bad,)
 With extreme fury he became quite mad,
 And ran away; ran with himselfe away:
 That who so straungely had him scene bestadd,
 With upstart haire and staring eyes dismay,
 From Limbo lake him late escaped sure would say.

High over hilles and over dales he fledd,
As if the wind him on his winges had borne;
Ne banck nor bush could stay him, when he speeld
His nimble feet, as treading still on thorne:
Griefe, and Despight, and Gealosy, and Scorne,
Did all the way him follow hard behynd;
And he himselfe himselfe loath'd so forlorne,
So shamefully forlorne of womankynd:
That, as a snake, still lurked in his wounded mynd.

Still fled he forward, looking backward still,
Ne stayd his flight nor fearefull agony
Till that he came unto a rocky hill
Over the sea suspended dreadfully,
That living creature it would terrify
To looke adowne, or upward to the hight:
From thence he threw himselfe dispiteously,
All desperate of his fore-damned spright,
That seemd no help for him was left in living sight.

But, through long anguish and selfe-murd'ring thought,
He was so wasted and forpined quight,
That all his substance was consum'd to nought,
And nothing left but like an aery spright;
That on the rockes he fell so flit and light,
That he thereby receiv'd no hurt at all;
But chaunced on a craggy cliff to light;
Whence he with crooked clawes so long did crall,
That at the last he found a cave with entrance small.

Into the same he creepes, and thenceforth there
Resolv'd to build his balefull mansion
In drery darkenes and continuall feare
Of that rocks fall, which ever and anon
Threates with huge ruine him to fall upon,
That he dare never sleepe, but that one eye
Still ope he keepes for that occasion;
Ne ever rests he in tranquillity,
The roring billowes beat his bowre so boystrously.

Ne ever is he wont on ought to feed
But todes and frogs, his pasture poysonous,
Which in his cold complexion doe breed
A filthy blood, or humour rancourous,
Matter of doubt and dread suspitious,
That doth with curelesse care consume the hart,
Corrupts the stomacke with gall vitious,
Cross-cuts the liver with internall smart,
And doth transfixe the soule with deathes eternall dart.

Yet can he never dye, but dying lives,
 And doth himselfe with sorrow new sustaine,
 That death and life attonce unto him gives,
 And painefull pleasure turnes to pleasing paine.
 There dwels he ever, miserable swaine,
 Hatefull both to himselfe and every wight;
 Where he, through privy grieve and horreur,
 Is woxen so deform'd, that he has quight
 Forgot he was a man, and Gelosy is light.

CANTO XI.

Britomart chaceth Ollyphant;
 Findes Scudamour distrest:
 Assayes the house of Busyrane,
 Where loves spoyles are exprest.

O HATEFUL hellish snake! what furie furst
 Brought thee from balefull house of Proserpine,
 Where in her bosome she thee long had nurst,
 And fostred up with bitter milke of tine;
 Fowle gealosy! that turnest love divine
 To ioylesse dread, and mak'st the loving hart
 With hatefull thoughts to languish and to pine,
 And feed itselfe with selfe-consuming smart,
 Of all the passions in the mind thou vilest art!

O let him far be banished away,
 And in his stead let love for ever dwell!
 Sweete love, that doth his golden wings embay
 In blessed nectar and pure pleasures well,
 Untroubled of vile feare or bitter fell.
 And ye, faire ladies, that your kingdomes make
 In th' harts of men, them governe wisely well,
 And of faire Britomart ensample take,
 That was as trew in love as turtle to her make.

Who with Sir Satyrane, as carst ye red,
 Forth ryding from Malbeccoes hostlesse hous,
 Far off aspyde a young man, the which fled
 From an huge geaunt, that with hideous
 And hateful outrage long him chaced thus;
 It was that Ollyphant, the brother deare
 Of that Argantè vile and vitious,
 From whom the Squire of Dames was reft whylere;
 This all as bad as she, and worse, if worse ought were.

For as the sister did in feminine
 And filthy lust exceede all womankind;
 So he surpassed his sex masculine,
 In beastly use, all that I ever finde:
 Whom when as Britomart beheld behinde
 The fearefull boy so greedily poursew,
 She was emmoued in her noble minde
 T' employ her puissance to his reskew,
 And pricked fiercely forward where she did him vew.

Ne was Sir Satyrane her far behinde,
 But with like fiercenesse did ensew the chace:
 Whom when the gyaunt saw, he soone resinde
 His former suit, and from them fled apace:
 They after both, and boldly bad him bace,
 And each did strive the other to outgoe;
 But he them both outran a wondrous space,
 For he was long and swift as any roe,
 And now made better speed t'escape his feared foe.

It was not Satyrane, whom he did feare,
 But Britomart, the flowre of chastity;
 For he the powre of chaste hands might not beare,
 But alwayes did their dread encounter fly;
 And now so fast his feet he did apply,
 That he has gotten to a forrest neare,
 Where he is shrowded in security.
 The wood they enter, and search everie where;
 They searched diversely; so both divided were.

Fayre Britomart so long him followed,
 That she at last came to a fountaine sheare,
 By which there lay a knight all wallowed
 Upon the grassy ground, and by him neare
 His habergeon, his helmet, and his speare:
 A little off, his shield was rudely throwne,
 On which the winged boy in colours cleare
 Depeincted was, full easie to be knowne,
 And he thereby, wherever it in field was showne.

His face upon the grownd did groveling ly,
 As if he had beene slombring in the shade;
 That the brave mayd would not for courtesy
 Out of his quiet slomber him abrade,
 Nor seeme too suddeinly him to invade:
 Still as she stood, she heard with grievous throb
 Him grone, as if his hart were peeces made,
 And with most painefull pangs to sigh and sob,
 That pitty did the virgins hart of patience rob.

At last forth breaking into bitter plaintes
 He sayd; "O soverayne Lord that sit'st on hye
 And raignt in blis emongst thy blessed saintes,
 How sullrest thou such shamefull cruelty
 So long unwreaked of thine enemy!
 Or hast thou, Lord, of good mens cause no heed?
 Or doth thy iustice sleepe and silent ly?
 What booteth then the good and righteous deed,
 If goodnesse find no grace, nor righteousnesse no meed!

"If good find grace, and righteousnes reward,
 Why then is Amoret in caytivo band,
 Sith that more bounteous creature never far'd
 On foot upon the face of living land!
 Or if that heavenly iustice may withstand
 The wrongfull outrage of unrighteous men,
 Why then is Busirane with wicked hand
 Suffred, these seven monethes day, in secret den
 My lady and my love so cruelly to pen!

"My lady and my love is cruelly pend
 In dolefull darkenes from the vew of day,
 Whilest deadly torments doe her chast brest rend,
 And the sharpe steele doth rive her hart in tway,
 All for she Scudamore will not deny.
 Yet thou, vile man, vile Scudamore, art sound,
 Ne canst her ayde, ne canst her foe dismay;
 Unworthy wretch to tread upon the ground,
 For whom so faire a lady feelles so sore a wound."

There an huge heape of singulfes did oppresse
 His strugling soule, and swelling throbs empeach
 His foltring tounge with pangs of drerinesse,
 Choking the remnant of his plaintife speach,
 As if his dayes were come to their last reach.
 Which when she heard, and saw the ghastly fit
 Threatning into his life to make a breach,
 Both with great ruth and terroure she was smit.
 Fearing least from her cage the wearie soule wold flit.

Tho, stouping downe, she him amoved light;
 Who, therewith somewhat starting, up gan looke,
 And seeing him behind a stranger knight,
 Whereas no living creature he mistooke,
 With great indignaunce he that sight forsooke,
 And, downe againe himselfe disdainefully
 Abiecting, th' earth with his faire forehead strooke:
 Which the bold virgin seeing, gan apply
 Fit medcine to his grieve, and spake thus courtesly:

" Ah ! gentle knight, whose deepe-conceived grieffe
 Well seemes t'exceede the powre of patience,
 Yet, if that heavenly grace some good reliefe
 You send, submit you to High Providence;
 And ever, in your noble hart, prepense,
 That all the sorrow in the world is lesse
 Then vertues might and values confidence:
 For who nill bide the burden of distresse,
 Must not here thinke to live; for life is wretchednesse.

" Therefore, faire sir, doe comfort to you take,
 And freely read what wicked felon so
 Hath outrag'd you, and thrald your gentle make.
 Perhaps this hand may help to ease your woe,
 And wreake your sorrow on your cruell foe;
 At least it faire endeavour will apply."
 Those feeling words so near the quicke did goe,
 That up his head he reared easily;
 And, leaning on his elbowe, these few words lett fly:

" What boots it plaine that cannot be redrest,
 And sow vaine sorrow in a fruitlesse care;
 Sith powre of hand, nor skill of learned brest,
 Ne worldly price, cannot redeeme my deare
 Out of her thraldome and continuall feare!
 For he, the tyrant, which her hath in ward,
 By strong enchauntments and blacke magicke leare,
 Hath in a dungeon deepe her close embard,
 And many dreadfull feends hath pointed to her gard.

" There he tormenteth her most terribly,
 And day and night afflicts with mortall paine,
 Because to yield him love she doth deny,
 One to me yold, not to be yolde againe:
 But yet by torture he would her constraîne
 Love to conceive in her disdainfull brest:
 Till so she doe, she must in doole remaine,
 Ne may by living meanes be thence relest:
 What boots it then to plaine that cannot be redrest!"

With this sad hersall of his heavy stresse
 The warlike damzell was empassiond sore,
 And sayd; " Sir knight, your cause is nothing lesse
 Then is your sorrow certes, if not more:
 For nothing so much pittie doth implore
 As gentle ladies helplesse misery:
 But yet, if please ye listen to my lore,
 I will, with prooffe of last extremity,
 Deliver her fro thence, or with her for you dy."

"Ah! gentlest knight alive," sayd Scudamore,
 "What huge heroicke magnanimity
 Dwells in thy bounteous brest? what couldst thou more,
 If shee were thine, and thou as now am I?
 O spare thy happy daies, and them apply
 To better boot; but let me die that ought:
 More is more losse; one is enough to dy!"
 "Life is not lost," said she, "for which is bought Endlesse renown; that, more then death, is to be sought."

Thus she at length perswaded him to rise,
 And with her wend to see what new successe
 Mote him befall upon new enterprise:
 His armes, which he had vowed to disprofesse,
 She gathered up, and did about him dresse,
 And his forwardred steed unto him gott:
 So forth they both yfere make their progrésse,
 And march, not past the mountenaunce of a shott,
 Till they arriv'd whereas their purpose they did plott.

There they dismounting drew their weapons bold,
 And stoutly came unto the castle gate,
 Whereas no gate they found them to withhold,
 Nor ward to waite at morne and evening late;
 But in the porch that did them sore amate,
 A flaming fire ymixt with smouldry smoke
 And stinking sulphure, that with griesly hate
 And dreadfull horror did all entraunce choke,
 Enforced them their forward footing to revoke.

Greatly thereat was Britomart dismayd,
 No in that stownd wist how herselfe to beare;
 For daunger vaine it were to have assayd
 That cruell element, which all things feare,
 Ne none can suffer to approachen neare:
 And, turning backe to Scudamour, thus sayd;
 "What monstrous enmity provoke we here?
 Foolhardy as th' earthes children, the which made
 Batteill against the gods, so we a god invade.

"Daunger without discretion to attempt,
 Inglorious, beast-like, is: therefore, Sir Knight,
 Aread what course of you is safest dempt,
 And how we with our foe may come to light."
 "This is," quoth he, "the dolorous despight,
 Which earst to you I playnd: for neither may
 This fire be quencht by any witt or might,
 Ne yet by any meanes remov'd away;
 So mighty be th' enchauntments which the same do stay.

"What is there els but cease these fruitlesse paines,
 And leave me to my former languishing!
 Faire Amorett must dwell in wicked chaines,
 And Scudamore here die with sorrowing!"
 "Perdy not so," saide shee; "for shameful thing
 Yt were t'abandon noble chevisaunce,
 For shewe of perill, without venturing:
 Rather, let try extremities of chaunce
 Then enterprised praise for dread to disavaunce."

Therewith, resolv'd to prove her utmost might,
 Her ample shield she threw before her face,
 And her swords point directing forward right
 Assayld the flame; the which estesoones gave place,
 And did itselke divide with equall space,
 That through she passed; as a thonder-bolt
 Perceth the yielding ayre, and doth displace
 The soring clouds into sad showres ymolt;
 So to her yold the flames, and did their force revolt.

Whom whenas Scudamour saw past the fire
 Safe and untoucht, he likewise gan assay
 With greedy will and envious desire,
 And bade the stubborne flames to yield him way;
 But cruell Mulciber would not obay
 His threatfull pride, but did the more augment
 His mighty rage, and with imperious sway
 Him forst, maulgre his fiercenes, to relent,
 And backe retire all scorcht and pitifully brent.

With huge impatience he inly swelt,
 More for great sorrow that he could not pas
 Then for the burning torment which he felt;
 That with fell woodnes he effierced was,
 And wilfully him throwing on the gras
 Did beat and bounse his head and brest full sore:
 The whiles the championesse now entred has
 The utmost rowme, and past the foremost dore;
 The utmost rowme abounding with all precious store:

For, round about the walls yclothed were
 With goodly arras of great maiesty,
 Woven with golde and silke so close and nere
 That the rich metall lurked privily,
 As faining to be hidd from envious eye;
 Yet here and there, and every where, unwares,
 It shewd itselke and shone unwillingly;
 Like to a discolourd snake, whose hidden snares [clares.
 Through the greene gras his long bright burnisht back de-

And in those tapets weren fashioned
 Many faire pourtraicts, and many a faire feate :
 And all of love, and al of lusty-hed,
 As seemed by their semblaunt, did entreat :
 And eke all Cupids warres they did repeate,
 And cruell battailes, which he whilome fought
 Gainst all the gods to make his empire great ;
 Besides the huge massacres, which he wrought
 On mighty kings and kesars into thraldome brought.

Therein was writ how often thondring Iove
 Had felt the point of his hart-percing dart,
 And, leaving heavens kingdome, here did rove
 In straunge disguise, to slake his scalding smart ;
 Now, like a ram, faire Helle to pervart,
 Now, like a bull, Europa to withdraw :
 Ah, how the fearefull ladies tender hart
 Did lively seeme to tremble, when she saw
 The huge seas under her t' obay her servaunts law !

Soone after that, into a golden showre
 Himselfe he chaung'd, faire Danaë to vew ;
 And through the roofe of her strong brasen towre
 Did raine into her lap an hony dew ;
 The whiles her foolish garde, that little knew
 Of such deceit, kept th' yron dore fast bard,
 And watcht that none should enter nor issew ;
 Vaine was the watch, and bootlesse all the ward,
 Whenas the god to golden hew himselfe transford.

Then was he turnd into a snowy swan,
 To win fair Leda to his lovely trade :
 O wondrous skill, and sweet wit of the man,
 That her in dalladillies sleeping made
 From scorching heat her daintie limbes to shade !
 While the proud bird, ruffling his fethers wyde
 And brushing his faire brest, did her invade,
 She slept ; yet twixt her eielids closely spyde
 How towards her he rusht, and smiled at his pryde.

Then shewd it how the Thebane Semelee,
 Deceivd of gealous Iuno, did require
 To see him in his soverayne maiestee
 Armd with his thunderbolts and lightning fire,
 Whens dearely she with death bought her desire.
 But fair Alcmena better match did make,
 Ioying his love in likenes more entire :
 Three nights in one they say that for her sake
 He then did put, her pleasures lenger to partake.

And, as she lookt about, she did behold
 How over that same dore was likewise writ,
Be bolde, be bolde, and every where, Be bold;
 That much she muz'd, yet could not construe it
 By any ridling skill or commune wit.
 At last she spyde at that rowmes upper end
 Another yron dore, on which was writ,
Be not too bold; whereto though she did bend
 Her earnest minde, yet wist not what it might intend.

Thus she there wayted untill eventyde,
 Yet living creature none she saw appeare.
 And now sad shadowes gan the world to hyde
 From mortall vew, and wrap in darkenes dreare;
 Yet nould she d'off her weary armes, for feare
 Of secret daunger, ne let sleepe oppresse
 Her heavy eyes with natures burdein deare,
 But drew herselfe aside in sickernesse,
 And her welpointed wepons did about her dresse.

CANTO XII.

The maske of Cupid, and th' enchaun-
 ted chamber are displayd;
 Whence Britomart redeemes faire Amoret through charmes decayd.

Tho, whenas chearelesse night ycovered had
 Fayre heaven with an universall clowd,
 That every wight dismayd with darkenes sad
 In silence and in sleepe themselves did shrowd,
 She heard a shrilling trompet sound alowd,
 Signe of nigh battaill, or got victory:
 Nought therewith daunted was her courage prowde,
 But rather stird to cruell enmity,
 Expecting ever when some foe she might desery.

With that, an hideous storme of winde arose,
 With dreadfull thunder and lightning atwixt,
 And an earthquake, as if it streight would lose
 The worlds foundations from his centre sixt:
 A direfull stench of smoke and sulphure mixt
 Ensewd, whose noyaunce sild the fearefull sted
 From the fourth howre of night untill the sixt;
 Yet the bold Britonesse was nought ydred,
 Though much emmov'd, but stedfast still persévered.

All suddenly a stormy whirlwind blew
 Throughout the house, that clapped every dore,
 With which that yron wicket open flew,
 As it with mighty levers had bene tore;
 And forth yssewd, as on the readie flore
 Of some théâtre, a grave personage
 That in his hand a braunch of laurell bore,
 With comely haveour and count'nance sage,
 Yclad in costly garments fit for tragicke stago.

Proceeding to the midst he stil did stand,
 As if in minde he somewhat had to say;
 And to the vulgare beckning with his hand.
 In signe of silence, as to heare a play,
 By lively actions he gan bewray
 Some argument of matter passioned;
 Which doen, he backe retyred soft away,
 And passing by, his name discovered,
 Ease, on his robe in golden letters cyphered.

The noble mayd still standing all this vewd,
 And merveild at his straunge intendiment:
 With that a ioyous fellowship issewd
 Of minstrales making goodly meriment,
 With wanton bardes, and rymers impudent;
 All which together song full chearefully
 A lay of loves delight with sweet concent:
 After whom marcht a iolly company,
 In manner of a maske, enranged orderly.

The whiles a most delitious harmony
 In full straunge notes was sweetly heard to sound,
 That the rare sweetnesse of the melody
 The feeble sences wholly did confound,
 And the frayle soule in deepe delight nigh drownd:
 And, when it ceast, shrill trumpets lowd did bray,
 That their report did far away rebound;
 And, when they ceast, it gan againe to play,
 The whiles the maskers marched forth in trim aray.

The first was Fansy, like a lovely boy
 Of rare aspect and beautie without peare,
 Matchable eitherto that ympe of Troy,
 Whom Iove did love and chose his cup to beare;
 Or that same daintie lad, which was so deare
 To great Alcides, that, whenas he dyde,
 He wailed womanlike with many a teare,
 And every wood and every valley wyde
 He filld with Hylas name; the nymphes eke Hylas cryde.

After them went Displeasure and Pleasaunce,
 He looking lompish and full sullen sad,
 And hanging downe his heavy countenaunce;
 She chearfull, fresh, and full of ioyauce glad,
 As if no sorrow she ne felt ne drad;
 That evill matched paire they seemd to bee:
 An angry waspe th' one in a viall had,
 Th' other in hers an hony lady-bee.
 Thus marched these six couples forth in faire degree.

After all these there marcht a most faire dame,
 Led of two grysie villeins, th' one Despight,
 The other cleped Cruelty by name:
 She dolefull lady, like a dreary spright
 Cald by strong charmes out of eternall night,
 Had Deathes own ymage figurd in her face,
 Full of sad signes, fearfull to living sight;
 Yet in that horror shewd a seemely grace,
 And with her feeble fecte did move a comely pace.

Her brest all naked, as nett yvory
 Without adorne of gold or silver bright,
 Wherewith the craftesman wounts it beautify,
 Of her dew honour was despoyled quight;
 And a wide wound therein (O ruefull sight!)
 Entrenched deep with knyfe accursed keene,
 Yet freshly bleeding forth her fainting spright,
 (The worke of cruell hand) was to be seene,
 That dyde in sanguine red her skin all snowy cleene.

At that wide orifice her trembling hart
 Was drawne forth, and in silver basin layd,
 Quite through transfixd with a deadly dart,
 And in her blood yet steeming fresh embayd.
 And those two villeins (which her steps upstayd,
 When her weake fecte could scarcely her sustaine,
 And fading vitall powres gan to fade,)
 Her forward still with torture did constraene,
 And evermore encreased her consuming paine.

Next after her, the winged god himselfe
 Came riding on a lion ravenous,
 Taught to obey the menage of that elfe
 That man and beast with powre imperious
 Subdeweth to his kingdome tyrannous;
 His blindfold eies he bad awhile unbinde,
 That his proud spoile of that same dolorous
 Faire dame he might behold in perfect kinde;
 Which scene, he much reioycd in his cruell minde.

Of which ful prowde, himself uprearing hye
 He looked round about with sterne disdayne,
 And did surway his goodly company;
 And, marshallling the evil-ordered trayne.
 With that the darts which his right hand did straine
 Full dreadfully he shooke, that all did quake,
 And clapt on hye his coulour'd winges twaine,
 That all his many it affraide did make:
 Tho, blinding him againe, his way he forth did take.

Behinde him was Reproch, Repentaunce, Shame;
 Reproch the first, Shame next, Repent behinde;
 Repentaunce feeble, sorrowfull, and lame;
 Reproch despightful, carelesse, and unkinde;
 Shame most ill-favour'd, bestiall, and blinde:
 Shame lowrd, Repentaunce sighd, Reproch did scould;
 Reproch sharpe stings, Repentaunce whips entwinde,
 Shame burning brond-yrons in her hand did hold:
 All three to each unlike, yet all made in one mould.

And after them a rude confused rout
 Of persons flockt, whose names is hard to read:
 Emongst them was sterne Strife; and Anger stout;
 Unquiet Care; and fond Untluriftyhead;
 Lewd Losse of Time; and Sorrow seeming dead;
 Inconstant Chaunge; and false Disloyalty;
 Consuming Riotise; and guilty Dread
 Of heavenly vengeance; faint Infirmitie;
 Vile Poverty; and, lastly, Death with infamy.

There were full many moe like maladies,
 Whose names and natures I note readen well;
 So many moe, as there be phantasies
 In wavering womens witt, that none can tell,
 Or paines in love, or punishments in hell:
 All which disguised marcht in masking-wise
 About the chamber by the damozell:
 And then returned, having marched thrise,
 Into the inner rowme from whence they first did rise.

So soone as they were in, the dore streightway
 Fast locked, driven with that stormy blast
 Which first it opened, and bore all away.
 Then the brave maid, which al this while was plast
 In secret shade, and saw both first and last,
 Issewed forth and went unto the dore
 To enter in, but fownd it locked fast:
 In vaine she thought with rigorous uprone
 For to efforce, when charmes had closed it afore.

Where force might not avails, there sleights and art
She cast to use, both fitt for hard emprise:
Forthy from that same rowme not to depart
Till morrow next shee did herselfe arise,
When that same maske againe should forth arise.
The morrowe next appeard with ioyous cheare,
Calling men to their daily exercise;
Then she, as morrow fresh, herselfe did reare
Out of her secret stand that day for to outweare.

All that day she outwore in wandering
And gazing on that chambers ornament,
Till that againe the second evening
Her covered with her sable vestiment,
Wherewith the worlds faire beautie she hath blent:
Then, when the second watch was almost past,
That brasen dore flew open, and in went
Bold Britomart, as she had late forecast,
Nether of ydle shewes nor of false charmes aghast.

So soone as she was entred, rownd about
Shee cast her eies to see what was become
Of all those persons which she saw without.
But lo! they streight were vanisht all and some;
Ne living wight she saw in all that roome.
Save that same woefull lady; both whose hands
Were bounden fast, that did her ill become,
And her small waste girt rownd with yron bands
Unto a brasen pillour, by the which she stands.

And, her before, the vile enchaunter sate,
Figuring straunge characters of his art;
With living blood he those characters wrate,
Dreadfully dropping from her dying hart,
Seeming transfixed with a cruell dart:
And all perforce to make her him to love.
Ah! who can love the worker of her smart!
A thousand charmes he formerly did prove;
Yet thousand charmes could not her stedfast hart remove.

Soon as that virgin knight he saw in place,
His wicked bookes in hast he overthrew,
Not caring his long labours to deface;
And, fiercely running to that lady trew,
A murtherous knife out of his pocket drew,
The which he thought, for villeinous despight,
In her tormented bodie to embrew:
But the stout damzell to him leaping light
His cursed hand withheld, and maistered his might.

From her, to whom his fury first he ment,
 The wicked weapon rashly he did wrest,
 And, turning to herselfe his fell intent,
 Unwares it strooke into her snowie chest,
 That litle drops empurpled her faire brest.
 Exceeding wroth therewith the virgin grew,
 Albe the wound were nothing deepe imprest,
 And fiercely forth her mortall blade she drew,
 To give him the reward for such vile outrage dew.

So mightily she smote him, that to ground
 He fell halfe dead; next stroke him should have slaine,
 Had not the lady, which by him stood bound,
 Dernly unto her called to abstaine
 From doing him to dy; for else her paine
 Should be remédillesse: sith none but hee
 Which wrought it could the same recure againe.
 Therewith she stayd her hand, loth stayd to bee;
 For life she him envyde, and long'd revenge to see.

And to him said; "Thou wicked man, whose meed
 For so huge mischiefe and vile villany
 Is death, or if that ought doe death exceed;
 Be sure that nought may save thee from to dy;
 But if that thou this dame do presently
 Restore unto her health and former state;
 This doe, and live; els dye undoubtedly."
 He, glad of life, that lookt for death but late,
 Did yield himselfe right willing to prolong his date:

And rising up gan streight to over-looke
 Those cursed leaves, his charmes back to reverse:
 Full dreadfull thinges out of that balefull booke
 He red, and measur'd many a sad verse,
 That horror gan the virgins hart to perse,
 And her faire locks up stared stiffe on end,
 Hearing him those same bloody lynes reherse;
 And, all the while he red, she did extend
 Her sword high over-him, if ought he did offend.

Anon she gan perceiue the house to quake,
 And all the dores to rattle round about;
 Yet all that did not her dismaied make,
 Nor slack her threatfull hand for daungers dout,
 But still with stedfast eye and courage stout
 Abode, to weet what end would come of all:
 At last that mightie chaine, which round about
 Her tender waste was wound, adowne gan fall,
 And that great brasen pillour broke in peeces small.

The cruell steele, which thrild her dying hart,
 Fell softly forth, as of his owne accord;
 And the wyde wound, which lately did dispart
 Her bleeding brest and riven bowels gor'd,
 Was closed up as it had not beene sor'd;
 And every part to safety full sown'd,
 As she were never hurt, was soone restord:
 Tho, when she felt herselfe to be unbownd
 And perfect hole, prostrate she fell unto the grownd;

Before faire Britomart she fell prostrate,
 Saying; "Ah! noble knight, what worthy meede
 Can wretched lady, quitt from wofull state,
 Yield you in lieu of this your gracious deed?
 Your vertue selfe her owne reward shall breed,
 Even immortall prayse and glory wyde,
 Which I your vassall, by your prowesse freed,
 Shall through the world make to be notifyde,
 And goodly well aduaunce that goodly well was tryde."

But Britomart, uprearing her from grownd,
 Said; "Gentle dame, reward enough I weene,
 For many labours more than I have found,
 This, that in safetie now I have you scene,
 And meane of your deliverance have beene:
 Henceforth, faire lady, comfort to you take,
 And put away remembrance of late teene;
 Insted thereof, know that your loving make
 Hath no lesse grieve endured for your gentle sake.

She much was cheard to heare him mentiond,
 Whom of all living wightes she loved best.
 Then laid the noble championesse strong hond
 Upon th' enchaunter which had her distrest
 So sore, and with foule outrages opprest:
 With that great chaine, wherewith not long ygoe
 He bound that pitteous lady prisoner now relest,
 Himselfe she bound, more worthily to be so,
 And captive with her led to wretchednesse and wo.

Returning back, those goodly rowmes which erst
 She saw so rich and royally arayd,
 Now vanisht utterly and cleane subverst
 She found, and all their glory quite decayd;
 That sight of such a chaunge her much dismayd.
 Thence forth descending to that perlous porch,
 Those dreadfull flames she also found delayd
 And quenched quite like a consumed torch,
 That erst all entres won, so cruelly to scorch.

More easie issew now then entrance late
She found ; for now that fained dreadfull flame,
Which chokt the porch of that enchaunted gate
And passage bard to all that thither came
Was vanisht quite, as it were not the same,
And gave her leave at pleasure forth to passe.
Th' enchaunter selfe, which all that fraud did frame
To have efforst the love of that faire lasse,
Seeing his worke now wasted, deepe engrieved was.

But when the victoresse arriv'd there
Where late she left the pensife Scudamore
With her own trusty squire, both full of feare,
Neither of them she found where she them lore :
Thereat her noble hart was stonisht sore ;
But most faire Amoret, whose gentle spright
Now gan to feede on hope, which she before
Conceived had, to see her own deare knight,
Being thereof beguyld, was fild with new allright.

But he, sad man, when he had long in drede
Awayted there for Britomarts returne,
Yet saw her not; nor signe of her good speed,
His expectation to despaire did turne,
Misdeeming sure that her those flames did burne ;
And therefore gan advize with her old squire,
Who her deare nourslings losse no lesse did mourne,
Thence to depart for further aide t' enquire :
Where let them wend at will, whilst here I doe respire.

THE FOURTH BOOKE
THE FAERIE QUEENE,

CONTAYNING

The Legend of Cambel and Triamond, or of Friendship.

THE rugged forehead, that with grave foresight
Welds kingdomes causes and affaires of state,
My looser rimes, I wote, doth sharply wite
For praising love as I have done of late,
And magnifying lovers deare debate:
By which fraile youth is oft of follie led,
Through false allurement of that pleasing baite,
That better were in vertues disciplined.
Then with vaine poemes weeds to have their fancies fed.

Such ones ill iudge of love, that cannot love,
Ne in their frozen hearts feele kindly flame:
Forthy they ought not thing unknowne reprove,
Ne naturall affection faultlesse blame
For fault of few that have abused the same:
For it of honor and all vertue is
The roote, and brings forth glorious flowres of fame,
That crowne true lovers with immortall blis,
The meed of them that love, and do not live amisse.

Which whoso list looke backe to former ages,
And call to count the things that then were donno,
Shall find that all the workes of those wise sages,
And brave exploits which great heroës wonne,
In love were either ended or begunne:
Witnessse the father of Philosophie,
Which to his Critias, shaded oft from sunne,
Of love full manie lessons did apply,
The which these stoicke censours cannot well deny.

To such therefore I do not sing at all;
But to that sacred saint my soveraigne queene,
In whose chast brest all bountie naturall
And treasures of true love enlocked beene,
Bove all her sexe that ever yet was scene;
To her I sing of love, that loveth best,
And best is lov'd of all alive I weene;
To her this song, most fitly is addrest,
The Queene of Love, and Prince of Peace from heaven [blest.

Which that she may the better deigne to heare,
 Do thou, dread infant, Venus dearling dove,
 From her high spirit chase imperious feare,
 And use of awfull maiestie remove:
 Insted thereof with drops of melting love,
 Deawd with ambrosiall kisses, by thee gotten
 From thy sweete-smyling mother from above,
 Sprinkle her heart, and haughtie courage soften,
 That she may hearke to love, and reade this lesson often.

CANTO I.

Fayre Britomart saves Amoret.
 Duessa discord breedes
 Twixt Scudamour and Blandamour:
 Their fight and warlike deedes.

Of lovers sad calamities of old
 Full many piteous stories doe remaine,
 But none more piteous ever was ytold
 Then that of Amorets hart-binding chaine,
 And this of Florimels unworthie paine:
 The deare compassion of whose bitter fit
 My softned heart so sorely doth constraine,
 That I with teares full oft doe pittie it.
 And oftentimes doe wish it never had bene writ.

For, from the time that Scudamour her bought
 In perilous fight, she never ioyed day;
 A perilous fight! when he with force her brought
 From twentie knights that did him all assay;
 Yet fairely well he did them all dismay.
 And with great glorie both the shield of Love
 And eke the ladie selfe he brought away;
 Whom having wedded, as did him behove,
 A new unknownen mischief did from him remove.

For that same vile enchauntour Busyran,
 The very selfe same day that she was wedded,
 Amidst the bridale feast, whilst every man
 Surcharg'd with wine were heedlesse and ill-hedded,
 All bent to mirth, before the bride was bedded,
 Brought in that mask of love which late was shoven;
 And there the ladie ill of friends bestedded,
 By way of sport, as oft in maskes is knowen,
 Conveyed quite away to living wight unknownen.

Seven moneths he so her kept in bitter smart,
 Because his sinfull lust she would not serve,
 Untill such time as noble Britomart
 Released her, that else was like to sterue
 Through cruell knife that her deare heart did kerve:
 And now she is with her upon the way
 Marching in lovely wise, that could deserve
 No spot of blame, though spite did oft assay
 To blot her with dishonor of so faire a pray.

Yet should it be a pleasant tale, to tell
 The diverse usage, and demcanure daint,
 That each to other made, as oft befell:
 For Amoret right fearefull was and faint
 Lest she with blame her honor should attaint,
 That everie word did tremble as she spake,
 And everie looke was coy and wondrous quaint,
 And everie limbe that touched her did quake;
 Yet should she not but curteous countenance to her make.

For well she wist, as true it was indeed,
 That her live's lord and patrone of her health
 Right well deserved, as his duefull meed,
 Her love, her service, and her utmost wealth:
 All is his iustly that all freely deal'th.
 Nathlesse her honor dearer then her life
 She sought to save, as thing reserv'd from stealth;
 Die had she lever with enchanters knife
 Then to be false in love, profest a virgine wife.

Thereto her feare was made so much the greater
 Through fine abusion of that Briton mayd;
 Who, for to hide her fained sex the better
 And maske her wounded mind, both did and sayd
 Full many things so doubtfull to be wayd,
 That well she wist not what by them to gesse:
 For otherwhiles to her she purpos made
 Of love, and otherwhiles of lustfulnesse,
 That much she feard his mind would grow to some excesse.

His will she feard; for him she surely thought
 To be a man, such as indeed he seemed;
 And much the more, by that he lately wrought,
 When her from deadly thraldome he redeemed,
 For which no service she too much esteemed:
 Yet dread of shame and doubt of fowle dishonor
 Made her not yeeld so much as due she deemed.
 Yet Britomart attended duly on her,
 As well became a knight, and did to her all honor.

It so befell one evening that they came
 Unto a castell, lodged there to bee.
 Where many a knight, and many a lovely dame,
 Was then assembled deeds of armes to see:
 Amongst all which was none more faire then shee,
 That many of them mov'd to eye her sore.
 The custome of that place was such, that hee,
 Which had no love nor lemman there in store,
 Should either winne him one, or lye without the dore.

Amongst the rest there was a iolly knight,
 Who, being asked for his love, avow'd
 That fairest Amoret was his by right,
 And offred that to iustifie alowd.
 The warlike virgine, seeing his so prowde
 And boastfull chalenge, wexed inlie wroth,
 But for the present did her anger shrowd;
 And sayd, her love to lose she was full loth,
 But either he should neither of them have, or both.

So forth they went, and booth together giusted;
 But that same younker soone was overthrowne,
 And made repent that he had rashly lusted
 For thing unlawfull that was not his owne:
 Yet since he seemed valiant, though unknowne,
 She, that no lesse was courteous then stout,
 Cast how to salve, that both the custome showne
 Were kept, and yet that knight not locked out;
 That seem'd full hard t'accord two things so far in dout.

The seneschall was cal'd to deeme the right;
 Whom she requir'd, that first fayre Amoret
 Might be to her allow'd, as to a knight
 That did her win and free from chalenge set:
 Which straight to her was yeelded without let:
 Then, since that strange knights love from him was quitted,
 She claim'd that to herselfe, as ladies det,
 He as a knight might iustly be admitted;
 So none should be out shut, sith all of loves were fitted.

With that, her glistring helmet she unlaced;
 Which doft, her golden lockes, that were upbound
 Still in a knot, unto her heeles downe traced,
 And like a silken veile in compasse round
 About her backe and all her bodie wound:
 Like as the shining skie in summers night,
 What time the dayes with scorching heat abound,
 Is creasted all with lines of fire light,
 That it prodigious seemes in common peoples sight.

Such, when those knights and ladies all about
Beheld her, all were with amazement smit,
And every one gan grow in secret dout
Of this and that, according to each wit:
Some thought that some enchantment faygned it:
Some, that Bellona in that warlike wise
To them appear'd, with shield and armour fit;
Some, that it was a maske of strange disguise:
So diversely each one did sundrie doubts devise.

But that young knight, which through her gentle deed
Was to that goodly fellowship restor'd,
Ten thousand thanks did yeeld her for her meed,
And, doubly overcommen, her ador'd:
So did they all their former strife accord;
And eke sayre Amoret, now freed from feare,
More franke affection did to her afford;
And to her bed, which she was wont forbear,
Now freely drew, and found right safe assurance there:

Where all that night they of their loves did treat,
And hard adventures, twixt themselves alone,
That each the other gan with passion great
And griefull pittie privately bemone.
The morow next, so soone as Titan shone,
They both uprose, and to their waies them dight:
Long wandred they, yet never met with none
That to their willes could them direct aright,
Or to them tydings tell that mote their harts delight.

Lo thus they rode, till at the last they spide
Two armed knights that toward them did pace,
And ech of them had ryding by his side
A ladie, seeming in so farre a space:
But ladies none they were, albee in face
And outward shew faire semblance they did beare,
For under maske of beautie and good grace
Vile treason and fowle falshood hidden were,
That mote to none but to the warie wise appeare.

The one of them the false Duessa hight,
That now had chang'd her former wonted hew;
For she could d'on so manie shapes in sight,
As ever could cameleon colours new;
So could she forge all colours, save the trew:
The other no whit better was then shee,
But that, such as she was, she plaine did shew;
Yet otherwise much worse, if worse might bee,
And dayly more offensive unto each degree:

Her name was Atè, mother of debate
 And all dissention which doth dayly grow
 Amongst fraile men, that many a publike state
 And many a private oft doth overthrow.
 Her false Duessa, who full well did know
 To be most fit to trouble noble knights
 Which hunt for honor, raised from below
 Out of the dwellings of the damned sprights,
 Where she in darknes wastes her cursed daies and nights.

Hard by the gates of hell her dwelling is;
 There, whereas all the plagues and harmes abound
 Which punish wicked men that walke amisse:
 It is a darksome delve farre under ground,
 With thornes and barren brakes enviroind round
 That none the same may easily out win;
 Yet many waies to enter may be found,
 But none to issue forth when one is in:
 For discord harder is to end then to begin.

And all within, the riven walls were hung
 With ragged monuments of times forepast,
 All which the sad effects of discord sung:
 There were rent robes and broken scepters plast;
 Altars defyld, and holy things defast;
 Disshivered speares, and shields ytorne in twaine;
 Great cities ransackt, and strong castles rast:
 Nations captived, and huge armies slaine:
 Of all which ruines there some relicks did remaine.

There was the signe of antique Babylon;
 Of fatall Thebes; of Rome that raigned long;
 Of sacred Salem; and sad Ilion,
 For memorie of which on high there hong
 The golden apple, cause of all their wrong,
 For which the three faire goddesses did strive:
 There also was the name of Nimrod strong;
 Of Alexander, and his princes five
 Which shar'd to them the spoiles that he had got alive:

And there the relicks of the drunken fray,
 The which amongst the Lapithee's befell:
 And of the bloodie feast, which sent away
 So many centaures drunken soules to hell,
 That under great Alcides furie fell:
 And of the dreadfull discord, which did drive
 The noble Argonauts to outrage fell,
 That each of life sought others to deprive,
 All mindlesse of the goldeen fleece, which made them strive.

And eke of private persons many moe,
That were too long a worke to count them all;
Some, of sworne friends that did their faith forgoe;
Some, of borne brethren prov'd unnaturall:
Some, of deare lovers foes perpetuall:
Witnessse their broken bandes there to be seene,
Their girlonds rent, their bowres despoyled all;
The monuments whereof there hyding beene,
As plaine as at the first when they were fresh and greene.

Such was her house within; but all without,
The barren ground was full of wicked weedes,
Whilch she herselfe had sowne all about,
Now growen great, at first of little seedes,
The seedes of evill wordes and factious deedes;
Which, when to ripenesse due they growen arre,
Bring forth an infinite increase, that breeds
Tumultuous trouble, and contentious iarre,
The which most often end in bloudshed and in warre.

And those same cursed seedes doe also serve
To her for bread, and yeeld her living food:
For life it is to her, when others sterve
Through mischievous debate and deadly feod,
That she may sucke their life and drinke their blood,
With which she from her childhood had bene fed:
For she at first was borne of hellish brood,
And by infernall furies nourished;
That by her monstrous shape might easily be red.

Her face most fowle and filthy was to see,
With squinted eyes contrarie wayes intended,
And loathly mouth, unmeete a mouth too bee,
That nought but gall and venim comprehended,
And wicked wordes that God and man offended:
Her lying tongue was in two parts divided,
And both the parts did speake, and both contended;
And as her tongue so was her hart discided,
That never thought one thing, but doubly stil was guided.

Als as she double spake, so heard she double,
With matchlesse cares deformed and distort,
Fild with false rumors and seditious trouble,
Bred in assemblies of the vulgar sort,
That still are led with every light report:
And as her cares, so eke her feet were odde,
And much unlike; th' one long, the other short,
And both misplast; that, when th' one forward yode,
The other backe retired and contrarie trode.

Likewise unequal were her handes twaine;
 That one did reach, the other pusht away;
 That one did make, the other mard againe,
 And sought to bring all things unto decay;
 Whereby great riches, gathered manie a day,
 She in short space did often bring to nought,
 And their possessours often did dismay:
 For all her studie was and all her thought
 How she might overthrow the things that Concord wrought.

So much her malice did her might surpas,
 That even th' Almighty selfe she did maligne,
 Because to man so mercifull he was,
 And unto all his creatures so benigne,
 Sith she herselfe was of his grace indigne:
 For all this worlds faire workmanship she tride
 Unto his last confusion to bring,
 And that great golden chaine quite to divide,
 With which it blessed Concord hath together tide.

Such was that hag, which with Duessa roade;
 And, serving her in her malicious use
 To hurt good knights, was, as it were, her baude
 To sell her borrowed beautie to abuse:
 For though, like withered tree that wanteth iuyce,
 She old and crooked were, yet now of late
 As fresh and fragrant as the floure-deluce
 She was become, by chaunge of her estate,
 And made full goodly ioyance to her new-found mate:

Her mate, he was a iollie youthfull knight,
 That bore great sway in armes and chivalrie,
 And was indeed a man of mickle might;
 His name was Blandamour, that did descrie
 His fickle mind full of inconstancie:
 And now himselfe he fittid had right well
 With two companions of like qualitie,
 Faithlesse Duessa, and false Paridell,
 That whether were more false, full hard it is to tell.

Now when this gallant with his goodly crew
 From farre espide the famous Britomart,
 Like knight adventurous in outward vew,
 With his faire paragon, his conquests part,
 Approching nigh; eftsoones his wanton hart
 Was tickled with delight, and iesting sayd;
 "Lo! there, Sir Paridel, for your desart,
 Good lucke presents you with yond lovely mayd,
 For pitie that ye want a fellow for your ayd."

By that the lovely paire drew nigh to hond:
 Whom whenas Paridel more plaine beheld,
 Albee in heart he like affection fond,
 Yet mindfull how he late by one was fold
 That did those armes and that same scutchion weld,
 He had small lust to buy his love so deare,
 But answered; "Sir, him wise I never held,
 That, having once escaped perill neare,
 Would afterwards afresh the sleeping evill reare.

"This knight too late his manhood and his might
 I did assay, that me right dearely cost;
 Ne list I for revenge provoke new fight,
 Ne for light ladies love, that soone is lost."
 The hot-spurre youth so scorning to be crost,
 "Take then to you this dame of mine," quoth hee,
 "And I, without your perill or your cost,
 Will challenge yond same other for my fee."
 So forth he fiercely prickt, that one him scarce could see.

The warlike Britonesse her soone addest,
 And with such uncouth welcome did receive
 Her fayned paramour, her forced guest,
 That, being forst his saddle soone to leave,
 Himselfe he did of his new love deceave;
 And made himselfe th' ensample of his follic.
 Which done, she passed forth, not taking leave,
 And left him now as sad as whilome iollic,
 Well warned to beware with whom he dar'd to dallie.

Which when his other companie beheld,
 They to his succour ran with readie ayd;
 And, finding him unable once to weld,
 They reared him on horse-backe and upstayd,
 Till on his way they had him forth convayd:
 And all the way, with wondrous grieve of mynd
 And shame, he shewd himselfe to be dismayd
 More for the love which he had left behynd,
 Then that which he had to Sir Paridel resynd.

Nathlesse he forth did march, well as he might.
 And made good semblance to his companie,
 Dissembling his disease and evill plight;
 Till that ere long they chaunced to espie
 Two other knights, that towards them did ply
 With speedie course, as bent to charge them now:
 Whom whenas Blandamour approaching nie
 Perceiv'd to be such as they seemd in vew,
 He was full wo, and gan his former grieve renew.

For th' one of them he perfectly describe
 To be Sir Seudamour, (by that he bore
 The god of love with wings displayed wide,) Whom mortally he hated evermore,
 Both for his worth, that all men did adore,
 And eke because his love he wonne by right:
 Which when he thought, it grieved him full sore,
 That, through the bruses of his former fight,
 He now unable was to wreake his old despight.

Forthy he thus to Paridel bespake:
 "Fairst Sir, of friendship let me now you pray,
 That as I late adventured for your sake,
 The hurts whereof me now from battell stay,
 Ye will me now with like good turne repay,
 And iustifie my cause on yonder knight."
 "Ah! Sir," said Paridel, "do not dismay
 Yourselfe for this; myselfe will for you fight,
 As ye have done for me: The left hand rubs the right."

With that he put his spurres unto his steed,
 With speare in rest, and toward him did fare,
 Like shaft out of a bow preventing speed.
 But Seudamour was shortly well aware
 Of his approach, and gan himselfe prepare
 Him to receive with entertainment meete.
 So furiously they met, that either bare
 The other downe under their horses feete,
 That what of them became themselves did scarcely weete.

As when two billowes in the Irish sowndes,
 Forcibly driven with contrarie tydes,
 Do meete together, each abacke rebowndes
 With roaring rage; and dashing on all sides,
 That filleth all the sea with some, divydes
 The doubtfull current into divers wayes:
 So fell those two in spight of both their prydes;
 But Seudamour himselfe did soone uprayse,
 And, mounting light, his foe for lying long upbrayes.

Who, rolled on an heape, lay stil in swoond
 All carelesse of his taunt and bitter rayle;
 Till that the rest him seeing lie on ground
 Ran hastily, to weete what did him ayle:
 Where finding that the breath gan him to fayle,
 With busie care they strove him to awake,
 And doft his helmet, and undid his mayle;
 So much they did, that at the last they brake
 His slomber, yet so mazed that he nothing spake.

Which whenas Blandamour beheld, he sayd;
 "False faitour Scudamour, that hast by slight
 And foule advantage this good knight dismayd,
 A knight much better then thyselfe behight,
 Well failes it thee that I am not in plight
 This day, to wreake the dammage by thee donne!
 Such is thy wont, that still when any knight
 Is weakned, then thou doest him overronne:
 So hast thou to thyselfe false honour often wonne."

He little answer'd, but in manly heart
 His mightie indignation did forbear;
 Which was not yet so secret, but some part
 Thereof did in his frowning face appeare:
 Like as a gloomie cloud, the which doth beare
 An hideous storme, is by the northerne blast
 Quite overblowne, yet doth not passe so cleare
 But that it all the skie doth overcast
 With darknes dred, and threatens all the world to wast.

"Ah! gentle knight," then false Duessa sayd,
 "Why do ye strive for ladies love so sore,
 Whose chiefe desire is love and friendly aid
 Mongst gentle knights to nourish evermore!
 Ne be ye wroth, Sir Scudamour, therefore,
 That she your love list love another knight,
 Ne do yourselfe dislike a whit the more;
 For love is free, and led with selfe-delight,
 Ne will enforced be with maisterdome or might."

So false Duessa: but vile Atè thus;
 "Both foolish knights, I can but laugh at both,
 That strive and storme with stirre outrageous
 For her, that each of you alike doth loth,
 And loves another, with whom now she go'th
 In lovely wise, and sleepes, and sports, and playes;
 Whilest both you here with many a cursed oth
 Swear she is yours, and stirre up bloudie frayes,
 To win a willow bough, whilest other weares the bayes.

"Vile hag," sayd Scudamour, "why dost thou lye,
 And falsly seekst a virtuous wight to shame?"
 "Fond knight," sayd she, "the thing that with this eye
 I saw, why should I doubt to tell the same?"
 "Then tell," quoth Blandamour, "and feare no blame;
 Tell what thou saw'st, maulgre whoso it heares."
 "I saw," quoth she, "a straunger knight, whose name
 I wote not well, but in his shield he beares
 (That well I wote) the heads of many broken speares;

"I saw him have your Amoret at will;
 I saw him kisse; I saw him her embrace;
 I saw him sleepe with her all night his fill;
 All manie nights; and manie by in place
 That present were to testifie the case."
 Which whenas Scudamour did heare, his heart
 Was thrild with inward grieve: as when in chace
 The Parthian strikes a stag with shivering dart,
 The beast astonisht stands in midst of his smart;

So stood Sir Scudamour when this he heard,
 Ne word he had to speake for great dismay.
 But lookt on Glaucè grim, who woxe afeard
 Of outrage for the words which she heard say,
 Albee untrue she wist them by assay.
 But Blandamour, whenas he did espie
 His chaunge of cheere that anguish did bewray,
 He woxe full blithe, as he had got thereby,
 And gan thereat to triumph without victorie.

"Lo! recreant," sayd he, "the fruitlesse end
 Of thy vaine boast, and spoile of love misgotten,
 Whereby the name of knight-hood thou dost shend,
 And all true lovers with dishonor blotten:
 All things not rooted well will soone be rotten."
 "Fy, fy, false knight," then false Duessa cryde,
 "Unworthy life, that love with guile hast gotten;
 Be thou, whereever thou do go or ryde,
 Loathed of ladies all, and of all knights defyde!"

But Scudamour, for passing great despight,
 Staid not to answer; scarcely did refraine
 But that in all those knights and ladies sight
 He for revenge had guiltesse Glaucè slaine:
 But, being past, he thus began amaine:
 "False traitour squire, false squire of falsest knight,
 Why doth mine hand from thine avenge abstaine.
 Whose lord hath done my love this foule despight!
 Why do I not it wreake on thee now in my might?"

"Discourteous, disloyall Britomart,
 Untrue to God, and unto man uniuist!
 What vengeance due can equall thy desert,
 That hast with shamefull spot of sinfull lust
 Defil'd the pledge committed to thy trust!
 Let ugly shame and endlesse infamy
 Colour thy name with foule reproaches rust!
 Yet thou, false squire, his fault shall deare aby,
 And with thy punishment his penance shalt supply.

The aged dame him seeing so enraged
 Was dead with feare; nathlesse as neede required
 His flaming furie sought to have assuaged
 With sober words, that sufferance desired
 Till time the tryall of her truth expyred;
 And evermore sought Britomart to cleare:
 But he the more with furious rage was fyred,
 And thrise his hand to kill her did upreare,
 And thrise he drew it backe: so did at last forbear.

CANTO II.

Blandamour winnes false Florimell;
 Paridell for her strives:
 They are accorded: Agapè
 Doth lengthen her sonnes lives.

FIERREBRAND of hell first tynd in Phlegeton
 By thousand furies, and from thence out-thrown
 Into this world to worke confusion
 And set it all on fire by force unknowen,
 Is wicked Discord; whose small sparkes once blown
 None but a god or godlike man can slake:
 Such as was Orpheus, that, when strife was growen
 Amongst those famous ympes of Greece, did take
 His silver harpe in hand and shortly friendes them make:

Or such as that celestiall psalmist was,
 That, when the wicked feend his lord tormented,
 With heavenly notes, that did all other pas,
 The outrage of his furious fit relented.
 Such musicke is wise words with time concented,
 To moderate stiffe mindes disposd to strive:
 Such as that prudent Romane well invented;
 What time his people into partes did rive,
 Them reconcyld againe, and to their homes did drive.

Such us'd wise Glaucè to that wrathfull knight,
 To calme the tempest of his troubled thought:
 Yet Blandamour, with termes of foule despight,
 And Paridell her scornd, and set at nought,
 As old and crooked and not good for ought:
 Both they unwise, and warelesse of the evill
 That by themselves unto themselves is wrought,
 Through that false witch, and that foule aged drevill;
 The one a feend, the other an incarnate devill.

With whom as they thus rode accompanide,
 They were encountred of a lustie knight
 That had a goodly ladie by his side,
 To whom he made great dalliance and delight:
 It was to weet the bold Sir Ferraugh hight,
 He that from Braggadochio whilome rest
 The snowy Florimell, whose beautie bright
 Made him seeme happie for so glorious theft;
 Yet was it in due triall but a wandring west.

Which whenas Blandamour, whose fancie light
 Was alwaies flitting as the wavering wind
 After each beautie that appeared in sight,
 Beheld; eftsoones it prickt his wanton mind
 With sting of lust that reasons eye did blind,
 That to Sir Paridell these words he sent;
 "Sir knight, why ride ye dumpish thus behind,
 Since so good fortune doth to you present
 So fayre a spoyle, to make you ioyous meriment?"

But Paridell, that had too late a tryall
 Of the bad issue of his counsell vaine,
 List not to hearke, but made this faire denyall;
 "Last turne was mine, well proved to my paine;
 This now be yours; God send you better gaine!"
 Whose scoffed words he taking halfe in scorne,
 Fiercelly forth prickt his steed as in disdaine
 Against that knight, ere he him well could torne;
 By meanes whereof he hath him lightly overborne.

Who, with the sudden stroke astonisht sore,
 Upon the ground awhile in slomber lay;
 The whiles his love away the other bore,
 And, shewing her, did Paridell upbray;
 "Lo! sluggish knight, the victors happie pray!
 So fortune friends the bold." Whom Paridell
 Seeing so faire indeede, as he did say,
 His hart with secret envie gan to swell,
 And inly grudge at him that he had sped so well.

Nathlesse proud man himselfe the other deemed,
 Having so peerlesse paragon ygot:
 For sure the fayrest Florimell him seemed
 To him was fallen for his happie lot,
 Whose like alive on earth he weened not:
 Therefore he her did court, did serve, did wooe,
 With humblest suit that he imagine mot,
 And all things did devise, and all things dooe,
 That might her love prepare, and liking win theretoo.

She, in regard thereof, him recompens<sup>t</sup>
 With golden words and goodly countenance,
 And such fond favours sparingly dispenst:
 Sometimes him blessing with a light eye-glance,
 And coy lookes tempring with loose dalliance;
 Sometimes estranging him in sterner wise;
 That, having cast him in a foolish trance,
 He seemed brought to bed in Paradise,
 And prov'd himself most foole in what seem'd most wise.

So great a mistresse of her art she was,
 And perfectly practiz'd in womans craft,
 That though therein himselfe he thought to pas,
 And by this false allurements wylie draft
 Had thousand women of their love heraft,
 Yet now he was surpriz'd: for that false spright,
 Which that same witch had in this forme engraft,
 Was so expert in every subtile slight,
 That it could overreach the wisest earthly wight.

Yet he to her did dayly service more,
 And dayly more deceived was thereby;
 Yet Paridell him envied therefore,
 As seeming plast in sole felicity:
 So blind is lust false colours to descry.
 But Atè soone discovering his desire,
 And finding now fit opportunity
 To stirre up strife twixt love and spight and ire,
 Did privily put coles unto his secret fire.

By sundry meanes thereto she prickt him forth;
 Now with remembrance of those spightfull speeches,
 Now with opinion of his owne more worth,
 Now with recounting of like former breaches
 Made in their friendship, as that hag him teaches:
 And ever, when his passion is allayd,
 She it revives, and new occasion reaches:
 That, on a time as they together way'd,
 He made him open chalenge, and thus boldly sayd;

"Too boastfull Blandamour! too long I beare
 The open wrongs thou doest me day by day:
 Well know'st thou, when we friendship first did sweare
 The covenant was, that every spoyle or pray
 Should equally be shard betwixt us tway:
 Where is my part then of this ladie bright,
 Whom to thyselfe thou takest quite away?
 Render therefore therein to me my right,
 Or answere for thy wrong as shall fall out in fight."

Exceeding wroth thereat was Blandamour,
 And gan this bitter answer to him make;
 "Too foolish Paridell! that sayrest floure
 Wouldst gather faine, and yet no paines wouldst take:
 But not so easie will I her forsake;
 This hand her wonne, that hand shall her defend."
 With that they gan their shivering speares to shake,
 And deadly points at eithers breast to bend,
 Forgetfull each to have bene ever others frend.

Their fire steedes with so untamed forse
 Did beare them both to fell avenges end,
 That both their speares with pitilesse remorse
 Through shield and mayle and habericon did wend,
 And in their flesh a griesly passage rend,
 That with the furie of their owne affret
 Each other horse and man to ground did send;
 Where, lying still awhile, both did forget
 The perillous present stownd in which their lives were set.

As when two warlike brigandines at sea,
 With murderous weapons arm'd to cruell fight,
 Do meete together on the watry lea,
 They stemme ech other with so fell despight,
 That with the shooke of their owne heedlesse might
 Their wooden ribs are shaken nigh asonder;
 They which from shore behold the dreadfull sight
 Of flashing fire, and heare the ordnance thonder,
 Do greatly stand amaz'd at such unwonted wonder.

At length they both upstart in amaze,
 As men awaked rashly out of dreme,
 And round about themselves a while did gaze;
 Till seeing her, that Florimell did seme,
 In doubt to whom she victorie should deeme.
 Therewith their dulled sprights they edgd anew,
 And, drawing both their swords with rage extreme,
 Like two mad mastiffes each on other flew, [hew.
 And shields did share, and mailes did rash, and helmes did

So furiously each other did assayle,
 As if their soules they would attonce have rent
 Out of their brests, that streames of bloud did rayle
 Adowne, as if their springs of life were spent;
 That all the ground with purple bloud was sprent,
 And all their armours staynd with bloudie gore;
 Yet scarcely once to breath would they relent,
 So mortall was their malice and so sore
 Become, of fayned friendship which they vow'd afore.

And that which is for ladies most besitting,
 'To stint all strife, and foster friendly peace,
 Was from those dames so farre and so unfitting,
 As that, instead of praying them surcease,
 They did much more their cruelty encrease;
 Bidding them fight for honour of their love,
 And rather die then ladies cause release:
 With which vaine termes so much they did them move,
 That both resolv'd the last extremities to prove.

There they, I weene, would fight untill this day,
 Had not a squire, even he the squire of dames,
 By great adventure travelled that way;
 Who seeing both bent to so bloudy games,
 And both of old well knowing by their names,
 Drew nigh, to weete the cause of their debate:
 And first laide on those ladies thousand blames,
 That did not seeke t' appease their deadly hate,
 But gazed on their harmes not pittying their estate.

And then those knights he humbly did beseech
 To stay their hands, till he awhile had spoken:
 Who lookt a little up at that his speech,
 Yet would not let their battell so be broken,
 Both greedie fiers on other to be wroken.
 Yet he to them so earnestly did call,
 And them coniu'r'd by some well knowen token,
 That they at last their wrothfull hands let fall,
 Content to heare him speake, and glad to rest withall.

First he desir'd their cause of strife to see:
 They said, it was for love of Florimell.
 "Ah! gentle knights," quoth he, "how may that bee,
 And she so farre astray, as none can tell?"
 "Fond squire," full angry then sayd Paridell,
 "Seest not the ladie there before thy face?"
 He looked backe, and, her avising well,
 Weend, as he said, by that her outward grace
 That fayrest Florimell was present there in place.

Glad man was he to see that ioyous sight,
 For none alive but ioy'd in Florimell,
 And lowly to her lowting thus behight;
 "Fayrest of faire, that fairenesse doest excell,
 This happie day I have to greete you well,
 In which you safe I see, whom thousand late
 Misdoubted lost through mischiefe that befell;
 Long may you live in health and happie state!"
 She litle answer'd him, but lightly did aggrate.

Then, turning to those knights, he gan anew;
 "And you, Sir Blandamour, and Paridell,
 That for this ladie present in your vew
 Have rays'd this cruell warre and outrage fell,
 Certes, me seemes, bene not advised well;
 But rather ought in friendship for her sake
 To ioyne your force, their forces to repell
 That seeke perforce her from you both to take,
 And of your gotten spoyle their owne triump to make."

Thereat Sir Blandamour, with countenance sterne
 All full of wrath, thus fiercely him bespake;
 "Aread, thou squire, that I the man may learne,
 That dare fro me thinke Florimell to take!"
 "Not one," quoth he, "but many doe partake
 Herein; as thus: it lately so befell,
 That Satyran a girdle did uptake
 Well knowne to appertaine to Florimell,
 Which for her sake he worc, as him beseeemed well.

"But, whennas she herselfe was lost and gone,
 Full many knights, that loved her like deare,
 Thereat did greatly grudge, that he alone
 That lost faire ladies ornament should weare,
 And gan therefore close spight to him to beare;
 Which he to shun, and stop vile envies sting,
 Hath lately caus'd to be proclaim'd each where
 A solemne feast, with publike turneyng,
 To which all knights with them their ladies are to bring:

"And of them all, she that is fayrest found,
 Shall have that golden girdle for reward;
 And of those knights, who is most stout on ground,
 Shall to that fairest ladie be prefard.
 Since therefore she herselfe is now your ward,
 To you that ornament of hers pertaines,
 Against all those that chalenge it, to gard,
 And save her honour with your ventrous paines;
 That shall you win more glory than ye here find gaines."

When they the reason of his words had hard,
 They gan abate the rancour of their rage,
 And with their honours and their loves regard
 The furious flames of malice to asswage.
 Tho each to other did his faith engage,
 Like faithfull friends thenceforth to ioyne in one
 With all their force, and battell strong to wage
 Gainst all those knights, as their professed fone,
 That challeng'd ought in Florimell, save they alone.

So, well accorded, forth they rode together
 In friendly sort, that lasted but a while;
 And of all old dislikes they made faire weather:
 Yet all was forg'd and spred with golden foyle,
 That under it hidde hate and hollow guyle.
 Ne certes can that friendship long endure,
 However gay and goodly be the style,
 That doth ill cause or evill end enure:
 For vertue is the band that bindeth harts most sure.

Thus as they marched all in close disguise
 Of fayned love, they chaunst to overtake
 Two knights that lincked rode in lovely wise,
 As if they secret counsels did partake;
 And each not farre behinde him had his make,
 To weete, two ladies of most goodly hew,
 That twixt themselves did gentle purpose make,
 Unmindfull both of that discordsfull crew,
 The which with speedie pace did after them pursew:

Who, as they now approched nigh at hand,
 Deeming them doughtie as they did appeare,
 They sent that squire afore, to understand
 What mote they be: who, viewing them more neare,
 Returned readie newes, that those same weare
 Two of the prowest knights in Faery Lond;
 And these two ladies their twc lovers deare;
 Couragious Cambell, and stout Triamond,
 With Canacee and Cambine linckt in lovely bond.

Whylome, as antique stories tellen us,
 Those two were foes the fellonest on ground,
 And battell made the dreeddest dangerous
 That ever shrilling trumpet did resound;
 Though now their acts be no where to be found,
 As that renowned poet them compyled
 With warlike numbers and heroicke sound.
 Dan Chaucer, well of English undefyled,
 On fames eternall beadroll worthie to be fyled.

But wicked time that all good thoughts doth waste,
 And workes of noblest wits to nought outweare,
 That famous moniment hath quite defaste,
 And robd the world of threasure endlesse deare,
 The which mote have enriched all us heare.
 O cursed eld, the canker-worme of writs!
 How may these rimes, so rude as doth appeare,
 Hope to endure, sith workes of heavenly wits
 Are quite devourd, and brought to nought by little bits!

Then pardon, O most sacred happie spirit,
 That I thy labours lost may thus revive,
 And steale from thee the meede of thy due merit,
 That none durst ever whilest thou wast alive,
 And, being dead, in vaine yet many strive:
 Ne dare I like; but, through infusion sweete
 Of thine owne spirit which doth in me survive,
 I follow here the footing of thy feete,
 That with thy meaning so I may the rather meete.

Cambelloes sister was fayre Canacee,
 That was the learnedst ladie in her dayes,
 Well scene in everie science that mote bee,
 And every secret worke of nature's wayes;
 In wittie riddles; and in wise soothsayes;
 In power of herbes; and tunes of beasts and burds;
 And, that augmented all her other prayse,
 She modest was in all her deedes and words.
 And wondrous chaste of life, yet lov'd of knights and lords.

Full many lords and many knights her loved,
 Yet she to none of them her liking lent,
 Ne ever was with fond affection moved,
 But rul'd her thoughts with goodly government,
 For dread of blame and honours blemishment;
 And eke unto her lookes a law she made,
 That none of them once out of order went,
 But, like to warie centonels well stayd,
 Still watcht on every side, of secret foes afraid,

So much the more as she refusd to love,
 So much the more she loved was and sought,
 That oftentimes unquiet strife did move
 Amongst her lovers, and great quarrels wrought;
 That oft for her in bloudie armes they fought.
 Which whenas Cambell, that was stout and wise,
 Perceiv'd would breede great mischief, he bethought
 How to prevent the perill that mote rise,
 And turne both him and her to honour in this wise.

One day, when all that troupe of warlike wooers
 Assembled were, to weet whose she should bee,
 All mightie men and dreadfull derring doers,
 (The harder it to make them well agree,)
 Amongst them all this end he did decree;
 That, of them all which love to her did make,
 They by consent should chose the stoutest three
 That with himsele should combat for her sake,
 And of them all the victour should his sister take.

Bold was the chalenge, as himselfe was bold
 And courage full of haughtie hardiment,
 Approved oft in perils manifold,
 Which he atchiev'd to his great ornament:
 But yet his sisters skill unto him lent
 Most confidence and hope of happie speed,
 Conceived by a ring which she him sent,
 That, mongst the manie vertues which we reed,
 Had power to staunch al wounds that mortally did bleed.

Well was that rings great vertue knowen to all;
 That dread thereof, and his redoubted might,
 Did all that youthly rout so much appall.
 That none of them durst undertake the fight:
 More wise they weend to make of love delight
 Then life to hazard for faire ladies looke;
 And yet uncertaine by such outward sight,
 Though for her sake they all that perill tooke,
 Whether she would them love, or in her liking brooke.

Amongst those knights there were three brethren bold,
 Three bolder brethren never were yborne,
 Borne of one mother in one happie mold,
 Borne at one burden in one happie morne;
 Thrise happie mother, and thrise happie morne,
 That bore three such, three such not to be fond!
 Her name was Agapè, whose children werne
 All three as one; the first hight Priamond,
 The second Dyamond, the youngest Triamond.

Stout Priamond, but not so strong to strike;
 Strong Diamond, but not so stout a knight;
 But Triamond was stout and strong alike:
 On horsebacke used Triamond to fight,
 And Priamond on foote had more delight;
 But horse and foote knew Diamond to wield:
 With curtaxe used Diamond to smite,
 And Triamond to handle speare and shield,
 But speare and curtaxe both usd Priamond in field.

These three did love each other dearely well,
 And with so firme affection were allyde,
 As if but one soule in them all did dwell,
 Which did her powre into three parts divyde;
 Like three faire branches budding farre and wide,
 That from one roote deriv'd their vitall sap:
 And, like that roote that doth her life divide,
 Their mother was; and had full blessed hap
 These three so noble babes to bring forth at one clap.

Their mother was a fay, and had the skill
 Of secret things, and all the powres of nature,
 Which she by art could use unto her will.
 And to her service bind each living creature,
 Through secret understanding of their feature.
 Thereto she was right faire, whenso her face
 She list discover, and of goodly stature;
 But she, as fayer are wont, in privie place
 Did spend her dayes, and lov'd in forests wyld to spae.

There on a day a noble youthly knight,
 Seeking adventures in the salvage wood,
 Did by great fortune get of her the sight,
 As she sate carelesse by a cristall flood,
 Combing her golden lockes, as seemd her good;
 And unawares upon her laying hold,
 That strove in vaine him long to have withstood,
 Oppressed her, and there (as it is told) ¶ bold:
 Got these three lovely babes, that prov'd three champions

Which she with her long fostred in that wood,
 Till that to ripenesse of mans state they grew:
 Then, shewing forth signes of their fathers blood,
 They loved armes, and knighthood did ensew,
 Seeking adventures where they anie knew.
 Which when their mother saw, she gan to dout
 Their safetie; least by searching daungers new
 And rash provoking perils all about,
 Their days mote be abridged through their corage stout.

Therefore desirous th' end of all their dayes
 To know, and them t' enlarge with long extent,
 By wondrous skill and many hidden wayes
 To the three satall sisters house she went;
 Farre under ground from tract of living went,
 Downe in the bottome of the deepe abyse,
 Where Demogorgon in dull darknesse pent
 Farre from the view of gods and heavens bliss
 The hideous chaos keepes, their dreadfull dwelling is

There she them found all sitting round about,
 The direfull distaffe standing in the mid,
 And with unwearied fingers drawing out
 The lines of life, from living knowl-dge hid.
 Sad Clotho held the rocke, the whiles the thrid
 By griesly Lachesis was spun with paine,
 That cruell Atropos eftsoones undid.
 With cursed knife cutting the twist in twaine:
 Most wretched men, whose dayes depend on thrids so vaine!

She, them saluting there, by them sate still,
 Beholding how the thrids of life they span:
 And when at last she had beheld her fill,
 Trembling in heart, and looking pale and wan,
 Her cause of comming she to tell began.
 To whom fierce Atropos; "Bold say, that durst
 Come see the secret of the life of man,
 Well worthie thou to be of Love accurst,
 And eke thy childrens thrids to be asunder burst!"

Whereat she sore affrayd yet her besought
 To graunt her boone, and rigour to abate,
 That she might see her childrens thrids forth brought,
 And know the measure of their utmost date
 To them ordained by eternall fate:
 Which Clotho graunting shewed her the same,
 That when she saw, it did her much amate
 To see their thrids so thin, as spiders frame,
 And eke so short, that seemd their ends out shortly came.

She then began them humbly to intreate
 To draw them longer out, and better twine,
 That so their lives might be prolonged lato:
 But Lachesis thereat gan to repine,
 And sayd; "Fond dame! that deem'st of things divine
 As of humane, that they may altered bee,
 And chaung'd at pleasure for those impes of thine:
 Not so; for what the fates do once decree,
 Not all the gods can chaunge, nor Love himself can free!"

"Then since," quoth she, "the terme of each mans life
 For nought may lessened nor enlarged bee;
 Graunt this; that when ye shred with fatall knife
 His line, which is the eldest of the three,
 Which is of them the shortest, as I see,
 Eftsoones his life may passe into the next;
 And, when the next shall likewise ended bee,
 That both their lives may likewise be annex
 Unto the third, that his may be so trebly wext."

They graunted it; and then that carefull Fay
 Departed thence with full contented mynd;
 And, comming home, in warlike fresh aray
 Them found all three according to their kynd;
 But unto them what destinie was assynd,
 Or how their lives were eekt, she did not tell;
 But evermore, when she fit time could fynd,
 She warned them to tend their safeties well,
 And love each other deare, whatever them befell.

So did they surely during all their dayes,
 And never discord did amongst them fall;
 Which much augmented all their other praise:
 And now, t' increase affection naturall,
 In love of Canacee they ioyned all:
 Upon which ground this same great battell grew,
 (Great matter growing of beginning small,)
 The which, for length, I will not here pursew,
 But rather will reserve it for a canto new.

CANTO III.

The Battell twixt three brethren with
 Cambell for Canacee:
 Cambina with true friendships bond
 Doth their long strife agree.

O! WHY doe wretched men so much desire
 To draw their dayes unto the utmost date,
 And doe not rather wish them soone expire;
 Knowing the miserie of their estate,
 And thousand perills which them still awate,
 Tossing them like a boate amid the mayne,
 That every houre they knoeke at Death's gate!
 And he that happie seemes and least in payne,
 Yet is as nigh as his end as he that most doth playne.

Therefore this fay I hold but fond and vaine,
 The which, in seeking for her children three
 Long life, thereby did more prolong their paine:
 Yet whilst they lived none did ever see
 More happie creatures then they seem'd to bee;
 Nor more ennobled for their courtesie,
 That made them dearly lov'd of each degree;
 Ne more renowned for their chevalrie,
 That made them dreaded much of all men farre and nie.

These three that hardie challenge tooke in hand,
 For Canacee with Cambell for to fight:
 The day was set, that all might understand,
 And pledges pawnd the same to keepe aright:
 That day, (the dreddest day that living wight
 Did ever see upon this world to shine,)
 So soone as heavens window shewed light,
 These warlike champions, all in armour shine,
 Assembled were in field the challenge to define.

The field with listes was all about enclos'd,
 To barre the prease of people farre away;
 And at th' one side sixe iudges were dispos'd,
 To view and deeme the deedes of armes that day;
 And on the other side in fresh aray
 Fayre Canacee upon a stately stage
 Was set, to see the fortune of that fray
 And to be seene, as his most worthy wage
 That could her purchase with his live's adventur'd gage.

Then entred Cambell first into the list,
 With stately steps and fearelesse countenance,
 As if the conquest his he surely wist.
 Soone after did the brethren three advance
 In brave aray and goodly amenance,
 With scutchins gilt and banners broad displayd;
 And, marching thrise in warlike ordinance,
 Thrise lowted lowly to the noble Mayd;
 The whiles shril trumpets and loud clarions sweetly playd.

Which doen, the doughty challenger came forth,
 All arm'd to point, his chalenge to abet:
 Gainst whom Sir Priamond, with equall worth
 And equall armes, himselfe did forward set.
 A trumpet blew; they both together met
 With dreadfull force and furious intent,
 Carelesse of perill in their fiers affret,
 As if that life to losse they had forelent,
 And cared not to spare that should be shortly spent.

Right practicke was Sir Priamond in fight,
 And throughly skild in use of shield and speare;
 Ne lesse approved was Cambelloes might,
 Ne lesse his skill in weapons did appeare;
 That hard it was to weene which harder were.
 Full many mightie strokes on either side
 Were sent, that seemed death in them to beare;
 But they were both so watchfull and well cyde,
 That they avoyded were, and vainely by did slyde.

Yet one, of many, was so strongly bent
 By Priamond, that with unluckie glaunce
 Through Cambels shoulder it unwarely went,
 That forced him his shield to disadvaunce:
 Much was he grieved with that gracelesse chaunce;
 Yet from the wound no drop of bloud there fell,
 But wondrous paine that did the more enhaunce
 His haughtie courage to avengement fell: [well.
 Smart daunts not mighty harts, but makes them more to

With that, his poynant speare he fierce aventred
 With doubled force close underneath his shield,
 That through the mayles into his thigh it entred,
 And, there arresting, readie way did yield
 For bloud to gush forth on the grassie field;
 That he for paine himselfe n'ot might upcare,
 But to and fro in great amazement reel'd;
 Like an old oke, whose pith and sap is seare,
 At pufte of every storme doth stagger here and there.

Whom so dismayd when Cambell had espide,
 Againe he drove at him with double might,
 That nought mote stay the steele, till in his side
 The mortall point most cruelly empight;
 Where fast infix'd, whilest he sought by slight
 It forth to wrest, the staffe asunder brake,
 And lett the head behinde: with which despite
 He all enrag'd his shivering speare did shake,
 And charging him afresh thus felly him bespake:

"Lo! faitour, there thy meede unto thee take,
 The meede of thy mischallenge and abet:
 Not for thine owne, but for thy sisters sake,
 Have I thus long thy life unto thee let:
 But to forbear doth not forgive the det."
 The wicked weapon heard his wrathfull vow;
 And, passing forth with furious affret,
 Pierst through his bever quite into his brow,
 That with the force it backward forced him to bow.

Therewith asunder in the midst it brast,
 And in his hand nought but the troncheon left;
 The other halfe behind yet sticking fast
 Out of his head-peece Cambell fiercely rest,
 And with such furie backe at him hest,
 That, making way unto his dearest life,
 His weasand-pipe it through his gorget cleft:
 Thence streames of purple bloud issuing rife
 Let forth his wearie ghost, and made an end of strife.

His wearie ghost asoyld from fleshly band
 Did not, as others wont, directly fly
 Unto her rest in Plutoes griesly land;
 Ne into ayre did vanish presently;
 Ne chaunged was into a starre in sky;
 But through traduction was eftsoones derived,
 Like as his mother prayed the Destinie,
 Into his other brethren that survived,
 In whom he liv'd anew, of former life deprived.

Whom when on ground his brother next beheld,
 Though sad and sorrie for so heavy sight,
 Yet leave unto his sorrow did not yeeld;
 But rather stir'd to vengeance and despight.
 Through secret feeling of his generous spright,
 Rusht fiercely forth, the battell to renew,
 As in reversion of his brothers right;
 And chalenging the virgin as his dew.
 His foe was soone adrest: the trumpets freshly blew.

With that they both together fiercely met,
 As if that each ment other to deuoure;
 And with their axes both so sorely bet,
 That nether plate nor mayle, whereas their powre
 They felt, could once sustaine the hideous stowre,
 But rived were, like rotten wood, asunder;
 Whilest through their rifts the ruddie bloud did showre,
 And fire did flash, like lightning after thunder,
 That fild the lookers on attonce with ruth and wonder.

As when two tygers prickt with hungers rage
 Have by good fortune found some beasts fresh spoyle,
 On which they weene their famine to assuage,
 And gaine a feastfull guerdon of their toyle;
 Both falling out doe stirre up strifesfull broyle,
 And cruell battell twixt themselves doe make,
 Whiles neither lets the other touch the soyle,
 But either sdeigns with other to partake:
 So cruelly those knights strove for that ladies sake.

Full many strokes, that mortally were ment,
 The whiles were interchaunged twixt them two;
 Yet they were all with so good wariment
 Or warded, or avoyded and let goe,
 That still the life stood fearelesse of her foe;
 Till Diamond, disdeigning long delay
 Of doubtfull fortune wavering to and fro,
 Resolv'd to end it one or other way;
 And heav'd his murderous axe at him with mighty sway.

The dreadfull stroke, in case it had arrived
 Where it was ment, (so deadly it was ment,)
 The soule had sure out of his body rived,
 And stinted all the strife incontinent;
 But Cambels fate that fortune did prevent:
 For, seeing it at hand, he swarv'd asyde,
 And so gave way unto his fell intent;
 Who, missing of the marke which he had eyde,
 Was with the force nigh feld whilst his right foot did slyde.

As when a vulture greedie of his pray,
Through hunger long that hart to him doth lend,
Strikes at an heron with all his bodies sway,
That from his force seemes nought may it defend;
The warie fowle, that spies him toward bend
His dreadfull souse, avoydes it, shunning light,
And maketh him his wing in vaine to spend;
That with the weight of his owne weeldlesse might
He falleth nigh to ground, and searse recovereth sight.

Which faire adventure when Cambello spide,
Full lightly, ere himselfe he could recover
From daungers dread to ward his naked side,
He can let drive at him with all his power,
And with his axe him smote in evill lower,
That from his shoulders quite his head he rest:
The headlesse tronke, as heedlesse of that stower,
Stood still awhile, and his fast footing kept;
Till, feeling life to faile, it fell, and deadly slept.

They, which that piteous spectacle beheld,
Were much amaz'd the headlesse tronke to see
Stand up so long and weapon vaine to weld,
Unweeting of the Fates divine decree
For lifes succession in those brethren three.
For notwithstanding that one soule was rest,
Yet had the bodie not dismembred bee,
It would have lived, and revived eft;
But, finding no fit seat, the lifelesse corse it left.

It left; but that same soule which therein dwelt,
Streight entring into Triamond him fild
With double life and griepe; which when he felt,
As one whose inner parts had bene ythrild
With point of steele that close his hartbloud spild,
He lightly lept out of his place of rest,
And, rushing forth into the emptie field,
Against Cambello fiercely him addrest;
Who, him affronting soone, to fight was readie prest.

Well mote ye wonder how that noble knight,
After he had so often wounded beene,
Could stand on foot now to renew the fight:
But had ye then him forth advauncing seene,
Some newborne wight ye would him surely weene;
So fresh he seemed and so fierce in sight;
Like as a snake, whom wearie winters teene
Hath worne to nought, now feeling sommers might,
Casts off his ragged skin and freshly doth him dight.

All was, through vertue of the ring he wore;
 The which not ouely did not from him let
 One drop of bloud to fall, but did restore
 His weakned powers, and dulled spirits whet,
 Through working of the stone therein yset
 Else how could one of equall might with most,
 Against so many no lesse mightie met,
 Once thinke to match three such on equall cost,
 Three such as able were to match a puissant host?

Yet nought thereof was Triamond adredde,
 No desperate of glorious victorie;
 But sharply him assayld, and sore bestedde
 With heapes of strokes, which he at him let flie
 As thicke as hayle forth poured from the skie:
 He stroke, he soust, he foynd, he hewd, he lasht,
 And did his yron brond so fast applie,
 That from the same the fierie sparkles flasht,
 As fast as water-sprinkles gainst a rocke are dasht.

Much was Cambello daunted with his blowes;
 So thicke they fell, and forcibly were sent,
 That he was forst from daunger of the throwes
 Backe to retire, and somewhat to relent,
 Till th' heat of his fierce furie he had spent:
 Which when for want of breath gan to abate,
 He then afresh with new encouragement
 Did him assaile, and mightily amate,
 As fast, as forward erst, now backward to retrate.

Like as the tide, that comes fro th' ocean mayne,
 Flowes up the Shenan with contrarie forse,
 And, over-ruling him in his owne rayne,
 Drives backe the current of his kindly course,
 And makes it seeme to have some other sourse;
 But when the floud is spent, then backe againe
 His borrowed waters forst to re-disbourse,
 He sends the sea his owne with double gaine,
 And tribute eke withall, as to his souveraine.

Thus did the battell varie to and fro,
 With diverse fortune doubtfull to be deemed:
 Now this the better had, now had his fo;
 Then he halfe vanquisht, then the other seemed;
 Yet victors both themselves alwayes esteemed:
 And all the while the disentrayled blood
 Adowne their sides like litle rivers stremed,
 That with the wasting of his vitall flood
 Sir Triamond at last full faint and feeble stood.

But Cambell still more strong and greater grew,
 Ne felt his blood to wast, no powres emperisht,
 Through that rings vertue, that with vigour new,
 Still whenas he enfeebled was, him cherisht,
 And all his wounds and all his bruises guarisht:
 Like as a withered tree, through husbands toyle,
 Is often scene full freshly to have florisht,
 And fruitfull apples to have borne awhile,
 As fresh as when it first was planted in the soyle.

Through which advantage, in his strength he rose
 And smote the other with so wondrous might,
 That through the seame which did his hauberk close
 Into his throate and life it pierced quight,
 That downe he fell as dead in all mens sight:
 Yet dead he was not; yet he sure did die,
 As all men do that lose the living spright:
 So did one soule out of his bodie flie
 Unto her native home from mortall miserie.

But nathölesse whilst all the lookers-on
 Him dead behight, as he to all appeared,
 All unawares he started up anon,
 As one that had out of a dreame bene reard,
 And fresh assayld his foe; who halfe asleard
 Of th' uncouth sight, as he some ghost had seene,
 Stood still amaz'd, holding his idle sweard;
 Till, having often by him stricken beene,
 He forced was to strike and save himselfe from teene.

Yet from thenceforth more warily he fought,
 As one in feare the Stygian gods t' offend,
 Ne followd on so fast, but rather sought
 Himselfe to save, and daunger to defend,
 Then life and labour both in vaine to spend.
 Which Triamond perceiving, weened sure
 He gan to faint toward the battels end,
 And that he should not long on foote endure;
 A signe which did to him the victorie assure.

Whereof full blith eftsoones his mightie hand
 He heav'd on high, in mind with that same blow
 To make an end of all that did withstand:
 Which Cambell seeing come, was nothing slow
 Himselfe to save from that so deadly throw;
 And at that instant reaching forth his sweard
 Close underneath his shield, that scarce did show,
 Stroke him, as he is hand to strike upreard, [appeared.
 In th' arm-pit full, that through both sides the wound

Yet still that direfull stroke kept on his way,
 And, falling heaue on Cambelloes crest,
 Strooke him so hugely that in a swowne he lay,
 And in his head an hideous wound imprest:
 And sure, had it not happily found rest
 Upon the brim of his brode-plated shield,
 It would haue cleft his braine downe to his brest:
 So both at once fell dead upon the field,
 And each to other seemd the victorie to yield.

Which whenas all the lookers-on beheld,
 They weened sure the warre was at an end;
 And iudges rose; and marshals of the field
 Broke up the listes, their armes away to rend;
 And Canacee gan wayle her dearest frend.
 All suddenly they both upstart light,
 The one out of the swound which him did blend,
 The other breathing now another spright;
 And fiercely each assayling gan afresh to fight.

Long while they then continued in that wize,
 As if but then the battell had begonne:
 Strokes, wounds, wards, weapons, all they did despise;
 Ne either ear'd to ward, or perill shonne,
 Desirous both to haue the battell donne;
 Ne either cared life to save or spill,
 Ne which of them did winne, ne which were wonne;
 So wearie both of fighting had their fill,
 That life itselfe seemd loathsome, and long safetie ill.

Whilst thus the case in doubtfull ballance hong,
 Unsure to whether side it would incline,
 And all mens eyes and hearts, which there among
 Stood gazing, filled were with rufull tine
 And secret feare, to see their fatall fine;
 All suddenly they heard a troublous noyes,
 That seemd some perilous tumult to desine,
 Confus'd with womens cries and shouts of boyes,
 Such as the troubled theatres oft times annoyes.

Thereat the champions both stood still a space,
 To weeten what that sudden clamour ment:
 Lo! where they spyde with speedie whirling pace
 One in a charet of straunge furniment
 Towards them driving like a storme out sent.
 The charet decked was in wondrous wize
 With gold and many a gorgeous ornament,
 After the Persian monarks antique guise,
 Such as the maker selfe could best by art devise.

And drawne it was (that wonder is to tell)
 Of two grim lyons, taken from the wood
 In which their powre all others did excell,
 Now made forget their former cruell mood,
 T' obey their riders hest, as seemed good:
 And therein sate a lady passing faire
 And bright, that seemed borne of angels brood;
 And, with her beautie, bountie did compare,
 Whether of them in her should have the greater share.

Thereto she learned was in magicke leare,
 And all the artes that subtile wits discover,
 Having therein bene trained many a yeare,
 And well instructed by the fay her mother,
 That in the same she farre exceld all other:
 Who, understanding by her mightie art
 Of th' evill plight in which her dearest brother
 Now stood, came forth in hast, to take his part,
 And pacifie the strife which causd so deadly smart.

And, as she passed through th' unruly preace
 Of people thronging thicke her to behold,
 Her angrie teame breaking their bonds of peace
 Great heapes of them, like sheepe in narrow fold,
 For hast did over-runne in dust enrould;
 That, thorough rude confusion of the rout,
 Some fearing shriekt, some being harmed hould,
 Some laught for sport, some did for wonder shout, [dout.
 And some, that would seeme wise, their wonder turnd to

In her right hand a rod of peace shee bore,
 About the which two serpents weren wound,
 Entrayled mutually in lovely lore,
 And by the tailes together firmly bound,
 And both were with one olive garland crownd;
 (Like to the rod which Maias sonne doth wield,
 Wherewith the hellish fiends he doth confound;)
 And in her other hand a cup she hild,
 The which was with Nepenthe to the brim upfild.

Nepenthe is a drinck of soverayne grace,
 Devized by the gods for to asswage
 Harts grief, and bitter gall away to chace
 Which stirs up a rash and contentious rage:
 Instead thereof sweet peace and quietage
 It doth establish in the troubled mynd.
 Few men, but such as sober are and sage,
 Are by the gods to drinck thereof assynd;
 But such as drinck, eternall happinesse do fynd.

Such famous men, such worthies of the earth,
 As Iove will have advaunced to the skie,
 And there made gods, though borne of mortall berth,
 For their high merits and great dignitie,
 Are wont, before they may to heaven flie,
 To drinke hereof; whereby all cares forepast
 Are washt away quite from their memorie:
 So did those olde heroës hereof taste,
 Before that they in blisse amongst the gods were plaste.

Much more of price and of more gracious powre
 Is this, then that same water of Ardenne,
 The which Rinaldo drunck in happie howre,
 Described by that famous Tuscane penne:
 For that had might to change the he hearts of men
 Fro love to hate, a change of evill choise:
 But this doth hatred make in love to breune,
 And heavy heart with comfort doth reioyce.
 Who would not to this vertue rather yeeld his voice!

At last arriving by the listes side,
 Shee with her rod did softly smite the raile,
 Which straight flew ope and gave her way to ride.
 Eftsoones out of her coch she gan availe,
 And pacing fairely forth did bid all haile
 First to her brother whom she loved deare,
 That so to see him made her heart to quail;
 And next to Cambell, whose sad ruefull cheare
 Made her to change her hew, and hidden love t' appeare.

They lightly her requit, (for small delight
 They had as then her long to entertaine,)
 And eft them turned both againe to fight:
 Which when she saw, downe on the bloudy plaine
 Herselfe she threw, and teares gan shed amaine;
 Amongst her teares immixing prayers meeke,
 And with her prayers reasons, to restraine
 From blouddy strife; and, blessed peace to seeke,
 By all that unto them was deare did them beseeke.

But whenas all might nought with them prevaile,
 She smote them lightly with her powrefull wand:
 Then suddenly, as if their hearts did faile,
 Their wrathfull blades downe fell out of their hand,
 And they, like men astonisht, still did stand.
 Thus whilst their minds were doubtfully distraught,
 And mighty spirites bound with mightier band,
 Her golden cup to them for drinke she raught,
 Whereof, full glad for thirst, ech drunk an harty draught:

Of which so soone as they once tasted had,
Wonder it is that su-d-den change to see:
Instead of strokes, each other kissed glad,
And lovely haulst, from feare of treason free,
And plighted hands, for ever friends to be.
When all men saw this sudden change of things,
So mortall foes so friendly to agree,
For passing ioy, which so great murraille brings.
They all gan shout aloud, that all the heaven rings.

All which when gentle Canacee beheld,
In hast she from her lofty chaire descended,
To weet what sudden tidings was befel:
Where when she saw that cruell war so ended,
And deadly foes so faithfully affrended,
In lovely wise she gan that lady greet,
Which had so great dismay so well amended;
And, entertaining her with curt'sies meet,
Profest to her true friendship and affection sweet.

Thus when they all accorded goodly were,
The trumpets sounded, and they all arose,
Thence to depart with glee and gladsome chere.
Those warlike champions both together chose
Homeward to march, themselves there to repose:
And wise Cambina, taking by her side
Faيرة Canacee as fresh as morning rose,
Unto her coach remounting, home did ride,
Admir'd of all the people and much glorifide.

Where making ioyous feast their daies they spent
In perfect love, devoide of hatefull strife,
Allide with bands of mutuall couplement;
For Triamond had Canacee to wife,
With whom he ledd a long and happie life;
And Cambel tooke Cambina to his fere,
The which as life were each to other lief.
So all alike did love, and loved were,
That since their days such lovers were not found elswere.

CANTO IV.

Satyrane makes a turneyment
 For love of Florimell:
 Britomart winnes the prize from all,
 And Artegall doth quell.

It often fals, (as here it earst befell.)
 That mortall foes doe turne to faithfull frends,
 And friends protest are chaungd to foemen fell:
 The cause of both of both their minds depends;
 And th' end of both likewise of both their ends:
 For enmitie, that of no ill proceeds
 But of occasion, with th' occasion ends;
 And friendship, which a faint affection breeds
 Without regard of good, dyes like ill-grounded seeds.

That well (me seemes) appeares by that of late
 Twixt Cambell and Sir Triamond befell;
 As als by this; that now a new debate
 Stird up twixt Blandamour and Paridell,
 The which by course befals me here to tell:
 Who, having those two other knights espide
 Marching afore, as ye remember well,
 Sent forth their squire to have them both descride,
 And eke those masked ladies riding them beside.

Who backe returning told, as he had seene,
 That they were doughtie knights of dreaded name;
 And those two ladies their two loves unseene;
 And therefore wisht them without blot or blame
 To let them passe at will, for dread of shame.
 But Blandamour, full of vain-glorious spright,
 And rather stird by his discordfull dame,
 Upon them gladly would have prov'd his might,
 But that he yet was sore of his late lucklesse fight.

Yet nigh approaching he them fowle bespake,
 Disgracing them, himselfe thereby to grace
 As was his wont; so weening way to make
 To ladies love, whereso he came in place.
 And with lewd termes their lovers to deface.
 Whose sharpe provokement them incenst so sore,
 That both were bent t'avenge his usage base,
 And gan their shields addresse themselves afore:
 For evill deedes may better then bad words be bore.

But faire Cambina with perswasions myld
 Did mitigate the fiercenesse of their mode,
 That for the present they were reconeyld.
 And gan to treat of deedes of armes abrode,
 And strange adventures, all the way they rode:
 Amongst the which they told, as then befell,
 Of that great turney which was blaz'd brode,
 For that rich girdle of faire Florimell,
 The prize of her which did in beautie most excell.

To which folke-mote they all with one consent,
 Sith each of them his ladie had him by.
 Whose beautie each of them thought excellent,
 Agreed to travell, and their fortunes try.
 So as they passed forth, they did espy
 One in bright armes with ready speare in rest,
 That toward them his course seem'd to apply;
 Gainst whom Sir Paridell himselfe addrest,
 Him weening, ere he nigh approacht, to have repress.

Which th' other seeing gan his course relent,
 And vaunted speare eftsoones to disadvaunce,
 As if he naught but peace and pleasure ment,
 Now false into their fellowship by chance;
 Whereat they shewed curteous countenance.
 So as he rode with them accompanide,
 His roving eie did on the lady glaunce
 Which Blandamour had riding by his side:
 Whom sure he weend that he somewhere tofore had side.

It was to weete that snowy Florimell,
 Which Ferrau late from Braggadochio wonne;
 Whom he now seeing, her remembered well,
 How having rest her from the witches sonne,
 He soone her lost: wherefore he now begunne
 To challenge her anew, as his owne prize,
 Whom formerly he had in battell wonne,
 And proffer made by force her to reprice:
 Which scornfull offer Blandamour gan soone desprize;

And said; "Sir Knight, sith ye this lady clame,
 Whom he that hath were loth to lose so light,
 (For so to lose a lady were great shame,)
 Yee shall her winne, as I have done, in fight:
 And lo! shee shall be placed here in sight
 Together with this hag beside her set,
 That whoso winnes her may her have by right;
 But he shall have the hag that is ybet,
 And with her alwaies ride, till he another get."

That offer pleased all the company:
 So Florimell with Atè forth was brought,
 At which they all gan laugh full merrily:
 But Braggadochio said, he never thought
 For such an hag, that seemed worst then nought,
 His person to emperill so in fight:
 But if to match that lady they had sought
 Another like, that were like faire and bright,
 His life he then would spend to iustifie his right.

At which his vaine excuse they all gan smile
 As scorning his unmanly cowardize:
 And Florimell him slowly gan revile,
 That for her sake refus'd to enterprize
 The battell, offred in so knightly wize;
 And Atè eke provokt him privily
 With love of her, and shame of much mesprize.
 But naught he car'd for friend or enemy;
 For in base mind nor friendship dwels nor enmity.

But Cambell thus did shut up all in iest;
 "Brave knights and ladies, certes ye do wrong
 To stirre up strife, when most us needeth rest,
 That we may us reserve both fresh and strong
 Against the turneiment which is not long.
 When whoso list to fight may fight his fill:
 Till then your challenges ye may prolong;
 And then it shall be tried, if ye will,
 Whether shall have the hag, or hold the lady still."

They all agreed; so, turning all to game
 And pleasaunt bord, they past forth on their way;
 And all that while, whereso they rode or came;
 That masked mock-knight was their sport and play.
 Till that at length upon th' appointed day
 Unto the place of turneyment they came;
 Where they before them found in fresh aray
 Manie a brave knight and manie a daintie dame
 Assembled for to get the honour of that game.

There this faire crew arriving did divide
 Themselves asunder: Blandamour with those
 Of his on th' one, the rest on th' other side.
 But boastful Braggadochio rather chose,
 For glorie vaine, their fellowship to lose,
 That men on him the more might gaze alone.
 The rest themselves in troupes did else dispose,
 Like as it seemed best to every one;
 The knights in couples marcht with ladies linckt attone.

Then first of all forth came Sir Satyrane,
Bearing that precious relieke in an arke
Of gold, that bad eyes might it not prophane;
Which drawing softly forth out of the darke,
He open shewd, that all men it mote marke;
A gorgeous girdle, curiously embost
With pearle and precious stone, worth many a marke;
Yet did the workmanship farre passe the cost:
It was the same which lately Florimell had lost.

The same alofte he hung in open vew,
To be the prize of beautie and of might;
The which, eftsóones discovered, to it drew
The eyes of all, allur'd with close delight,
And hearts quite robbed with so glorious sight,
That all men threw out vowes and wishes vaine.
Thrise happie ladie, and thrise happie knight,
Them seemd that could so goodly riches gaine,
So worthie of the perill, worthy of the paine.

Then tooke the bold Sir Satyrane in hand
An huge great speare, such as he wout to wield,
And, vauncing forth from all the other band
Of knights, addrest his maiden-headed shield,
Shewing himselfe all ready for the field:
Gainst whom there singled from the other side
A Painim knight that well in armes was skil'd,
And had in many a battell oft bene tride,
Hight Bruncheval the bold, who fiersly forth did ride.

So furiously they both together met,
That neither could the others force sustaine:
As two fierce buls, that strive the rule to get
Of all the heard, meete with so hideous maine,
That both rebutted tumble on the plaine;
So these two champions to the ground were feld;
Where in a maze they both did long remaine,
And in their hands their idle troncheons held,
Which neither able were to wag, or once to weld.

Which when the noble Ferramont espide,
He pricked forth in ayd of Satyrane;
And him against Sir Blandamour did ride
With all the strength and stifnesse that he can:
But the more strong and stiffely that he ran,
So much more sorely to the ground he fell,
That on an heape were tumbled horse and man:
Unto whose rescue forth rode Paridell;
But him likewise with that same speare he eke did quell.

Which Braggadochio seeing had no will
 To hasten greatly to his parties ayd,
 Albee his turne were next, but stood there still,
 As one that seemed doubtfull or dismayd:
 But Triamond, halfe wroth to see him staid,
 Sternly step forth and raught away his speare,
 With which so sore he Ferramont assaid,
 That horse and man to ground he quite did beare.
 That neither could in hast themselves again upreare.

Which to avenge Sir Devon him did dight,
 But with no better fortune than the rest;
 For him likewise he quickly downe did smight:
 And after him Sir Douglas him addrest;
 And after him Sir Palmord forth prest;
 But none of them against his strokes could stand;
 But, all the more, the more his praise increst:
 For either they were left upon the land,
 Or went away sore wounded of his haplesse hand.

And now by this Sir Satyrane abraid
 Out of the swowne, in which too long he lay;
 And looking round about, like one dismaid,
 Whenas he saw the mercilesse affray
 Which doughty Triamond had wrought that day
 Unto the noble knights of Maidenhead,
 His mighty heart did almost rend in tway
 For very gall, that rather wholly dead
 Himselfe he wisht have beene then in so bad a stead.

Eftsoones he gan to gather up around
 His weapons which lay scattered all abrode,
 And, as it fell, his steed he ready found:
 On whom remounting fiercely forth he rode,
 Like sparke of fire that from the anvile glode,
 There where he saw the valiant Triamond
 Chasing, and laying on them heavy lode,
 That none his force were able to withstond;
 So dreadfull were his strokes, so deadly was his hond.

With that, at him his beamlike speare he aimed,
 And thereto all his power and might applide:
 The wicked steele for mischiefe first ordained
 And having now misfortune got for guide,
 Staid not till it arrived in his side,
 And therein made a very griesly wound,
 That streames of blood his armour all bedide.
 Much was he daunted with that direfull stownd,
 That scarce he him upheld from falling in a sound.

Yet, as he might, himselfe he soft withdrew
 Out of the field, that none perceiv'd it plaine;
 Then gan the part of chalengers anew
 To range the field, and victorlike to raine,
 That none against them battell durst maintaine.
 By that the gloomy evening on them fell,
 That forced them from fighting to refraine,
 And trumpets sound to cease did them compell:
 So Satyrane that day was iudg'd to beare the bell.

The morrow next the turney gan anew;
 And with the first the hardy Satyrane
 Appear'd in place, with all his noble crew:
 On th' other side full many a warlike swaine
 Assembled were, that glorious prize to gaine.
 But mongst them all was not Sir Triamond;
 Unable he new battell to darraine,
 Through grievance of his late received wound,
 That doubly did him grieve when so himselfe he found.

Which Cambell seeing, though he could not salve,
 Ne done undoe, yet, for to salve his name
 And purchase honour in his friends behalve,
 This goodly counterfesaunce he did frame:
 The shield and armes, well knowne to be the same
 Which Triamond had worne, unawares to wight
 And to his friend unwist, for doubt of blame
 If he misdid, he on himselfe did dight,
 That none could him discern; and so went forth to fight.

There Satyrane lord of the field he found,
 Triumphant in great ioy and iolity;
 Gainst whom none able was to stand on ground;
 That much he gan his glorie to envy,
 And cast t' avenge his friends indignity:
 A mightie speare eftsounes at him he bent;
 Who, seeing him come on so furiously,
 Met him mid-way with equall hardiment,
 That forcibly to ground they both together went.

They up againe themselves can lightly reare,
 And to their tryed swords themselves betake;
 With which they wrought such wondrous marvels there
 That all the rest it did amazed make,
 Ne any dar'd their perill to partake;
 Now cussing close, now chasing to and fro,
 Now hurtling round advantage for to take:
 As two wild boares together grappling go,
 Chaufing and foming choler each against his fo.

So as they court, and turneyd here and there,
 It chaunst Sir Satyrane his steed at last,
 Whether through foundring or through sodein feare,
 To stumble, that his rider nigh he cast;
 Which vantage Cambell did pursue so fast,
 That, ere himselfe he had recovered well,
 So sore he sowst him on the compast creast,
 That forced him to leave his lofty sell,
 And rudely tumbling downe under his horse-fecte fell.

Lightly Cambello leapt downe from his steed
 For to have rent his shield and armes away,
 That whylome wont to be the victors meed;
 When all unwares he felt an hideous sway
 Of many swords that lode on him did lay:
 An hundred knights had him enclosed round,
 To rescue Satyrane out of his pray;
 All which at once huge strokes on him did pound,
 In hope to take him prisoner, where he stood on ground.

He with their multitude was nought dismayd
 But with stout courage turnd upon them all,
 And with his brond-iron round about him layd;
 Of which he dealt large almes, as did befall:
 Like as a lion, that by chaunce doth fall
 Into the hunters toile, doth rage and rore,
 In royall heart disdainng to be thrall:
 But all in vaine: for what might one do more?
 They have him taken captive, though it grieve him sore.

Whereof when newes to Triamond was brought
 Thereas he lay, his wound he soone forgot,
 And starting up streight for his armour sought:
 In vaine he sought; for there he found it not;
 Cambello it away before had got:
 Cambelloes armes therefore he on him threw,
 And lightly issewd forth to take his lot.
 There he in troupe found all that warlike crew,
 Leading his friend away, full sorie to his vew.

Into the thickest of that knightly preasse
 He thrust, and smote downe all that was betweene
 Caried with fervent zeale; ne did he cease,
 Till that he came where he had Cambell seene
 Like captive thral two other knights atweene:
 There he amongst them cruell havocke makes,
 That they, which lead him, soone enforced beene
 To let him loose to save their proper stakes;
 Who, being freed, from one a weapon fiercely takes!

With that he drives at them with dreadfull might,
 Both in remembrance of his friends late harme,
 And in revengement of his owne despight :
 So both together give a new allarme,
 As if but now the battell waxed warme.
 As when two greedy wolves doe breake by force
 Into an heard, farre from the husband farme,
 They spoile and ravine without all remorse :
 So did these two through all the field their foes enforce.

Fiercely they followd on their bolde emprise,
 Till trumpets sound did warne them all to rest :
 Then all with one consent did yeeld the prize
 To Triamond and Cambell as the best :
 But Triamond to Cambell it relest,
 And Cambell it to Triamond transferd ;
 Each labouring t' advance the others gest,
 And make his praise before his owne preferd :
 So that the doome was to another day differd.

The last day came ; when all those knightes againe
 Assembled were their deedes of armes to shew.
 Full many deedes that day were showed plaine :
 But Satyrane, bove all the other crew,
 His wondrous worth declar'd in all mens view ;
 For from the first he to the last endured :
 And though some while Fortune from him withdrew,
 Yet evermore his honour he recured,
 And with unwearied powre his party still assured.

Ne was there knight that ever thought of armes,
 But that his utmost prowesse there made knowne :
 That, by their many wounds and carelesse harmes,
 By shivered speares and swords all under strowen,
 By scattered shields, was easie to be showne.
 There might ye see loose steeds at randon runne,
 Whose lucklesse riders late were overthrowen ;
 And squiers make hast to helpe their lords fordonne :
 But still the knights of Maidenhead the better wonne.

Till that there entred on the other side
 A straunger knight, from whence no man could reed,
 In quyet disguise, full hard to be descrie :
 For all his armour was like salvage weed
 With woody mosse bedight, and all his steed
 With oaken leaves attrapt, that seemed fit
 For salvage wight, and thereto well agreed
 His word, which on his ragged shield was writ,
Salvagesse sans finesse, shewing secret wit.

He, at his first incomming, charg'd his spere
 At him that first appeared in his sight;
 That was to weet the stout Sir Sangliere,
 Who well was knowen to be a valiant knight,
 Approved oft in many a perlous fight:
 Him at the first encounter downe he smote,
 And over-bore beyond his crouper quight;
 And after him another knight, that hote
 Sir Brianor, so sore, that none him life behote.

Then, ere his hand he reard, he overthrew
 Seven knights one after other as they came:
 And, when his speare was brust, his sword he drew
 The instrument of wrath, and with the same
 Far'd like a lyon in his bloodie game,
 Hewing and slashing shields and helmets bright,
 And beating downe whatever nigh him came,
 That every one gan shun his dreadfull sight
 No lesse than death itselfe, in daungerous affright.

Much wondred all men what or whence he came,
 That did amongst the troupes so tyrannize;
 And each of other gan inquire his name:
 But, when they could not learn it by no wize,
 Most answerable to his wyld disguise
 It seemed, him to terme the salvage knight:
 But certes his right name was otherwise,
 Though knowne to few that Arthegall he hight,
 The doughtiest knight that liv'd that day, and most of might.

Thus was Sir Satyrane with all his band
 By his sole manhood and atchievement stout
 Dismay'd, that none of them in field durst stand,
 But beaten were and chased all about.
 So he continued all that day throughout,
 Till evening that the sunne gan downward bend:
 Then rushed forth out of the thickest rout
 A straunger knight, that did his glorie shend:
 So nought may be esteemed happie till the end!

He at his entrance charg'd his powrefull speare
 At Arthegall, in midstest of his pryde,
 And therewith smote him on his umbriere
 So sore, that tomling backe he downe did slyde
 Over his horses taile above a stryde;
 Whence litle lust he had to rise againe.
 Which Cambell seeing, much the same envyde,
 And ran at him with all his might and maine;
 But shortly was likewise seene lying on the plaine

Whereat full inly wroth was Triamond,
 And cast t' avenge the shame doon to his freend:
 But by his friend himselfe eke soone he fond
 In no lesse neede of helpe then him he weend.
 All which when Blandamour from end to end
 Beheld, he woxe therewith displeased sore,
 And thought in mind it shortly to amend:
 His speare he feutred, and at him it bore;
 But with no better fortune then the rest afore.

Full many others at him likewise ran;
 But all of them likewise dismounted were:
 Ne certes wonder; for no powre of man
 Could bide the force of that enchaunted speare,
 The which this famous Britomart did beare;
 With which she wondrous deeds of arms atchieved,
 And overthrew whatever came her neare,
 That all those stranger knights full sore agrieved,
 And that late weaker band of challengers relieved.

Like as in sommers day when raging heat
 Doth burne the earth and boyled rivers drie,
 That all brute beasts forst to refraine fro meat
 Doe hunt for shade where shrowded they may lie,
 And, missing it, faine from themselves to flie;
 All travellers tormented are with paine:
 A watry cloud doth overcast the skie,
 And poureth forth a sudden shoure of raine,
 That all the wretched world recomforteth againe:

So did the warlike Britomart restore
 The prize to knights of Maydenhead that day,
 Which else was like to have bene lost, and bore
 The prayse of prowesse from them all away.
 Then shrilling trumpets loudly gan to bray,
 And bad them leave their labours and long toyle
 To ioyous feast and other gentle play,
 Where beauties prize should win that pretious spoyle,
 Where I with sound of trompe will also rest awhile.

CANTO V.

The ladies for the girdle strive
 Of famous Florimell:
 Scudamour, comming to Careas house
 Doth sleepe from him expel.

It hath bene through all ages ever seene,
 That with the praise of armes and chevalrie
 The prize of beautie still hath ioyned beene;
 And that for reasons speciall privitee;
 For either doth on other much relie:
 For he me seemes most fit the faire to serve,
 That can her best defend from villenie;
 And she most fit his service doth deserve,
 That fairest is, and from her faith will never swerve.

So fitly now here commeth next in place,
 After the prooffe of prowesse ended well,
 The controverse of beauties soveraine grace;
 In which, to her that doth the most excell,
 Shall fall the girdle of faire Florimell:
 That many wish to win for glorie vaine,
 And not for vertuous use, which some doe tell
 That glorious belt did in itselfe containe,
 Which ladies ought to love, and seeke for to obtaine.

That girdle gave the vertue of chast love
 And wivhood true to all that did it beare;
 But whosoever contrarie doth prove,
 Might not the same about her middle weare
 But it would loose, or else asunder teare.
 Whilome it was (as Faeries wont report)
 Dame Venus girdle, by her 'steemed deare
 What time she usd to live in wively sort,
 But layd aside whenso she usd her looser sport.

Her husband Vulcan whylome for her sake,
 When first he loved her with heart entire,
 This pretious ornament, they say, did make,
 And wrought in Lemnos with unquenched fire:
 And afterwards did for her loves first hire
 Give it to her, for ever to remaine,
 Therewith to bind lascivious desire,
 And loose affections streightly to restraine;
 Which vertue it for ever after did retaine.

The same one day, when she herselfe disposd
 To visite her beloved paramoure,
 The god of warre, she from her middle loosd,
 And left behind her in her secret bowre
 On Acidalian mount, where many an howre
 She with the pleasant graces wont to play.
 There Florimell in her first ages flowre
 Was fostered by those graces, (as they say.)
 And brought with her from thence that goodly belt away.

That goodly belt was cestus hight by name,
 And as her life by her esteemed deare:
 No wonder then, if that to winne the same
 So many ladies sought, as shall appeare;
 For pearelesse she was thought that it did beare.
 And now by this their feast all being ended,
 The iudges, which thereto selected were,
 Into the Martian field adowne descended,
 To deeme this doubtfull case, for which they all contended.

But first was question made, which of those knights
 That lately turneyd had the wager wonne:
 There was it iudged, by whose worthie wights,
 That Satyrane the first day best had donne:
 For he last ended, having first begonne.
 The second was to Triamond belight,
 For that he say'd the victour from sordonne:
 For Cambell victour was, in all mens sight,
 Till by mishap he in his foemens hand did light.

The third dayes prize unto that straunger knight,
 Whom all men term'd knight of the hebene speare,
 To Britomart was given by good right;
 For that with puissaunt stroke she downe did beare
 The salvage knight that victour was whileare,
 And all the rest which had the best afore,
 And, to the last, unconquer'd did appeare;
 For last is deemed best: to her therefore
 The fayrest ladie was aiudged for paramore.

But thereat greatly grudged Arthegall,
 And much repynd, that both of victors meede
 And eke of honour she did him forestall:
 Yet mote he not withstand what was decreede;
 But inly thought of that despightfull deede
 Fit time t'awaite avenged for to bee.
 This being ended thus, and all agreed,
 Then next ensew'd the paragon to see
 Of beauties praise, and yeeld the fayrest her due fee.

Then first Cambello brought into their view
 His faire Cambina covered with a veale;
 Which being once withdrawne, most perfect hew
 And passing beautie did eftsoones reveale,
 That able was weake harts away to steale.
 Next did Sir Triamond unto their sight
 The face of his deare Canacee unheale;
 Whose beauties beame eftsoones did shine so bright,
 That daz'd the eyes of all, as with exceeding light

And after her did Paridell produce
 His false Duessa, that she might be seene;
 Who with her forged beautie did seduce
 The hearts of some that fairest her did weene;
 As diverse wits affected divers beene.
 Then did Sir Ferramont unto them shew
 His Lucida, that was full faire and sheene;
 And after these an hundred ladies moe
 Appear'd in place, tho which each other did outgoe.

All which whoso dare thinke for to enchace,
 Him needeth sure a golden pen I weene
 To tell the feature of each goodly face.
 For, since the day that they created beene,
 So many heavenly faces were not seene
 Assembled in one place: ne he that thought
 For Chian folke to pourtraict beauties queene,
 By view of all the fairest to him brought,
 So many faire did see, as here he might have sought.

At last, the most redoubted Britonesse
 Her lovely Amoret did open shew;
 Whose face, discovered, plainly did expresse
 The heavenly pourtraict of bright angels hew.
 Well weened all, which her that time did vew,
 That she should surely beare the bell away;
 Till Blandamour, who thought he had the trew
 And very Florimell, did her display:
 The sight of whom once seene did all the rest dismay.

For all afore that seemed fayre and bright,
 Now base and contemptible did appeare,
 Compar'd to her that shone as Phebes light
 Amongst the lesser starres in evening cleare.
 All that her saw with wonder ravisht weare,
 And weend no mortall creature she should bee,
 But some celestiall shape that flesh did beare:
 Yet all were glad there Florimell to see;
 Yet thought that Florimell was not so faire as shee.

As guilefull goldsmith that by secret skill
 With golden foyle doth finely over-spred
 Some baser metall, which commend he will
 Unto the vulgar for good gold insted,
 He much more goodly glosse thereon doth shed
 To hide his falshood, then if it were trew:
 So hard this idole was to be ared,
 That Florimell herselfe in all mens vew
 She seem'd to passe. So forged things do fairest shew.

Then was that golden belt by doome of all
 Graunted to her, as to the fayrest dame,
 Which being brought, about her middle small
 They thought to gird, as best it her became;
 But by no meanes they could it thereto frame:
 For, ever as they fastned it, it loos'd
 And fell away, as feeling secret blame.
 Full oft about her wast she it enclos'd;
 And it as oft was from about her wast disclos'd:

That all men wondred at the uncouth sight,
 And each one thought, as to their fancies came:
 But she herselfe did thinke it doen for spight,
 And touched was with secret wrath and shame
 Therewith, as thing deviz'd her to defame.
 Then many other ladies likewise tride
 About their tender loynes to knit the same;
 But it would not on none of them abide,
 But when they thought it fast, eftsoones it was untide.

Which when that scornfull squire of dames did vew
 He lowdly gan to laugh, and thus to iest;
 "Alas for pittie that so faire a crew,
 As like cannot be seene from east to west,
 Cannot find one this girdle to invest!
 Fie on the man that did it first invent,
 To shame us all with this, ungirt unblest!
 Let never ladie to his love assent,
 That hath this day so many so unmanly shent."

Thereat all knights gan laugh, and ladies lowre:
 Till that at last the gentle Amoret
 Likewise assayd to prove that girdles powre;
 And, having it about her middle set,
 Did find it fit withouten breach or let;
 Whereat the rest gan greatly to envie:
 But Florimell exceedingly did fret,
 And, snatching from her hand halfe angrily
 The belt againe, about her bodie gan it tie:

Yet nathëmore would it her bodie fit;
 Yet nathëlesse to her, as her dew right,
 It yielded was by them that iudged it;
 And she herselfe adiudged to the knight
 That bore the hebene speare, as wonne in fight.
 But Britomart would not thereto assent,
 Ne her owne Amoret forgoe so light
 For that strange dame, whose beauties wonderment
 She lesse esteem'd then th' others vertuous government.

Whom when the rest did see her to refuse,
 They were full glad, in hope themselves to get her:
 Yet at her choice they all did greatly muse.
 But, after that, the iudges did arret her
 Unto the second best that lov'd her better;
 That was the salvage knight: but he was gone
 In great displeasure, that he could not get her.
 Then was she iudged Triamond his one;
 But Triamond lov'd Canacee and other none.

Tho unto Satyran she was adiudged,
 Who was right glad to gaine so goodly meed:
 But Blandamour thereat full greatly grudged,
 And little prays'd his labours evill speed,
 That for to winne the saddle lost the steed.
 Ne lesse thereat did Paridell complaine,
 And thought t' appeale, from that which was decreed,
 To single combat with Sir Satyrane:
 Thereto him Atë stird, new discord to maintaine.

And eke, with these, full many other knights
 She through her wicked working did incense
 Her to demaund and chalenge as their rights,
 Deserved for their perils recompense.
 Amongst the rest, with boastfull vaine pretense
 Stept Braggadochio forth, and as his thrall
 Her claym'd, by him in battell wonne long sens:
 Whereto herselfe he did to witnesse call;
 Who, being askt, accordingly confessed all.

Thereat exceeding wroth was Satyran;
 And wroth with Satyran was Blandamour;
 And wroth with Blandamour was Erivan;
 And at them both Sir Paridell did loure.
 So all tog-ther stird up stri ull stoure,
 And readie were new battell to darraigne:
 Each one profest to be her paramoure,
 And vow'd with speare and shield it to maintaine;
 Ne iudges powre, no reasons rule, mote them restraine.

Which troublous stirre when Satyrane aviz'd
 He gan to cast how to appease the same,
 And, to accord them all, this meanes deviz'd:
 First in the midst to set that fayrest dame,
 To whom each one his chalenge should disclame,
 And he himselfe his right would eke release:
 Then, looke to whom she voluntarie came.
 He should without disturban e her possesse:
Sweete is the love that comes alone with willingnesse.

They all agreed; and then that snowy mayd
 Was in the middest plast among them all:
 All on her gazing wisht, and vowd, and prayd,
 And to the queene of beautie close did call,
 That she unto their portion might befall.
 Then when she long had lookt upon each one,
 As though she wished to have pleasd them all,
 At last to Braggadochio selfe alone
 She came of her accord, in spight of all his fone.

Which when they all beheld, they chafte, and rag'd,
 And woxe nigh mad for very harts despight,
 That from revenge their willes they scarce asswag'd;
 Some thought from him her to have reft by might;
 Some proffer made with him for her to fight:
 But he nought ear'd for all that they could say;
 For he their words as wind esteemed light:
 Yet not fit place he thought it there to stay,
 But secretly from thence that night her bore away.

They which remaynd, so soone as they perceiv'd
 That she was gone, depart d thence with speed,
 And follow'd them, in mind her to have reav'd
 From wight unworthie of so noble meed.
 In which poursuit how each one did succcede,
 Shall else be told in order, as it fell.
 But now of Britomart it here doth neede
 The hard adventures and strange haps to tell;
 Since with the rest she went not after Florimell.

For soone as she them saw to discord set,
 Her list no longer in that place abide;
 But, taking with her lovely Amoret,
 Upon her first adventure forth did ride,
 To seeke her lov'd, making blind love her guide.
 Unluckie mayd, to seeke her enemye!
 Unluckie mayd, to seeke him farre and wide,
 Whom, when he was unto herselfe most nie,
 She through his late disguizement could him not deserie!

So much the more her grieffe, the more her toyle:
 Yet neither toyle nor grieffe she once did spare,
 In seeking him that should her paine assoyle;
 Whereto great comfort in her sad misfure
 Was Amoret, companion of her care:
 Who likewise sought her lover long miswent,
 The gentle Scudamour, whose heart whileare
 That stryfull hag with gealous discontent
 Had fild, that he to fell reveng was fully bent;

Bent to revenge on blamelesse Britomart
 The crime which cursed Atè kindled earst,
 The which like thornes did pricke his gealous hart,
 And through his soule like poysned arrow perst,
 That by no reason it might be reverst,
 For ought that Glaucè could or doe or say:
 For, aye the more that she the same reherst,
 The more it gauld and griev'd him night and day,
 That nought but dre revenge his anger mote de fray.

So as they travelled, the drouping night,
 Covered with cloudie -torme and bitter showre,
 That dreadfull seem'd to every living wight,
 Upon them fell, before her timely howre;
 That forced them to seeke some covert bowre,
 Where they might hide their heads in quiet rest,
 And shrowd their persons from that stormie stowre.
 Not farre away, not meete for any guest,
 They spide a little cottage, like some poore mans nest;

Under a steepe hilles side it placed was,
 There where the mouldred earth had cav'd the banke;
 And fast beside a little brooke did pas
 Of muddie water, that like puddle stanke,
 By which few crooked sallowes grew in ranke:
 Whereto approaching nigh, they heard the sound
 Of many yron hammers beating ranke,
 And answering their wearie turnes around,
 That seemed some blacksmith dwelt in that desert ground.

There entring in, they found the goodman selfe
 Full busily unto his worke ybent;
 Who was to weet a wretched wearish elfe,
 With hollow eyes and rawbone cheekes forspent.
 As if he had in prison long bene pent:
 Full blacke and griesly did his face appeare,
 Besmeard with smoke that nigh his eye-sight blent;
 With rugged beard, and hoarie shagged heare,
 The which he never wont to combe, or comely sheare.

Rude was his garment, and to rags all rent,
 Ne better had he, ne far better cared :
 With blistred hands emongst the cinders brent,
 And fingers filthie with long nayles unpared,
 Right fit to rend the food on which he fared.
 His name was Care ; a blacksmith by his trade,
 That neither day nor night from working spared,
 But to small purpose yron wedges made ;
 Those be unquiet thoughts that carefull minds invade.

In which his worke he had sixe servants prest,
 About the andvile standing evermore
 With huge great hammers, that did never rest
 From heaping stroakes which thereon soused sore :
 All sixe strong groomes, but one then other more ;
 For by degrees they all were disagreed ;
 So likewise did the hammers which they bore
 Like belles in greatnesse orderly succeed,
 That he, which was the last, the first did farre exceede.

He like a monstrous gyant seem'd in sight,
 Farre passing Bronteus or Pyracmon great,
 The which in Lipari doe day and night
 Frame thunderbolts for Ioves avengefull threate.
 So dreadfully he did the andvile beat,
 That seem'd to dust he shortly would it drive :
 So huge his hammer, and so fierce his heat,
 That seem'd a rocke of diamond it could rive
 And rend asunder quite, if he thereto list strive.

Sir Scudamour there entring ; much admired
 The manner of their worke and wearie paine :
 And, having long beheld, at last enquired
 The cause and end thereof ; but all in vaine ;
 For they for nought would from their worke refraine,
 Ne let his speeces come unto their care.
 And eke the breathfull bellows blew amaine,
 Like to the northren winde, that none could heare ;
 Those pensifenesse did more ; and sighes the bellows weare.

Which when that warriour saw, he said no more,
 But in his armour layd him downe to rest :
 To rest he layd him downe upon the flore,
 (Whylome for ventrous knights the bedding best,)
 And thought his wearie limbs to have redrest.
 And that old aged dame, his faithfull squire,
 Her feeble ioynts layd eke adowne to rest ;
 That needed much her weake age to desire,
 After so long a travell which them both did tire.

There lay Sir Scudamour long while expecting
 When gentle sleepe his heauie eyes would close ;
 Oft chaunging sides, and oft new place electing,
 Where better seem'd he mote himselfe repose ;
 And oft in wrath he thence againe uprose ;
 And oft in wrath he layd him downe againe.
 But, wheresoere he did himselfe dispose,
 He by no meanes could wished ease obtaine :
 So every place seem'd painefull, and ech changing vaine.

And evermore, when he to sleepe did thinke,
 The hammers sound his senses did molest ;
 And evermore, when he began to winke,
 The bellowes noyse disturb'd his quiet rest,
 Ne suffred sleepe to settle in his brest.
 And all the night the dogs did barke and howle
 About the house, at sent of stranger guest :
 And now the crowing cocke, and now the owle
 Lowde shriking, him afflicted to the very sowle.

And, if by fortune any litle nap
 Upon his heauie eye-lids chaunst to fall,
 Eftsoones one of those villeins him did rap
 Upon his head-peece with his yron mall ;
 That he was soone awaked therewithall,
 And lightly started up as one affrayd,
 Or as if one him suddenly did call :
 So oftentimes he out of sleepe abrayd,
 And then lay musing long on that him ill apayd.

So long he muzed, and so long he lay,
 That at the last, his wearie sprite opprest
 With fleshly weaknesse, which no creature may
 Long time resist, gave place to kindly rest,
 That all his senses did full soone arrest :
 Yet, in his soundest sleepe, his dayly feare
 His ydle braine gan busily molest,
 And made him dreame those two disloyall were :
 The things, that day most minds, at night doe most appeare.

With that the wicked carle, the maister smith,
 A paire of red-whot yron tongs did take
 Out of the burning cinders. and therewith
 Under his side him nipt ; that, forst to wake,
 He felt his hart for very paine to quake,
 And started up avenged for to be
 On him the which his quiet slomber brake :
 Yet, looking round about him, none could see :
 Yet did the smart remaine, though he himselfe did flee.

In such disquiet and hart-fretting payne
 He all that night, that too long night, did passe.
 And now the day out of the ocean mayne
 Began to peepe above this earthly masse,
 With pearly dew sprinkling the morning grasse:
 Then up he rose like heaerie lumpe of lead,
 That in his face, as in a looking glasse,
 The signes of anguish one mote plainly read,
 And ghesse the man to be dismayd with gealous dread.

Unto his lofty steede he clombe anone,
 And forth upon his former voiage fared,
 And with him eke that aged squire attone;
 Who, whatsoever perill was prepared,
 Both equall paines and equall perill shared:
 The end whereof and daungerous event
 Shall for another canticle be spared:
 But here my wearie teeme, nigh over-spent,
 Shall breath itselfe awhile after so long a went.

CANTO VI.

Both Scudamour and Arthegall
 Doe fight with Britomart:
 He sees her face; doth fall in love,
 And soone from her depart.

WHAT equall torment to the grieve of mind
 And pyning anguish hid in gentle hart,
 That inly feeds itselfe with thoughts unkind,
 And nourisheth her owne consuming smart!
 What medicine can any leaches art
 Yeeld such a sore, that doth her grievance hide,
 And will to none her maladie impart!
 Such was the wound that Scudamour did gride;
 For which Dan Phebus selfe cannot a salve provide.

Who having left that restlesse house of Care,
 The next day, as he on his way did ride,
 Full of meláncolie and sad misfare
 Through misconceipt, all unawares espide
 An armed knight under a forrest side
 Sitting in shade beside his grazing steede;
 Who, soone as them approaching he descride,
 Gan towards them to pricke with eger speede,
 That seem'd he was full bent to some mischievous deede.

Which Scudamour perceiving forth issewed
 To have rencountred him in equall race;
 But, soone as th' other nigh approaching vewed
 The armes he bore, his speare he gan abase
 And voide his course; at which so suddain case
 He wondred much: but th' other thus gan say;
 "Ah! gentle Scudamour, unto your grace
 I me submit, and you of pardon pray,
 That almost had against you trespassed this day."

Whereto thus Scudamour; "Small harme it were
 For any knight upon a ventrous knight
 Without displeasance for to prove his spere.
 But reade you, sir, sith ye my name have hight,
 What is your owne, that I mote you requite."
 "Certes," sayd he, "ye mote as now excuse
 Me from discovering you my name aright:
 For time yet serves that I the same refuse;
 But call ye me the salvage knight, as others use."

"Then this, sir salvage knight," quoth he, "areede;
 Or doe you here within this forrest wonne,
 That seemeth well to answeere to your weede,
 Or have ye it for some occasion donne?
 That rather seemes, sith knowen armes ye shonne."
 "This other day," sayd he, "a stranger knight
 Shame and dishonour hath unto me donne;
 On whom I waite to wreake that foule despight,
 Whenever he this way shall passe by day or night."

"Shame be his meede," quoth he, "that meaneth shame.
 But what is he by whom ye shamed were?"
 "A stranger knight," sayd he, "unknowne by name,
 But knowne by fame, and by an hebene speare
 With which he all that met him downe did beare.
 He, in an open turney lately held,
 Fro me the honour of that game did reare;
 And having me, all wearie earst, downe feld,
 The fayrest ladie reft, and ever since withheld."

When Scudamour heard mention of that speare,
 He wist right well that it was Britomart,
 The which from him his fairest love did beare.
 Tho gan he swell in every inner part
 For fell despight, and gnaw his gealous hart,
 That thus he sharply sayd; "Now by my head,
 Yet is not this the first unknighly part,
 Which that same knight, whom by his launce I read,
 Hath doen to noble knights, that many makes him dread:

"For lately he my love hath fro me rest,
 And eke defiled with foule villanie
 The sacred pledge which in his faith was lest,
 In shame of knighthood and fidelitie;
 The which ere long full deare he shall abie:
 And if to that avenge by you decreed
 This hand may helpe, or succour ought supplie,
 It shall not fayle whenso ye shall it need."
 So both to wreake their wrathes on Britomart agreed.

Whiles thus they communed, lo! farre away
 A knight soft ryding towards them they spyde,
 Attyr'd in forraine armes and straunge aray:
 Whom when they nigh approcht, they plaine descryde
 To be the same for whom they did abyde.
 Sayd then Sir Scudamour, "Sir Salvage Knight,
 Let me this crave, sith first I was detyde,
 That first I may that wrong to him requite:
 And, if I hap to fayle, you shall recure my right."

Which being yeilded, he his threatfull speare
 Gan fewter, and against her fiercely ran,
 Who soone as she him saw approching neare
 With so fell rage, herselfe she lightly gan
 To dight, to welcome him well as she can;
 But entertaind him in so rude a wise,
 That to the ground she smote both horse and man;
 Whence neither greatly hasted to arise,
 But on their common harmes together did devise.

But Artegall, beholding his mischaunce,
 New matter added to his former fire;
 And, eft aventring his steele-headed launce,
 Against her rode, full of despiteous ire,
 That nought but spoyle and vengeance did require:
 But to himselfe his felonous intent
 Returning disappointed his desire,
 Whiles unawares his saddle he forwent,
 And found himselfe on ground in great amazement.

Lightly he started up out of that stound,
 And snatching forth his direfull deadly blade
 Did leape to her, as doth an eger hound
 Thrust to an hynd within some covert glade,
 Whom without perill he cannot invade:
 With such fell greedines he her assayled,
 That though she mounted were, yet he her made
 To give him ground, (so much his force prevayled,)
 And shun his mightie strokes, gainst which no armes avayled.

So, as they coursed here and there, it chaunst
 That, in her wheeling round, behind her crest
 So sorely he her strooke, that thence it glaunst
 Adowne her backe, the which it fairely blest
 From foule mischance; ne did it ever rest,
 Till on her horses hinder parts it fell;
 Where byting deepe so deadly it imprest,
 That quite it chynd his backe behind the sell,
 And to alight on foote her algates did compell:

Like as the lightning-brond from riven skie,
 Throwne out by angry Iove in his vengeance,
 With dreadfull force falles on some steeple hie;
 Which battring downe, it on the church doth glance,
 And teares it all with terrible mischance.
 Yet she no whit dismayd her steed forsooke;
 And, casting from her that enchaunted lance,
 Unto her sword and shield her soone betooke;
 And therewithall at him right furiously she strooke.

So furiously she strooke in her first heat,
 Whiles with long fight on foot he breathlesse was,
 That she him forced backward to retreat,
 And yeeld unto her weapon way to pas:
 Whose raging rigour neither steele nor bras
 Could stay, but to the tender flesh it went,
 And pour'd the purple blovd forth on the gras;
 That all his mayle yriv'd, and plates yrent,
 Shew'd all his bodie bare unto the cruell dent.

At length, whenas he saw her hastie heat
 Abate, and panting breath began to fayle,
 He through long sufferance growing now more grea'.
 Rose in his strength, and gan her fresh assayle,
 Heaping huge strokes as thicke as showre of hayle,
 And lashing dreadfully at every part,
 As if he thought her soule to disentrayle.
 Ah! cruell hand, and thrise more cruell hart,
 That workst such wrecke on her to whom thou dearest art!

What yron courage ever could endure
 To worke such outrage on so faire a creature:
 And in his madnesse thinke with hands impure
 To spoyle so goodly workmanship of nature,
 The Maker selfe resembling in her feature!
 Certes some hellish furie or some feend
 This mischief framd, for their first loves defeature,
 To bath their hands in bloud of dearest freend,
 Thereby to make their loves beginning their lives end.

Thus long they trac'd and traverst to and fro,
 Sometimes pursewing, and sometimes pursewed,
 Still as advantage they espyde thereto:
 But toward th' end Sir Arthegall renewed
 His strength still more, but she still more decrewed.
 At last his lucklesse hand he hear'd on hie,
 Having his forces all in one accrewed,
 And therewith stroke at her so hideouslie,
 That seemed nought but death mote be her destinie.

The wicked stroke upon her helmet chaunst,
 And with the force, which in itselfe it bore,
 Her ventayle shard away, and thence forth glaunst
 Adowne in vaine, ne harm'd her any more.
 With that, her angels face, unscene afore,
 Like to the ruddie morne appeard in sight,
 Deawed with silver drops through sweating sore;
 But somewhat redder then beseem'd aright,
 Through toylesome heate and labour of her weary fight:

And round about the same her yellow heare,
 Having through stirring loosd their wonted band,
 Like to a golden border did appeare,
 Framed in goldsmithes forge with cunning hand:
 Yet goldsmithes cunning could not understand
 To frame such subtile wire, so shinie cleare;
 For it did glister like the golden sand,
 The which Pactolus with his waters shere
 Throwes forth upon the rivage round about him nere.

And as his hand he up againe did reare,
 Thinking to worke on her his utmost wracke,
 His powrelesse arme benumbd with secret feare
 From his revengefull purpose shronke abacke,
 And cruell sword out of his fingers slacke
 Fell downe to ground, as if the steele had sence
 And felt some ruth, or sence his hand did lacke,
 Or both of them did thinke obedience
 To doe to so divine a beauties excellence.

And he himselfe, long gazing thereupon,
 At last fell humbly downe upon his knee,
 And of his wonder made religion,
 Weening some heavenly goddesse he did see,
 Or else unweeting what it else might bee;
 And pardon her besought his errour frayle,
 That had done outrage in so high degree:
 Whilest trembling horror did his sense assaile,
 And made ech member quake, and manly hart to quayle.

Nathelesse she, full of wrath for that late stroke,
 All that long while upheld her wrathfull hand,
 With fell intent on him to bene ywroke;
 And, looking sterne, still over him did stand,
 Threatning to strike unlesse he would withstand;
 And bad him rise, or surely he should die.
 But, die or live, for nought he would upstand;
 But her of pardon prayd more earnestlie,
 Or wreake on him her will for so great iniurio.

Which whenas Scudamour, who now abrayd,
 Beheld, whereas he stood not farre aside,
 He was therewith right wondrously dismayd;
 And drawing nigh, whenas he plaine describe
 That peercesse paterne of dame natures pride
 And heavenly image of perfection,
 He blest himselfe as one sore terrifide;
 And, turning feare to faint devotion,
 Did worship her as some celestiall vision.

But Glauce, seeing all that chaunced there,
 Well weeting how their errour to assoyle,
 Full glad of so good end, to them drew nere,
 And her salewd with seemely bel-accoyle,
 Ioyous to see her safe after long toyle:
 Then her besought, as she to her was deare,
 To graunt unto those warriours truce awhyle;
 Which yeelded, they their bevers up did reare,
 And shew'd themselves to her such as indeed they were.

When Britomart with sharp avizefull eye
 Beheld the lovely face of Artegall
 Tempred with sternesse and stout maiestie,
 She gan eftsoones it to her mind to call
 To be the same which, in her fathers hall,
 Long since in that enchaunted glasse she saw:
 Therewith her wrathfull courage gan appall,
 And haughtie spirits meekely to adaw,
 That her enhaunced hand she downe can soft withdraw.

Yet she it forst to have againe upheld,
 As fayning choler which was turn'd to cold:
 But ever, when his visage she beheld,
 Her hand fell downe, and would no longer hold
 The wrathfull weapon gainst his countenance bold:
 But, when in vaine to fight she oft assayd,
 She arm'd her tongue, and thought at him to scold:
 Nathlesse her tongue not to her will obayd,
 But brought forth speeces myld when she would have mis- [sayd.

But Scudamour now woxen iuly glad
 That all his gealous feare he false had found,
 And how that hag his love abused had
 With breach of faith and loyaltie unsound,
 The which long time his grieved hart did wound.
 He thus bespake; " Certes, Sir Artegall,
 I ioy to see you lout so low on ground,
 And now become to live a ladies thrall,
 That whylome in your minde wont to despise them all.

Soone as she heard the name of Artegall,
 Her hart did leape, and all her heart-strings tremble,
 For sudden ioy and secret feare withall;
 And all her vitall powres, with motion nimble
 To succour it, themselves gan there assemble;
 That by the swift recourse of flushing blood
 Right plaine appeard, though she it would dissemble,
 And fayned still her former angry mood,
 Thinking to hide the depth by troubling of the flood.

When Glaucè thus gan wisely all upknit;
 " Ye gentle knights, whom fortune here hath brought
 To be spectators of this uncouth fit,
 Which secret fate hath in this ladie wrought
 Against the course of kind, ne mervaille nought;
 Ne thenceforth feare the thing that hethertoo
 Hath troubled both your mindes with idle thought,
 Fearing least she your loves away should woo;
 Feared in vaine, sith meanes ye see there wants theretoo

" And you, Sir Artegall, the salvage knight,
 Henceforth may not disdaine that womans hand
 Hath conquered you anew in second fight:
 For whylome they have conquered sea, and land,
 And heaven itselfe, that nought may them withstand;
 Ne henceforth be rebellious unto love,
 That is the crowne of knighthood and the band
 Of noble minds derived from above,
 Which, being knit with vertue, never will remove.

" And you, faire ladie knight, my dearest dame
 Relent the rigour of your wrathfull will,
 Whose fire were better turn'd to other flame;
 And, wiping out remembrance of all ill,
 Graunt him your grace; but so that he fulfill
 The penance which ye shall to him empart:
 For lovers heaven must passe by sorrowes hell."
 Thereat full inly blushed Britomart;
 But Artegall close-smyling ioy'd in secret hart.

Yet darst he not make love so suddenly,
 Ne thinke th' affection of her hart to draw
 From one to other so quite contrary:
 Besides her modest countenance he saw
 So goodly grave, and full of princely aw,
 That it his ranging fancie did refraine,
 And looser thoughts to lawfull bounds withdraw;
 Whereby the passion grew more fierce and faine, [straine.
 Like to a stubborne steede whom strong hand would re-

But Scudamour, whose hart twixt doubtfull feare
 And feeble hope hung all this while suspence,
 Desiring of his Amoret to heare
 Some gladfull newes and sure intelligence,
 Her thus bespake; "But, sir, without offence
 Mote I request you tydings of my love,
 My Amoret, sith you her freed fro thence
 Where she, captiv'd long, great woes did prove;
 That where ye left I may her seeke, as doth behove."

To whom thus Britomart; "Certes, sir knight,
 What is of her become, or whether rest,
 I cannot unto you aread aright.
 For from that time I from enchaunters theft
 Her freed, in which ye her all hopelesse left,
 I her preserv'd from perill and from feare,
 And evermore from villenie her kept:
 Ne ever was there wight to me more deare
 Then she, ne unto whom I more true love did beare:

"Till on a day, as through a desert wyld
 We travelled, both wearie of the way
 We did alight, and sate in shadow myld;
 Where fearelesse I to sleepe me downe did lay:
 But, whenas I did out of sleepe abray,
 I found her not where I her left whyleare,
 But thought she wandred was, or gone astray:
 I cal'd her loud, I sought her farre and neare;
 But no where could her find, nor tydings of her heare."

When Scudamour those heavie tydings heard,
 His hart was thrild with point of deadly feare,
 Ne in his face or bloud or life appeard;
 But senselesse stood, like to a mazed steare
 That yet of mortall stroke the stound doth beare:
 Till Glaucè thus; "Faire sir, be nought dismayd
 With needlesse dread, till certaintie ye heare;
 For yet she may be safe though somewhat strayd:
 Its best to hope the best, though of the worst affrayd."

Nathelesse he hardly of her chearefull speech
 Did comfort take, or in his troubled sight
 Shew'd change of better cheare; so sore a breach
 That sudden newse had made into his spright;
 Till Britomart him fairely thus behight;
 "Great cause of sorrow certes, sir, ye have;
 But comfort take; for, by this heavens light,
 I vow you dead or living not to leave,
 Til I her find and wreske on him that did her reave."

Therewith he rested, and well pleased was.
 So, peace being confirm'd amongst them all,
 They tooke their steeds, and forward thence did pas
 Unto some resting place, which mote befall;
 All being guided by Sir Artegall:
 Where goodly solace was unto them made,
 And dayly feasting both in bowre and hall,
 Untill that they their wounds well healed had.
 And wearie limmes recur'd after late usage bad.

In all which time Sir Artegall made way
 Unto the love of noble Britomart,
 And with meeke service and much suit did lay
 Continuall siege unto her gentle hart;
 Which, being whylome launcht with lovely dart,
 More eath was new impression to receive:
 However she her paynd with womanish art
 To hide her wound, that none might it perceive:
 Vaine is the art that seekes itselfe for to deceive.

So well he woo'd her, and so well he wrought her,
 With faire entreatie and sweet blandishment,
 That at the length unto a bay he brought her,
 So as she to his speeches was content
 To lend an eare, and softly to relent.
 At last, through many vowes which forth he pour'd,
 And many othes, she yelded her consent
 To be his love, and take him for her lord,
 Till they with marriage meet might finish that accord.

Tho, when they had long time there taken rest,
 Sir Artegall, who all this while was bound
 Upon an hard adventure yet in quest,
 Fit time for him thence to depart it found,
 To follow that which he did long propound;
 And unto her his congee came to take:
 But her therewith full sore displeasd he found,
 And loth to leave her late betrothed make;
 Her dearest love full loth so shortly to forsake.

Yet he with strong perswasions her asswaged,
 And wonne her will to suffer him depart;
 For which his faith with her he fast engaged,
 And thousand voves from bottome of his hart,
 That, all so soone as he by wit or art
 Could that atchieve whereto he did aspire,
 He unto her would speedily revert:
 No longer space thereto he did desire,
 But till the horned moone three courses did expire.

With which she for the present was appeased,
 And yeelded leave, however malcontent
 She inly were and in her mind displeased.
 So, early on the morrow next, he went
 Forth on his way to which he was ybent;
 Ne wight him to attend, or way to guide,
 As whylome was the custome ancient
 Mongst knights when on adventures they did ride,
 Save that she algates him a while accompanide.

And by the way she sundry purpose found
 Of this or that, the time for to delay,
 And of the perils whereto he was bound,
 The feare whereof seem'd much her to affray:
 But all she did was but to weare out day.
 Full oftentimes she leave of him did take;
 And eft againe deviz'd somewhat to say,
 Which she forgot, whereby excuse to make:
 So loth she was his companie for to forsake.

At last when all her speeches she had spent,
 And new occasion sayld her more to find,
 She left him to his fortunes government,
 And backe returned with right heavie mind;
 To Scudamour, whom she had left behind;
 With whom she went to seeke faire Amoret,
 Her second care, though in another kind:
 For vertues onely sake, which doth beget
 True love and faithfull friendship, she by her did set

Backe to that desert forrest they retyred,
 Where sorie Britomart had lost her late:
 There they her sought, and every where inquired
 Where they might tydings get of her estate;
 Yet found they none. But, by what haplesse fate
 Or hard misfortune she was thence convayd,
 And stolne away from her beloved mate,
 Were long to tell; therefore I here will stay
 Untill another tyde, that I it finish may.

CANTO VII.

Amoret rapt by greedie lust
 Belphebe saves from dread:
 The squire her loves; and, being blam'd,
 His daies in dole doth lead.

GREAT god of love, that with thy cruell darts
 Doest conquer greatest conquerors on ground,
 And setst thy kingdome in the captive harts
 Of kings and keasars to thy service bound;
 What glorie or what guerdon hast thou found
 In feeble ladies tyranning so sore,
 And adding anguish to the bitter wound
 With which their lives thou lancedst long afore,
 By heaping stormes of trouble on them daily more!

So whylome didst thou to faire Florimell;
 And so to noble Britomart:
 So doest thou now to her of whom I tell,
 The lovely Amoret, whose gentle hart
 Thou martyrest with sorrow and with smart,
 In salvage forrests and in deserts wide
 With beares and tygers taking heavie part,
 Withouten comfort and withouten guide;
 That pittie is to heare the perils which she tride.

So soone as she with that brave Britonesse
 Had left that turneyment for beauties prise,
 They travel'd long; that now for wearinesse,
 Both of the way and warlike exercise,
 Both through a forest ryding did devise
 T' alight, and rest their wearie limbs a while.
 There heavie sleepe the eye-lids did surprise
 Of Britomart after long tedious toyle,
 That did her passed paines in quiet rest assoyle.

That whiles fair Amoret, of nought affeard,
 Walkt through the wodd. for pleasure or for need,
 When suddenly behind her backe she heard
 One rushing forth out of the thickest weed,
 That, ere she backe could turne to taken heed,
 Had unawares her snatched up from ground:
 Feebly she shrickt, but so feebly indeed
 That Britomart heard not the shrilling sound,
 There where through weary travel she lay sleeping sound.

It was to weete a wilde and salvage man;
 Yet was no man, but onely like in shape,
 And eke in stature higher by a span;
 All overgrowne with haire, that could awhape
 An hardy hart; and his wide mouth did gape
 With huge great teeth, like to a tusked bore:
 For he liv'd all on ravin and on rape
 Of men and beasts; and fed on fleshly gore,
 The signe whereof yet stain'd his bloody lips afore.

His neather lip was not like man nor beast,
 But like a wide deepe poke downe hanging low,
 In which he wont the reliques of his feast
 And cruell spoyle, which he had spard, to stow:
 And over it his huge great nose did grow,
 Full dreadfully empurpled all with bloud;
 And downe both sides two wide long eares did glow,
 And raught downe to his waste when up he stood,
 More great than th' eares of elephants by Indus flood.

His wast was with a wreath of yvie greene
 Engirt about, ne other garment wore;
 For all his haire was like a garment seene;
 And in his hand a tall young oake he bore,
 Whose knottie snags were sharpned all afore,
 And beath'd in fire for steele to be in sted.
 But whence he was, or of what wombe ybore,
 Of beasts, or of the earth, I have not red;
 But certes was with milke of wolves and tygres fed.

This ugly creature in his armes her snatcht,
 And through the forrest bore her quite away
 With briers and bushes all to rent and scratcht;
 Ne care he had, ne pittie of the pray,
 Which many a knight had sought so many a day:
 He stayd not, but in his armes her bearing
 Ran, till he came to th' end of all his way,
 Unto his cave farre from all peoples hearing, [ing.
 And there he threw her in, nought feeling, ne nought fear-

For she (deare ladie) all the way was dead,
 Whilest he in armes her bore; but, when she felt
 Herselfe downe soust, she waked out of dread
 Streight into grieve, that her deare hart nigh swelt,
 And eft gan into tender teares to melt.
 Then when she lookt about, and nothing found
 But darknesse and dread horreur where she dwelt,
 She almost fell againe into a swound;
 Ne wist whether above she were or under ground.

With that she heard some one close by her side
 Sighing and sobbing sore, as if the paine
 Her tender heart in pieces would divide:
 Which she so long listning, softly askt againe
 What mister wight it was that so did plaine?
 To whom thus aunswer'd was, "Ah! wretched wight,
 That seekes to know anothers grieve in vaine,
 Unweeting of thine owne like haplesse plight:
 Selfe to forget to mind another is ore-sight!"

"Aye me!" said she, "where am I, or with whom?
 Emong the living, or emong the dead?
 What shall of me unhappy maid become?
 Shall death be th' end, or ought else worse, aread?"
 "Unhappy mayd," then answer'd she, "whose dread
 Untride is lesse then when thou shalt it fry:
 Death is to him, that wretched life doth lead,
 Both grace and gaine; but he in hell doth lie,
 That lives a loathed life, and wishing cannot die."

"This dismall day hath thee a caytive made,
 And vassall to the vilest wretch alive;
 Whose cursed usage and ungodly trade
 The heavens abhorre, and into darknesse drive:
 For on the spoile of women he doth live,
 Whose bodies chaste, whenever in his powre
 He may them catch unable to gainestrive,
 He with his shamefull lust doth first deflowre,
 And afterwards themselves doth cruelly devoure."

"Now twenty daies, by which the sonnes of men
 Divide their works, have past through heven sheene,
 Since I was brought into this dolefull den;
 During which space these sory eies have seen
 Seaven women by him slaine and eaten clene;
 And now no more for him but I alone,
 And this old woman, here remaining beene,
 Till thou cam'st hither to augment our mone;
 And of us three to morrow he will sure eat one."

"Ah! dreadfull tidings which thou doest declare,"
 Quoth she, "of all that ever hath beene knowen!
 Full many great calamities and rare
 This feeble brest endured hath, but none
 Equall to this, whereever I have gone.
 But what are you, whom like unlucky lot
 Hath linckt with me in the same chaine attone?"
 "To tell," quoth she, "that which ye see, needs not;
 A wofull wretched maid, of God and man forgot!"

"But what I was, it irkes me to rehearse;
 Daughter unto a lord of high degree;
 That ioyed in happy peace, till fates perverso
 With guilefull love did secretly agree
 To overthrow my state and dignitie.
 It was my lot to love a gentle swaine,
 Yet was he but a squire of low degree;
 Yet was he meet, unless mine eye did faine,
 By any ladies side for leman to have laine.

"But, for his meannesse and disparagement,
 My sire, who me too dearly well did love,
 Unto my choise by no meanes would assent,
 But often did my folly fowle reprove:
 Yet nothing could my fixed mind remove,
 But, whether will'd or nilled friend or foe,
 I me resolv'd the utmost end to prove;
 And, rather then my love abandon so,
 Both sire and friends and all for ever to forgo.

"Thenceforth I sought by secret meanes to worke
 Time to my will, and from his wrathfull sight
 To hide th' intent which in my heart did lurke,
 Till I thereto had all things ready dight.
 So on a day, unweeting unto wight,
 I with that squire agreeede away to flit,
 And in a privy place, betwixt us light,
 Within a grove appointed him to meete;
 To which I boldly came upon my feeble fecte.

"But ah! unhappy houre me thither brought:
 For in that place where I him thought to find,
 There was I found, contráry to my thought,
 Of this accursed carle of hellish kind,
 The shame of men, and plague of womankind;
 Who trussing me, as eagle doth his pray,
 Me hether brought with him as swift as wind,
 Where yet untouched till this present day,
 I rest his wretched thrall, the sad Æmylia."

"Ah! sad Æmylia," then sayd Amoret,
 "Thy ruefull plight I pittie as mine owne!
 But read to me, oy what devise or wit
 Hast thou in all this time from him unknowne
 Thine honour sav'd, though into thraldome throwne?"
 "Through helpe," quoth she, "of this old woman here
 I have so done, as she to me hath showne:
 For, ever when he burnt in lustfull fire,
 She in my stead supplide his bestiall desire."

Thus of their evils as they did discourse,
And each did other much bewaile and mone;
Loe! where the villaine selfe, their sorrowes sourse,
Came to the cave; and rolling thence the stone,
Which wont to stop the mouth thereof that none
Might issue forth, came rudely rushing in,
And, spredding over all the flore alone,
Gan dight himselfe unto his wonted sinne;
Which ended, then his bloody banket should beginne.

Which whenas fearefull Amorett perceived,
She staid not th' utmost end thereof to try,
But, like a ghastly gelt whose wits are reaved,
Ran forth in hast with hideous outcry,
For horreur of his shamefull villany:
But after her full lightly he uprose,
And her pursu'd as fast as she did flie:
Full fast she flies, and farre afore him goes,
Ne feesles the thorns and thickets pricke her tender toes.

Nor hedge, nor ditch, nor hill, nor dale she staies,
But over-leapes them all, like robucke light,
And through the thickest makes her highest waies;
And evermore, when with regardfull sight
She looking backe espies the griesly wight
Approching nigh, she gins to mend her pace,
And makes her feare a spur to hast her flight;
More swift than Myrrh' or Daphne in her race,
Or any of the Thracian Nymphes in salvage chace.

Long so she fled, and so he follow'd long;
Ne living aide for her on earth appeares,
But if the heavens helpe to redresse her wrong,
Moved with pity and her plenteous teares.
It fortun'd Belphebe with her peares
The woody Nymphs, and with that lovely boy,
Was hunting then the libbards and the beares
In these wild woods, as was her wonted ioy,
To banish sloth that oft doth noble mindes annoy.

It so befell, as oft it falls in chace,
That each of them from other sundred were;
And that same gentle squire arriv'd in place
Where this same cursed caytive did appeare
Pursuing that faire lady full of feare:
And now he her quite overtaken had;
And now he her away with him did beare
Under his arme, as seeming wondrous glad,
That by his grenning laughter mote farre off be rad.

Which drery sight the gentle squire espying
 Doth haste to crosse him by the nearest way,
 Led with that wofull ladies piteous crying,
 And him assailes with all the might he may;
 Yet will not be the lovely spoile down lay,
 But with his craggy club in his right hand
 Defends himselfe, and saves his gotten pray:
 Yet had it bene right hard him to withstand,
 But that he was full light and nimble on the land.

Thereto the villaine used crafte in fight:
 For, ever when the squire his iavelin shooke,
 He held the lady forth before him right,
 And with her body, as a buckler, broke
 The puissance of his intended stroke:
 And if it chaunst, (as needs it must in fight,)
 Whilest he on him was greedy to be wroke,
 That any little blow on her did light,
 Then would he laugh aloud, and gather great delight.

Which subtill sleight did him encumber much,
 And made him oft, when he would strike, forbear;
 For hardly could he come the carle to touch,
 But that he her must hurt, or hazard neare:
 Yet he his hand so carefully did beare,
 That at the last he did himselfe attaine,
 And therein left the pike-head of his speare:
 A streame of coalblacke bloud thence gusht amaine,
 That all her silken garments did with bloud bestaine.

With that he threw her rudely on the flore,
 And, laying both his hands upon his glave,
 With dreadfull strokes let drive at him so sore,
 That forst him flie abacke, himselfe to save:
 Yet he therewith so felly still did rave,
 That scarce the squire his hand could once upreare,
 But, for advantage, ground unto him gave,
 Tracing and traversing, now here, now there;
 For bootlesse thing it was to think such blowes to beare.

Whilest thus in battell they embusied were,
 Belphebe, raunging in her forrest wide,
 The hideous noise of their huge strokes did heare,
 And drew thereto, making her eare her guide:
 Whom when that theefe approaching nigh espide
 With bow in hand and arrowes ready bent,
 He by his former combate would not bide,
 But fled away with ghastly dreriment,
 Well knowing her to be his deaths sole instrument.

Whom seeing flie, she speedily poursewed
 With winged feete, as nimble as the winde,
 And ever in her bow she ready shewed
 The arrow to his deadly marke desynde:
 As when Latonaes daughter, cruell kynde,
 In vengeance of her mothers great disgrace,
 With fell despight her cruell arrowes tynde
 Gainst wofull Niobes unhappy race,
 That all the gods did mone her miserable case.

So well she sped her and so far she ventred,
 That, ere unto his hellish den he raught,
 Even as he ready was there to have entred,
 She sent an arrow forth with mighty draught,
 That in the very dore him overcaught,
 And, in his nape arriving, through it thrild,
 His greedy throte therewith in two distraught,
 That all his vitall spirites thereby spild,
 And all his hairy brest with gory bloud was fild

Whom when on ground she groveling saw to rowle
 She ran in hast his life to have bereft;
 But, ere she could him reach, the sinfull sowle
 Having his carrion corse quite sencelesse left
 Was fled to hell, surcharg'd with spoile and theft:
 Yet over him she there long gazing stood,
 And oft admir'd his monstrous shape, and oft
 His mighty limbs, whilst all with filthy bloud
 The place there over-flowne seemd like a sodaine flood.

Thenceforth she past into his dreadfull den,
 Where nought but darkesome drerinesse she found,
 Ne creature saw, but hearkned now and then
 Some litle whispering, and soft-groning sound.
 With that she askt, what ghosts there under ground
 Lay hid in horror of eternall night;
 And bad them, if so be they were not bound,
 To come and shew themselves before the light,
 Now freed from feare and danger of that dismall wight.

Then forth the sad Æmylia issewed,
 Yet trembling every ioynt through former feare;
 And after her the hag, there with her mewd,
 A foule and lothsome creature, did appeare;
 A leman fit for such a lover deare:
 That mov'd Belphebe her no lesse to hate,
 Then for to rue the others heavy cheare;
 Of whom she gan enquire of her estate;
 Who all to her at large, as hapned, did relate.

Thence she them brought toward the place where late
 She left the gentle squire with Amoret:
 There she him found by that new lovely mate,
 Who lay the whiles in swoune, full sadly set,
 From her faire eyes wiping the deawy wet
 Which softly stild, and kissing them atweene,
 And handling soft the hurts which she did get:
 For of that carle she sorely bruz'd had beene,
 Als of his owne rash hand one wound was to be seene.

Which when she saw with sodaine glauncing eye,
 Her noble heart, with sight thereof, was fild
 With deepe disdaine and great indignity,
 That in her wrath she thought them both have thrild
 With that selfe arrow which the carle had kild:
 Yet held her wrathfull hand from vengeance sore:
 But drawing nigh, ere he her well beheld,
 "Is this the faith?" she said—and said no more,
 But turnd her face, and fled away for evermore.

He, seeing her depart, arose up light,
 Right sore agrieved at her sharpe reproofe,
 And follow'd fast: but, when he came in sight,
 He durst not nigh approach, but kept aloofe,
 For dread of her displeasure's utmost proofe:
 And evermore, when he did grace entreat,
 And framed speeches fit for his behoofe,
 Her mortall arrowes she at him did threat,
 And forst him backe with fowle dishonor to retreat.

At last, when long he follow'd had in vaine,
 Yet found no ease of griefe nor hope of grace,
 Unto those woods he turned backe againe,
 Full of sad anguish and in heavy case:
 And, finding there fit solitary place
 For wofull wight, chose out a gloomy glade,
 Where hardly eye mote see bright heavens face
 For mossy trees, which covered all with shade
 And sad meláncoly; there he his cabin made.

His wonted warlike weapons all he broke
 And threw away, with vow to use no more,
 Ne thenceforth ever strike in battell stroke,
 Ne ever word to speake to woman more;
 But in that wilderness, of men forlore
 And of the wicked world forgotten quight,
 His hard mishap in dolor to deplore,
 And wast his wretched daies in wofull plight:
 So on himselfe to wreake his follies owne despight.

And eke his garment, to be thereto meet,
 He wilfully did cut and shape anew;
 And his faire lockes, that wont with ointment sweet
 To be embaulm'd, and sweat out dainty dew,
 He let to grow and griesly to concrew,
 Uncomb'd, uncurl'd, and carelesly unshed;
 That in short time his face they overgrew,
 And over all his shoulders did disprede,
 That who he whilome was unneath was to be red.

There he continued in this carefull plight,
 Wretchedly wearing out his youthly yeares.
 Through wilfull penury consumed quight,
 That like a pined ghost he soone appears:
 For other food then that wilde forrest beares,
 Ne other drinke there did he ever tast
 Then running water tempred with his teares,
 The more his weakened body so to wast:
 That out of all mens knowledge he was worne at last.

For on a day, by fortune as it fell,
 His own deare Lord Prince Arthure came that way,
 Seeking adventures where he mote heare tell;
 And, as he through the wandring wood did stray,
 Having espide his cabin far away,
 He to it drew, to weet who there did wonne;
 Weening therein some holy hermit lay,
 That did resort of sinfull people shonne; [sunne.
 Or else some woodman shrowded there from scorching

Arriving there he found this wretched man
 Spending his daies in dolour and despaire,
 And, through long fasting, woxen pale and wan,
 All over-grownen with rude and rugged haire;
 That albeit his owne dear squire he were,
 Yet he him knew not, ne aviz'd at all;
 But like strange wight, whom he had seene no where,
 Saluting him, gan into speech to fall,
 And pittie much his plight, that liv'd like outcast thrall.

But to his speech he aunswered no whit,
 But stood still mute, as if he had beene dum,
 Ne signe of sence did shew, ne common wit,
 As one with grieve and anguishe over-cum;
 And unto every thing did aunswere mum:
 And ever, when the prince unto him spake,
 He louted lowly, as did him becum,
 And humble homage did unto him make,
 Midst sorrow shewing ioyous semblance for his sake.

At which his uncouth guise and usage quaint
 The prince did wonder much, yet could not ghesse
 The cause of that his sorrowfull constraint;
 Yet weend, by secret signes of manlinesse,
 Which close appeard in that rude brutishnesse,
 That he whilome some gentle swaine had beene,
 Trained up in feats of armes and knightlinesse;
 Which he observ'd, by that he him had seene
 To weld his naked sword and try the edges keene;

And eke by that he saw on every tree
 How he the name of one engraven had
 Which likly was his liefest love to be,
 From whom he now so sorely was bestad;
 Which was by him Belphebe rightly rad:
 Yet who was that Belphebe he ne wist;
 Yet saw he often how he waxed glad
 When he it heard, and how the ground he kist
 Wherein it written was, and how himselfe he blist.

Tho, when he long had marked his demeanor,
 And saw that all he said and did was vaine,
 Ne ought mote make him change his wonted tenor,
 Ne ought mote cease to mitigate his paine;
 He left him there in languor to remaine
 Till time for him should remedy provide,
 And him restore to former grace againe:
 Which, for it is too long here to abide,
 I will deferre the end untill another tide.

CANTO VIII.

The gentle squire recovers grace:
 Schlaunder her guests doth staine:
 Corflambo chaseth Placidus,
 And is by Arthure slaine.

WELL said the wiseman, now prov'd true by this
 Which to this gentle squire did happen late,
 That the displeasure of the mighty is
 Then death itselfe more dread and desperate;
 For naught the same may calme, ne mitigate,
 Till time the tempest doe thereof delay
 With sufferance soft, which rigour can abate,
 And have the sterne remembrance wypt away
 Of bitter thoughts, which deepe therein infixed lay.

Like as it fell to this unhappy boy,
 Whose tender heart the faire Belphebe had
 With one sterne looke so daunted, that no ioy
 In all his life, which afterwards he lad,
 He ever tasted; but with penaunce sad
 And pensive sorrow pind and wore away,
 Ne ever laught, ne once shew'd countenance glad;
 But alwaies wept and wailed night and day,
 As blasted bloosme through heat doth languish and decay.

Till on a day, as in his wonted wise
 His doole he made, there chaunst a turtle dove
 To come where he his dolours did devise,
 That likewise late had lost her dearest love,
 Which losse her made like passion also prove:
 Who, seeing his sad plight, her tender heart
 With deare compassion deeply did emmove,
 That she gan mone his undeserved smart,
 And with her dolefull accent beare with him a part.

Shee sitting by him, as on ground he lay,
 Her mournfull notes full piteously did frame,
 And thereof made a lamentable lay,
 So sensibly compyld that in the same
 Him seemed oft he heard his owne right name.
 With that he forth would poure so plenteous teares,
 And beat his breast unworthy of such blame,
 And knocke his head, and rend his rugged heares,
 That could have perst the hearst of tigris and of beares.

Thus, long this gentle bird to him did use
 Withouten dread of perill to repaire
 Unto his wonne, and with her mournfull muse
 Him to recomfort in his greatest care,
 That much did ease his mourning and misfare:
 And every day, for guerdon of her song,
 He part of his small feast to her would share;
 That, at the last, of all his woe and wrong
 Companion she became, and so continued long.

Upon a day, as she him sate beside,
 By chance he certaine miniments forth drew,
 Which yet with him as reliekes did abide
 Of all the bounty which Belphebe threw
 On him, whilst goodly grace she did him shew;
 Amongst the rest a iewell rich he found,
 That was a ruby of right perfect hew,
 Shap'd like a heart yet bleeding of the wound,
 And with a litle golden chaine about it bound.

The same he tooke, and with a riband new,
 In which his ladies colours were, did bind
 About the turtles necke, that with the vew
 Did greatly solace his engrieved mind.
 All unawares the bird, when she did find
 Herselfe so dekt, her nimble wings displaid,
 And flew away as lightly as the wind:
 Which sodaine accident him much dismaid;
 And, looking after long, did marke which way she straid.

But whenas long he looked had in vaine,
 Yet saw her forward still to make her flight,
 His weary eie returnd to him againe,
 Full of discomfort and disquiet plight,
 That both his iuell he had lost so light,
 And eke his deare companion of his care.
 But that sweet bird departing flew forthright,
 Through the wide region of the wastfull aire,
 Untill she came where wonned his Belphebe faire.

There found she her (as then it did betide)
 Sitting in covert shade of arbors sweet,
 After late wearie toile which she had tride
 In salvage chase, to rest as seem'd her meet.
 There she, alighting, fell before her feet,
 And gan to her mournfull plaint to make,
 As was her wont, thinking to let her weete
 The great tormenting grieve that for her sake
 Her gentle squire through her displeasure did pertake.

She, her beholding with attentive eye,
 At length did marke about her purple brest
 That precious iuell, which she formerly
 Had knowne right well with colourd ribbands drest:
 Therewith she rose in hast, and her addrest
 With ready hand it to have reft away:
 But the swift bird obeyd not her behest,
 But swarv'd aside, and there againe did stay;
 She follow'd her, and thought againe it to assay.

And ever, when she nigh approcht, the dove
 Would flit a little forward, and then stay
 Till she drew neare, and then againe remove:
 So tempting her still to pursue the pray,
 And still from her escaping soft away:
 Till that at length into that forrest wide
 She drew her far, and led with slow delay:
 In th' end she her unto that place did guide,
 Whereas that wofull man in languor did abide.

"The dove
Would flit a little forward, and then stay
Till she drew neare, and then againe remove,"

Book IV. Canto VIII. Ver. 11.

Eftsoones she flew unto his fearelesse hand,
 And there a piteous ditty new deviz'd,
 And if she would have made him understand
 His sorrowes cause, to be of her despis'd:
 Whom when she saw in wretched weeds disguiz'd
 With heary glib deform'd, and meiger face,
 Like ghost late risen from his grave agryz'd,
 She knew him not, but pittied much his case,
 And wisht it were in her to doe him any grace.

He, her beholding, at her feet downe fell
 And kist the ground on which her sole did tread,
 And wast the same with water which did well
 From his moist eies, and like two streames proceed,
 Yet spake no word, whereby she might aread
 What mister wight he was, or what he ment;
 But, as one daunted with her presence dread,
 Onely few ruefull lookes unto her sent,
 As messenges of his true meaning and intent.

Yet nathemore his meaning she ared,
 But wondred much at his so selcouth case;
 And by his persons secret seemlyhed
 Well weend that he had beene some man of place,
 Before misfortune did his hew deface;
 That, being mov'd with ruth, she thus bespake:
 "Ah! wofull man, what Heavens hard disgrace,
 Or wrath of cruell wight on thee ywrake,
 Or selfe-disliked life, doth thee thus wretched make?"

"If Heaven; then none may it redresse or blame,
 Sith to His powre we all are subiect borne!
 If wrathfull wight; then fowle rebuke and shame
 Be theirs that have so cruell thee forlorne!
 But, if through inward grieve or wilfull scorne
 Of life, it be; then better doe advise:
 For he, whose daies in wilfull woe are worne,
 The grace of his Creator doth despise,
 That will not use his gifts for thanklesse nigardisc."

When so he heard her say, eftsoones he brake,
 His sodaine silence which he long had pent,
 And, sighing inly deepe, her thus bespake;
 "Then have they all themselves against me bent!
 For Heaven, first author of my languishment,
 Envyng my too great felicity,
 Did cosely with a cruell one consent
 To cloud my daies in dolefull misery,
 And make me loath this life, still longing for to die.

"Ne any but yourselfe, O dearest Dred,
 Hath done this wrong, to wreake on worthlesse wight
 Your high displeasure, through misdeeming bred:
 That, when your pleasure is to deeme aright,
 Ye may redresse, and me restore to light!"
 Which sory words her mightie hart did mate
 With mild regard to see his ruefull plight,
 That her inburning wrath she gan abate,
 And him receiv'd againe to former favours state.

In which he long time afterwards did lead
 An happie life with grace and good accord,
 Fearlesse of fortunes chaunge or envies dread,
 And eke all mindlesse of his own deare lord
 The noble prince, who never heard one word
 Of tydings, what did unto him betide,
 Or what good fortune did to him afford;
 But through the endlesse world did wander wide,
 Him seeking evermore, yet no where him descride:

Till on a day, as through that wood he rode,
 He chaunst to come where those two ladies lato,
 Æmylia and Amoret, abode,
 Both in full sad and sorrowfull estate;
 The one right feeble through the evill rate
 Of food, which in her duresse she had found;
 The other almost dead and desperate
 Through her late hurts, and through that haplesse wound
 With which the squire, in her defence, her sore astound.

Whom when the prince beheld, he gan to rew
 The evill case in which those ladies lay;
 But most was moved at the piteous vew
 Of Amoret, so neare unto decay,
 That her great daunger did him much dismay
 Eftsoones that pretious liquor forth he drew,
 Which he in store about him kept alway,
 And with few drops thereof did softly dew
 Her wounds, that unto strength restor'd her soone anew.

Tho, when they both recovered were right well,
 He gan of them inquire, what evill guide
 Them thether brought, and how their harmes befell:
 To whom they told all that did them betide,
 And how from thraldome vile they were untide,
 Of that same wicked earle, by virgins hond;
 Whose bloudie corse they shew'd him there beside,
 And eke his cave in which they both were bond:
 At which he wondred much when all those signes he fond.

And evermore he greatly did desire
 To know, what virgin did them thence unbind;
 And oft of them did earnestly inquire,
 Where was her won, and how he mote her find.
 But, whenas nought according to his mind
 He could out-learne, he them from ground did reare,
 (No service lothsome to a gentle kind.)
 And on his warlike beast them both did beare,
 Himselfe by them on foot to succour them from feare.

So when that forrest they had passed well,
 A litle cottage farre away they spide,
 To which they drew ere night upon them fell;
 And, entring in, found none therein abide,
 But one old woman sitting there beside
 Upon the ground in ragged rude attyre,
 With filthy lockes about her scattered wide,
 Gnawing her nayles for felnesse and for yre,
 And there out sucking venime to her parts entyre.

A foule and loathly creature sure in sight,
 And in conditions to be loath'd no lesse:
 For she was stufte with rancour and despight
 Up to the throat, that oft with bitternesse
 It forth would breake and gush in great excesse,
 Pouring out streames of poyson and of gall
 Against all that truth or vertue doe professe;
 Whom she with leasings lewdly did miscall
 And wickedly backbite; her name did Sclaunder call.

Her nature is, all goodnesse to abuse,
 And causelesse crimes continually to frame,
 With which she guiltlesse persons may accuse,
 And steale away the crowne of their good name:
 Ne ever knight so bold, ne ever dame
 So chaste and loyal liv'd, but she would strive
 With forged cause them falsely to defame;
 Ne ever thing so well was doene alive,
 But she with blame would blot, and of due praise deprive.

Her words were not, as common words are ment,
 To expresse the meaning of the inward mind,
 But noysome breath, and poysonous spirit sent
 From inward parts, with cancred malice lind,
 And breathed forth with blast of bitter wind;
 Which passing through the eares would pierce the hart,
 And wound the soule itselfe with grieve unkind:
 For, like the stings of aspes that kill with smart,
 Her sightfull words did pricke and wound the inner part.

Such was that hag, unmeet to host such guests,
 Whom greatest princes court would welcomie fa ne:
 But neede, that answers not to all requests,
 Bad them not looke for better entertayne;
 And eke that age despysed nicenesse vaine,
 Enur'd to hardnesse and to homely fare,
 Which them to warlike discipline did trayne,
 And manly limbs endur'd with litle care
 Against all hard mishaps and fortunelesse misfarc.

Then all that evening, welcommed with cold
 And chearelesse hunger, they together spent;
 Yet found no fault, but that the hag did scold
 And rayle at them with grudgefull discontent,
 For lodging there without her owne consent:
 Yet they endured all with patience milde,
 And unto rest themselves all onely lent,
 Regardlesse of that queane so base and vilde
 To be uniustly blamd and bitterly revilde.

Here well I weene, whenas these rimes be red
 With misregard, that some rash-witted wight,
 Whose looser thought will lightly be misled,
 These gentle ladies will misdeeme too light
 For thus conversing with this noble knight;
 Sith now of dayes such temperance is rare
 And hard to finde, that heat of youthfull spright
 For ought will from his greedie pleasure spare:
 More hard for hungry steed t' abstaine from pleasant lare.

But antique age, yet in the infancie
 Of time, did live then, like an innocent,
 In simple truth and blamelesse chastitie;
 Ne then of guile had made experiment;
 But, voide of vile and treacherous intent,
 Held vertue, for itselfe, in soveraine awe:
 Then loyal love had royall regiment,
 And each unto his lust did make a lawe,
 From all forbidden things his liking to withdraw.

The lyon there did with the lambe consort,
 And eke the dove sate by the faulcons side;
 Ne each of other feared fraud or tort,
 But did in safe securitie abide,
 Withouten perill of the stronger pride:
 But when the world woxe old, it woxe warre old,
 (Whereof it hight,) and, having shortly tride
 The traines of wit, in wickednesse woxe bold,
 And dared of all sinnes the secrets to unfold.

Then beautie, which was made to represent
 The great Creatours owne resemblance bright,
 Unto abuse of lawlesse lust was lent,
 And made the baite of bestiall delight:
 Then faire grew foule, and foule grew faire in sight;
 And that, which wont to vanquish God and man,
 Was made the vassall of the victors might;
 Then did her glorious flowre wax dead and wan,
 Deepisd and troden downe of all that over-ran:

And now it is so utterly decayd,
 That any bud thereof doth scarce remaine,
 But if few plants, preserv'd through heavenly ayd,
 In princes court doe hap to sprout againe,
 Dew'd with her drops of bountie souveraine,
 Which from that goodly glorious flowre proceed,
 Sprung of the auncient stocke of princes straine,
 Now th'onely remnant of that royall breed,
 Whose noble kind at first was sure of heavenly seed.

Tho, soone as day discovered heavens face
 To sinfull men with darknes over dight,
 This gentle crew gan from their eye-lids chace
 The drowzie humour of the dampish night,
 And did themselves unto their iourney dight.
 So forth they yode, and forward softly paced,
 That them to view had bene an uncouth sight;
 How all the way the prince on footpace traced,
 The ladies both on horse together fast embraced.

Soone as they thence departed were afore,
 That shamefull hag, the slaunder of her sexe,
 Them follow'd fast, and them reviled sore,
 Him calling theefe, them whores; that much did vexe
 His noble hart: thereto she did annexe
 False crimes and facts, such as they never ment,
 That those two ladies much ashamed did wexe:
 The more did she pursue her lewd intent,
 And rayl'd and rag'd, till she had all her poyson spent.

At last, when they were passed out of sight.
 Yet she did not her spightfull speach forbear,
 But after them did barke, and still backbite,
 Though there were none her hatefull words to heare:
 Like as a curre doth felly bite and teare
 The stone, which passed straunger at him threw;
 So she, them seeing past the reach of eare,
 Against the stones and trees did rayle anew,
 Till she had duld the sting, which in her tongs end grew.

They passing forth kept on their readie way,
 With easie steps so soft as foot could stryde,
 Both for great feeblesse which did oft assay
 Faire Amoret, that scarcely she could ryde,
 And eke through heauie armes which sore annoyd
 The prince on foot, not wonted so to fare,
 Whose steadie hand was faine his steede to guyde,
 And all the way from trotting hard to spare;
 So was his toyle the more, the more that was his care.

At length they spide where towards them with speed
 A squire came galloping, as he would flie,
 Bearing a litle dwarfe before his steed,
 That all the way full loud for aide did crie,
 That seem'd his shrikes would rend the brasen skie;
 Whom after did a mighty man pursew,
 Ryding upon a dromedare on hie,
 Of stature huge, and horrible of hew,
 That would have maz'd a man his dreadfull face to vew:

For from his fearefull eyes two ferie beames,
 More sharpe then points of needles, did proccede,
 Shooting forth farre away two flaming streames,
 Full of sad powre, that poysnous bale did breede
 To all that on him lookt without good heed,
 And secretly his enemies did slay:
 Like as the basiliske, of serpents seede,
 From powrefull eyes close venim doth conuay
 Into the lookers hart, and killeth farre away.

He all the way did rage at that same squire,
 And after him full many threatnings threw,
 With curses vaine in his avengefull ire:
 But none of them (so fast away he flew)
 Him overtooke before he came in vew:
 Where when he saw the prince in armour bright,
 He cald to him aloud his case to rew,
 And rescue him, through succour of his might,
 From that his cruell foe that him pursewd in sight.

Eftsoones the prince tooke downe those ladies twaine
 From loftie steede, and mounting in their stead
 Came to that squire yet trembling every vaine;
 Of whom he gan enquire his cause of dread:
 Who as he gan the same to him aread,
 Loe! hard behind his backe his foe was prest,
 With dreadfull weapon aymed at his head,
 That unto death had doen him unredrest,
 Had not the noble prince his readie stroke repress:

Who, thrusting boldly twixt him and the blow,
 The burden of the deadly brunt did beare
 Upon his shield, which lightly he did throw
 Over his head, before the harine came neare:
 Nathlesse it fell with so despiteous dreare
 And heavie sway, that hard unto his crowne
 The shield it drove, and did the covering reare:
 Therewith both squire and dwarfe did tomble downe
 Unto the earth, and lay long while in senselesse swowne.

Whereat the prince, full wrath, his strong right hand
 In full avengement heaved up on hie,
 And stroke the pagan with his steely brand
 So sore, that to his saddle-bow thereby
 He bowed low, and so a while did lie:
 And sure, had not his massie yron mace
 Betwixt him and his hurt bene happily,
 It would have cleft him to the girding place;
 Yet, as it was, it did astonish him long space.

But, when he to himselve returnd againe,
 All full of rage he gan to curse and sweare,
 And vow by Mahoune that he should be slaine.
 With that his murderous mace he up did reare,
 That seemed nought the souse thereof could beare,
 And therewith smote at him with all his might:
 But, ere that it to him approched neare,
 The royall child with readie quick foresight
 Did shun the prooffe thereof and it avoyded light.

But, ere his hand he could recure againe
 To ward his bodie from the balefull stound,
 He smote at him with all his might and maine
 So furiously that, ere he wist, he found
 His head before him tombl'ng on the ground;
 The whiles his babling tongue did yet blaspheme
 And curse his god that did him so confound;
 The whiles his life ran soorth in bloudie streame,
 His soule descended down into the Stygian reame.

Which when that squire beheld, he woxe full glad
 To see his foe breathe out his spright in vaine:
 But that same dwarf right sorie seem'd and sad,
 And howld aloud to see his lord there slaine,
 And rent his haire and scratcht his face for paine.
 Then gan the prince at leasure to inquire
 Of all the accident there hapned plaine,
 And what he was whose eyes did flame with fire:
 Al which was thus to him declared by that squire.

"This mightie man," quoth he, "whom you have slaine,
Of an huge geauntesse whylome was bred;
And by his strength rule to himselfe did gaine
Of many nations into thraldome led,
And mightie kingdomes of his force adred;
Whom yet he conquer'd not by bloudie fight,
Ne hostes of men with banners brode dispred,
But by the powre of his infectious sight,
With which he killed all that came within his might.

"Ne was he ever vanquished afore,
But ever vanquisht all with whom he fought;
Ne was there man so strong, but he downe bore;
Ne woman yet so faire, but he her brought
Unto his bay, and captived her thought:
For most of strength and beautie his desire
Was spoyle to make, and wast them unto nought,
By casting secret flakes of lustfull fire
From his false eyes into their harts and parts entire.

"Therefore Corflambo was he cald aright,
Though namelesse there his bodie now doth lic;
Yet hath he left one daughter that is hight
The faire Pæana: who seemes outwardly
So faire as ever yet saw living cie;
And, were her vertue like her beautie bright,
She were as faire as any under skie:
But ah! she given is to vaine delight,
And eke too loose of life, and eke of love too light.

"So, as it fell, there was a gentle squire
That lov'd a ladie of high parentage;
But, for his meane degree might not aspire
To match so high, her friends with counsell sage
Dissuaded her from such a disparage:
But she, whose hart to love was wholly lent,
Out of his hands could not redeeme her gage,
But, firmly following her first intent,
Resolv'd with him to wend, gainst all her friends consent.

"So twixt themselves they pointed time and place:
To which when he according did repaire,
An hard mishap and disaventrous case
Him chaunst; instead of his Æmylia faire,
This Gyants sonne, that lies there on the laire
An headlesse heape, him unawares there caught,
And all dismayd through mercillesse despaire
Him wretched thrall unto his dongeon brought,
Where he remaines of all unsuccour'd and unsought.

"This gyants daughter came upon a day
Unto the prison, in her ioyous glee,
To view the thralls which there in bondage lay:
Amongst the rest she chaunced there to see
This lovely swaine, the squire of low degree;
To whom she did her liking lightly cast,
And wooed him her paramour to bee:
From day to day she woo'd and prayd him fast,
And for his love him promist libertie at last.

"He, though affide unto a former love,
To whom faith he firmly ment to hold,
Yet seeing not how thence he mote remove,
But by that meanes which fortune did unfold,
Her graunted love, but with affection cold,
To win her grace his libertie to get:
Yet he him still detaines in captive hold,
Fearing, least if she should him freely set,
He would her shortly leave, and former love forget.

"Yet so much favour she to him hath hight
Above the rest, that he sometimes may space
And walke about her gardens of delight,
Having a keeper still with him in place;
Which keeper is this dwarfe, her dearling base,
To whom the keyes of every prison dore
By her committed be, of speciall grace,
And at his will may whom he list restore,
And, whom he list, reserve to be afflicted more.

"Whereof when tydings came unto mine eare,
Full inly sorie, for the fervent zeale
Which I to him as to my soule did beare,
I thether went; where I did long conceale
Myselfe, till that the dwarfe did me reveale,
And told his dame her squire of low degree
Did secretly out of her prison steale;
For me he did mistake that squire to bee;
For never two so like did living creature see.

"Then was I taken and before her brought;
Who, through the likenesse of my outward hew,
Being likewise beguiled in her thought,
Gan blame me much for being so untrew
To seeke by flight her fellowship t'eschew,
That lov'd me deare, as dearest thing alive.
Thence she commaunded me to prison new:
Whereof I glad did not gaine-say nor strive,
But suffred that same dwarfe me to her dongeon drive.

"There did I finde mine onely faithfull frend
 In heavy plight and sad perplexitie;
 Whereof I sorie, yet myselfe did bend
 Him to recomfort with my companie;
 But him the more agreev'd I found thereby:
 For all his ioy, he said, in that distresse
 Was mine and his Æmylias libertie.
 Æmylia well he lov'd, as I mote ghesse;
 Yet greater love to me then her he did professe.

"But I with better reason him aviz'd
 And shew'd him how, through error and misthought
 Of our like persons eath to be disguiz'd,
 Or his exchange or freedom might be wrought.
 Whereto full loth was he, ne would for ought
 Consent that I, who stood all fearelesse free,
 Should wilfully be into thraldome brought,
 Till fortune did perforce it so decree:
 Yet, over-ruld at last, he did to me agree.

"The morrow next, about the wonted howre,
 The dwarfe cald at the doore of Amyas
 To come forthwith unto his ladies bowre:
 Instead of whom forth came I Placidus,
 And undiscerned forth with him did pas.
 There with great ioyance and with gladsome glee
 Of faire Pæana I received was,
 And oft imbrast, as if that I were hee,
 And with kind words accoyd, vowing great love to mee.

"Which I, that was not bent to former love,
 As was my friend that had her long refus'd,
 Did well accept, as well it did behove,
 Add to the present neede it wisely usd.
 My former hardnesse first I faire excusd;
 And, after, promist large amends to make.
 With such smooth termes her error I abusd
 To my friends good more then for mine owne sake,
 For whose sole libertie I love and life did stake.

"Thenceforth I found more favour at her hand;
 That to her dwarfe, which had me in his charge,
 She bad to lighten my too heaue band,
 And graunt more scope to me to walke at large.
 So on a day, as by the flowrie marge
 Of a fresh streame I with that elfe did play,
 Finding no meanes how I might us enlarge,
 But if that dwarfe I could with me conuay,
 I lightly snatcht him up and with me bore away.

"Thereat he shriekt aloud, that with his cry
 The tyrant selfe came forth with yelling bray,
 And me pursew'd; but nathemore would I
 Forgoe the purchase of my gotten pray,
 But have perforce him hether brought away."
 Thus as they talked, loe! where nigh at hand
 Those ladies two, yet doubtfull through dismay,
 In presence came, desirous t' understand
 Tydings of all which there had hapned on the land.

Where soone as sad Æmylia did espie
 Her captive lovers friend, young Placidus;
 All mindlesse of her wonted modestie
 She to him ran, and, him with streight embras
 Enfolding, said; "And lives yet Amyas?"
 "He lives," quoth he, "and his Æmylia loves."
 "Then lesse," said she, "by all the woe I pas,
 With which my weaker patience fortune proves:
 But what mishap thus long him fro myselfe removes?"

Then gan he all this storie to renew,
 And tell the course of his captivitie;
 That her deare hart full deeply made to rew
 And sigh full sore, to heare the miserie
 In which so long he mercilesse did lie.
 Then, after many teares and sorrowes spent,
 She deare besought the prince of remedie:
 Who thereto did with readie will consent,
 And well perform'd; as shall appeare by his event.

CANTO IX.

The Squire of low degree, releast,
 Peana takes to wife:
 Britomart fightes with many knights;
 Prince Arthur stints their strife.

HARD is the doubt, and difficult to deeme,
 When all three kinds of love together meet
 And doe dispart the hart with powre extreme,
 Whether shall weigh the balance downe; to weest,
 The deare affection unto kindred sweet,
 Or raging fire of love to womankind,
 Or zeale of friends combynd with vertues meet.
 But of them all the band of vertuous mind,
 Me seemes, the gentle hart should most assured bind.

For naturall affection soone doth cesse,
 And quenched is with Cupids greater flame;
 But faithfull friendship doth them both suppress,
 And them with maystring discipline doth tame,
 Through thoughts aspyring to eternall fame.
 For as the soule doth rule the earthly masse,
 And all the service of the bodie frame;
 So love of soule doth love of bodie passe,
 No lesse then perfect gold surmounts the meanest brasse.

All which who list by tryall to assay,
 Shall in this storie find approved plaine;
 In which these squires true friendship more did away
 Then either care of parents could refraine,
 Or love of fairest ladie could constraine.
 For though Pæana were as faire as morne,
 Yet did this trustie squire with proud disdaine
 For his friends sake her offred favours scorne,
 And she herselfe her syre of whom she was yborne.

Now, after that Prince Arthur graunted had
 To yeeld strong succour to that gentle swayne,
 Who now long time had lyen in prison sad;
 He gan advise how best he mote darrayne
 That enterprize, for greatest glories gayne.
 That headlesse tyrants tronke he reard from ground,
 And, having ympt the head to it agayne,
 Upon his usuall beast it firmly bound,
 And made it so to ride as it alive was found.

Then did he take that chased squire, and layd
 Before the ryder, as he captiue were;
 And made his dwarfe, though with unwilling ayd,
 To guide the beast that did his maister beare,
 Till to his Castle they approached neare:
 Whom when the watch, that kept continuall ward,
 Saw cumming home, all voide of doubtfull feare
 He, running downe, the gate to him unbard;
 Whom straight the Prince ensuing in together far'd.

There did he find in her delicious boure
 The faire Pæana playing on a rote,
 Complayning of her cruell paramoure,
 And singing all her sorrow to the note,
 As she had learned readily by rote;
 That with the sweetnesse of her rare delight
 The Prince half rapt began on her to dote;
 Till, better him bethinking of the right,
 He her unwares attacht, and captive held by might.

Whence being forth produc'd, when she perceived
 Her owne deare sire, she cald to him for aide:
 But when of him no aunswere she received,
 But saw him sencelesse by the squire upstaide,
 She weened well that then she was betraide:
 Then gan she loudly cry, and weepe, and waile,
 And that same squire of treason to upbraide:
 But all in vaine; her plaints might not prevaile;
 Ne none there was to reskue her, ne none to baile.

Then tooke he that same dwarfe and him compeld
 To open unto him the prison dore,
 And forth to bring those thrals which there he held.
 Thence forth were brought to him above a score
 Of knights and squires to him unknowne afore:
 All which he did from bitter bondage free,
 And unto former liberty restore.
 Amongst the rest that squire of low degree
 Came forth full weake and wan, not like himselfe to bec.

Whom soone as faire Æmylia beheld
 And Placidus, they both unto him ran,
 And him embracing fast betwixt them held,
 Striving to comfort him all that they can,
 And kissing oft his visage pale and wan:
 That faire Pæana, them beholding both,
 Gan both envy, and bitterly to ban;
 Through iealous passion weeping inly wroth,
 To see the sight perforce that both her eyes were loth.

But when awhile they had together beene,
 And diversly conferred of their case,
 She, though full oft she both of them had seene
 Asunder, yet not ever in one place,
 Began to doubt, when she them saw embrace,
 Which was the captive squire she lov'd so deare,
 Deceived through great likenesse of their face:
 For they so like in person did appeare,
 That she uneath discerned whether whether weare.

And eke the prince whenas he them avized,
 Their like resemblaunce much admired there,
 And mazd how nature had so well disguised,
 Her worke, and counterfet herselfe so nere,
 As if that by one patterne seene somewhere
 She had them made a paragone to be;
 Or whether it through skill or errour were.
 Thus gazing long at them much wondred he;
 So did the other knights and squires which him did see.

Then gan they ransacke that same castle strong,
 In which he found great store of hoorded threasure,
 The which that tyrant gathered had by wrong
 And tortious powre, without respect or measure.
 Upon all which the Briton prince made seasure,
 And afterwards continu'd there a while
 To rest himselfe, and solace in soft pleasure
 Those weaker ladies after weary toile;
 To whom he did divide part of his purchast spoile.

And, for more ioy, that captive lady faire,
 The faire Pæana, he enlarged free,
 And by the rest did set in sumptuous chaire
 To feast and frolicke; nathemore would she
 Shew gladsome countenance nor pleasaunt glee;
 But grieved was for losse both of her sire,
 And eke of lordship with both land and fee;
 But most she touched was with griefe entire
 For losse of her new love, the hope of her desire.

But her the prince, through his well-wonted grace,
 To better termes of myldnesse did entreat
 From that fowle rudenesse which did her deface;
 And that same bitter cor'sive, which did eat
 Her tender heart and made refraine from meat,
 He with good thewes and speaches well applyde
 Did mollifie, and calme her raging heat:
 For though she were most faire, and goodly dyde,
 Yet she it all did mar with cruelty and pride.

And, for to shut up all in friendly love,
 Sith love was first the ground of all her griefe,
 That trusty squire he wisely well did move
 Not to despise that dame which lov'd him liefe,
 Till he had made of her some better prife;
 But to accept her to his wedded wife:
 Thereto he offred for to make him chiefe
 Of all her land and lordship during life:
 He yeelded, and her tooke; so stinted all their strife.

From that day forth in peace and ioyous blis
 They liv'd together long without debate;
 Ne private iarre, ne spite of enemis,
 Could shake the safe assuraunce of their state:
 And she, whom nature did so faire create
 That she mote match the fairest of her daies,
 Yet with lewd loves and lust intemperate
 Had it defaste, thenceforth reformed her waies, [praise.
 That all men much admyrde her change, and spake her

Thus when the prince had perfectly compylde
 These paires of friends in peace and settled rest;
 Himselfe, whose minde did travell as with chylde
 Of his old love conceav'd in secret brest,
 Resolved to pursue his former guest;
 And, taking leave of all, with him did beare
 Faire Amoret, whom fortune by bequest
 Had left in his protection whileare,
 Exchanged out of one into another feare.

Feare of her safety did her not constraîne;
 For well she wist now in a mighty hond
 Her person, late in perill, did remaine,
 Who able was all daungers to withstond:
 But now in feare of shame she more did stond,
 Seeing herselfe all soly succourlesse,
 Left in the victors powre, like vassall bond;
 Whose will her weaknesse could no way repress,
 In case his burning lust should breake into excesse

But cause of feare sure had she none at all
 Of him, who goodly learned had of yore
 The course of loose affection to forstall,
 And lawlesse lust to rule with reasons lore;
 That, all the while he by his side her bore,
 She was as safe as in a sanctuary.
 Thus many miles they two together wore,
 To seeke their loves dispersed diversly;
 Yet neither shewed to other their hearts privity.

At length they came whereas a troupe of knights
 They saw together skirmishing, as seemed:
 Sixe they were all, all full of fell despight,
 But foure of them the battell best besecmed,
 That which of them was best mote not be deemed.
 These foure were they from whom false Florimel
 By Braggadochio lately was redeemed;
 To weet, sterne Druon, and lewd Claribell,
 Love-lavish Blandamour, and lustfull Paridell.

Druons delight was all in single life,
 And unto ladies love would lend no leasure:
 The more was Claribell enraged rife
 With fervent flames and loved out of measure:
 So eke lov'd Blandamour, but yet at pleasure
 Would change his liking, and new lemans prove:
 But Paridell of love did make no threasure,
 But lusted after all that him did move:
 So diversly these foure disposed were to love.

But those two other, which beside them stode,
Were Britomart and gentle Scudamour;
Who all the while beheld their wrathfull moode,
And wondred at their implacable stoure,
Whose like they never saw till that same houre:
So dreadfull strokes each did at other drive,
And laid on load with all their might and powre,
As if that every dint the ghost would rive
Out of their wretched corses, and their lives deprive.

As when Dan Æolus, in great displeasure
For losse of his deare love by Neptune hent,
Sends forth the winds out of his hidden treasure
Upon the sea to wreake his full intent;
They, breaking forth with rude unruliment
From all foure partes of heaven, doe rage full sore,
And tosse the deepes, and teare the firmament,
And all the world confound with wide uprore;
As if instead thereof they Chaos would restore.

Cause of their discord and so fell debate
Was for the love of that same snowy maid,
Whome they had lost in turneyment of late;
And, seeking long to weet which way she straid.
Met here together; where, through lewd upbraide
Of Atë and Duessa, they fell out;
And each one taking part in others aide
This cruell conflict raised thereabout,
Whose dangerous successe depended yet in doubt:

For sometimes Paridell and Blandamour
The better had, and bet the others backe;
Eftsoones the others did the field recoure,
And on their foes did worke full cruell wracke:
Yet neither would their fiend-like fury slacke,
But evermore their malice did augment;
Till that uneath they forced were, for lacke
Of breath, their raging rigour to relent,
And rest themselves for to recover spirits spent.

There gan they change their sides, and new parts take;
For Paridell did take to Druons side,
For old despight which now forth newly brake
Gainst Blandamour, whom alwaies he envide:
And Blandamour to Claribell relide:
So all afresh gan former fight renew.
As when two barkes, this caried with the tide,
That with the wind, contráry courses sew,
If wind and tide doe change, their courses change anew.

Thenceforth they much more furiously gan fare,
 As if but then the battell had begonne;
 Ne helmets bright ne hawberks strong did spare,
 That through the clefts the vermeil bloud out sponne,
 And all adowne their riven sides did ronne.
 Such mortall malice wonder was to see
 In friends profest, and so great outrage donne:
 But sooth is said, and tride in each degree,
Faint friends when they fall out most cruell fomen bee.

Thus they long while continued in fight;
 Till Scudamour and that same Briton maide
 By fortune in that place did chance to light:
 Whom soone as they with wrathfull eie bewraide,
 They gan remember of the fowle upbraide,
 The which that Britonesse had to them donne
 In that late turney for the snowy maide;
 Where she had them both shamefully fordonne,
 And eke the famous prize of beauty from them wonne.

Eftsoones all burning with a fresh desire
 Of fell revenge, in their malicious mood
 They from themselves gan turne their furious ire,
 And cruell blades yet steeming with whot bloud
 Against those two let drive, as they were wood:
 Who wondring much at that so sodaine fit,
 Yet nought dismayd, them stoutly well withstood;
 Ne yeelded foote, ne once abacke did flit,
 But, being doubly smitten, likewise doubly smit.

The warlike dame was on her part assaid
 Of Claribell and Blandamour attone;
 And Paridell and Druon fiercely laid
 At Scudamour, both his professed fone:
 Four charged two, and two surcharged one;
 Yet did those two themselves so bravely beare,
 That th' other litle gained by the lone,
 But with their owne repayed duely weare,
 And usury withall: such gaine was gotten deare.

Full oftentimes did Britomart assay
 To speake to them, and some emparlance move;
 But they for nought their cruell hands would stay,
 Ne lend an care to ought that might behove.
 As when an eager mastiffe once doth prove
 The tast of bloud of some engored beast,
 No words may rate, nor rigour him remove
 From greedy hold of that his blouddy feast:
 So, litle did they hearken to her sweet behest.

Whom when the Briton prince asfarre beheld
 With ods of so unequall match opprest,
 His mighty heart with indignation sweld,
 And inward grudge fild his hëroicke brest:
 Eftsoones himselfe he to their aide addrest,
 And thrusting fierce into the thickest preace
 Divided them, however loth to rest;
 And would them faine from battell to surceasse,
 With gentle words perswading them to friendly peace.

But they so farre from peace or patience were,
 That all at once at him gan fiercely flie,
 And lay on load, as they him downe would beare:
 Like to a storme which hovers under skie,
 Long here and there and round about doth stie,
 At length breakes downe in raine, and haile, and sleet,
 First from one coast, till nought thereof be drie;
 And then another, till that likewise fleet:
 And so from side to side till all the world it weet.

But now their forces greatly were decayd,
 The prince yet being fresh untoucht afore;
 Who them with speeches milde gan first dissuade
 From such foule outrage, and them long forbore;
 Till, seeing them through suffrance hartned more,
 Himselfe he bent their furies to abate,
 And layd at them so sharpely and so sore,
 That shortly them compelled to retrate,
 And being brought in daunger to relent too late.

But now his courage being throughly fired,
 He ment to make them know their follies prise,
 Had not those two him instantly desired
 T' assuage his wrath, and pardon their mesprise:
 At whose request he gan himselfe advise
 To stay his hand, and of a truce to treat
 In milder tearmes, as list them to devise;
 Mongst which the cause of their so cruell heat
 He did them aske; who all that passed gan repeat;

And told at large how that same errant knight,
 To weet, faire Britomart, them late had foyled
 In open turney, and by wrongfull fight
 Both of their publicke praise had them despoyled,
 And also of their private loves beguyled;
 Of two full hard to read the harder theft.
 But she that wrongfull challenge soone assoyled,
 And shew'd that she had not that lady reft,
 (As they suppos'd,) but her had to her liking left

To whom the prince thus goodly well replied;
 " Certes, sir knight, ye seemen much to blame
 To rip up wrong that battell once hath tried;
 Wherein the honor both of armes ye shame,
 And eke the love of ladies foule defame;
 To whom the world this franchise ever yeelded,
 That of their loves choise they might freedom clame,
 And in that right should by all knights be shielded:
 Gainst which, me seemes, this war ye wrongfully have wielded."

" And yet," quoth she, " a greater wrong remaines:
 For I thereby my former love have lost;
 Whom seeking ever since with endlesse paines
 Hath me much sorrow and much travell cost:
 Aye me, to see that gentle maide so tost!"
 But Scudamour then sighing deepe thus saide;
 " Certes her losse ought me to sorrow most,
 Whose right she is, wherever she be straide,
 Through many perils wonne, and many fortunes waide:

" For from the first that I her love profest,
 Unto this houre, this present lucklesse howre,
 I never ioyed happinesse nor rest;
 But thus tormoild, from one to other stowre
 I wast my life, and doe my daies devowre
 In wretched anguishe and incessant woe,
 Passing the measure of my feeble powre;
 That, living thus a wretch and loving so,
 I neither can my love ne yet my life forgo."

Then good Sir Claribell him thus bespake;
 " Now were it not, Sir Scudamour, to you
 Dislikefull paine so sad a taske to take,
 Mote me entreat you, sith this gentle crew
 Is now so well accorded all anew,
 That, as we ride together on our way,
 Ye will recount to us in order dew
 All that adventure which ye did assay
 For that faire ladies love: past perils well apay."

So gan the rest him likewise to require:
 But Britomart did him impórtune hard
 To take on him that paine; whose great desire
 He glad to satisfie, himselfe prepar'd
 To tell through what misfortune he had far'd
 In that atchievement, as to him befell,
 And all those daungers unto them declar'd;
 Which sith they cannot in this canto well
 Comprised be, I will them in another tell.

CANTO X.

Scudamour doth his conquest tell
 Of vertuous Amoret :
 Great Venus temple is describ'd ;
 And lovers life forth set.

“ TRUE he it said, whatever man it sayd,
 That love with gall and hony doth abound :
 But if the one be with the other wayd,
 For every dram of hony, therein found,
 A pound of gall doth over it redound :
 That I too true by triall have approved ;
 For since the day that first with deadly wound
 My heart was launcht, and learned to have loved,
 I never ioyed howre, but still with care was moved.

“ And yet such grace is given them from above,
 That all the cares and evill which they meet
 May nought at all their settled mindes remove,
 But seeme gainst common serce to them most sweet ;
 As bosting in their martyrdome unmeet.
 So all that ever yet I have endured
 I count as naught, and tread downe under feet,
 Since of my love at length I rest assured,
 That to disloyalty she will not be allured.

“ Long were to tell the travell and long toile,
 Through which this shield of Love I late have wonne,
 And purchased this peerlesse beauties spoile,
 That harder may be ended, then begonne :
 But since ye so desire, your will be donne.
 Then hearke, ye gentle knights and ladies free,
 My hard mishaps, that ye may learne to shonne ;
 For though sweet love to conquer glorious bee,
 Yet is the paine thereof much greater then the fee.

“ What time the fame of this renowned prise
 Flew first abroad, and all mens cares possest ;
 I, having armes then taken, gan advise
 To winne me honour by some noble gest,
 And purchase me some place amongst the best.
 I boldly thought, (so young mens thoughts are bold,)
 That this same brave emprize for me did rest,
 And that both shield and she whom I behold
 Might be my lucky lot ; sith all by lot we hold.

" So on that hard adventure forth I went,
 And to the place of perill shortly came :
 That was a temple faire and auncient,
 Which of great mother Venus bare the name,
 And farre renowned through exceeding fame ;
 Much more then that which was in Paphos built,
 Or that in Cyprus, both long since this same,
 Though all the pillours of the one were guilt,
 And all the others pavement were with yvory spilt :

" And it was seated in an island strong,
 Abounding all with delices most rare,
 And wall'd by nature gainst invaders wrong,
 That none mote have accesse, nor inward fare,
 But by one way that passage did prepare.
 It was a bridge ybuilt in goodly wize
 With curious corbes and pendants graven faire,
 And arched all with porches did arize
 On stately pillours fram'd after the Doricke guize :

" And for defence thereof on th' other end
 There reared was a castle faire and strong,
 That warded all which in or out did wend,
 And flanked both the bridges sides along,
 Gainst all that would it faine to force or wrong :
 And therein wonned twenty valiant knights ;
 All twenty tride in warres experience long ;
 Whose office was against all manner wights
 By all meanes to maintaine that castels ancient rights.

" Before that castle was an open plaine,
 And in the midst thereof a pillar placed ;
 On which this shield, of many sought in vaine,
 THE SHIELD OF LOVE, whose guerdon he hath graced,
 Was hangd on high with golden ribbands laced ;
 And in the marble stone was written this,
 With golden letters goodly well enchaced ;
Blessed the man that well can use this blis :
Whose ever be the shield, faire Amoret be his.

" Which when I red, my heart did inly earne,
 And pant with hope of that adventures hap :
 Ne stayed further newes thereof to learne,
 But with my speare upon the shield did rap,
 That all the castle ringed with the clap.
 Streight forth issewd a knight all arm'd to prooffe,
 And bravely mounted to his most mishap :
 Who, staying nought to question from aloofe,
 Ran fierce at me, that fire glaunst from his horses hoofe.

" Whom boldly I encountred (as I could)
 And by good fortune shortly him unseated.
 Eftsoones outsprung two more of equall mould;
 But I them both with equall hap defeated:
 So all the twenty I likewise entreated,
 And left them groning there upon the plaine.
 Then, preacing to the pillour, I repeated
 The read thereof for guerdon of my paine,
 And, taking downe the shield, with me did it retaine.

" So forth without impediment I past,
 Till to the bridges utter gate I came;
 The which I found sure lockt and chained fast.
 I knockt, but no man answred me by name;
 I cald, but no man answred to my clamie:
 Yet I perséver'd still to knocke and call;
 Till at the last I spide within the same
 Where one stood peeping through a crevis small,
 To whom I cald aloud, halfe angry therewithall.

" That was to weete the porter of the place,
 Unto whose trust the charge thereof was lent:
 His name was Doubt, that had a double face,
 Th' one forward looking, th' other backward bent,
 Therein resembling Ianus auncient
 Which hath in charge the ingate of the yeare:
 And evermore his eyes about him went,
 As if some proved perill he did feare,
 Or did misdoubt some ill whose cause did not appeare.

" On th' one side he, on th' other sate Delay,
 Behinde the gate, that none her might espy;
 Whose manner was, all passengers to stay
 And entertaine with her occasions sly;
 Through which some lost great hope unheedily,
 Which never they recover might againe;
 And others, quite excluded forth, did ly
 Long languishing there in unpittied paine,
 And seeking often entraunce afterwards in vaine.

" Me whenas he had privily espide
 Bearing the shield which I had conquerd late,
 He kend it streight, and to me opened wide:
 So in I past, and streight he closd the gate.
 But being in, Delay in close awaite
 Caught hold on me, and thought my steps to stay,
 Feigning full many a fond excuse to prate,
 And time to steale, the treasure of mans day,
 Whose smallest minute lost no riches render may.

"But by no meanes my way I would forslow
 For ought that ever she could doe or say;
 But from my lofty steede dismounting low
 Past forth on foote, beholding all the way
 The goodly workes, and stones of rich assay,
 Cast into sundry shapes by wondrous skill,
 That like on earth no where I reckon may;
 And underneath, the river rolling still
 With murmure soft, that seem'd to serve the workmans will.

"Thence forth I passed to the second gate,
 The Gate of Good Desert, whose goodly pride
 And costly frame were long here to relate:
 The same to all stooode alwaies open wide;
 But in the porch did evermore abide
 An hideous giant, dreadfull to behold,
 That stopt the entraunce with his spacious stride,
 And with the terrour of his countenance bold
 Full many did affray, that else faine enter would:

"His name was Daunger, dreaded over all;
 Who day and night did watch and duely ward
 From fearefull cowards entrance to forstall
 And faint-heart-fooles, whom shew of perill hard
 Could terrifie from fortunes faire adward:
 For oftentimes faint hearts, at first espiall
 Of his grim face, were from approaching seard:
 Unworthy they of grace, whom one deniall
 Excludes from fairest hope withouten further triall.

"Yet many doughty warriours often tride
 In greater perils to be stout and bold,
 Durst not the sternnesse of his looke abide;
 But, soone as they his countenance did behold,
 Began to faint, and feeble their corage cold.
 Againe, some other, that in hard assaies
 Were cowards knowne, and litle count did hold,
 Either through gifts, or guile, or such like waies,
 Crept in by stouping low, or stealing of the kaies.

"But I, though meanest man of many moe,
 Yet much disdainung unto him to lout,
 Or creepe betweene his legs, in to goe,
 Resolv'd him to assault with manhood stout,
 And either beat him in or drive him out.
 Eftsoones, advauncing that enchaunted shield,
 With all my might I gan to lay about:
 Which when he saw, the glaive which he did wield
 He gan forthwith t' avale, and way unto me yield.

" So, as I entred, I did backward looke,
 For feare of harme that might lie hidden there;
 And loe! his hindparts, whereof heed I tooke,
 Much more deformed, fearfull, ugly were,
 Then all his former parts did earst appere:
 For hatred, murther, treason, and despight,
 With many moe lay in ambúshment there,
 Awayting to entrap the warelesse wight
 Which did not them prevent with vigilant foresight.

" Thus having past all perill, I was come
 Within the compasse of that islands space;
 The which did seeme, unto my simple doome,
 The onely pleasant and delightfull place
 That ever troden was of footings trace:
 For all that nature by her mother-wit
 Could frame in earth, and forme of substance base,
 Was there; and all that nature did omit,
 Art, playing second natures part, supplied it.

" No tree, that is of count, in greenewood growes,
 From lowest iuniper to cedar tall;
 No flowre in field, that daintie odour throwes,
 And deckes his branch with blossomes over all,
 But there was planted, or grew naturall:
 Nor sense of man so coy and curious nice,
 But there mote find to please itselfe withall;
 Nor hart could wish for any queint device,
 But there it present was, and did fraile sense entice.

" In such luxurious plentie of all pleasure,
 It seem'd a second paradise I ghesse,
 So lavishly enricht with natures threasure,
 That if the happie soules, which doe possesse
 Th' Elysian fields and live in lasting blesse,
 Should happen this with living eye to see,
 They soone would loath their lesser happinesse,
 And wish to life return'd againe to bee,
 That in this ioyous place they mote have ioyance free.

" Fresh shadowes, fit to shroud from sunny ray;
 Faire lawnds, to take the sunne in season dew;
 Sweet springs, in which a thousand nymphs did play;
 Soft-rombling brookes, that gentle slomber drew;
 High-reared mounts, the lands about to view;
 Low-looking dales, disloignd from common gaze;
 Delightfull bowres, to solace lovers trew;
 False labyrinthes, fond runners eyes to daze;
 All which by nature made did nature selfe amaze.

"And all without were walkes and alleyes dight
 With diuers trees enrang'd in even rankes;
 And here and there were pleasant arbors pight,
 And shadie seates, and sundry flowring bankes
 To sit and rest the walkers wearie shankes:
 And therein thousand payres of lovers walkt,
 Praysing their god, and yeelding him great thankes,
 Ne ever ought but of their true loves talkt,
 Ne ever for rebuke or blame of any balkt.

"All these together by themselves did sport
 Their spotlesse pleasures and sweet loves content.
 But, farre away from these another sort
 Of lovers lincked in true harts consent;
 Which loved not as these for like intent,
 But on chaste vertue grounded their desire,
 Farre from all fraud or fayned blandishment;
 Which, in their spirits kindling zealous fire,
 Brave thoughts and noble deedes did evermore aspire.

"Such were great Hercules, and Hyllus deare:
 Trew Ionathan, and David trustie tryde;
 Stout Theseus, and Pirithous his feare;
 Pylades, and Orestes by his syde;
 Myld Titus, and Gesippus without pryde;
 Damon and Pythias, whom death could not sever:
 All these, and all that ever had bene tyde
 In bands of friendship, there did live for ever;
 Whose lives although decay'd, yet loves decayed never.

"Which whenas I, that never tasted blis
 Nor happy howre, beheld with gazefull eye,
 I thought there was none other heaven then this;
 And gan their endlesse happinesse enuye,
 That being free from feare and gealosye
 Might frankely there their loves desire possesse;
 Whilest I, through pains and perlous icopardie,
 Was forst to seeke my lifes deare patronesse: [tresse.
 Much dearer be the things which come through hard dis-

"Yet all those sights, and all that else I saw,
 Might not my steps withhold but that forthright
 Unto that purposd place I did me draw,
 Whereas my love was lodged day and night,
 The temple of great Venus, that is light
 The queene of beautie, and of love the mother,
 There worshipped of every living wight;
 Whose goodly workmanship farre past all other
 That ever were on earth, all were they set together.

“Not that same famous temple of Diáne,
Whose hight all Ephesus did oversee,
And which all Asia sought with vowes prophane,
One of the world's seven wonders sayd to bee,
Might match with this by many a degree;
Nor that, which that wise king of Iurie framed
With endlesse cost to be th' Almightyes see;
Nor all, that else through all the world is named
To all the heathen gods, might like to this be clamed.

“I, much admyring that so goodly frame,
Unto the porch approcht, which open stood;
But therein sate an amiable dame,
That seem'd to be of very sober mood,
And in her semblant shew'd great womanhood.
Strange was her tyre; for on her head a crowne
She wore, much like unto a Danisk hood,
Poudred with perle and stone; and all her gowne
Enwoven was with gold, that raught full low adowne.

“On either side of her two young men stood,
Both strongly arm'd, as fearing one another;
Yet were they brethren both of halfe the blood,
Begotten by two fathers of one mother,
Though of contrarie natures each to other:
The one of them hight Love, the other Hate;
Hate was the elder, Love the younger brother;
Yet was the younger stronger in his state
Then th' elder, and him maystred still in all debate.

“Nathlesse that dame so well them tempred both,
That she them forced hand to ioyne in hand,
Albe that Hatred was thereto full loth,
And turn'd his face away, as he did stand,
Unwilling to behold that lovely band:
Yet she was of such grace and vertuous might,
That her commaundment he could not withstand,
But bit his lip for felonous despight,
And gnasht his yron tuskes at that displeasing sight.

“Concord she cleeped was in common reed,
Mother of blessed Peace and Friendship trew;
They both her twins, both borne of heavenly seed,
And she herselfe likewise divinely grew;
The which right well her workes divine did shew:
For strength and wealth and happinesse she lends,
And strife and warre and anger does subdew;
Of little much, of foes she maketh frends,
And to afflicted minds sweet rest and quiet sends.

"By her the heaven is in his course contained,
And all the world in state unmoved stands,
As their Almighty Maker first ordained,
And bound them with inviolable bands;
Else would the waters overflow the lands,
And fire devoure the ayre, and hell them quight;
But that she holds them with her blessed hands.
She is the nourse of pleasure and delight,
And unto Venus grace the gate doth open right.

"By her I entring half dismayed was;
But she in gentle wise me entertayned,
And twixt herselfe and Love did let me pas;
But Hatred would my entrance have restrayned,
And with his club me threatned to have brayned,
Had not the ladie with her powrefull speach
Him from his wicked will unceath refrayned:
And th' other eke his malice did empeach,
Till I was throughly past the perill of his reach.

"Into the inmost temple thus I came,
Which fuming all with frankensence I found
And odours rising from the altars flame.
Upon an hundred marble pillors round
The roof up high was reared from the ground,
All deckt with crownes, and chaynes, and girlands gay,
And thousand pretious gifts worth many a pound,
The which sad lovers for their vowes did pay; [May.
And all the ground was strow'd with flowres as fresh as

"An hundred altars round about were set,
All flaming with their sacrifices fire,
That with the steme thereof the temple sweet,
Which rould in clouds to heaven did aspire,
And in them bore true lovers vowes entire:
And eke an hundred brasen cauldrons bright
To bath in ioy and amorous desire,
Every of which was to a damzell hight;
For all the priests were damzels in soft linnen dight.

"Right in the midst the goddesse selfe did stand
Upon an altar of some costly masse,
Whose substance was unceath to understand:
For neither pretious stone, nor durefull brasse,
Nor shining gold, nor mouldring clay it was;
But much more rare and pretious to esteeme,
Pure in aspéct, and like to christall glasse;
Yet glasse was not, if one did rightly deeme;
But, being faire and brickele, likest glasse did seeme

“ But it in shape and beautie did excell
 All other idoles which the heath'en adore,
 Farre passing that, which by surpassing skill
 Phidias did make in Paphos isle of yore,
 With which that wretched Greeke, that life forlore,
 Did fall in love: yet this much fairer shined,
 But covered with a slender veile afore:
 And both her feete and legs together twyned
 Were with a snake, whose head and tail were fast combyned.

“ The cause why she was covered with a veile
 Was hard to know, for that her priests the same
 From peoples knowledge labour'd to conceale:
 But sooth it was not sure for womanish shame,
 Nor any blemish, which the worke mote blame;
 But for (they say) she hath both kinds in one,
 Both male and female, both under one name:
 She syre and mother is herselfe alone,
 Begets and eke conceives, ne needeth other none.

“ And all about her necke and shoulders flew
 A flocke of little loves, and sports, and ioyes,
 With nimble wings of gold and purple hew;
 Whose shapes seem'd not like to terrestriall boyes,
 But like to angels playing heavenly toyes;
 The whilest their eldest brother was away,
 Cupid their eldest brother: he enioyes
 The wide kingdome of love with lordly sway,
 And to his law compels all creatures to obey.

“ And all about her altar scattered lay
 Great sorts of lovers piteously complayning,
 Some of their losse, some of their loves delay,
 Some of their pride, some paragons disdaining,
 Some fearing fraud, some fraudulently fayning,
 As every one had cause of good or ill.
 Amongst the rest some one, through Loves constrayning
 Tormented sore, could not containe it still,
 But thus brake forth, that all the temple it did fill;

“ ‘ Great Venus! queene of beautie and of grace,
 The ioy of gods and men, that under skie
 Doest fayrest shine, and most adorne thy place;
 That with thy smyling looke doest pacifie
 The raging seas, and makst the stormes to flie;
 Thee, goddesse, thee the winds, the clouds doe feare;
 And, when thou spredst thy mantle forth on hie,
 The waters play, and pleasant lands appeare,
 And heavens laugh, and al the world shews ioyous cheare.

“Then doth the dædale earth throw forth to thee
 Out of her fruitfull lap abundant flowres;
 And then all living wights, soone as they see
 The spring breake forth out of his lusty bowres,
 They all doe learne to play the paramours:
 First doe the merry birds, thy pretty pages,
 Privily pricked with thy lustfull powres,
 Chirpe loud to thee out of their leavy cages,
 And thee their mother call to coole their kindly rages.

“Then dog the salvage beasts begin to play
 Their pleasant friskes, and loath their wonted food;
 The lyons rore; the tygers loudly bray;
 The raging buls rebellow through the wood,
 And breaking forth dare tempt the deepest flood
 To come where thou doest draw them with desire:
 So all things else, that nourish vitall blood,
 Soone as with fury thou doest them inspire,
 In generation seeke to quench their inward fire.

“So all the world by thee at first was made,
 And dayly yet thou doest the same repayre:
 Ne ought on earth that merry is and glad,
 Ne ought on earth that lovely is and fayre,
 But thou the same for pleasure didst prepayre:
 Thou art the root of all that ioyous is:
 Great god of men and women, queene of th’ ayre,
 Mother of laughter, and wel-spring of blisse,
 O graunt that of my love at last I may not misse!”

“So did he say: but I with murmure soft,
 That none might heare the sorrow of my hart,
 Yet inly groning deepe and sighing oft,
 Besought her to graunt ease unto my smart,
 And to my wound her gracious help impart.
 Whilest thus I spake, behold! with happy eye
 I spyde where at the idoles feet apart
 A bevie of fayre damzels close did lye,
 Wayting whenas the antheme should be sung on hyc.

“The first of them did seeme of ryper yeares
 And graver countenance then all the rest:
 Yet all the rest were eke her equall peares,
 Yet unto her obeyed all the best:
 Her name was Womanhood; that she exprest
 By her sad semblant and demeanure wyse;
 For stedfast still her eyes did fixed rest,
 Ne rov’d at randon, after gazers guyse;
 Whose luring baytes oftymes doe heedlesse harts entyse.

“And next to her sate goodly Shamefastnesse,
 Ne ever durst her eyes from ground upreare,
 Ne ever once did looke up from her desse,
 As if some blame of evill she did feare,
 That in her cheekes made roses oft appeare:
 And her against sweet Cheerfulnesse was placed,
 Whose eyes, like twinkling stars in evening cleare,
 Were deckt with smyles that all sad humors chased,
 And darted forth delights the which her goodly graced.

‘And next to her sate sober Modestie,
 Holding her hand upon her gentle hart;
 And her against sate comely Curtesie,
 That unto every person knew her part;
 And her before was seated overthwart
 Soft Silence, and submisse Obedience,
 Both linckt together never to dispart;
 Both gifts of God not gotten but from thence;
 Both girlonds of his saints against their foes offence.

“Thus sate they all around in seemely rate:
 And in the midst of them a goodly mayd
 (Even in the lap of womanhood) there sate,
 The which was all in lilly white arayd,
 With silver streames amongst the linnen strayd;
 Like to the Morne, when first her shyning face
 Hath to the gloomy world itself bewray’d:
 That same was fayrest Amoret in place,
 Shyning with beauties light and heavenly vertues grace.

“Whome soone as I beheld, my hart gan throb
 And wade in doubt what best werd to be donne;
 For sacrilege me seem’d the church to rob;
 And folly seem’d to leave the thing undonne,
 With which so strong attempt I had begonne.
 Tho, shaking off all doubt and shamefast feare,
 Which ladies love I heard had never wonne
 Mongst men of worth, I to her stepped neare,
 And by the lilly hand her labour’d up to reare.

“Therewith that formost matrone nie did blame,
 And sharpe rebuke for being over-bold;
 Saying it was to knight unseemely shame,
 Upon a récluse virgin to lay hold,
 That unto Venus services was sold.
 To whom I thus; Nay, but it fitteth best
 For Cupids man with Venus mayd to hold;
 For ill your goddesses services are drest
 By virgins, and her sacrifices let to rest.

" With that my shield I forth to her did show,
Which all that while I closely had conceald;
On which when Cupid with his killing bow
And cruell shafts emblazond she beheld,
At sight thereof she was with terror queld,
And said no more: but I, which all that while
The pledge of faith her hand engaged held,
(Like warie hynd within the weedie soyle,)
For no intreatie would forgoo so glorious spoyle.

" And evermore upon the goddesse face
Mine eye was fixt, for feare of her offence;
Whom when I saw with amiable grace
To laugh on me, and favour my pretence,
I was emboldned with more confidence;
And, nought for nicenesse no for envy sparing,
In presence of them all forth led her thence,
All looking on, and like astonisht staring,
Yet to lay hand on her not one of all them daring.

" She often prayd, and often me besought,
Sometime with tender teares to let her goe,
Sometime with witching synyles: but yet, for nought
That ever she to me could say or doe,
Could she her wished freedome fro me wooe;
But forth I led her through the temple gate,
By which I hardly past with much adoe:
But that same ladie, which me friended late
In entrance, did me also friend in my retreat.

" No lesse did Daunger threaten me with dread,
Whenas he saw me, maugre all his powre,
That glorious spoyle of Beautie with me lead,
Then Cerberus, when Orpheus did recoure
His leman from the Stygian princes boure.
But evermore my shield did me defend
Against the storme of every dreadfull stoure:
Thus safely with my love I thence did wend."
So ended he his tale; where I this canto end.

CANTO XI.

Marinells former wound is heald;
 He comes to Proteus hail.
 Where Thamés doth the Medway wedd,
 And feasts the sea-gods all.

BUT ah! for pittie that I have thus long
 Left a fayre ladie languishing in payne!
 Now well away! that I have doen such wrong,
 To let faire Florimell in bands remayne,
 In bands of love, and in sad thraldomes chayne;
 From which unlesse some heavenly power her free
 By miracle, not yet appearing playne,
 She lenger yet is like captiv'd to bee;
 That even to thinke thereof it inly pitties mee.

Here neede you to remember, how erewhile
 Unlovely Proteus, missing to his mind
 That virgins love to win by wit or wile,
 Her threw into a dongeon deepe and blind,
 And there in chaynes her cruelly bid bind,
 In hope thereby her to his bent to draw:
 For, whenas neither gifts nor graces kind
 Her constant mind could move at all he saw,
 He thought her to compell by crueltie and awe.

Deepe in the bottome of an huge great rocke
 The dongeon was, in which her bound he left,
 That neither yron barres, nor brasen locke,
 Did neede to gard from force or secret theft
 Of all her lovers which would her have rest:
 For wall'd it was with waves, which rag'd and ror'd
 As they the cliffe in peeces would have cleft;
 Besides, ten thousand monsters foule abhor'd
 Did waite about it, gaping griesly, all begor'd.

And in the midst thereof did Horror dwell,
 And Darknesse dredd that never view'd day,
 Like to the balefull house of lowest hell,
 In which old Styx her aged bones alway
 (Old Styx the grandame of the gods) doth lay.
 There did this lucklesse mayd seven months abide,
 Ne ever evening saw, no mornings ray,
 Ne ever from the day the night descride,
 But thought it all one night, that did no houres divide.

And all this was for love of Marinell,
 Who her despyd (ah! who would her despyse!)
 And wemens love did from his hart expell,
 And all those ioyes that weake mankind entyse.
 Nathlesse his pride full dearely he did pryse;
 For of a womans hand it was ywroke,
 That of the wound he yet in languor lyes,
 Ne can be cured of that cruell stroke
 Which Britomart him gave, when he did her provoke.

Yet farre and neare the nymph his mother sought,
 And many salves did to his sore applie,
 And many herbes did use: but whenas nought
 She saw could ease his rankling maladie;
 At last to Tryphon she for helpe did hie,
 (This Tryphon is the sea-gods surgeon hight,)
 Whom she besought to find some remedie:
 And for his paines a whistle him behight,
 That of a fishes shell was wrought with rare delight.

So well that leach did hearke to her request,
 And did so well employ his carefull paine,
 That in short space his hurts he had rearest,
 And him restor'd to healthfull state againe:
 In which he long time after did remaine
 There with the nymph his mother, like her thrall;
 Who sore against his will did him retaine,
 For feare of perill which to him mote fall
 Through his too ventrqus prowesse proved over all.

It fortun'd then, a solemn feast was there
 To all the sea-gods and their fruitfull seede,
 In honour of the spousalls which then were
 Betwixt the Medway and the Thames agreed.
 Long had the Thames (as we in records reed)
 Before that day her wooed to his bed;
 But the proud nymph would for no worldly meed,
 Nor no entreatie, to his love be led;
 Till now at last relenting she to him was wed.

So both agreed that this their bridale feast
 Should for the gods in Proteus house be made;
 To which they all repayr'd, both most and least,
 As well which in the mightie ocean trade,
 As that in rivers swim, or brookes doe wade:
 All which, not if an hundred tongues to tell,
 And hundred mouthes, and voice of brasse I had,
 And endlesse memorie that mote excell,
 In order as they came could I recount them well.

Helpe therefore, O thou sacred impe of Iove,
 The noursling of dame Memorie his deare.
 To whom those rolles, layd up in heaven above,
 And records of antiquitie appeare,
 To which no wit of man may comen neare;
 Helpe me to tell the names of all those floods
 And all those nymphes, which then assembled were
 To that great banquet of the watry gods.
 And all their sundry kinds, and all their hid abodes.

First came great Neptune, with his three-forkt mace,
 That rules the seas and makes them rise or fall,
 His dewy lockes did drop with brine apace
 Under his diademe imperiall:
 And by his side his queene with coronall,
 Faire Amphitrite, most divinely faire,
 Whose yvorie shoulders weren covered all,
 As with a robe, with her owne silver haire, [paire.
 And deckt with pearles which th' Indian seas for her pre-

These marched farre afore the other crew:
 And all the way before them, as they went,
 Triton his trompet shrill before them blew,
 For goodly triumph and great iollyment,
 That made the rockes to roare as they were rent.
 And after them the royall issue came,
 Which of them sprung by lineall descent:
 First the sea-gods, which to themselves doe clame
 The powre to rule the billowes, and the waves to tame:

Phoreys, the father of that fatall brood,
 By whom those old heroës wonne such fame;
 And Glaucus, that wise southsayer understood;
 And tragiecke Inoes sonne, the which became
 A god of seas through his mad mothers blame,
 Now hight Palemon, and is saylers frend;
 Great Brontes; and Astreus, that did shame
 Himselfe with incest of his kin unkend;
 And huge Orion, that doth tempests still portend;

The rich Cteatus; and Eurytus long;
 Neleus and Pelias, lovely brethren both;
 Mightie Chrysaor; and Caius strong;
 Eurypulus, that calmes the waters wroth;
 And faire Euphemus, that upon them go'llh,
 As on the ground, without dismay or dread;
 Fierce Eryx; and Alebius, that know'th
 The waters depth, and doth their bottome tread;
 And sad Asopus, comely with his hoarie head.

There also some most famous founders were
 Of puissant nations, which the world possesse,
 Yet sonnes of Neptune, now assembled here:
 Ancient Ogyges, even th' auncientest;
 And Inachus renowned above the rest;
 Phœnix; and Aon; and Pelasgus old;
 Great Belus; Phœax; and Agenor best;
 And mightie Albion, father of the bold
 And warlike people which the Britaine Islands hold:

For Albion the sonne of Neptune was:
 Who, for the prooffe of his great puissance,
 Out of his Albion did on dry-foot pass
 Into old Gall, that now is cleeped France,
 To fight with Hercules, that did advance
 To vanquish all the world with matchlesse mighte;
 And there his mortall part by great mischance
 Was slaine; but that which is th' immortall spright
 Lives still, and to this feast with Neptunes seed was dight.

But what do I their names seeke to reherse,
 Which all the world have with their issue filld?
 How can they all in this so narrow verse
 Contayned be, and in small compasse hild?
 Let them record them that are better skild,
 And know the moniments of passed age:
 Onely what needeth shall be here fulfilld,
 T' expresse some part of that great equipage
 Which from great Neptune do derive their parentage.

Next came the aged Ocean and his dame
 Old Tethys, th' oldest two of all the rest;
 For all the rest of those two parents came,
 Which afterward both sea and land possesse;
 Of all which Nereus, th' eldest and the best,
 Did first proceed; then which none more upright,
 Ne more sincere in word and deed profest;
 Most voide of guile, most free from fowle despight,
 Doing himselfe and teaching others to doe right:

Thereto he was expert in prophecies,
 And could the ledden of the gods unfold:
 Through which, when Paris brought his famous prise,
 The faire Tindarid lasse, he him foretold
 That her all Greece with many a champion bold
 Should fetch againe, and finally destroy
 Proud Priams towne: so wise is Nereus old,
 And so well skild; nathlesse he takes great ioy
 Oft-times amongst the wanton nymphs to sport and toy:

And after him the famous rivers came,
Which doe the earth enrich and beautifie:
The fertile Nile, which creatures new doth frame;
Long Rhodanus, whose sourse springs from the skie;
Faire Ister, flowing from the mountaines hie;
Divine Scamander, purpled yet with blood
Of Greeks and Troians, which therein did die;
Pactolus glistring with his golden flood;
And Tygris fierce, whose streames of none may be withstood;

Great Ganges; and immortall Eúphrates;
Deepe Indus; and Mæander intricate;
Slow Peneus; and tempestuous Phasides;
Swift Rhene; and Alpheus still immaculate;
Ooraxes, feared for great Cyrus fate;
Tybris, renowned for the Romaines fame;
Rich Oranochy, though but knownen late;
And that huge river, which doth beare his name
Of warlike Amazons which doe possesse the same.

Ioy on those warlike women, which so long
Can from all men so rich a kingdome hold!
And shame on you, O men, which boast your strong
And valiant hearts, in thoughts lesse hard and bold,
Yet quaille in conquest of that land of gold!
But this to you, O Britons most pertaines,
To whom the right hereof itselfe hath sold;
The which, for sparing litle cost or paines,
Loose so immortall glory, and so endlesse gaines.

Then was there heard a most celestiall sound
Of dainty musicke, which did next ensue
Before the spouse: that was Arion crownd;
Who, playing on his harpe, unto him drew
The eares and hearts of all that goodly crew;
That even yet the dolphin, which him bore
Through the Ægëan seas from pirates vew,
Stood still by him astonisht at his lore,
And all the raging seas for ioy forgot to rore.

So went he playing on the watery plaine:
Soone after whom the lovely bridegroome came,
The noble Thames, with all his goodly traine.
But him before there went, as best became.
His auncient parents, namely th'auncient Thame;
But much more aged was his wife then he,
The Ouze, whom men doe Isis rightly name;
Full weake and crooked creature seemed shee,
And almost blind through eld, that scarce her way could see.

Therefore on either side she was sustained
 Of two smal grooms, which by their names were hight
 The Churne and Charwell, two small streames, which pained
 Themselves her footing to direct aright,
 Which fayled oft through faint and feeble plight:
 But Thame was stronger, and of better stay;
 Yet seem'd full aged by his outward sight,
 With head all hoary, and his beard all gray,
 Deawed with silver drops that trickled downe alway:

And eke he somewhat seem'd to stoupe afore
 With bowed backe, by reason of the lode
 And auncient heavy burden which he bore
 Of that faire city, wherein make abode
 So many learned impes, that shoote abroad,
 And with their braunches spred all Britany,
 No lesse then do her elder sisters broode.
 Ioy to you both, ye double nursery
 Of arts! but, Oxford, thine doth Thame most glorify.

But he their sonne full fresh and iolly was,
 All decked in a robe of watchet hew,
 On which the waves, glittering like christall glas,
 So cunningly enwoven were, that few
 Could weenen whether they were false or trew:
 And on his head like to a coronet
 He wore, that seemed strange to common vew,
 In which were many towres and castels set,
 That it encompass round as with a golden fret.

Like as the mother of the gods, they say,
 In her great iron charet wents to ride,
 When to Ioves pallace she doth take her way,
 Old Cybelè, arayd with pompous pride,
 Wearing a diademe embattild wide
 With hundred turrets, like a turribant.
 With such an one was Thamis beautifide;
 That was to weet the famous Troynovant,
 In which her kingdomes throne is chiefly resiant.

And round about him many a pretty page
 Attended duely, ready to obay;
 All little rivers which owe vassallage
 To him, as to their lord, and tribute pay:
 The chaulky Kenet; and the Thetis gray;
 The morish Cole; and the soft-sliding Breane;
 The wanton Lee, that oft doth loose his way;
 And the still Darent, in whose waters cleane
 Ten thousand fishes play and decke his pleasant streame.

Then came his neighbour foulds which nigh him dwell,
 And water all the English soile throughout;
 They all on him this day attended well,
 And with meet service waited him about;
 Ne none disdained low to him to lout:
 No not the stately Severne grudg'd at all,
 Ne storming Humber, though he looked stout;
 But both him honor'd as their principall,
 And let their swelling waters low before him fall.

There was the speedy Tamar, which divides
 The Cornish and the Devonish confines;
 Through both whose borders swiftly downe it glides,
 And, meeting Plim, to Plimmouth thence declines;
 And Dart, nigh choekt with sands of tinny mines:
 But Avon marched in more stately path,
 Proud of his adamants with which he shines
 And glisters wide, as als of wondrous Bath,
 And Bristow faire, which on his waves he builded hath.

And there came Stoure with terrible aspéct,
 Bearing his sixe deformed heads on hye,
 That doth his course through Blandford plains direct,
 And washeth Winborne meades in season drye.
 Next him went Wylibourne with passage slye,
 That of his wylinesse his name doth take,
 And of himselfe doth name the shire thereby:
 And Mole, that like a nousling mole doth make
 His way still under ground till Thames he overtake.

Then came the Rother, decked all with woods
 Like a wood-god, and flowing fast to Rhy;
 And Sture, that parteth with his pleasant floods
 The easterne Saxons from the southerne ny,
 And Clare and Harwitch both doth beautify:
 Him follow'd Yar, soft washing Norwich wall,
 And with him brought a present ioyfully
 Of his owne fish unto their festivall,
 Whose like none else could shew, the which they ruffins call.

Next these the plenteous Ouse came far from land,
 By many a city and by many a towne,
 And many rivers taken under-hand
 Into his waters, as he passeth downe,
 (The Cle, the Were, the Guant, the Sture, the Rowne,)
 Thence doth by Huntingdon and Cambridge flit,
 My mother Cambridge, whom as with a crowne
 He doth adorne, and is adorn'd of it
 With many a gentle muse and many a learned wit.

And after him the fatall Welland went,
 That if old sawes prove true (which God forbid!)
 Shall drowne all Holland with his excrement,
 And shall see Stamford, though now homely hid,
 Then shine in learning more than ever did
 Cambridge or Oxford, Englands goodly beames.
 And next to him the Nene downe softly slid;
 And bounteous Trent, that in himselfe enseames
 Both thirty sorts of fish and thirty sundry streames.

Next these came Tyne, along whose stony bancke
 That Romaine monarch built a brasen wall,
 Which mote the feeble Britons strongly flanke
 Against the Picts that swarmed over all,
 Which yet thereof Gualsever they doe call:
 And Twede, the limit betwixt Logris land
 And Albany: and Eden, though but small,
 Yet often staine with bloud of many a band
 Of Scots and English both, that tynd on his strand.

Then came those sixe sad brethren, like forlorne,
 That whilome were, as antique fathers tell,
 Sixe valiant knights of one faire nymphe yborne,
 Which did in noble deedes of armes excell,
 And wonned there where now Yorke people dwell:
 Still Ure, swift Werfe, and Oze the most of might,
 High Swale, unquiet Nide, and troublous Skell;
 All whom a Seythian king, that Humber hight,
 Slew cruelly, and in the river drowned quite:

But past not long, ere Brutus warlike sonne
 Loerinus them aveng'd, and the same date,
 Which the proud Humber unto them had donne,
 By equall dome repayd on his owne pate:
 For in the selfe same river, where he late
 Had drenched them, he drowned him againe;
 And nam'd the river of his wretched fate;
 Whose bad condition yet it doth retaine,
 Oft tossed with his stormes which therein still remaine.

These after came the stony shallow Lone,
 That to old Lonceaster his name doth lend;
 And following Dee, which Britons long ygone
 Did call divine, that doth by Chester tend;
 And Conway, which out of his streame doth send
 Plenty of pearles to decke his dames withall;
 And Lindus, that his pikes doth most commend,
 Of which the auncient Lincolne men doe call:
 All these together marched toward Proteus hall.

Ne thence the Irishe rivers absent were :
 Sith no lesse famous then the rest they bee,
 And ioyne in neighbourhood of kingdome nere,
 Why should they not likewise in love agree,
 And ioy likewise this solemne day to see?
 They saw it all, and present were in place :
 Though I them all, according their degree,
 Cannot recount, nor tell their hidden race,
 Now read the salvage countries thorough which they pace.

There was the Liffy rolling downe the lea;
 The Sandy Slane; the stony Aubrion;
 The spacious Shenan spreading like a sea;
 The pleasant Boyne; the fishy fruitfull Ban;
 Swift Awniduff, which of the English man
 Is cal'de Blacke-water; and the Liffar deep;
 Sad Trowis, that once his people over-ran;
 Strong Allo tombling from Slewlogher steep;
 And Mulla mine, whose waves I whilom taught to weep.

And there the three renowned brethren were,
 Which that great gyant Blomius begot
 Of the faire nimph Rheüsa wandring there:
 One day, as she to shunne the season whot
 Under Slewboome in shady grove was got,
 This gyant found her and by force deflowr'd;
 Whereof conceiving, she in time forth brought
 These three faire sons, which thenceforth powrd
 In three great rivers ran, and many countreis scowrd.

The first the gentle Shure that, making way
 By sweet Clonmell, adornes rich Waterford;
 The next, the stubborne Newre, whose waters gray
 By fair Kilkenny and Rosseponte boord;
 The third, the goodly Barow, which doth hoor
 Great heaps of salmons in his deepe bosóme:
 All which, long sundred, doe at last accord
 To ioyne in one, ere to the sea they come;
 So, flowing all from one, all one at last become.

There also was the wide embayed Mayre;
 The pleasaunt Bandon crownd with many a wood;
 The spreading Lee that, like an island fayre,
 Encloseth Corke with his divided flood;
 And balefull Oure late staind with English blood:
 With many more whose names no tongue can tell.
 All which that day in order seemly good
 Did on the Thames attend, and waited well
 To doe their dueful service, as to them befell.

Then came the bride, the lovely Medua came,
 Clad in a vesture of unknowen gear
 And uncouth fashion, yet her well became,
 That seem'd like silver sprinckled here and there
 With glittering spangs that did like starres appeare,
 And war'd upon, like water chamelot,
 To hide the metall, which yet every where
 Bewrayed itselfe, to let men plainly wot
 It was no mortall worke, that seem'd and yet was not.

Her goodly lockes adowne her backe did flow
 Unto her waste, with flowres bescattered,
 The which ambrosiall odours forth did throw
 To all about, and all her shoulders spread
 As a new spring; and likewise on her hed
 A chapelet of sundry flowers she wore,
 From under which the deawy humour shed
 Did tricle downe her haire, like to the hore
 Congealed litle drops which doe the morne adora.

On her two pretty handmaides did attend,
 One cald the Theise, the other called the Crane;
 Which on her waited things amisse to mend,
 And both behind upheld her spreading traine;
 Under the which her feet appeared plaine,
 Her silver feet, faire washt against this day;
 And her before there paced pages twaine,
 Both clad in colours like and like array,
 The Doune and eke the Frith, both which prepared her way.

And after these the sea-nymphs marched all,
 All goodly damzels, deckt with long greene haire,
 Whom of their sire Nereïdes men call,
 All which the Oceans daughter to him bare,
 The gray-eyede Doris; all which fifty are;
 All which she there on her attending had:
 Swift Proto; milde Eucratè; Thetis faire;
 Soft Spio; sweete Endorè; Sao sad;
 Light Doto; wanton Glaucè; and Galenè glad;

White-hand Eunica; proud Dynamenè;
 Ioyous Thalia; goodly Amphitrite;
 Lovely Pasithee; kinde Eulimene;
 Light-foote Cymothoë; and sweete Melitè;
 Fairest Pherusa; Phao lilly white;
 Wondred Agavè; Poris; and Nesæa;
 With Erato that doth in love delite;
 And Panopæ; and wise Protomedæa,
 And snowy-neckd Doris; and milke-white Galathæa;

Speedy Hippothoë; and chaste Actea;
 Large Lisianassa; and Pronæa sage;
 Euagorè; and light Pontoporea;
 And, she that with her least word can asswage
 The surging seas when they do sorest rage,
 Cymodocè; and stout Autonoë;
 And Neso; and Eionè well in age;
 And seeming still to smile Glauconomè.
 And, she that light of many heastes, Polynomè;

Fresh Alimeda deckt with girland greene;
 Hyponeo with salt-bedewed wrests;
 Laomedia like the chrystall sheene;
 Liagorè much praised for wise behests;
 And Psamathè for her brode snowy brests;
 Cymo; Eupompè; and Themistè iust;
 And, she that vertue loves and vice detests,
 Euarna; and Menippè true in trust;
 And Nemertea learned well to rule her lust.

All these the daughters of old Nereus were,
 Which have the sea in charge to them assinde,
 To rule his tides, and surges to upreare,
 To bring forth stormes, or fast them to upbinde,
 And sailers save from wreckes of wrathfull winde.
 And yet besides, three thousand more there were
 Of th' Oceans seede, but Ioves and Phæbus kinde;
 The which in floods and fountaines doe appere,
 And all mankinde do nourish with their waters clere.

The which, more eath it were for mortall wight
 To sell the sands, or count the starres on hye,
 Or ought more hard, then thinke to reckon right;
 But well I wote that these, which I desery,
 Were present at this great solemnity:
 And there, amongst the rest, the mother was
 Of luckelesse Marinell, Cymodocè;
 Which, for my muse herselfe now tyred has,
 Unto an other canto I will overpas.

CANTO XII.

Marin, for love of Florimell,
In languor wastes his life :
The nymph, his mother, getteth her
And gives to him for wife.

O WHAT an endlesse worke have I in hand,
To count the seas abundant progeny,
Whose fruitfull seede farre passeth those in land,
And also those which wounne in th' azure sky !
For much more eath to tell the starres on hy,
Albe they endlesse seeme in estimation,
Then to recount the seas posterity:
So fertile be the fouds in generation,
So huge their numbers, and so numberlesse their nation.

Therefore the antique wisards well invented
That Venus of the fomy sea was bred ;
For that the seas by her are most augmented.
Witnesse th' exceeding fry which there are fed,
And wondrous sholes which may of none be red.
Then blame me not if I have err'd in count
Of gods, of nymphs, of rivers, yet unred :
For though their numbers do much more surmount,
Yet all those same were there which erst I did recount.

All those were there, and many other more,
Whose names and nations were too long to tell,
That Proteus house they fild even to the dore ;
Yet were they all in order, as befell,
According their degrees disposed well.
Amongst the rest was faire Cymodocè,
The mother of unlucky Marinell,
Who thither with her came, to learne and see
The manner of the gods when they at banquet be.

But for he was halfe mortall, being bred
Of mortall sire, though of immortall wombe,
He might not with immortall food be fed,
Ne with th' eternall gods to bancket come ;
But walkt abroad, and round about did rome
To view the building of that uncouth place,
That seem'd unlike unto his earthly home :
Where, as he to and fro by chaunce did trace,
There unto him betid a disadventrous case.

Under the hanging of an hideous clieffe
 He heard the lamentable voice of one,
 That piteously complain'd her careful grioffe,
 Which never she before disclos'd to none,
 But to herselfe her sorrow did bemone:
 So feelingly her case she did complaine,
 That ruth it mov'd in the rocky stone,
 And made it seeme to feele her grievous paine,
 And oft to grone with billowes beating from the maine:

"Though vaine I see my sorrowes to unfold
 And count my cares, when none is nigh to heare;
 Yet, hoping grieffe may lessen being told,
 I will them tell though unto no man neare:
 For heaven, that unto all lends equall care,
 Is farre from hearing of my heavy plight;
 And lowest hell, to which I lie most neare,
 Cares not what evils hap to wretched wight;
 And greedy seas doe in the spoile of life delight.

"Yet loe! the seas I see by often beating
 Doe pearce the rockes; and hardest marble weares;
 But his hard rocky hart for no entreating
 Will yeeld, but, when my piteous plaints he heares,
 Is hardned more with my abundant teares:
 Yet though he never list to me relent,
 But let me waste in woe my wretched yeares,
 Yet will I never of my love repent,
 But ioy that for his sake I suffer prisonment.

"And when my weary ghost, with grieffe outworne,
 By timely death shall winne her wished rest,
 Let then this plaint unto his cares be borne,
 That blame it is, to him that armes protest,
 To let her die whom he might have redrest!"
 There did she pause, inforced to give place
 Unto the passion that her heart opprest;
 And, after she had wept and wail'd a space,
 She gan afresh thus to renew her wretched case:

"Ye gods of seas, if any gods at all
 Have care of right or ruth of wretches wrong,
 By one or other way me woefull thrall
 Deliver hence out of this dungeon strong,
 In which I daily dying am too long:
 And if ye deeme me death for loving one
 That loves not me, then doe it not prolong,
 But let me die and end my daies attone,
 And let him live unlov'd, or love himselfe alone.

"But if that life ye unto me decree,
 Then let mee live, as lovers ought to do,
 And of my lifes deare love beloved be:
 And, if he should through pride your doome undo,
 Do you by duresse him compell thereto,
 And in this prison put him here with me;
 One prison fittest is to hold us two:
 So had I rather to be thrall then free;
 Such thralldome or such freedome let it surely be.

"But O vaine iudgment, and conditions vaine,
 The which the prisoner points unto the free!
 The whiles I him condemne, and deeme his paine,
 He where he list goes loose, and laughs at me:
 So ever loose, so ever happy be!
 But whereso loose or happy that thou art,
 Know, Marinell, that all this is for thee!"
 With that she wept and wail'd, as if her hart [smarl.
 Would quite have burst through great abundance of her

All which complaint when Marinell had heard,
 And understood the cause of all her care
 To come of him for using her so hard;
 His stubborne heart that never felt misfare,
 Was toucht with soft remorse and pittie rare;
 That even for grief of minde he oft did grone,
 And inly wish that in his powre it weare
 Her to redresse: but since he meanes found none,
 He could no more but her great misery bemone.

Thus, whilst his stony heart with tender ruth,
 Was toucht, and mighty courage mollifide,
 Dame Venus sonne that tameth stubborne youth
 With iron bit, and maketh him abide
 Till like a victor on his backe he ride.
 Into his mouth his maystring bridle threw,
 That made him stoupe, till he did him bestride:
 Then gan he make him tread his steps anew,
 And learne to love by learning lovers paines to rew.

Now gan he in his grieved minde devise,
 How from that dungeon he might her enlarge:
 Some while he thought, by faire and humble wise
 To Proteus selfe to sue for her discharge:
 But then he fear'd his mothers former charge
 Gainst womens love, long given him in vaine:
 Then gan he thinke, perforce with sword and targe
 Her forth to fetch, and Proteus to constraine:
 But soone he gan such folly to forthinke againe.

Then did he cast to steale her thence away,
And with him beare where none of her might know.
But all in vaine: for why? he found no way
To enter in, or issue forth below;
For all about that rocke the sea did flow.
And though unto his will she given were,
Yet, without ship or bote her thence to row,
He wist not how her thence away to here;
And daunger well he wist long to continue there.

At last, whenas no meanes he could invent,
Backe to himselfe he gan returne the blame,
That was the author of her punishment;
And with vile curses and reprochfull shame
To damne himselfe by every evil name,
And deeme unworthy or of love or life,
That had despise so chaste and faire a dame,
Which him had sought through trouble and long strife
Yet had refuse a god that her had sought to wife.

In this sad plight he walked here and there,
And romed round about the rocke in vaine,
As he had lost himselfe he wist not where;
Oft listening if he mote her heare againe;
And still bemoaning her unworthy paine:
Like as an hynde whose calfe is false unwares
Into some pit, where she him heares complaine,
An hundred times about the pit side fares,
Right sorrowfully mourning her bereaved cares.

And now by this the feast was throughly ended,
And every one gan homeward to resort:
Which seeing, Marinell was sore offended
That his departure thence should be so short,
And leave his love in that sea-walled fort
Yet durst he not his mother disobay;
But, her attending in full seemly sort,
Did march amongst the many all the way;
And all the way did inly mourne, like one astray.

Being returned to his mothers bowre,
In solitary silence far from wight
He gan record the lamentable stowre,
In which his wretched love lay day and night,
For his deare sake, that ill deserv'd that plight:
The thought whereof empierst his hart so deepe,
That of no worldly thing he tooke delight;
Ne dayly food did take, ne nightly sleepe,
But pyn'd, and mourn'd, and languisht, and alone did weepe;

That in short space his wonted chearefull hew
 Gan fade, and lively spirits deaded quight:
 His cheeke-bones raw, and eie-pits hollow grew,
 And brawney armes had lost their knowen might,
 That nothing like himselfe he seem'd in sight.
 Ere long so weake of limbe, and sick of love
 He woxe, that lenger he note stand upright,
 But to his bed was brought, and layd above,
 Like ruefull ghost, unable once to stir or move,

Which when his mother saw, she in her mind
 Was troubled sore, ne wist well what to weene;
 Ne could by search nor any meanes out find
 The secret cause and nature of his teene,
 Whereby she might apply some medicine;
 But weeping day and night did him attend,
 And mourn'd to see her losse before her cyne,
 Which griev'd her more that she it could not mend:
 To see an helplesse evill double griefe doth lend.

Nought could she read the root of his disease,
 Ne weene what mister maladie it is,
 Whereby to seeke some means it to appease.
 Most did she thinke, but most she thought amis,
 That that same former fatall wound of his
 Whyleare by Tryphon was not throughly healed,
 But closely rankled under th' orifis:
 Least did she thinke, that which he most concealed,
 That love it was, which in his hart lay unrevealed.

Therefore to Tryphon she againe doth hast,
 And him doth chyde as false and fraudulent,
 That fayld the trust which she in him had plast,
 To cure her sonne, as he his faith had lent;
 Who now was falne into new languishment
 Of his old hurt, which was not throughly cured.
 So backe he came unto her patient;
 Where, searching every part, her well assured
 That it was no old sore which his new paine procured;

But that it was some other maladie,
 Or grief unknowne, which he could not discerne:
 So left he her withouten remedie.
 Then gan her heart to faint, and quake, and earne,
 And inly troubled was, the truth to learne.
 Unto himselfe she came, and him besought,
 Now with faire speeches, now with threatenings sterne,
 If ought lay hidden in his grieved thought,
 It to reveale: who still her answered, there was nought.

Nathlesse she rested not so satisfide;
 But leaving watry gods, as booting nought,
 Unto the shinie heaven in haste she hide,
 And thence Apollo king of leaches brought.
 Apollo came; who, soone as he had sought
 Through his disease, did by and by out find
 That he did languish of some inward thought,
 The which afflicted his engrieved mind;
 Which love he red to be, that leads each living kind.

Which when he had unto his mother told,
 She gan thereat to fret and greatly grieve:
 And, comming to her sonne, gan first to scold
 And chyde at him that made her misbelieve:
 But afterwards she gan him soft to shrieve,
 And woe with fair intreatie, to disclose
 Which of the nymphes his heart so sore did mieve:
 For sure she weend it was some one of those,
 Which he had lately seene, that for his love he chose.

Now lesse she feared that same fatall read,
 That warned him of womens love beware:
 Which being ment of mortal creatures sead,
 For love of nymphes she thought she need not care
 But promist him, whatever wight she weare,
 That she her love to him would shortly gaine:
 So he her told: but soone as she did heare
 That Florimell it was which wrought his paine,
 She gan afresh to chafe, and grieve in every vaine.

Yet since she saw the streight extremitie,
 In which his life unluckily was layd,
 It was no time to scan the prophcie,
 Whether old Proteus true or false had sayd,
 That his decay should happen by a mayd;
 (It's late, in death, of daunger to advize;
 Or love forbid him, that is life denayd;)
 But rather gan in troubled mind devise
 How she that ladies libertie might enterprize.

To Proteus selfe to sew she thought it vaine,
 Who was the root and worker of her woe;
 Nor unto any meaner to complaine;
 But unto great King Neptune selfe did goe,
 And, on her knee before him falling lowe,
 Made humble suit unto his maiestie
 To graunt to her her sonnes life, which his foe,
 A cruell tyrant, had presumptuouslie
 By wicked doome condemn'd a wretched death to die.

To whom god Neptune, softly smyling, thus:
 "Daughter, me seemes of double wrong ye plaine,
 Gainst one that hath both wronged you and us:
 For death t'adward I ween'd did appertaine
 To none but to the seas sole souveraine:
 Read therefore who it is which this hath wrought,
 And for what cause; the truth discover plaine:
 For never wight so evill did or thought, [nought."
 But would some rightfull cause pretend, though rightly

To whom she answer'd; "Then it is by name
 Proteus, that hath ordayn'd my sonne to die;
 For that a waift, the which by fortune came
 Upon your seas, he claym'd as propertie:
 And yet nor his, nor his in equitie,
 But yours the waift by high prerogative:
 Therefore I humbly crave your majestie
 It to replevie, and my sonne reprive:
 So shall you by one gift save all us three alive."

He graunted it: and streight his warrant made,
 Under the sea-god's scale autenticall,
 Commaunding Proteus straight t'enlarge the mayd
 Which wandring on his seas imperiall
 He lately tooke, and sithence kept as thrall,
 Which she receiving with meete thankfulnessse,
 Departed straight to Proteus therewithall:
 Who, reading it with inward loathfulnessse,
 Was grieved to restore the pledge he did possesse.

Yet durst he not the warrant to withstand,
 But unto her delivered Florimell:
 Whom she receiving by the lilly hand,
 Admyr'd her beautie much, as she mote well,
 For she all living creatures did excell,
 And was right ioyous that she gotten had
 So faire a wife for her sonne Marinell.
 So home with her she streight the virgin lad,
 And shewed her to him then being sore bestad.

Who soone as he beheld that angels face
 Adorn'd with all divine perfection,
 His cheared heart eftsounes away gan chace
 Sad death, revived with her sweet inspection,
 And feeble spirit inly felt refection;
 As withered weed through cruell winters tine,
 That feelles the warmth of sunny beames reflection.
 Liftes up his head that did before decline,
 And gins to spread his leafe before the faire sunshine.

Right so himselfe did Marinell upreare,
When he in place his dearest love did spy;
And though his limbs could not his bodie beare,
Ne former strength returne so suddenly,
Yet chearefull signes he shewed outwardly.
Ne lesse was she in secret hart affected,
But that she masked it with modestie,
For feare she should of lightnesse be detected:
Which to another place I leave to be perfected.

THE FIFTH BOOKE
THE FAERIE QUEENE,

CONTAYNING

The Legend of Artegall, or of Justice.

---

SO oft as I with state of present time
The image of the antique world compare,
Whenas mans age was in his freshest prime,
And, the first blossome of faire vertue bare;
Such oddes I finde twixt those, and these which are,
As that, through long continuance of his course,
Me seemes the world is runne quite out of square
From the first point of his appointed sourse;
And being once amisse growes daily wourse and wourse:

For from the golden age, that first was named,
It's now at earst become a stonie one;
And men themselves, the which at first were framed
Of earthly mould, and form'd of flesh and bone,
Are now transformed into hardest stone;
Such as behind their backs (so backward bred)
Were throwne by Pyrrha and Deucalion:
And if then those may any worse be red,
They into that ere long will be degenerated.

Let none then blame me, if, in discipline
Of vertue and of civill uses lore,
I do not forme them to the common line
Of present dayes which are corrupted sore;
But to the antique use which was of yore,
When good was onely for itselfe desyred,
And all men sought their owne, and none no more;
When iustice was not for most meed outhyred,
But simple truth did rayne, and was of all admyred.

For that which all men then did vertue call,
Is now cald vice; and that which vice was light,
Is now light vertue, and so us'd of all:
Right now is wrong, and wrong that was is right;
As all things else in time are chaunged quight:
Ne wonder; for the heavens revolution
Is wandred farre from where it first was pight,
And so do make contrarie constitution
Of all this lower world toward his dissolution.

For whoso list into the heavens looke,
 And search the courses of the rowling spheares,
 Shall find that from the point where they first tooke
 There setting forth, in these few thousand yeares
 They all are wandred much; that plaine appears:
 For that same golden fleecy ram, which bore
 Phrixus and Helle from their stepdames feares,
 Hath now forgot where he was plast of yore,
 And shouldred hath the bull which fayre Europa bore:

And eke the bull hath with his bow-bent horne
 So hardly butted those two twinnes of love,
 That they have crusht the crab, and quite him borne
 Into the great Nemaean lions grove.
 So now all range, and doe at randon rove
 Out of their proper places farre away,
 And all this world with them amisse doe move,
 And all his creatures from their course astray;
 Till they arrive at their last ruinous decay.

Ne is that same great glorious lampe of light,
 That doth enlumine all these lesser fyres,
 In better case; ne keepes his course more right,
 But is miscaried with the other spheres:
 For since the terme of fourteen hundred yeres,
 That learned Ptolomæe his light did take,
 He is declyned from that marke of theirs
 Nigh thirtie minutes to the southerne lake;
 That makes me feare in time he will us quite forsake.

And if to those Ægyptian wisards old
 (Which in star-read were wont have best insight)
 Faith may be given, it is by them told
 That since the time they first tooke the sunns light,
 Foure times his place he shifted hath in sight,
 And twice hath risen where he now doth west,
 And wested twice where he ought rise aright.
 But most is Mars amisse of all the rest;
 And next to him old Saturne, that was wont be best.

For during Saturnes ancient raigne it's sayd
 That all the world with goodnesse did abound;
 All loved vertue, no man was affrayd
 Of force, ne fraud in wight was to be found,
 No warre was knowne, no dreadful trompets sound;
 Peace universal rayn'd mongst men and beasts:
 And all things freely grew out of the ground:
 Iustice sate high ador'd with solemne feasts,
 And to all people did divide her dred, beheasts:

Most sacred Vertue she of all the rest,
 Resembling God in his imperiall might;
 Whose souveraine powre is herein most exprest,
 That both to good and bad he dealeth right,
 And all his workes with iustice hath bedight.
 That powre he also doth to princes lend
 And makes them like himselfe in glorious sight
 To sit in his own seate, his cause to end,
 And rule his people right, as he doth recommend.

Dread soverayne goddess, that doest highest sit
 In seate of iudgement in th' Almightyes stead,
 And with magnificke might and wondrous wit
 Doest to thy people righteous doome aread,
 That furthest nations filles with awfull dread,
 Pardon the boldnesse of thy basest thrall,
 That dare discourse of so divine a read,
 As thy great iustice prayesd over all;
 The instrument whereof loe here thy Artegall.

CANTO I.

Artegall trayn'd in iustice lore
 Irenas quest pursewed;
 He doeth avenge on Sanglier
 His ladies bloud embrewed.

THOUGH vertue then were held in highest price,
 In those old times of which I doe intreat,
 Yet then likewise the wicked seede of vice
 Began to spring; which shortly grew full great.
 And with their boughes the gentle plants did beat:
 But evermore some of the vertuous race
 Rose up, inspired with heroicke heat,
 That cropt the branches of the sient base,
 And with strong hand their fruitfull rancknes' did deface.

Such first was Bacchus, that with furious might
 All th' east before untam'd did over-ronne,
 And wrong repressed, and establisht right,
 Which lawlesse men had formerly fordonne:
 Their Iustice first her princely rule begonne.
 Next Hercules his like ensample shewed,
 Who all the west with equall conquest wonne,
 And monstrous tyrants with his club subdued;
 The club of Iustice dread with kingly powre endewed.

And such was he of whom I have to tell,
 The champion of true iustice, Artegall:
 Whom (as ye lately mote remember well)
 An hard adventure, which did then befall,
 Into redoubted perill forth did call;
 That was, to succour a distressed dame
 Whom a strong tyrant did uniuſtly thrall,
 And from the heritage, which she did clame,
 Did with strong hand withhold; Grantorto was his name.

Wherefore the lady, which Irena hight
 Did to the Faerie Queene her way addresse,
 To whom complainyng her afflicted plight,
 She her besought of gracious redresse:
 That soveraine queene, that mightie emperesse,
 Whose glorie is to aide all suppliants pore,
 And of weake princes to be patronesse,
 Chose Artegall to right her to restore;
 For that to her he seem'd best skild in righteous lore.

For Artegall in iustice was upbrought
 Even from the cradle of his infancie
 And all the depth of rightfull doome was taught
 By faire Astræa, with great industrie,
 Whilest here on earth she lived mortallie:
 For, till the world from his perfection fell
 Into all filth and foule iniquitie,
 Astræa here mongst earthly men did dwell,
 And in the rules of iustice them instructed well.

Whiles through the world she walked in this sort,
 Upon a day she found this gentle childe
 Amongst his peres playing his childish sport;
 Whom seeing fit, and with no crime defilde,
 She did allure with gifts and speeches milde
 To wend with her: so thence him farre she brought
 Into a cave from companie exile,
 In which she noursled him, till yeares he raught;
 And all the discipline of iustice there him taught.

There she him taught to weigh both right and wrong
 In equall ballance with due recompence,
 And equitie to measure out along
 According to the line of conscience,
 Whenso it needs with rigour to dispence;
 Of all the which, for want there of mankind,
 She caused him to make experience
 Upon wyld beasts, which she in woods did find,
 With wrongfull powre oppressing others of their kind.

Thus she him trayned, and thus she him taught
 In all the skill of deeming wrong and right,
 Untill the ripenesse of mans yeares he aught;
 That even wilde beasts did feare his awfull sight,
 And men admyr'd his over-ruling might;
 Ne any liv'd on ground that durst withstand
 His dreadfull heast, much lesse him match in fight,
 Or bide the horror of his wreakfull hand,
 Whenso he list in wrath lift up his steely brand:

Which steely brand, to make him dreaded more
 She gave unto him, gotten by her slight
 And earnest search, where it was kept in store
 In Ioves eternall house, unwist of wight,
 Since he himselfe it us'd in that great fight
 Against the Titans, that whylome rebelled
 Gaunst highest heaven: Chrysaor it was hight;
 Chrysaor, that all other swords excelled,
 Well prov'd in that same day when Iove those gyants quelled:

For of most perfect metall it was made,
 Tempred with adamant amongst the same,
 And garnisht all with gold upon the blade
 In goodly wise, whereof it tooke his name,
 And was of no lesse vertue then of fame:
 For there no substance was so firme and hard,
 But it would pierce or cleave whereso it came;
 Ne any armour could his dint out-ward;
 But wheresoever it did light, it throughly shard.

Now when the world with sinne gan to abound,
 Astræa loathing lenger here to space
 Mongst wicked men, in whom no truth she found,
 Return'd to heaven, whence she deriv'd her race;
 Where she hath now an everlasting place
 Mongst those twelve signes, which nightly we do see
 The heavens bright-shining baudricke to enchace;
 And is the Virgin, sixt in her degree,
 And next herselfe her righteous ballance hanging bee.

But when she parted hence she left her groome,
 An yron man, which did on her attend
 Always to execute her steadfast doome,
 And willed him with Artegall to wend,
 And doe whatever thing he did intend:
 His name was Talus, made of yron mould,
 Immoveable, resistlesse, without end;
 Who in his hand an yron flae did hould,
 With which he thresht out falshood, and did truth unfould.

He now went with him in this new inquest,
 Him for to aide, if aide he chaunst to neede,
 Against that cruell tyrant, which opprest
 The faire Irena with his foule misdeede,
 And kept the crowne in which she should succeed:
 And now together on their way they bin,
 Whenas they saw a squire in squalid weed
 Lamenting sore his sorrowfull sad tyne
 With many bitter teares shed from his blubbred cyne.

To whom as they approched, they espide
 A sorie sight as ever seene with eye,
 And headlesse ladie lying him beside
 In her owne blood all wallow'd wofully,
 That her gay clothes did in discolour die,
 Much was he moved at that ruefull sight;
 And flam'd with zeale of vengeance inwardly
 He askt who had that dame so foully dight,
 Or whether his owne hand, or whether other wight?

"Ah! woe is me, and well away," quoth hee
 Bursting forth teares like springs out of a banke,
 "That ever I this dismall day did see!
 Full farre was I from thinking such a pranke;
 Yet litle losse it were, and mickle thanke,
 If I should graunt that I have doen the same,
 That I mote drinke the cup whereof she dranke;
 But that I should die guiltie of the blame,
 The which another did who now is fled with shame."

"Who was it then," sayd Artegall, "that wrought
 And why? doe it declare unto me trew."
 "A knight," said he, "if knight he may be thought,
 That did his hand in ladies bloud embrew,
 And for no cause, but as I shall you shew.
 This day as I in solace sate hereby
 With a fayre love whose losse I now do rew,
 There came this knight, having in companie
 This lucklesse ladie which now here doth headlesse lie.

"He, whether mine seem'd fayrer in his eye,
 Or that he waxed weary of his owne,
 Would change with me; but I did it denye,
 So did the ladies both, as may be knowne;
 But he, whose spirit was with pride upblowne,
 Would not so rest contented with his right;
 But, having from his courser her downe throwne,
 Fro me reft mine away by lawlesse might,
 And on his steed her set to beare her out of sight.

"Which when his ladie saw, she follow'd fast
 And on him catching hold gan loud to crie
 Not so to leave her nor away to cast,
 But rather of his hand besought to die:
 With that his sword he drew all wrathfully,
 And at one stroke cropt off her head with scorne,
 In that same place whereas it now doth lie.
 So he my love away with him hath borne,
 And left me here both his and mine owne love to mourne."

"Aread," said he; "which way then did he make?
 And by what markes may he be knowne againe?"
 "To hope," quoth he, "him soone to overtake,
 That hence so long departed, is but vaine:
 But yet he pricked over yonder plaine,
 And as I marked bore upon his shield,
 By which it's easie him to know againe,
 A broken sword within a bloodie field:
 Expressing well his nature which the same did wield."

No sooner sayd, but streight he after sent
 His yron page, who him pursew'd so light.
 As that it seem'd above the ground he went:
 For he was swift as swallow in her flight,
 And strong as lyon in his lordly might.
 It was not long before he overtooke
 Sir Sanglier, (so cleeped was that knight),
 Whom at the first he ghessed by his looke,
 And by the other markes which of his shield he tooke,

He bad him stay and backe with him retire;
 Who, full of scorne to be commaunded so,
 The lady to alight did eft require,
 Whilest he reformed that uncivill fo;
 And streight at him with all his force did go:
 Who mov'd no more therewith, then when a rocke
 Is lightly stricken with some stonës throw;
 But to him leaping lent him such a knocke,
 That on the ground he layd him like a sencelesse blocke.

But, ere he could himselfe recure againe,
 Him in his iron paw he seized had;
 That when he wak't out of his warelesse paine.
 He found himself unwist so ill bestad,
 That lim he could not wag: thence he him ad,
 Bound like a beast appointed to the stall:
 The sight whereof the lady sore adrad,
 And fain'd to fly for feare of being thrall;
 But he her quickly stayd, and forst to wend withall.

When to the place they came where Artegall
 By that same carefull squire did then abide,
 He gently gan him to demaund of all
 That did betwixt him and that squire betide:
 Who with sterne countenance and indignant pride
 Did aunswere, that of all he guiltlesse stood,
 And his accuser thereuppon deside;
 For neither he did shed that ladies blood,
 Nor tooke away his love, but his owne proper good.

Well did the squire perceive himselfe too weake
 To aunswere his defiaunce in the field,
 And rather chose his challenge off to breake
 Then to approve his right with speare and shield,
 And rather guilty chose himselfe to yield.
 But Artegall by signes perceiuing plaine
 That he it was not which that lady kild,
 But that strange knight, the fairer love to gaine,
 Did cast about by sleight the truth thereout to straine;

And sayd: "Now sure this doubtfull causes right
 Can hardly but by sacrament be tride,
 Or else by ordele, or by blooddy fight,
 That ill perhaps mote fall to either side:
 But if ye please that I your cause decide,
 Perhaps I may all further quarrell end,
 So ye will sweare my iudgement to abide."
 Thereto they both did franckly condescend,
 And to his doome with listfull eares did both attend.

"Sith then," sayd he, "ye both the dead deny,
 And both the living lady claime your right,
 Let both the dead and living equally
 Devided be betwixt you here in sight,
 And each of either take his share aright,
 But looke, who does dissent from this my read,
 He for a twelve moneths day shall in despite
 Beare for his penaunce that same ladies head;
 To witnesse to the world that she by him is deal."

Well pleased with that doome was Sangliere,
 And offred streight the lady to be slaine:
 But that same squire to whom she was more dere,
 Whennas he saw she should be cut in twaine,
 Did yield she rather should with him remaine
 Alive then to himselfe be shared dead;
 And rather then his love should suffer paine,
 He chose with shame to beare that ladies head:
 True love despiseth shame when life is cald in dread.

Whom when so willing Artegall perceaved;
 "Not so, thou squire," he sayd. "but thine I deeme
 The living lady, which from thee he reaved:
 For worthy thou of her doest rightly seeme.
 And you, sir knight, that love so light esteeme,
 As that ye would for little leave the same,
 Take here your owne that doth you best besee me,
 And with it beare the burden of defame:
 Your owne dead ladies head, to tell abroad your shame.'

But Sangliere disdained much his doome,
 And sternly gan repine at his beheast;
 Ne would for ought obay, as did become,
 To beare that ladies head before his breast:
 Untill that Talus had his pride repress,
 And forced him, maulgrè, it up to reare.
 Who when he saw it bootelesse to resist,
 He tooke it up, and thence with him did beare;
 As rated spaniell takes his burden up for feare.

Much did that squire Sir Artegall adore
 For his great iustice held in high regard;
 And as his squire him offred evermore
 To serve, for want of other meete reward,
 And wend with him on his adventure hard:
 But he thereto would by no meanes consent;
 But leaving him forth on his iourney far'd:
 No wight with him but onely Talus went;
 They two enough t'encounter an whole regiment.

CANTO II.

Artegall heares of Florimell;
 Does with the pagan fight:
 Him slayes; drownes Lady Munera;
 Does race her castle quight.

None is more honourable to a knight,
 Ne better doth besee me brave chevalry,
 Then to defend the feeble in their right,
 And wrong redresse in such as wend awry:
 Whilome those great herôes got thereby
 Their greatest glory for their rightfull deedes,
 And place deserved with the gods on hy:
 Herein the noblesse of this knight exceeds,
 Who now to perils great for iustice sake proceedes;

To which as he now was uppon the way,
 He chaunst to meet a dwarfe in hasty course;
 Whom he requir'd his forward hast to stay,
 Till he of tidings mote with him discourse.
 Loth was the dwarfe, yet did he stay perforce,
 And gan of sundry newes his store to tell,
 As to his memory they had recourse;
 But chiefly of the fairest Florimell,
 How she was found againe, and spoused to Marinell.

For this was Dony, Florimells owne dwarfe,
 Whom having lost (as ye have heard whyleare)
 And finding in the way the scattred scarfe,
 The fortune of her life long time did feare:
 But of her health when Artegall did heare,
 And safe returne, he was full inly glad,
 And askt him where and when her bridale cheare
 Should be solémniz'd: for if time he had,
 He would be there, and honor to her spousall ad.

"Within three daies," quoth he, "as I do heare,
 It will be at the castle of the strond;
 What time, if naught me let, I will be there
 To do her service so as I am bond.
 But in my way a little here beyond
 A cursed cruell sarazin doth wonne,
 That keepe a bridges passage by strong hond,
 And many errant knights hath there fordonne;
 That makes all men for feare that passage for to shonne."

"What mister wight," quoth he, "and how far hence
 Is he, that doth to travellers such harmes?"
 "He is," said he, "a man of great defence;
 Expert in battell and in deedes of armes;
 And more emboldned by the wicked charmes,
 With which his daughter doth him still support;
 Having great lordships got and goodly farmes
 Through strong oppression of his powre extort;
 By which he stil them holds, and keepe with strong effort.

"And dayly he his wrongs encreaseth more;
 For never wight he lets to passe that way,
 Over his bridge, albee he rich or poore,
 But he him makes his passage-penny pay:
 Else he doth hold him backe or beat away.
 Thereto he hath a groome of evill guise,
 Whose scalp is bare, that bondage doth bewray,
 Which pils and pils the poore in piteous wize;
 But he himselfe upon the rich doth tyrannize.

" His name is hight Pollentè, rightly so,
 For that he is so puissant and strong,
 That with his powre he all doth over go,
 And makes them subiect to his mighty wrong;
 And some by sleight he eke doth underfong:
 For on a bridge he custometh to fight,
 Which is but narrow, but exceeding long;
 And in the same are many trap-fals pight,
 Through which the rider downe doth fall through oversight.

" And underneath the same a river flowes,
 That is both swift and dangerous deepe withall;
 Into the which whomso he overthrowes,
 All destitute of helpe doth headlong fall;
 But he himselfe through practise usuall
 Leapes forth into the flood, and there assaies
 His foe confused through his sodaine fall,
 That horse and man he equally dismaies,
 And either both them drownes, or trayterously slaies.

" Then doth he take the spoile of them at will,
 And to his daughter brings, that dwells thereby:
 Who all that comes doth take, and therewith fill
 The coffers of her wicked treasury;
 Which she with wrongs hath heaped up so hy
 That many princes she in wealth exceeds,
 And purchast all the countrey lying ny
 With the revenue of her plenteous meedes:
 Her name is Munera, agreeing with her deedes.

" Thereto she is full faire, and rich attired,
 With golden hands and silver fecte beside,
 That many lords have her to wife desired:
 But she them all despiseth for great pride."
 " Now by my life," sayd he, " and God to guide,
 None other way will I this day betake,
 But by that bridge whereas he doth abide:
 Therefore me thither lead." No more he spake,
 But thitherward forthright his ready way did make

Unto the place he came within a while,
 Where on the bridge he ready armed saw
 The Sarazin, awayting for some spoile:
 Who as they to the passage gan to draw,
 A villaine to them came with scull all raw,
 That passage-money did of them require,
 According to the custome of their law:
 To whom he aunswerd wroth, " loe there thy hire;"
 And with that word him strooke, that streight he did expire.

Which when the pagan saw he wexed wroth,
 And streight himselfe unto the fight addrest;
 Ne was Sir Artegall behinde: so both
 Together ran with ready speares in rest.
 Right in the midst, whereas they brest to brest
 Should meete, a trap was letten downe to fall
 Into the flood: streight leapt the carle unblest,
 Well weening that his foe was false withall:
 But he was well aware, and leapt before his fall.

There being both together in the flood,
 They each at other tyrannously flew;
 Ne ought the water cooled their whot bloud,
 But rather in them kindled choler new:
 But there the Paynim, who that use well knew
 To fight in water, great advantage had,
 That oftentimes him nigh he overthrew:
 And eke the courser whereuppon he rad
 Could swim like to a fish whiles he his backe bestrad.

Which oddes whenas Sir Artegall espide,
 He saw no way but close with him in hast;
 And to him driving strongly downe the tide
 Uppon his iron collar griped fast,
 That with the straint his wesand nigh he brast.
 There they together strove and struggled long,
 Either the other from his steed to cast;
 Ne ever Artegall his griple strong
 For any thinge wold slacke, but still upon him hong.

As when a dolphin and a seale are met
 In the wide champion of the ocean plaine,
 With cruell chaufe their courages they whet,
 The maysterdome of each by force to gaine,
 And dreadfull battaile twixt them do darraine;
 They snuf, they snort, they bounce, they rage, they rore,
 That all the sea, disturbed with their traine,
 Doth frie with fume above the surges hore:
 Such was betwixt these two the troublesome uprore.

So Artegall at length him forst forsake
 His horses backe for dread of being drownd,
 And to his handy swimming him betake.
 Eftsoones himselfe he from his hold unbownd,
 And then no ods at all in him he fownd;
 For Artegall in swimming skilfull was,
 And durst the depth of any water sownd.
 So ought each knight, that use of perill has,
 In swimming be expert, through waters force to pas.

Then very doubtfull was the warres event,
 Uncertaine whether had the better side:
 For both were skild in that experiment,
 And both in armes well trained and throughly tride.
 But Artegall was better breath'd beside,
 And towards th' end grew greater in his might,
 That his faint foe no longer could abide
 His puissance, ne beare himsele upright;
 But from the water to the land betooke his flight.

But Artegall pursewd him still so neare
 With bright Chrysaor in his cruell hand,
 That, as his head he gan a litle reare
 Above the brinke to tread upon the land,
 He smote it off, that tumbling on the strand
 It bit the earth for very fell despight,
 And gnashed with his teeth, as if he band
 High God, whose goodnesse he despaired quight,
 Or curst the hand which did that vengeance on him dight.

His corps was carried downe along the lee,
 Whose waters with his filthy bloud it stayned:
 But his blasphemous head, that all might see,
 He pitcht upon a pole on high ordayned;
 Where many years it afterwards remayned,
 To be a mirrour to all mighty men,
 In whose right hands great power is containd,
 That none of them the feeble over-ren,
 But alwaies doe their powre within iust compasse pen.

That done, unto the castle he did wend,
 In which the Paynims daughter did abide,
 Guarded of many which did her defend:
 Of whom he entrance sought, but was denide,
 And with reprochfull blasphemy deside,
 Beaten with stones downe from the battilment,
 That he was forced to withdraw aside;
 And bad his servant Talus to invent
 Which way he enter might without endangerment.

Eftsoones his page drew to the castle gate,
 And with his iron flae at it let flie,
 That all the warders it did sore amate,
 The which ere-while spake so reprochfully,
 And made them stoupe, that looked earst so hie.
 Yet still he bet and bounst uppon the dore,
 And thundred stokes theron so hideouslie,
 That all the peece he shook from the flore,
 And filled all the house with feare and great uprore.

With noise whereof the lady forth appeared
 • Uppon the castle wall; and, when she saw
 The dangerous state in which she stood, she feared
 The sad effect of her neare overthrow;
 And gan intreat that iron man below
 To cease his outrage, and him faire besought;
 Sith neither force of stones which they did throw,
 • Nor powr of charms, which she against him wrought
 Might otherwise prevaile, or make him cease for ought.

But, whenas yet she saw him to proccede
 Unmov'd with praiers or with piteous thought,
 She ment him to corrupt with goodly meede;
 And causde great sakes with endlesse riches fraught
 Unto the battilment to be upbrought,
 And powred forth over the castle wall,
 • That she might win some time, though dearly bought,
 Whilest he to gathering of the gold did fall;
 But he was nothing mov'd nor tempted therewithall:

But still continu'd his assault the more,
 And layd on load with his huge yron flaile,
 That at the length he has yrent the dore
 And made way for his maister to assaile:
 Who being entred, nought did them availe
 For wight against his powre themselves to reare:
 Each one did flie; their hearts began to faile;
 And hid themselves in corners here and there;
 And eke their dame halfe dead did hido herself for feare.

Long they her sought, yet no where could they finde her
 That sure they ween'd she was escapt away:
 But Talus, that could like a lime-hound winde her,
 And all things secrete wisely could bewray,
 At length found out whereas she hidden lay
 Under an heape of gold: thence he her drew
 By the faire lockes, and fowly did array
 Withouten pitty of her goodly hew,
 That Artegall himselve her seemelesse plight did rew.

Yet for no pitty would he change the course
 Of iustice, which in Talus hand did lye;
 Who rudely hayld her forth without remorse,
 Still holding up her suppliant hands on hye,
 And kneeling at his feete submissively:
 But he her suppliant hands, those hands of gold,
 And eke her feete, those feete of silver trye,
 Which sought unrighteousnesse, and iustice sold,
 Chopt off, and nayld on high, that all might them behold.

Herselfe then tooke he by the sclender wast
In vaine loud crying, and into the flood
Over the castle wall adowne her cast,
And there her drowned in the dirty mud:
But the streame washt away her guilty blood.
Thereafter all that mucky pelfe he tooke,
The spoile of peoples evil gotten good,
The which her sire had scrap't by hooke and crooke,
And burning all to ashes powr'd it down the brooke.

And lastly all that castle quite he raced,
Even from the sole of his foundation,
And all the hewen stones thereof defaced,
That there mote be no hope of reparation,
Nor memory thereof to any nation.
All which when Talus throughly had perfourmed,
Sir Artegall undid the evil fashion,
And wicked customes of that bridge reformed:
Which done, unto his former iourney he retourned.

In which they measur'd mickle weary way,
Till that at length nigh to the sea they drow;
By which as they did travell on a day,
They saw before them, far as they could vew,
Full many people gathered in a crew;
Whose great assembly they did much admire;
For never there the like resort they knew.
So towards them they coasted, to enquire
What thing so many nations met did there desire.

There they beheld a mighty gyant stand
Upon a rocke, and holding forth on hie
An huge great paire of ballance in his hand,
With which he boasted in his surquedrie
That all the world he would weigh equallie,
If ought he had the same to counterpoys:
For want whereof he weighed vanity,
And fild his ballaunce full of idle toys:
Yet was admired much of fooles, women, and boys.

He sayd that he would all the earth uptake
And all the sea, divided each from either:
So would he of the fire one ballaunce make,
And one of th' ayre, without or wind or wether:
Then would he ballaunce heaven and hell together
And all that did within them all containe;
Of all whose weight he would not misse a fether:
And looke what surplus did of each remaine,
He would to his owne part restore the same againe.

For why, he sayd, they all unequal were,
 And had encroched upon others share;
 Like as the sea (which plaine he shewed there)
 Had worne the earth; so did the fire the aire;
 So all the rest did others parts empaire:
 And so were realmes and nations run awry.
 All which he undertooke for to repaire,
 In sort as they were formed aunciently;
 And all things would reduce unto equality.

Therefore the vulgar did about him flocke,
 And cluster thicke unto his leasings vaine;
 Like foolish flies about an hony-crooke;
 In hope by him great benefite to gaine,
 And uncontrolled freedome to obtaine.
 All which when Artegall did see and heare.
 How he misled the simple peoples traine,
 In sdeignfull wize he drew unto him neare,
 And thus unto him spake, without regard or feare;

"Thou, that presum'st to weigh the world anew,
 And all things to an equall to restore,
 Instead of right me seemes great wrong dost shew,
 And far above thy forces pitch to sore:
 For, ere thou limit what is lesse or more
 In every thing, thou oughtest first to know
 What was the poyse of every part of yore:
 And looke then, how much it doth overflow
 Or faile thereof, so much is more then iust to trow.

"For at the first they all created were
 In goodly measure by their Makers might;
 And weighed out in ballaunces so nere,
 That not a dram was missing of their right:
 The earth was in the middle centre pight,
 In which it doth immoveable abide,
 Hemd in with waters like a wall in sight,
 And they with aire, that not a drop can slide:
 Al which the heavens containe, and in their courses guide.

'Such heavenly iustice doth among them raine,
 That every one doe know their certaine bound;
 In which they doe these many yeares remaine,
 And mongst them al no change hath yet beene found:
 But if thou now shouldst weigh them new in pound,
 We are not sure they would so long remaine:
 All change is perillous, and all chaunce unsound.
 Therefore leave off to weigh them all againe,
 Till we may be assur'd they shall their course retaine."

"Thou foolishhe elfe," said then the gyant wroth,
"Seest not how badly all things present bee,
And each estate quite out of order goth?
The sea itselfe doest thou not plainely see
Encroch uppon the land there under thee?
And th' earth itselfe how daily its increast,
By all that dying to it turned be?
Were it not good that wrong were then surceast,
And from the most that some were given to the least?"

"Therefore I will throw downe these mountains hie,
And make them leuell with the lowly plaine,
These towring rocks, which reach unto the skie,
I will thrust downe into the deepest maine,
And, as they were, them equalize againe.
Tyrants, that make men subiect to their law,
I will suppress, that they no more may raine;
And lordings curbe that commons over-aw;
And all the wealth of rich men to the poore will draw."

"Of things unscene how canst thou deeme aright,"
Then answered the righteous Artegall,
"Sith thou misdeem'st so much of things in sight?
What though the sea with waves continuall
Doe eate the earth, it is no more at all;
Ne is the earth the lesse, or loseth ought:
For whatsoever from one place doth fall
Is with the tyde unto another brought:
For there is nothing lost, that may be found if sought.

"Likewise the earth is not augmented more
By all that dying into it doe fade;
For of the earth they formed were of yore:
However gay their blossome or their blade
Doe flourish now, they into dust shall vade.
What wrong then is it if that when they die
They turne to that whereof they first were made?
All in the powre of their great Maker lie:
All creatures must obey the voice of the Most Hie.

"They live, they die, like as He doth ordaine,
Ne ever any asketh reason why.
The hils doe not the lowly dales disdain;
The dales doe not the lofty hils envy.
He maketh kings to sit in soverainty;
He maketh subiects to their powre obay;
He pulleth downe, He setteth up on hy;
He gives to this, from that He takes away:
For all we have is His: what He list doe, He may.

"Whatever thing is done, by Him is donne,
 Ne any may His mighty will withstand;
 Ne any may His souveraine power shonne,
 Ne loose that He hath bound with stedfast band:
 In vaine therefore doest thou now take in hand
 To call to count, or weigh His workes anew,
 Whose counsels depth thou canst not understand;
 Sith of things subiect to thy daily vew
 Thou doest not know the causes nor their courses dew.

"For take thy ballaunce, if thou be so wise,
 And weigh the winde that under heaven doth blow;
 Or weigh the light that in the east doth rise;
 Or weigh the thought that from mans mind doth flow:
 But if the weight of these thou canst not show,
 Weigh but one word which from thy lips doth fall:
 For how canst thou those greater secrets know,
 That doest not know the least thing of them all?
 Ill can he rule the great that cannot reach the small."

Therewith the gyant much abashed sayd
 That he of little things made reckoning light;
 Yet the least word that ever could be layd
 Within his ballaunce he could way aright.
 "Which is," said he, "more heavy then in weight,
 The right or wrong, the false or else the trew?"
 He answered that he would try it streight:
 So he the words into his ballaunce threw;
 But streight the winged words out of his ballaunce flew.

Wroth wext he then, and sayd that words were light,
 Ne would within his ballaunce well abide:
 But he could iustly weigh the wrong or right.
 "Well then," sayd Artegall, "let it be tride:
 First in one ballance set the true aside."
 He did so first, and then the false he layd
 In th' other scale; but still it downe did slide,
 And by no meane could in the weight be stayd:
 For by no meanes the false will with the truth be wayd.

"Now take the right likewise," said Artegale,
 "And counterpeise the same with so much wrong."
 So first the right he put into one scale;
 And then the gyant strove with puissance strong
 To fill the other scale with so much wrong:
 But all the wrongs that he therein could lay
 Might not it peise; yet did he labour long,
 And swat, and chauf'd, and proved every way:
 Yet all the wrongs could not a litle right downe way.

Which when he saw, he greatly grew in rage,
 And almost would his balances have broken:
 But Artegall him fairely gan asswage,
 And said, "Be not upon thy balance wroken;
 For they do nought but right or wrong betoken;
 But in the mind the doome of right must bee:
 And so likewise of words, the which be spoken,
 The eare must be the ballance, to decree
 And iudge, whether with truth or falshood they agree.

"But set the truth and set the right aside,
 For they with wrong or falshood will not fare,
 And put two wrongs together to be tride,
 Or else two falses, of each equal share,
 And then together doe them both compare;
 For truth is one, and right is ever one."
 So did he; and then plaine it did appeare,
 Whether of them the greater were attone:
 But right sat in the midst of the beame alone.

But he the right from thence did thrust away;
 For it was not the right which he did seeke:
 But rather strove extremities to way,
 Th' one to diminish, th' other for to ceke:
 For of the meane he greatly did misleeke.
 Whom when so lewdly minded Talus found,
 Approaching nigh unto him cheeke by cheeke,
 He shouldered him from off the higher ground,
 And down the rock him throwing in the sea him dround.

Like as a ship, whom cruell tempest drives
 Upon a rocke with horrible dismay,
 Her shattered ribs in thousand peeces rives
 And spoyling all her geares and goodly ray
 Does make herselfe misfortunes piteous pray:
 So downe the cliffe the wretched gyant tumbled;
 His battred ballances in peeces lay,
 His timbered bones all broken rudely rumbled:
 So was the high-aspyring with huge ruine humbled.

That when the people, which had there about
 Long wayted, saw his sudden desolation,
 They gan to gather in tumultuous rout,
 And mutining to stirre up civill faction
 For certaine losse of so great expectation:
 For well they hoped to have got great good,
 And wondrous riches by his innovation:
 Therefore resolving to revenge his blood,
 They rose in armes, and all in battell order stood.

Which lawlesse multitude him comming to
 In warlike wise when Artegall did vew,
 He much was troubled, ne wist what to do:
 For loth he was his noble hands t' embrew
 In the base blood of such a rascall crew;
 And otherwise, if that he should retire,
 He fear'd lest they with shame would him pursew:
 Therefore he Talus to them sent t' inquire
 The cause of their array, and truce for to desire.

But soone as they him nigh approching spide,
 They gan with all their weapons him assay,
 And rudely stroke at him on every side;
 Yet nought they could him hurt, ne ought dismay:
 But when at them he with his flaile gan lay,
 He like a swarm of flyes them overthrew:
 Ne any of them durst come in his way,
 But here and there before his presence flew,
 And hid themselves in holes and bushes from his vew;

As when a faulcon hath with nimble flight
 Flowne at a flush of ducks foreby the brooke,
 The trembling foule dismayd with dreadfull sight
 Of death, the which them almost overtooke,
 Doe hide themselves from her astonying-looke
 Amongst the flags and covert round about.
 When Talus saw they all the field forsooke,
 And none appear'd of all that raskall rout,
 To Artegall he turn'd and went with him throughout.

CANTO III.

The spousals of faire Florimell,
 Where turney many knights:
 There Braggadochio is unca's'd
 In all the ladies sights.

AFTER long stormes and tempests over-blowne
 The sunne at length his ioyous face doth cleare:
 So whenas fortune all her spight hath showne,
 Some blisfull houres at last must needes appeare;
 Else should afflicted wights oft-times despeire.
 So comes it now to Florimell by tourne,
 After long sorrowes suffered whyleare,
 In which captiv'd she many moneths did mourne,
 To tast of ioy, and to wont pleasures to retourne:

Who being freed from Proteus cruell band
 By Marinell was unto him affide,
 And by him brought againe to Faerie Land;
 Where he her spous'd, and made his ioyous bride.
 The time and place was blazed farre and wide,
 And solemne feastes and giusts ordain'd therefore:
 To which there did resort from every side
 Of lords and ladies infinite great store;
 Ne any knight was absent that brave courage bore.

To tell the glorie of the feast that day,
 The goodly service, the devicefull sights,
 The bridegromes state, the brides most rich aray,
 The pride of ladies, and the worth of knights,
 The royall banquets, and the rare delights,
 Were worke fit for an herauld, not for me:
 But for so much as to my lot here lights,
 That with this present treatise doth agree,
 True vertue to advance, shall here recounted bee.

When all men had with full satietie
 Of meates and drinckes their appetites suffiz'd,
 To deedes of armes and prooffe of cheualrie
 They gan themselves addresse, full rich aguiz'd,
 As each one had his furnitures deviz'd.
 And first of all issu'd Sir Marinell,
 And with him sixe knights more, which enterpriz'd
 To challenge all in right of Florimell,
 And to maintaine that she all others did excell.

The first of them was hight Sir Orimont,
 A noble knight, and tride in hard assayes:
 The second had to name Sir Bellisont,
 But second unto none in prowesse prayse:
 The third was Brunell, famous in his dayes:
 The fourth Ecastor, of exceeding might:
 The fift Armediann, skild in lovely layes:
 The sixt was Lansack, a redoubted knight:
 All sixe well seene in armes, and prov'd in many a fight.

And them against came all that list to giust,
 From every coast and cuntrye under sunne:
 None was debard, but all had leave that lust.
 The trompets sound; then all together ronne.
 Full many deeds of armes that day were donne;
 And many knights unhorst, and many wounded,
 As fortune fell; yet little lost or wonne:
 But all that day the greatest prayse redounded
 To Marinell, whose name the heralds loud resounded.

The second day, so soone as morrow light
 Appear'd in heaven, into the field they came,
 And there all day continew'd cruell fight,
 With diuers fortune fit for such a game,
 In which all strove with perill to winne fame;
 Yet whether side was victor note be ghest:
 But at the last the trompets did proclame
 That Marinell that day deserved best.
 So they disparted were, and all men went to rest.

The third day came, that should due tryall lend
 Of all the rest; and then this warlike crew
 Together met, of all to make an end.
 There Marinell great deeds of armes did shew;
 And through the thickest like a lyon flew,
 Rashing off helmes, and rying plates asonder;
 That every one his daunger did eschew:
 So terribly his dreadfull strokes did thonder,
 That all men stood amaz'd, and at his might did wonder.

But what on earth can alwaies happie stand?
 The greater prowesse greater perils find.
 So farre he past amongst his enemies band,
 That they have him enclosed so behind,
 As by no meanes he can himselfe outwind:
 And now perforce they have him prisoner taken;
 And now they doe with captive bands him bind;
 And now they lead him hence, of all forsaken,
 Unlesse some succour had in time him overtaken.

It fortun'd whylest they were thus ill beset,
 Sir Artegall into the tilt-yard came,
 With Braggadochio, whom he lately met
 Upon the way with that his snowy dame:
 Where when he understood by common fame,
 What evil hap to Marinell betid,
 He much was mov'd at so unworthie shame,
 And streight that boaster prayd, with whom he rid,
 To change his shield with him, to be the better hid.

So forth he went, and soone them overhent,
 Where they were leading Marinell away;
 Whom he assayld with dreadlesse hardiment,
 And forst the burden of their prize to stay.
 They were an hundred knights of that array;
 Of which th' one halfe upon himselfe did set,
 The other stayd behind to gard the pray:
 But he ere long the former fiftie bet;
 And from the other fiftie soone the prisoner fet.

So backe he brought Sir Marinell againe;
 Whom having quickly arm'd againe anew,
 They both together ioyned might and maine,
 To set afresh on all the other crew:
 Whom with sore havocke soone they overthrew,
 And chased quite out of the field, that none
 Against them durst his head to perill shew.
 So were they left lords of the field alone:
 So Marinell by him was rescu'd from his fone.

Which when he had perform'd, then backe againe
 To Braggadochio did his shield restore:
 Who all this while behind him did remaine,
 Keeping there close with him in pretious store
 That his false ladie, as ye heard afore.
 Then did the trompets sound, and iudges rose,
 And all these knights, which that day armour bore,
 Came to the open hall to listen whose
 The honour of the prize should be adiudged by those.

And thether also came in open sight
 Fayre Florimell into the common hall,
 To greet his guerdon unto every knight,
 And best to him to whom the best should fall.
 Then for that stranger knight they loud did call,
 To whom that day they should the girlond yield;
 Who came not forth: but for Sir Artegall
 Came Braggadochio, and did shew his shield,
 Which bore the sunne brode blazed in a golden field.

The sight whereof did all with gladnesse fill:
 So unto him they did addeeme the prise
 Of all that tryumph. Then the trompets shrill
 Don Braggadochios name resounded thrise:
 So courage lent a cloke to cowardise:
 And then to him came fayrest Florimell,
 And goodly gan to greete his brave emprise,
 And thousand thanks him yeeld, that had so well
 Approv'd that day that she all others did excell.

To whom the boaster, that all knights did blot,
 With proud disdaine did scornefull answere make,
 That what he did that day, he did it not
 For her, but for his owne deare ladies sake,
 Whom on his perill he did undertake
 Both her and eke all others to excell:
 And further did uncomely speeches crake.
 Much did his words the gentle ladie quell,
 And turn'd aside for shame to heare what he did tell.

Then forth he brought his snowy Florimele,
Whom Trompart had in keeping there beside,
Covered from peoples gazement with a vele:
Whom when discovered they had throughly eide,
With great amazement they were stupefide;
And said, that surely Florimell it was,
Or if it were not Florimell so tride,
That Florimell herselfe she then did pas.
So feeble skill of perfect things the vulgar has.

Which whenas Marinell beheld likewise,
He was therewith exceedingly dismayd;
Ne wist he what to thinke, or to devise:
But, like as one whom feends had made affrayd,
He long astonisht stood, ne ought he sayd,
Ne ought he did, but with fast fixed eies
He gazed still upon that snowy mayd,
Whom ever as he did the more avize,
The more he be true Florimell he did surmize.

As when two sunnes appeare in th' azure skye,
Mounted in Phœbus charet fierie bright,
Both darting forth faire beames to each mans eye,
And both adorn'd with lampes of flaming light;
All that behold so strange prodigious sight,
Not knowing natures worke, nor what to weene,
Are rapt with wonder and with rare affright.
So stood Sir Marinell when he had scene
The semblant of this false by his faire beauties queene.

All which when Artégall, who all this while
Stood in the preasse close covered, well advewed,
And saw that boasters pride and gracelesse guile,
He could no longer beare, but forth issewed,
And unto all himselfe there open shewed,
And to the boaster said; "Thou losell base,
That hast with borrowed plumes thyselfe endewed,
And others worth with leasings doest deface,
When they are all restor'd thou shalt rest in disgrace.

"That shield, which thou doest beare, was it indeed
Which this dayes honour sav'd to Marinell;
But not that arme, nor thou the man I reed,
Which didst that service unto Florimell:
For prooffe shew forth thy sword, and let it tell
What strokes, what dreadfull stoure, it stird this day;
Or shew the wounds which unto thee befell;
Or shew the sweat with which thou diddest sway
So sharpe a battell, that so many did dismay.

"But this the sword which wrought those cruell stounds,
 And this the arme the which that shield did beare,
 And these the signs," (so shewed forth his wounds,)

"By which that glorie gotten doth appeare.
 As for this ladie, which he sheweth here,
 Is not (I wager) Florimell at all;
 But some fayre franion, fit for such a fere,
 That by misfortune in his hand did fall."
 For prooffe whereof he bad them Florimell forth call.

So forth the noble ladie was-ybrought,
 Adorn'd with honor and all comely grace:
 Whereto her bashfull shamefastnesse ywrought
 A great increase in her faire blushing face;
 As roses did with lillies interlace:
 For of those words, the which that boaster threw,
 She inly yet conceived great disgrace:
 Whom whenas all the people such did vew,
 They shouted loud, and signes of gladnesse all did shew.

Then did he set her by that snowy one,
 Like the true saint beside the image set;
 Of both their beauties to make paragone
 And triall, whether should the honor get.
 Streightway, so soone as both together met,
 Th' enchaunted damzell vanisht into nought:
 Her snowy substance melted as with heat,
 Ne of that goodly hew remayned ought,
 But th' emptie girdle which about her wast was wrought.

As when the daughter of Thaumantes faire
 Hath in a watry cloud displayed wide
 Her goodly bow, which paints the liquid ayre;
 That all men wonder at her colours pride;
 All suddenly, ere one can looke aside,
 The glorious picture vanisheth away,
 Ne any token doth thereof abide:
 So did this ladies goodly forme decay,
 And into nothing goe, ere one could it bewray.

Which whenas all that present were beheld,
 They stricken were with great astonishment,
 And their faint harts with senselesse horror queld,
 To see the thing, that seem'd so excellent,
 So stolen from their fancies wonderment;
 That what of it became none understood:
 And Braggadochio selfe with dreriment
 So daunted was in his despeyring mood,
 That like a lifelesse corse immoveable he stood.

But Artegall that golden belt uptooke,
 The which of all her spoyle was onely left;
 Which was not hers, as many it mistooke,
 But Florimells owne girdle, from her rest
 While she was flying, like a weary west,
 From that foule monster which did her compell
 To perills great; which he unbuckling eft
 Presented to the fayrest Florimell;
 Who round about her tender wast it fitted well.

Full many ladies often had assayd
 About their middles that faire belt to knit;
 And many a one suppos'd to be a mayd:
 Yet it to none of all their loynes would fit,
 Till Florimell about her fastned it.
 Such power it had, that to no womans wast
 By any skill or labour it would fit,
 Unlesse that she were continent and chast;
 But it would lose or breake, that many had disgrast.

Whilest thus they busied were bout Florimell,
 And boastfull Braggadochio to defame,
 Sir Guyon, as by fortune then befell,
 Forth from the thickest preasse of people came,
 His owne good steed, which he had stolne, to clame;
 And, th' one hand seizing on his golden bit,
 With th' other drew his sword; for with the same
 He meant the thiefe there deadly to have smit:
 And, had he not bene held, he nought had sayld of it.

Thereof great hurly burly moved was
 Throughout the hall for that same warlike horse:
 For Braggadochio would not let him pas;
 And Guyon would him algates have perforce,
 Or it approve upon his carrion corse.
 Which troublous stirre when Artegall perceived,
 He nigh them drew to stay th' avengers forse;
 And gan inquire how was that steed bereaved,
 Whether by might extort, or else by slight deceaved.

Who all that piteous storie, which befell
 About that wofull couple which were slaine,
 And their young bloodie babe to him gan tell;
 With whom whyles he did in the wood remaine,
 His horse purloyned was by subtill traine;
 For which he chalenged the thiefe to fight:
 But he for nought could him thereto constraine;
 For as the death he hated such despight,
 And rather had to lose than trie in armes his right.

Which Artegall well hearing, (though no more
 By law of armes there neede ones right to trie,
 As was the wont of warlike knights of yore,
 Then that his foe should him the field denie,)
 Yet further right by tokens to descrie,
 He askt, what privie tokens he did beare.
 "If that," said Guyon, "may you satisfie,
 Within his mouth a blacke spot doth appeare,
 Shapt like a horses shoe, who list to seeke it there."

Whereof to make due tryall one did take
 The horse in hand within his mouth to looko:
 But with his heeles so sorely he him strake,
 That all his ribs he quite in peeces broke,
 That never word from that day forth he spoke.
 Another, that would seeme to have more wit,
 Him by the bright embrodered hedstall tooke:
 But by the shoulder him so sore he bit,
 That he him maymed quite, and all his shoulder split.

Ne he his mouth would open unto wight,
 Untill that Guyon selfe unto him spake,
 And called Brigadore, (so was he hight,)
 Whose voice so soone as he did undertake,
 Eftsoones he stood as still as any stake,
 And suffred all his secret marke to see;
 And, whenas he him nam'd, for ioy he brake
 His bands, and follow'd him with gladfull glee,
 And friskt, and flong aloft, and louted low on knee.

Thereby Sir Artegall did plaine areed,
 That unto him the horse belong'd; and sayd,
 "Lo there, Sir Guyon, take to you the steed,
 As he with golden saddle is arayd;
 And let that losell, plainely now displayd,
 Hence fare on foot, till he an horse have gayned."
 But the proud boaster gan his doome upbrayd,
 And him revil'd, and rated, and disdayned,
 That iudgement so uniust against him had ordayned.

Much was the knight incenst with his lewd word,
 To have revenged that his villeny;
 And thrice did lay his hand upon his sword,
 To have him slaine, or dearely doen aby:
 But Guyon did his choler pacify,
 Saying, "Sir knight, it would dishonour bee
 To you that are our iudge of equity,
 Te wreake your wrath on such a carle as hee:
 It's punishment enough that all his shame doe seeo."

So did he mitigate Sir Artegall;
 But Talus by the backe the boaster hent,
 And drawing him out of the open hall
 Upon him did inflict this punishment:
 First he his beard did shave, and fowly shent;
 Then from him reft his shield, and it renverst,
 And blotted out his armes with falshood blent;
 And himselfe baffuld, and his armes unherst;
 And broke his sword in twaine, and all his armour sperst.

The whiles his guilefull groome was fled away;
 But vaine it was to thinke from him to flie:
 Who overtaking him did disaray,
 And all his face deform'd with infamie
 And out of court him scourged openly.
 So ought all faytours, that true knighthood shame,
 And armes dishonour with base villanie,
 From all brave knights be banisht with defame:
 For oft their lewdness blotteth good deserts with blame.

Now when these counterfeits were thus uncased
 Out of the fofeside of their forgerie,
 And in the sight of all men cleane disgraced,
 All gan to iest and gibe full merilie
 At the remembrance of their knaverie:
 Ladies can laugh at ladies, knights at knights,
 To thinke with how great vaunt of braverie
 He them abused through his subtill slights,
 And what a glorious shew he made in all their sights.

There leave we them in pleasure and repast,
 Spending their ioyous dayes and gladful nights,
 And taking usurie of time forepast,
 With all deare delices and rare delights,
 Fit for such ladies and such lovely knights:
 And turne we here to this faire furrowes end
 Our wearie yokes, to gather fresher sprights,
 That, whenas time to Artegall shall tend,
 We on his first adventure may him forward send.

CANTO IV.

Artegall dealeth right betwixt
 Two brethren that doe strive:
 Saves Terpine from the gallow tree,
 And doth from death reprive.

Whoso upon himselfe will take the skill
 True iustice unto people to divide,
 Had need have mightie hands for to fulfill
 That which he doth with righteous doome decide,
 And for to maister wrong and puissant pride:
 For vaine it is to deeme of things aright,
 And makes wrong doers iustice to deride,
 Unlesse it be perform'd with dreadlesse might:
 For powre is the right hand of iustice truly hight.

Therefore whylome to knights of great emprise
 The charge of iustice given was in trust,
 That they might execute her iudgements wise,
 And with their might beat downe licentious lust,
 Which proudly did impugne her sentence iust;
 Whereof no braver president this day
 Remaines on earth, preserv'd from yron rust
 Of rude oblivion and long times decay,
 Then this of Artégall, which here we have to say.

Who having lately left that lovely payre,
 Enlincked fast in wedlockes loyall bond,
 Bold Marinell with Florimell the fayre,
 With whom great feast and goodly glee he fond,
 Departed from the castle of the stroud
 To follow his adventures first intent,
 Which long agoe he taken had in hond:
 Ne wight with him for his assistance went,
 But that great yron groome, his gard and government:

With whom, as he did passe by the sea-shore,
 He chaunst to come whereas two comely squires,
 Both brethren whom one wombe together bore,
 But stirred up with different desires,
 Together strove, and kindled wrathfull fires:
 And them beside two seemely damzels stood,
 By all meanes seeking to assuage their ires,
 Now with faire words; but words did little good; [mood.
 Now with sharpe threats; but threats the more increast their

And there before them stood a coffer strong
 Fast bound on every side with iron bands,
 But seeming to have suffred mickle wrong,
 Either by being wreckt uppon the sands,
 Or being carried farre from forraine lands:
 Seem'd that for it these squires at ods did fall,
 And bent against themselves their cruell hands;
 But evermore those damzels did forestall
 Their furious encounter, and their fiercenesse pall.

But firmly fixt they were with dint of sword
 And battailes doubtfull prooffe their rights to try;
 Ne other end their fury would afford,
 But what to them fortune would iustify:
 So stood they both in readinesse thereby
 To ioyne the combate with cruell intent:
 When Artegall arriving happily
 Did stay awhile their greedy bickermment,
 Till he had questioned the cause of their dissent.

To whom the elder did this aunswere frame;
 "Then weet ye, sir, that we two brethren be,
 To whom our sire, Milesio by name,
 Did equally bequeath his lands in fee,
 Two islands, which ye there before you see
 Not farre in sea; of which the one appeares
 But like a little mount of small degree;
 Yet was as great and wide ere many yeares,
 As that same other isle, that greater bredth now beares.

"But tract of time, that all things doth decay,
 And this devouring sea, that nought doth spare,
 The most part of my land hath washt away,
 And throwne it up unto my brothers share:
 So his encreased, but mine did empaire.
 Before which time I lov'd as was my lot,
 That further mayd, hight Philtera the faire,
 With whom a goodly doure I should have got,
 And should have ioyned bene to her in wedlocks knot.

"Then did my younger brother Amidas
 Love that same other damzell, Lucy bright,
 To whom but little dowre allotted was:
 Her vertue was the dowre that did delight:
 What better dowre can to a dame be hight?
 But now, when Philtra saw my lands decay
 And former livel'od fayle, she left me quight,
 And to my brother did elope streightway:
 Who, taking her from me, his owne love left astray.

"She, seeing then herselfe forsaken so,
Through dolorous despaire which she conceyved,
Into the sea herselfe did headlong throw,
Thinking to have her griefe by death bereaved;
But see how much her purpose was deceived!
Whilest thus, amidst the billowes beating of her,
Twixt life and death long to and fro she weaved,
She chaunst unwares to light upon this coffer,
Which to her in that daunger hope of life did offer.

"The wretched mayd, that earst desir'd to die,
Whenas the paine of death she tasted had,
And but halfe seene his ugly visnomie,
Gan to repent that she had beene so mad
For any death to chaunge life, though most bad:
And catching hold of this sea-beaten chest,
(The lucky pylot of her passage sad,)
After long tossing in the seas distrest,
Her weary barke at last uppon mine isle did rest.

"Where I by chaunce then wandring on the shore
Did her espy, and through my good endeavour
From dreadfull mouth of death, which threatned sore
Her to have swallow'd up, did helpe to save her.
She then, in recompence of that great favour,
Which I on her bestowd, bestowed on me
The portion of that good which fortune gave her,
Together with herselfe in dowry free;
Both goodly portions, but of both the better she.

"Yet in this coffer which she with her brought
Great threasure sithence we did finde contained;
Which as our owne we tooke, and so it thought;
But this same other damzell since hath fained
That to herselfe that threasure appertained;
And that she did transport the same by sea,
To bring it to her husband new ordained,
But suffred cruell shipwracke by the way:
But, whether it be so or no, I cannot say.

"But, whether it indeede be so or no,
This doe I say, that whatso good or ill
Or God, or fortune, unto me did throw,
(Not wronging any other by my will,)
I hold mine owne, and so will hold it still.
And though my land he first did winne away,
And then my love, (though now it little skill,)
Yet my good lucke he shall not likewise pray;
But I will it defend whilst ever that I may."

So having sayd, the younger did ensew ;
 " Full true it is whatso about our land
 My brother here declared hath to you:
 But not for it this ods twixt us doth stand,
 But for this threasure throwne upon his strand ;
 Which well I prove, as shall appeare by triall,
 To be this maides with whom I fastned hand,
 Known by good markes and perfect good espiall:
 Therefore it ought be rendred her without deniall."

When they thus ended had, the knight began ;
 " Certes your strife were easie to accord,
 Would ye remit it to some righteous man."
 " Unto yourselfe," said they, " we give our word,
 To bide that iudgement ye shall us afford."
 " Then for assurance to my doome to stand,
 Under my foote let each lay downe his sword ;
 And then you shall my sentence understand."
 So each of them layd downe his sword out of his hand.

Then Artegall thus to the younger sayd ;
 " Now tell me, Amidas, if that ye may,
 Your brothers land the which the sea hath layd
 Unto your part, and pluckt from his away,
 By what good right doe you withhold this day ?"
 " What other right," quoth he, " should you esteeme,
 But that the sea it to my share did lay ?"
 " Your right is good," sayd he, " and so I deeme,
 That what the sea unto you sent your owne should seeme."

Then turning to the elder, thus he sayd ;
 " Now, Bracidas, let this likewise be showne ;
 Your brothers threasure, which from him is strayed,
 Being the dowry of his wife well knowne,
 By what right doe you claime to be your owne ?"
 " What other right," quoth he, " should you esteeme,
 But that the sea hath it unto me throwne ?"
 " Your right is good," sayd he, " and so I deeme,
 That what the sea unto you sent your owne should seeme."

" For equall right in equall things doth stand:
 For what the mighty sea hath once possest,
 And plucked quite from all possessors hand,
 Whether by rage of waves that never rest,
 Or else by wracke that wretches hath distrest,
 He may dispose by his imperiall might,
 As thing at randon left, to whom he list.
 So, Amidas, the land was yours first hight ;
 And so the threasure yours is, Bracidas, by right."

When he his sentence thus pronounced had,
 Both Amidas and Philtra were displeased;
 But Bracidas and Lucy were right glad,
 And on the threasure by that iudgement seased.
 So was their discord by this doome appeased,
 And each one had his right. Then Artégall,
 Whenas their sharpe contention he had ceased,
 Departed on his way, as did befall,
 To follow his old quest, the which him forth did call.

So, as he travelled uppon the way,
 He chaunst to come, where happily he spide
 A rout of many people farre away;
 To whom his course he hastily applide,
 To weete the cause of their assemblaunce wide:
 To whom when he approched neare in sight,
 (An uncouth sight, (he plainely then descride
 To be a troupe of women, warlike dight,
 With weapons in their hands, as ready for to fight:

And in the midst of them he saw a knight,
 With both his hands behinde him pinnoed hard,
 And round about his necke an halter tight,
 And ready for the gallow tree prepar'd:
 His face was covered, and his head was bar'd,
 That who he was uneath was to descry;
 And with full heavy heart with them he far'd,
 Griev'd to the soule, and groning inwardly,
 That he of womens hands so base a death should dy.

But they, like tyrants mercilesse, the more
 Reioyced at his miserable case,
 And him reviled, and reproched sore
 With bitter taunts and termes of vile disgrace:
 Now whenas Artégall, arriv'd in place,
 Did aske what cause brought that man to decay,
 They round about him gan to swarm apace,
 Meaning on him their cruell hands to lay,
 And to have wrought unwares some villanous assay.

But he was soon aware of their ill minde,
 And drawing backe deceived their intent:
 Yet, though himselfe did shame on womankind
 His mighty hand to shend, he Talus sent
 To wrecke on them their follies hardyment:
 Who with few sowces of his yron flae
 Dispersed all their troupe incontinent,
 And sent them home to tell a piteous tale
 Of their vaine prowesse turned to their proper bale:

But that same wretched man, ordaynd to die,
 They left behind them, glad to be so quit:
 Him Talus tooke out of perplexitie,
 And horror of fowle death for knight unfit,
 Who more than losse of life ydreaded it;
 And, him restoring unto living light,
 So brought unto his lord, where he did sit
 Beholding all that womanish weake fight;
 Whom soone as he beheld he knew, and thus behight;

"Sir Turpine, haplesse man, what make you here?
 Or have you lost yourselfe and your discretion,
 That ever in this wretched case ye were?
 Or have ye yeelded you to proude oppression
 Of womens powre, that boast of mens subiection?
 Or else what other deadly dismall day
 Is false on you by heavens hard direction,
 That ye were runne so fondly far astray
 As for to lead yourselfe unto your owne decay?"

Much was the man confounded in his mind,
 Partly with shame, and partly with dismay,
 That all astonisht he himselfe did find,
 And little had for his excuse to say,
 But onely thus; "Most haplesse well ye may
 Me iustly terme, that to this shame am brought,
 And made the scorne of knighthood this same day:
 But who can scape what his owne fate hath wrought?
 The worke of heavens will surpasseth humaine thought."

"Right true: but faulty men use oftentimes
 To attribute their folly unto fate,
 And lay on heaven the guilt of their owne crimes.
 But tell, Sir Terpin, ne let you amate
 Your misery, how fell ye in this state?"
 "Then sith ye needs," quoth he, "will know my shame
 And all the ill which chaunst to me of late,
 I shortly will to you rehearse the same,
 In hope ye will not turne misfortune to my blame."

"Being desirous (as all knights are woont)
 Through hard adventures deedes of armes to try,
 And after fame and honour for to hunt,
 I heard report that farre abroad did fly,
 That a proud amazon did late defy
 All the brave knights that hold of Maidenhead,
 And unto them wrought all the villany
 That she could forge in her malicious head,
 Which some hath put to shame, and many done be dead."

"The cause, they say, of this her cruell hate,
Is for the sake of Bellodant the bold,
To whom she bore most fervent love of late,
And wooed him by all the waies she could:
But, when she saw at last that he ne would
For ought or nought be wonne unto her will,
She turn'd her love to hatred manifold,
And for his sake vow'd to doe all the ill
Which she could doe to knights; which now she doth fulfill.

"For all those knights, the which by force or guile
She doth subdue, she fowly doth entreate:
First, she doth them of warlike armes despoile,
And cloth in womens weedes; and then with threat
Doth them compell to worke, to earne their meat,
To spin, to card, to sew, to wash, to wring;
Ne doth she give them other thing to eat
But bread and water or like feeble thing;
Them to disable from revenge adventuring.

"But if through stout disdaine of manly mind
Any her proud observaunce will withstand,
Uppon that gibbet, which is there behind,
She causeth them be hang'd up out of hand;
In which condition I right now did stand:
For, being overcome by her in fight,
And put to that base service of her band,
I rather chose to die in lives despight,
Then lead that shamefull life, unworthy of a knight."

"How hight that amazon," sayd Artegall,
"And where and how far hence does she abide?"
"Her name," quoth he, "they Radigund doe call,
A princesse of great powre and greater pride,
And queene of amazons, in armes well tride
And sundry battels, which she hath achieved
With great successe, that her hath glorifide,
And made her famous, more then is believed;
Ne would I it have ween'd had I not late it priev'd."

"Now sure," said he, "and by the faith that I
To Maydenhead and noble knighthood owe,
I will not rest till I her might doe trie,
And venge the shame that she to knights doth show.
Therefore, Sir Terpin, from you lightly throw
This squalid weede, the patterne of dispaire,
And wend with me, that ye may see and know
How fortune will your ruin'd name repaire
And knights of Maidenhead, whose praise she would [empaire."

With that, like one that hopelesse was repyv'd
 From deathēs dore at which he lately lay,
 Those yron fetters wherewith he was gyv'd,
 The badges of reproch he threw away,
 And nimbly did him dight to guide the way
 Unto the dwelling of that amazone:
 Which was from thence not past a mile or tway;
 A goodly citty and a mighty one,
 The which, of her owne name, she called Radegone.

Where they arriving by the watchmen were
 Descried streight; who all the citty warn'd
 How that three warlike persons did appeare,
 Of which the one him seem'd a knight all armed,
 And th' other two well likely to have harmed.
 Eftsoones the people all to harnesse ran,
 And like a sort of bees in clusters swarmed:
 Ere long their queene herselfe, halfe like a man,
 Came forth into the rout, and them t' array began.

And now the knights, being arrived neare,
 Did beat uppon the gates to enter in;
 And at the porter, skorning them so few,
 Threw many threats, if they the towne did win,
 To teare his flesh in pieces for his sin:
 Which whenas Radigund there comming heard,
 Her heart for rage did grate, and teeth did grin:
 She bad that streight the gates should be unbard,
 And to them way to make with weapons well prepard.

Soone as the gates were open to them set,
 They pressed forward, entraunce to have made:
 But in the middle way they were ymet
 With a sharpe showre of arrowes, which them staid,
 And better bad advise, ere they assaid
 Unknownen perill of bold womens pride.
 Then all that rout uppon them rudely laid,
 And heaped strokes so fast on every side,
 And arrowes haild so thicke, that they could not abide.

But Radigund herselfe, when she espide
 Sir Terpin from her direfull doome acquit
 So cruell doale amongst her maides divide,
 T' avenge that shame they did on him commit,
 All sodainely enflam'd with furious fit
 Like a fell lionesse at him she flew,
 And on his head-piece him so fiercely smit,
 That to the ground him quite she overthrew,
 Dismayd so with the stroke that he no colours knew.

Soone as she saw him on the ground to grovell,
 She lightly to him leapt; and, in his necke
 Her proud foote setting, at his head did levell,
 Weening at once her wrath on him to wreake,
 And his contempt, that did her iudgment breake:
 As when a beare hath seiz'd her cruell claw
 Uppon the carkasse of some beast too weake,
 Proudly stands over, and awhile doth pause
 To heare the piteous beast pleading her plaintiffe cause.

Whom whenas Artegall in that distresse
 By chaunce beheld, he left the bloody slaughter
 In which he swam, and ranne to his redresse:
 There her assayling fiercely fresh he raught her
 Such an huge stroke, that it of sence distraught her;
 And, had she not it warded warily,
 It had depriv'd her mother of a daughter:
 Nathlesse for all the powre she did apply
 It made her stagger oft, and stare with ghastly eye.

Like to an eagle, in his kingly pride
 Soring through his wide empire of the aire,
 To weather his brode sailes, by chaunce hath spide
 A goshauke, which hath seized for her share
 Uppon some fowle, that should her feast prepare;
 With dreadfull force he flies at her bylive,
 That with his souce, which none enduren dare,
 Her from the quarry he away doth drive,
 And from her griping pounce the greedy prey doth rive.

But, soone as she her sence recover'd had,
 She fiercely towards him herselfe gan dight,
 Through vengeful wrath and sdeignfull pride half mad;
 For never had she suffred such despight:
 But, ere she could ioyn hand with him to fight,
 Her warlike maides about her flockt so fast,
 That they disparted them, maugre their might,
 And with their troupes did far asunder cast:
 But mongst the rest the fight did untill evening last.

And every while that mighty yron man,
 With his strange weapon, never wont in warre,
 Them sorely vext, and courst, and over-ran,
 And broke their bowes, and did their shooting marre
 That none of all the many once did darre
 Him to assault, nor once approach him nie;
 But like a sort of sheepe dispersed farre,
 For dread of their devouring enemy,
 Through all the fields and vallies did before him flie.

But whenas daies faire shinie beame, yelowded
 With fearefull shadowes of deformed night,
 Warn'd man and beast in quiet rest be shrowded,
 Bold Radigund with sound of trumpe on hight,
 Causd all her people to surcease from fight;
 And, gathering them unto her citties gate,
 Made them all enter in before her sight;
 And all the wounded, and the weake in state,
 To be conuayed in, ere she would once retrate.

When thus the field was voided all away,
 And all things quieted; the elfin knight,
 Weary of toile and travell of that day,
 Causd his pavilion to be richly pight,
 Before the city-gate, in open sight;
 Where he himselfe did rest in safetie
 Together with Sir Terpin all that night:
 But Talus usde, in times of ieopardy,
 To keepe a nightly watch for dread of treachery.

But Radigund, full of heart-gnawing gricfe
 For the rebuke which she sustain'd that day,
 Could take no rest, ne would receive reliefe;
 But tossed in her troublous minde what way
 She mote revenge that blot which on her lay.
 There she resolv'd herselfe in single fight
 To try her fortune, and his force assay,
 Rather than see her people spoiled quight,
 As she had seene that day, a disadventerous sight.

She called forth to her a trusty mayd,
 Whom she thought fittest for that businesse:
 Her name was Clarin, and thus to her sayd;
 "Goe, damzell, quickly, doe thyselfe addressse
 To doe the message which I shall expresse:
 Goe thou unto that stranger faery knight,
 Who yesterday drove us to such distresse;
 Tell, that to-morrow I with him will fight,
 And try in equall field whether hath greater might,

"But these conditions doe to him propound;
 That, if I vanquishe him, he shall obay
 My law, and ever to my lore be bound;
 And so will I, if me he vanquish may;
 Whatever he shall like to doe or say:
 Go streight, and take with thee to witnesse it
 Sixe of thy fellowes of the best array,
 And beare with you both wine and iuncates fit,
 And bid him eate: henceforth he oft shall hungry sit."

The damzell streight obeyd; and, putting all
 In readinesse, forth to the town-gate went;
 Where, sounding loud a trumpet from the wall,
 Unto those warlike knights she warning sent.
 Then Talus forth issuing from the tent
 Unto the wall his way did fearlesse take,
 To weeten what that trumpets sounding ment:
 Where that same damzell lowdly him bespake,
 And shew'd that with his lord she would emparlaunce make.

So he them streight conducted to his lord;
 Who, as he could, them goodly well did greete,
 Till they had told their message word by word;
 Which he accepting, well as he could weete,
 Them fairely entertaynd with curt'sies meete,
 And gave them gifts and things of deare delight:
 So backe againe they homeward turn'd their feete;
 But Artegall himselfe to rest did dight,
 That he mote fresher be against the next daies fight.

CANTO V.

Artegall fights with Radigund,
 And is subdew'd by guile:
 He is by her emprisoned,
 But wrought by Clarins wile.

So soone as day forth dawning from the east
 Nights humid curtaine from the heavens withdrew,
 And earely calling forth both man and beast
 Commaunded them their daily workes renew;
 These noble warriors, mindefull to pursew
 The last daies purpose of their vowed fight,
 Themselves thereto preparte in order dew;
 The knight, as best was seeming for a knight,
 And th' amazon, as best it likt herselfe to dight,

All in a camis light of purple silke
 Woven uppon with silver, subtly wrought,
 And quilted uppon sattin white as milke;
 Trayled with ribbands diversly distraught,
 Like as the workeman had their courses taught;
 Which was short tucked for light motion
 Up to her ham; but, when she list, it raught
 Downe to her lowest heele, and thereuppon
 She wore for her defence a mayled habergeon.

And on her legs she painted buskins wore,
 Basted with bends of gold on every side,
 And mailles betweene, and laced close afore;
 Uppon her thigh her cemitare was tide
 With an embrodered belt of mickell pride;
 And on her shoulder hung her shield, bedeckt
 Uppon the bosse with stones that shined wide,
 As the faire moone in her most full aspect;
 That to the moone it mote be like in each respect.

So forth she came out of the citty-gate
 With stately port and proud magnificence,
 Guarded with many damzels that did waite
 Uppon her person for her sure defence,
 Playing on shaumes and trumpets, that from hence
 Their sound did reach unto the heavens hight:
 So forth into the field she marched thence,
 Where was a rich pavilion ready pight
 Her to receive, till time they should begin the fight.

Then forth came Artegall out of his tent,
 All arm'd to point, and first the lists did enter:
 Soone after eke came she with full intent
 And countenaunce fierce, as having fully bent her
 That battels utmost triall to aduenter.
 The lists were closed fast, to barre the rout
 From rudely pressing on the middle center;
 Which in great heapes them circled all about,
 Wayting how fortune would resolve that dangerous dout.

The trumpets sounded, and the field began;
 With bitter strokes it both began and ended.
 She at the first encounter on him ran
 With furious rage, as if she had intended
 Out of his breast the very heart have rended:
 But he, that had like tempests often ride,
 From that first flaw himselfe right well defended.
 The more she rag'd, the more he did abide;
 She hewd, she foynd, she lasht, she laid on every side.

Yet still her blowes he bore, and her forbore,
 Weening at last to win advantage new;
 Yet still her crueltie increased more,
 And, though powre faild, her courage did accrew;
 Which fayling, he gan fiercely her pursew:
 Like as a smith that to his cunning feat
 The stubbornè mettall seeketh to subdew.
 Soone as he feesles it mollifide with heat,
 With his great yron sledge doth strongly on it beat.

So did Sir Artégall upon her lay,
 As if she had an yron andvile beene,
 That flakes of fire, bright as the sunny ray,
 Out of her steely armes were flashing seene,
 That all on fire ye would her surely weene:
 But with her shield so well herselfe she warded
 From the dread daunger of his weapon keene,
 That all that while her life she safely garded;
 But he that helpe from her against her will discarded:

For with his trenchant blade at the next blow
 Halfe of her shield he shared quite away,
 That halfe her side itselfe did naked show,
 And thenceforth unto daunger opened way
 Much was she moved with the mightie sway
 Of that sad stroke, that halfe enrag'd she grew;
 And like a greedie beare unto her pray
 With her sharpe cemitare at him she flew, [drew.
 That glauncing downe his thigh the purple bloud forth

Thereat she gan to triumph with great boast,
 And to upbrayd that chaunce which him misfell,
 As if the prize she gotten had almost,
 With spightfull speeches, sitting with her well;
 That his great hart gan inwardly to swell
 With indignation at her vaunting vaine,
 And at her strooke with puissance fearefull fell;
 Yet with her shield she warded it againe,
 That shattered all to pieces round about the plaine.

Having her thus disarmed of her shield,
 Upon her helmet he againe her strooke,
 That downe she fell upon the grassie field
 In sencelesse swounce, as if her life forsooke,
 And pangs of death her spirit overtooke:
 Whom when he saw before his foote prostrated,
 He to her lept with deadly dreadfull looke,
 And her sun-shynie helmet soone unlaced,
 Thinking at once both head and helmet to have raced.

But, whenas he discovered had her face,
 He saw, his senses straunge astonishment,
 A miracle of natures goodly grace
 In her faire visage void of ornament,
 But bath'd in bloud and sweat together ment;
 Which, in the rudenesse of that evill plight,
 Bewrayd the signes of feature excellent:
 Like as the moone, in foggie winters night,
 Doth seeme to be herselfe, though darkned be her light.

At sight thereof his cruell minded hart
 Emperced was with pittifull regard,
 That his sharpe sword he threw from him apart,
 Cursing his hand that had that visage mard:
 No hand so cruell, nor no hart so hard,
 But ruth of beautie will it mollifie.
 By this, upstarting from her swoune she star'd
 A while about her with confused eye;
 Like one that from his dreame is waked suddenlie.

Soone as the knight she there by her did spy
 Standing with emptie hands all weaponlesse,
 With fresh assault upon him she did fly,
 And gan renew her former cruellnesse:
 And though he still retyr'd, yet nathellesse
 With huge redoubled strokes she on him layd;
 And more increast her outrage mercilesse,
 The more that he with meeke intreatie prayd
 Her wrathful hand from greedy vengeance to have stayd.

Like as a puttocke having spyde in sight
 A gentle faulcon sitting on an hill,
 Whose other wing, now made unmete for flight,
 Was lately broken by some fortune ill;
 The foolish kyte, let with licentious will,
 Both beat upon the gentle bird in vaine,
 With many idle stoups her troubling still:
 Even so did Radigund with bootlesse paine
 Annoy this noble knight, and sorely him constraine.

Nought could he do but shun the dred despight
 Of her fierce wrath, and backward still retyre;
 And with his single shield, well as he might,
 Beare off the burden of her raging yre;
 And evermore he gently did desyre
 To stay her strokes, and he himselfe would yield:
 Yet noul she hearke, ne let him once respyre,
 Till he to her delivered had his shield,
 And to her mercie him submitted in plaine field.

So was he overcome, not overcome;
 But to her yeelded of his owne accord;
 Yet was he iustly damned by the doome
 Of his owne mouth, that spake so warelesse word,
 To be her thrall and service her afford:
 For though that he first victorie obtayned,
 Yet after, by abandoning his sword,
 He wilfull lost that he before attayned:
 No fayrer conquest then that with goodwill is gayned.

Tho with her sword on him she flatling strooke,
In signe of true subiection to her powre,
And as her vassall him to thraldome tooke:
But Terpine, borne to a more unhappy howre,
As he on whom the lucklesse starrës led lowre,
She causd to be attacht and forthwith led
Unto the crooke, t' abide the balefull stowre
From which he lately had through reskew fled:
Where he full shamefully was hanged by the hed.

But, when they thought on Talus hands to lay,
He with his yron flaile amongst them thondred,
That they were fayne to let him scape away,
Glad from his companie to be so sondred;
Whose presence all their troupes so much encombred,
That th' heapes of those which he did wound and slay,
Besides the rest dismayd, might not be nombred:
Yet all that while he would not once assay
To reskew his owne lord, but thought it iust t' obay.

Then tooke the amazon this noble knight,
Left to her will by his owne wilfull blame,
And caused him to be disarmed quight
Of all the ornaments of knightly name.
With which whylome he gotten had great fame:
Instead whereof she made him to be dight
In womans weedes, that is to manhood shame,
And put before his lap an apron white,
Instead of curiets and bases fit for fight.

So being clad she brought him from the field,
In which he had bene trayned many a day,
Into a long large chamber, which was sield
With monuments of many knights decay
By her subdewed in victorious fray:
Amongst the which she caused his warlike armes
Be hang'd on high, that mote his shame bewray;
And broke his sword for feare of further harmes,
With which he wont to stirre up battailous alarmes.

There entred in he round about him saw
Many brave knights whose names right well he knew,
There bound t' obay that amazons proud law,
Spinning and carding all in comely rew,
That his bigge hart loth'd so uncomely vew:
But they were forst, through penurie and pyne,
To doe those workes to them appointed dew:
For nought was given them to sup or dyne,
But what their hands could earne by twisting linnen twyne.

Amongst them all she placed him most low,
 And in his hand a distaffe to him gave,
 That he thereon should spin both flax and tow;
 A sordid office for a mind so brave:
 So hard it is to be a womans slave!
 Yet he it tooke in his owne selves despight,
 And thereto did himselfe right well behave.
 Her to obay, sith he his faith had plight
 Her vassall to become, if she him wonne in fight.

Who had him seene, imagine mote thereby
 That whylome hath of Hercules bene told,
 How for Iolas sake he did apply
 His mightie hands the distaffe vile to hold
 For his huge club, which had subdew'd of old
 So many monsters which the world annoyed;
 His Lyons skin chaungd to a pall of gold,
 In which, forgetting warres, he onely ioyed
 In combats of sweet love, and with his mistresse toyed.

Such is the crueltie of womenkynd,
 When they have shaken off the shamefast band,
 With which wise nature did them strongly bynd
 T'obay the heasts of mans well-ruling hand,
 That then all rule and reason they withstand
 To purchase a licentious libertie:
 But vertuous women wisely understand,
 That they were borne to base humilitie,
 Unlesse the heavens them lift to lawfull soveraintie.

Thus there long while continu'd Artegall,
 Serving proud Radigund with true subiection:
 However it his noble heart did gall
 T'obay a womans tyrrannous direction,
 That might have had of life or death election:
 But, having chosen, now he might not chaunge.
 During which time the warlike amazon,
 Whose wandering fancie after lust did raunge,
 Gan cast a secret liking to this captive straunge.

Which long concealing in her covert brest,
 She chaw'd the cud of lovers carefull plight;
 Yet could it not so thoroughly digest,
 Being fast fixed in her wounded spright,
 But it tormented her both day and night:
 Yet would she not thereto yeeld free accor
 To serve the lowly vassall of her might,
 And of her servant make her soverayne lord:
 So great her pride that she such basenesse much abhord.

So much the greater still her anguish grew,
 Through stubborne handling of her love-sicke hart;
 And still the more she strove it to subdew,
 The more she still augmented her owne smart,
 And wyder made the wound of th' hidden dart.
 At last, when long she struggled had in vaine,
 She gan to stoupe, and her proud mind convert
 To meeke obeysance of loves nightie raine,
 And him entreat for grace that had procur'd her paine.

Unto herselfe in secret she did call
 Her nearest handmayd, whom she most did trust,
 And to her said; "Clarinda, whom of all
 I trust alive, sith I thee fostred first;
 Now is the time that I untimely must
 Thereof make tryall, in my greatest need!
 It is so hapned that the heavens uniust,
 Spighting my happie freedome, have agreed
 To thrall my looser life, or my last bale to breed."

With that she turn'd her head, as halfe abashed,
 To hide the blush which in her visage rose
 And through her eyes like sudden lightning flashed,
 Decking her cheeke with a vermilion rose:
 But soone she did her countenance compose,
 And, to her turning, thus began againe;
 "This griefes deepe wound I would to thee disclose,
 Thereto compelled through hart-murdring paine;
 But dread of shame my doubtfull lips doth still restraîne."

"Ah! my deare dread," said then the fearefull mayd,
 "Can dread of ought your dreadlesse hart withhold,
 That many hath with dread of death dismayd,
 And dare even deathes most dreadfull face behold?
 Say on, my soverayne ladie, and be bold:
 Doth not your handmayd life at your foot lie?"
 Therewith much comforted she gan unfold
 The cause of her conceived maladie;
 As one that would confesse, yet faine would it denie.

"Clarinda," said she, "thou seest yond fayry knight,
 Whom not my valour, but his owne brave mind
 Subiected hath to my unequall might!
 What right is it, that he should thraldome find
 For lending life to me a wretch unkind,
 That for such good him recompence with ill!
 Therefore I cast how I may him unbind,
 And by his freedome get his free goodwill;
 Yet so, as bound to me he may continue still:

"Bound unto me; but not with such hard bands,
Of strong compulsion and streight violence,
As now in miserable state he stands;
But with sweet love and sure benevolence,
Voide of malicious mind or foule offence:
To which if thou canst win him any way
Without discoverie of my thoughts pretence,
Both goodly meede of him it purchase may,
And eke with gratefull service me right well apay.

"Which that thou mayst the better bring to pass,
Loe! here this ring, which shall thy warrant bee
And token true to old Eumenias,
From time to time, when thou it best shalt see,
That in and out thou mayst have passage free.
Goe now, Clarinda; well thy wits advise,
And all thy forces gather unto thee,
Armies of love'ly lookes, and speeches wise,
With which thou canst even love himsele to love entise."

The trustie mayd, conceiving her intent,
Did with sure promise of her good endeavour
Give her great comfort and some harts content:
So from her parting she thenceforth did labour,
By all the meanes she mighte to curry favour
With th' elfin knight, her ladies best beloved:
With daily shew of courteous kind behaviour,
Even at the marke-white of his hart she roved,
And with wide-glauncing words one day she thus him proved:

"Unhappie knight, upon whose hopelesso state
Fortune, envying good, hath felly frowned,
And cruell heavens have heapt an heavy fate;
I rew that thus thy better dayes are drowned
In sad despaire, and all thy senses swowned
In stupid sorrow, sith thy iuster merit
Might else have with felicitie bene crowned:
Looke up at last, and wake thy dulled spirit
To thinke how this long death thou mightest disinherit!"

Much did he marvell at her uncouth speech,
Whose hidden drift he could not well perceive;
And gan to doubt least she him sought t'appeach
Of treason, or some guilefull traine did weave,
Through which she might his wretched life bereave:
Both which to barre he with this answer met her;
"Faire damzell, that with ruth, as I perceive,
Of my mishaps art mov'd to wish me better,
For such your kind regard I can but rest your detter,

"Yet weet ye well, that to a courage great
 It is no lesse beseeming well to beare
 The storme of fortune's frowne or heavens threat,
 Then in the sunshine of her countenance cleare
 Timely to ioy and carrie comely cheare:
 For though this cloud hath now me overcast,
 Yet doe I not of better times despayre;
 And though (unlike) they should for ever last
 Yet in my truthe assurance I rest fix'd fast."

"But what so stonie minde," she then replyde,
 "But if in his owne powre occasion lay,
 Would to his hope a windowe open wyde,
 And to his fortunes helpe make radie way?"
 "Unworthy sure," quoth he, "of better day,
 That will not take the offer of good hope,
 And eke pursew, if he attaine it may."
 Which speaches she applying to the scope
 Of her intent, this further purpose to him shope:

"Then why dost not, thou ill-advizd man,
 Make meanes to win thy libertie forlorne,
 And try if thou by faire entreatie can
 Move Radigand? who though she still have worne
 Her dayes in warre, yet (weet thou) was not borne
 Of beares and tygres, nor so salvage mynded
 As that, albe all love of men she scorne,
 She yet forgets that she of men was kynded; [blynded."
 And sooth oft seene that proudest harts base love hath

"Certes, Clarinda, not of cancred will,"
 Sayd he, "nor obstinate disdainfull mind,
 I have forbore this duetie to fulfill;
 For well I may this weene, by that I fynd,
 That shee a queene, and come of princely kynd,
 Both worthie is for to be sewd unto,
 Chiefely by him whose life her law doth bynd,
 And eke of powre her owne doome to undo.
 And als' of princely grace to be inclyn'd thereto."

"But want of meanes hath bene mine onely let
 From seeking favour where it doth abound;
 Which if I might by your good office get,
 I to yourselfe should rest for ever bound,
 And ready to deserve what grace I found."
 She feeling him thus bite upon the bayt,
 Yet doubting least his hold was but unsound
 And not well fastened, would not strike him strait,
 But drew him on with hope, fit leasure to awayt.

But foolish mayd, whyles heedlesse of the hooke
 She thus oft-times was beating off and on,
 Through slipperie footing fell into the brooke,
 And there was caught to her confusion;
 For, seeking thus to salve the amazon,
 She wounded was with her deceipts owne dart,
 And gan thenceforth to cast affection,
 Conceived close in her beguiled hart,
 To Artegall, through pittie of his causelesse smart.

Yet durst she not disclose her fancies wound,
 Ne to himselfe, for doubt of being sdayned,
 Ne yet to any other wight on ground,
 For feare her mistresse should have knowledge gayned;
 But to herselfe it secretly retayned
 Within the closet of her covert brest:
 The more thereby her tender hart was payned;
 Yet to awayt fit time she weened best,
 And fairly did dissemble her sad thoughts unrest.

One day her ladie, calling her apart,
 Gan to demaund of her some tydings good,
 Touching her loves successe, her lingring smart:
 Therewith she gan at first to change her mood,
 As one adaw'd, and halfe confused stood;
 But quickly she it overpast, so soone
 As she her face had wypt to fresh her blood;
 Tho gan she tell her all that she had donne,
 And all the wayes she sought his love for to have wonne:

But sayd, that he was obstinate and sterne,
 Scorning her offers and conditions vaine;
 Ne would be taught with any termes to lerne
 So fond a lesson as to love againe:
 Die rather would he in penurious paine,
 And his abridged dayes in dolour wast,
 Then his foes love or liking entertaine:
 His resolution was, both first and last,
His bodie was her thrall, his hart was freely plast.

Which when the cruell amazon perceived,
 She gan to storne, and rage, and rend her gall,
 For very fell despight, which she conceived,
 To be so scorned of a base-borne thrall,
 Whose life did lie in her least eye-lids fall;
 Of which she vow'd, with many a cursed threat,
 That she therefore would him ere long forstall.
 Nathlesse, when calmed was her furious heat,
 She chang'd that threatfull mood, and mildly gan entreat:

‘ What now is left, Clarinda? what remaines,
That we may compasse this our enterprize?
Great shame to lose so long employed paines,
And greater shame t’abide so great misprize,
With which he dares our offers thus despize:
Yet that his guilt the greater may appeare,
And more my gracious mercie by this wize,
I will awhile with his first folly beare,
Till thou have tride againe, and tempted him more neare.

“ Say and do all that may thereto prevaile;
Leave nought unpromist that may him perswade,
Life, freedome, grace, and gifts of great availle,
With which the gods themselves are mylder made:
Thereto adde art, even womens witty trade,
The art of mightie words that men can charme;
With which in case thou canst him not invade,
Let him feele hardnesse of thy heavy arme:      [charme.
Who will not stoupe with good shall be made stoupe with

“ Some of his diet doe from him withdraw;
For I him finde to be too proudly fed:
Give him more labour, and with streighter law,
That he with worke may be forweariéd:
Let him lodge hard, and lio in strawen bed,
That may pull downe the courage of his pride;
And lay upon him, for his greater dread,
Cold yron chaines with which let him be tide;
And let, whatever he desires, be him denide.

“ When thou hast all this doen, then bring me newes
Of his demeaner; thenceforth not like a lover,
But like a rebell stout, I will him use:
For I resolve this siege not to give over,
Till I the conquest of my will recover.”
So she departed full of griefe and sdaine,
Which inly did to great impatience move her:
But the false mayden shortly turn’d againe
Unto the prison, where her hart did thrall remaine.

There all her subtile nets she did unfold,
And all the engins of her wit display;
In which she meant him warelesse to enfold,
And of his innocence to make her pray.
So cunningly she wrought her crafts assay,
That both her ladie, and herselfe withall,
And eke the knight attonce she did betray;
But most the knight, whom she with guilefull call
Did cast for to allure, into her trap to fall.

As a bad nurse, which, fayning to receive
 In her owne mouth the food ment for her chyld,
 Withholdes it to herselfe, and doeth deceive
 The infant, so for want of nourture spoyld;
 Even so Clarinda her owne dame beguyld,
 And turn'd the trust, which was in her affyde,
 To feeding of her private fire, which boyld
 Her inward brest, and in her entrayles fryde,
 The more that she it sought to cover and to hyde.

For, comming to this knight, she purpose fayned,
 How earnest suit she earst for him had made
 Unto her queene, his freedome to have gayned;
 But by no meanes could her thereto perswade,
 But that instead thereof she sternely bade
 His miserie to be augmented more,
 And many yron bands on him to lade;
 All which nathlesse she for his love forbore
 So praying him t'accept her service evermore.

And, more then that, she promist that she would,
 In case she might finde favour in his eye,
 Devize how to enlarge him out of hould.
 The fayrie, glad to gaine his libertie,
 Can yeeld great thankses for such her curtesie;
 And with faire words, fit for the time and place,
 To feede the humour of her maladie,
 Promist, if she would free him from that case,
 He wold by all good meanes he might deserve such graco.

So daily he faire semblant did her shew,
 Yet never meant he in his noble mind
 To his owne absent love to be untrew:
 Ne ever did deceitfull Clarin find
 In her false hart his bondage to unbind;
 But rather how she mote him faster tye.
 Therefore unto her mistresse most unkind
 She daily told her love he did desye;
 And him she told her dame his freedome did denye.

Yet thus much friendship she to him did show,
 That his scarce diet somewhat was amended,
 And his worke lessened, that his love mote grow:
 Yet to her dame him still she discommended,
 That she with him mote be the more offended.
 Thus he long while in thraldome there remayned,
 Of both beloved well, but little friended;
 Untill his owne true love his freedome gayned:
 Which in another canto will be best containned.

CANTO VI.

Talus brings newes to Britomart
Of Artegals mishap:
She goes to seeke him; Dolon meetes,
Who seekes her to entrap.

SOME men, I wote, will deeme in Artegall
Great weaknesse, and report of him much ill,
For yeelding so himselfe a wretched thrall
To th' insolent commaund of womens will;
That all his former praise doth fowly spill:
But he the man, that say or doe so dare,
Be well adviz'd that he stand stedfast still;
For never yet was wight so well aware,
But he at first or last was trapt in womens snare.

Yet in the streightnesse of that captive state
This gentle knight himselfe so well behaved.
That notwithstanding all the subtill bait,
With which those amazons his love still craved,
To his owne love his loialtie he saved:
Whose character in th' adamantyne mould
Of his true hart so firmly was engraved,
That no new loves impression ever could
Bereave it thence: such blot his honour blemish should.

Yet his owne love, the noble Britomart;
Scarse so conceived in her iealous thought,
What time sad tydings of his balefull smart
In womans bondage Talus to her brought;
Brought in untimely houre, ere it was sought:
For, after that the utmost date assynde
For his returne she waited had for nought,
She gan to cast in her misdoubtfull mynde
A thousand feares, that love-sicke fancies faine to finde.

Sometime she feared least some hard mishap
Had him misfalne in his adventurous quest;
Sometime least his false foe did him entrap
In traytrous traine, or had unwares opprest;
But most she did her troubled mynd molest,
And secretly afflict with iealous feare,
Least some new love had him from her possest;
Yet loth she was, since she no ill did heare,
To thinke of him so ill; yet could she not forbear.

One while she blam'd herselfe; another whylo
 She him condemn'd as trustlesse and untrew:
 And then, her grieve with errour to beguyle,
 She fayn'd to count the time againe anew,
 As if before she had not counted trew:
 For houres, but dayes; for weekes that passed were,
 She told but moneths to make them seeme more few
 Yet, when she reckned them still drawing neare,
 Each hour did seeme a moneth, and every moneth a yeare.

But, whenas yet she saw him not returne,
 She thought to send some one to seeke him out;
 But none she found so fit to serve that turne,
 As her owne selfe, to ease herselfe of dout.
 Now she deviz'd, amongst the warlike rout
 Of errant knights, to seeke her errant knight;
 And then againe resolv'd to hunt him out
 Amongst loose ladies lapped in delight:
 And then both knights envide, and ladies eke did spight.

One day whenas she long had sought for ease
 In every place, and every place thought best,
 Yet found no place that could her liking please,
 She to a window came, that opened west,
 Towards which coast her love his way addrest:
 There looking forth shee in her heart did find
 Many vain fanciës working her unrest;
 And sent her winged thoughts more swift then wind
 To beare unto her love the message of her mind.

There as she looked long, at last she spide
 One comming towards her with hasty speede;
 Well weend she then, ere him she plaine descride,
 That it was one sent from her love indeede:
 Who when he nigh approacht, shee mote arede
 That it was Talus, Artegall his groome:
 Whereat her hart was fild with hope and drede;
 No would she stay till he in place could come,
 But ran to meete him forth to know his tidings somme.

Even in the dore him-meeting, she begun;
 "And where is he thy lord, and how far hence?
 Declare at once: and hath he lost or won?"
 The yron man, albe he wanted sence
 And sorrowes feeling, yet, with conscience
 Of his ill newes, did inly chill and quake,
 And stood still mute, as one in great suspence;
 As if that by his silence he would make
 Her rather reade his meaning then himselfe it spake.

Till she againe thus sayd: "Talus, be bold,
 And tell whatever it be, good or bad,
 That from thy tongue thy hearts intent doth hold."
 To whom he thus at length: "The tidings sad,
 That I would hide, will needs I see be rad.
 My lord (your love) by hard mishap doth lie
 In wretched bondage, wofully bestad."
 "Ay me," quoth she, "what wicked destinie!
 And is he vanquisht by his tyrant enemy?"

"Not by that tyrant, his intended foe;
 But by a tyrannesse," he then replide.
 "That him captived hath in haplesse woe."
 "Cease thou, bad newes-man; badly doest thou hide
 Thy maisters shame, in harlots bondage tide;
 The rest myselfe too readily can spell."
 With that in rage she turn'd from him aside,
 Forcing in vaine the rest to her to tell;
 And to her chamber went like solitary cell.

There she began to make her moanefull plaint
 Against her knight for being so untrew;
 And him to touch with falshoods fowle attaint,
 That all his other honour overthrew.
 Oft did she blame herselfe, and often rew,
 For yeelding to a straungers love so light,
 Whose life and manners straunge she never knew;
 And evermore she did him sharpely twight
 For breach of faith to her, which he had firmly plight.

And then she in her wrathfull will did cast
 How to revenge that blot of honour blent,
 To fight with him, and goodly die her last:
 And then againe she did herselfe torment,
 Inflicting on herselfe his punishment.
 Awhile she walkt, and chaft; awhile she threw
 Herselfe uppon her bed, and did lament:
 Yet did she not lament with loude alew,
 As women wont, but with deepe sighes and singulfs few.

Like as a wayward childe, whose sounder sleepe
 Is broken with some fearefull dreames affright,
 With froward will doth set himselfe to weepe,
 Ne can be stild for all his nurses might,
 But kicks, and squals, and shriekes for fell despight;
 Now scratching her, and her loose locks misusing;
 Now seeking darkenesse, and now seeking light,
 Then craving sucke, and then the sucke refusing:
 Such was this ladies fit in her loves fond accusing.

But when she had with such unquiet fits
 Herself there close afflicted long in vaine,
 Yet found no easement in her troubled wits,
 She unto Talus forth return'd againe,
 By change of place seeking to ease her paine;
 And gan enquire of him with mylder mood
 The certaine cause of Artegals detaine,
 And what he did, and in what state he stood,
 And whether he did woo, or whether he were woo'd.

"Ah wellaway!" said then the yron man,
 "That he is not the while in state to woo;
 But lies in wretched thraldome, weake and wan,
 Not by strong hand compelled thereunto,
 But his owne doome, that none can now undoo."
 "Sayd I not then," quoth she, "ere-while aright,
 That this is thinge compacte betwixt you two
 Me to deceive of faith unto me plight,
 Since that he was not forst, nor overcome in fight?"

With that he gan at large to her dilate
 The whole discourse of his captivance sad,
 In sort as ye have heard the same of late:
 All which when she with hard enduraunce had
 Heard to the end, she was right sore bestad,
 With sodaine stounds of wrath and grief attone;
 Ne would abide, till she had aunswere made;
 But streight herselfe did dight, and armor don,
 And mounting to her steede bad Talus guide her on.

So forth she rode uppon her ready way,
 To seeke her knight, as Talus her did guide:
 Sadly she rode and never word did say
 Nor good nor bad, ne ever lookt aside,
 But still right downe; and in her thought did hide
 The felnesse of her heart, right fully bent
 To fierce avengement of that womans pride,
 Which had her lord in her base prison pent,
 And so great honour with so fowle reproch had blent.

So as she thus melancholicke did ride,
 Chawing the cud of grieve and inward paine,
 She chaunst to meete toward the eventide
 A knight, that softly paced on the plaine,
 As if himselfe to solace he were faine:
 Well shot in yeares he seem'd, and rather bent
 To peace then needlesse trouble to constraine;
 As well by view of that his vestiment,
 As by his modest semblant, that no evill ment.

He comming neare gan gently her salute
 With curteous words, in the most comely wize;
 Who though desirous rather to rest mute,
 Then termes to entertaine of common guize,
 Yet rather then she kindnesse would despize,
 She would herselfe displease, so him requite.
 Then gan the other further to devise
 Of things abrode, as next to hand did light,
 And many things demaund, to which she answer'd light:

For little lust had she to talke of ought,
 Or ought to heare that mote delightfull bee;
 Her minde was whole possessed of one thought,
 That gave none other place. Which when as hee
 By outward signes (as well he might) did see,
 He list no lenger to use lothfull speach,
 But her besought to take it well in gree,
 Sith shady dampc had dimd the heavens reach,
 To lodge with him that night, unless good cause empeach.

The championesse, now seeing night at dore,
 Was glad to yeeld unto his good request;
 And with him went without gaine-saying more.
 Not farre away, but little wide by west,
 His dwelling was, to which he him address;
 Where soone arriving they received were
 In seemely wise, as them beseeemed best;
 For he their host them goodly well did cheare,
 And talk't of pleasant things the night away to weare.

Thus passing th' evening well, till time of rest,
 Then Britomart unto a bowre was brought;
 Where groomes awayted her to have undrest:
 But she no would undressed be for ought,
 Ne doffe her armes, though he her much besought:
 For she had vow'd, she sayd, not to forgo
 Those warlike weedes, till she revenge had wrought
 Of a late wrong uppon a mortall foe;
 Which she would sure performe betide her wele or wo.

Which when their host perceiv'd, right discontent
 In minde he grew, for feare least by that art
 He should his purpose misse, which close he ment;
 Yet taking leave of her he did depart:
 There all that night remained Britomart,
 Restlesse, recomfortlesse, with heart deepe-grieved,
 Not suffering the least twinc kling sleepe to start
 Into her eye, which th' heart mote have relieved;
 But if the least appear'd, her eyes she streight reprieved

"Ye guilty eyes," sayd she, "the which with guyle
 My heart at first betrayd, will be betray
 My life now too, for which a little whyle
 Ye will not watch? false watches, wellaway!
 I wote when ye did watch both night and day
 Unto your losse; and now needes will ye sleepe?
 Now ye have made my heart to wake alway,
 Now will ye sleepe? ah! wake, and rather weepe
 To thinke of your nights want, that should yee waking keepe."

Thus did she watch, and weare the weary night
 In wayfull plaints, that none was to appease;
 Now walking soft, now sitting still upright,
 As sundry chaunge her seemed best to ease.
 Ne lesse did Talus suffer sleepe to seaze
 His eye-lids sad, but watcht continually,
 Lying without her dore in great disease;
 Like to a spaniel wayting carefully
 Least any should betray his lady treacherously.

What time the native belman of the night,
 The bird that warn'd Peter of his fall,
 First rings his silver bell t' each sleepy wight,
 That should their mindes up to devotion call,
 She heard a wondrous noise below the hall:
 All sodainely the bed, where she should lie,
 By a false trap was let adowne to fall
 Into a lower roome, and by and by
 The loft was raynd againe, that no man could it spie.

With sight whereof she was dismayd right sore,
 Perceiving well the treason which was ment:
 Yet stirred not at all for doubt of more,
 But kept her place with courage confident,
 Wayting what would ensue of that event.
 It was not long before she heard the sound
 Of armed men comming with close intent
 Towards her chamber: at which dreadfull stound
 She quickly caught her sword, and shield about her bound.

With that there came unto her chamber dore
 Two knights all armed ready for to fight;
 And after them full many other more,
 A raskall rout, with weapons rudely dight:
 Whom soone as Talus spide by glims of night,
 He started up, there where on ground he lay,
 And in his hand his thresher ready keight:
 They, seeing that, let drive at him streightway,
 And round about him preace in riotous aray.

But, soone as he began to lay about
 With his rude yron slaile, they gan to flie,
 Both armed knights and eke unarmed rout :
 Yet Talus after them apace did plie,
 Wherever in the darke he could them spie ;
 That here and there like scattred sheepe they lay,
 Then, backe returning where his dame did lie,
 He to her told the story of that fray,
 And all that treason there intended did bewray.

Wherewith though wondrous wroth, and inly burning
 To be avenged for so fowle a deede,
 Yet being forst t' abide the daies returning,
 She there remain'd ; but with right wary heede,
 Least any more such practise should proceede.
 Now mote ye know (that which to Britomart
 Unknownen was) whence all this did proceede ;
 And for what cause so great mischiévous smart
 Was ment to her that never evill ment in hart.

The goodman of this house was Dolon hight ;
 A man of subtill wit and wicked minde,
 That whilome in his youth had bene a knight,
 And armes had borne, but little good could finde,
 And much lesse honour by that warlike kinde
 Of life : for he was nothing valorous,
 But with slie shiftes and wiles did underminde
 All noble knights, which were adventurous,
 And many brought to shame by treason treacherous.

He had three sonnes, all three like fathers sonnes,
 Like treacherous, like full of fraud and guile,
 Of all that on this earthly compasse wonnes :
 The eldest of the which was slaine erewhile
 By Artegall, through his owne guilty wile ;
 His name was Guizor ; whose untimely fate
 For to avenge, full many treasons vile
 His father Dolon had deviz'd of late
 With these his wicked sons, and shewd his cankred hate.

For sure he weend that this his present guest
 Was Artegall, by many tokens plaine ;
 But chiefly by that yron page he ghest,
 Which still was wont with Artegall remaine ;
 And therefore ment him surely to have slaine :
 But by Gods grace, and her good heedinesse,
 She was preserved from their traytrous traine.
 Thus she all night wore out in watchfulnesse,
 Ne suffred slothfull sleepe her eyelids to oppresse.

The morrow next, so soone as dawning houro
 Discovered had the light to living eye,
 She forth yssew'd out of her loathed bowre,
 With full intent t' avenge that villany
 On that vilde man and all his family:
 And, comming down to seeke them where they wond,
 Nor sire, nor sonnes, nor any could she spie;
 Each rowme she sought, but them all empty fond:
 They all were fled for feare; but whether, neither kond.

She saw it vaine to make there lenger stay,
 But tooke her steede; and thereon mounting light,
 Gan her addresse unto her former way.
 She had not rid the mountenance of a flight,
 But that she saw there present in her sight
 Those two false brethren on that perillous bridge,
 On which Pollente with Artegall did fight.
 Streight was the passage, like a ploughed ridge,
 That, if two met, the one mote needs fall o'er the lidge.

There they did thinke themselves on her to wreake:
 Who as she nigh unto them drew, the one
 These vile reproches gan unto her speake;
 "Thou recreant false traytor, that with lone
 Of armes hast knighthood stolne, yet knight art none,
 No more shall now the darkenesse of the night
 Defend thee from the vengeance of thy sone;
 But with thy bloud thou shalt appease the spright
 Of Guizor by thee slaine and muredred by thy slight."

Strange were the words in Britomartis care;
 Yet stayd she not for them, but forward fared,
 Till to the perillous bridge she came; and there
 Talus desir'd that he might have prepared
 The way to her, and those two losels scared:
 But she thereat was wroth, that for despiht
 The glauncing sparkles through her bever glared,
 And from her eies did flash out fiery light,
 Like coles that through a silver censer sparkle bright.

She stayd not to advise which way to take;
 But, putting spurres unto her fiery beast,
 Thorough the midst of them she way did make.
 The one of them, which most her wrath increast,
 Upon her speare she bore before her breast,
 Till to the bridges further end she past:
 Where falling downe his challenge he releast:
 The other over side the bridge she cast
 Into the river, where he drunke his deadly last.

As when the flashing levin haps to light
 Uppon two stubborne oakes, which stand so neare
 That way betwixt them none appears in sight;
 The engin, fiercely flying forth, doth teare
 Th' one from the earth, and through the aire doth beare;
 The other it with force doth overthrow
 Uppon one side, and from his rootes doth reare:
 So did the championesse these two there strow,
 And to there sire their carcasses left to bestow.

CANTO VII.

Britomart comes to Isis church,
 Where shee strange visions sees:
 She fights with Radigund, her slaics,
 And Artegall thence frees.

NOUGHT is on earth more sacred or divine,
 That gods and men doe equally adore,
 Then this same vertue that doth right define;
 For th' hevens themselves, whence mortal men implore
 Right in their wrongs, are rul'd by righteous lore
 Of highest Iove, who doth true iustice deale
 To his inferiour gods, and evermore
 Therewith containes his heavenly commonweale:
 The skill whereof to princes hearts he doth reveale.

Well therefore did the antique world invent
 That Iustice was a god of soveraine grace,
 And altars unto him and temples lent,
 And heavenly honours in the highest place;
 Calling him great Osyris, of the race
 Of th' old Egyptian kings that whylome were;
 With fayned colours shading a true case;
 For that Osyris, whilst he lived here,
 The iustest man alive and truest did appeare.

His wife was Isis; whom they likewise made
 A goddessse of great powre and soverainty
 And in her person cunningly did shade
 That part of iustice which is equity,
 Whereof I have to treat here presently:
 Unto whose temple whenas Britomart
 Arrived, shee with great humility
 Did enter in, ne would that night depart;
 But Talus mote not be admitted to her part.

There she received was in goodly wize
 Of many priests, which duely did attend
 Uppon the rites and daily sacrificize,
 All clad in linnen robes with silver hemd;
 And on their heads with long locks comely kemd
 They wore rich mitres shaped like the moone;
 To shew that Isis doth the moone portend;
 Like as Osyris signifies the sunne:
 For that they both like race in equall iustice runne.

The championesse them greeting, as she could,
 Was thence by them into the temple led;
 Whose goodly building when she did behould
 Borne uppon stately pillours, all dispredd
 With shining gold, and arched over hed,
 She wondred at the workmans passing skill,
 Whose like before she never saw nor red;
 And thereuppon long while stood gazing still,
 But thought that she thereon could never gaze her fill.

Thenceforth unto the idoll they her brought;
 The which was framed all of silver fine,
 So well as could with cunning hand be wrought
 And clothed all in garments made of line,
 Hemd all about with fringe of silver twine:
 Uppon her head she wore a crowne of gold;
 To shew that she had powre in things divine:
 And at her feete a crocodile was rold,
 That with her wreathed taile her middle did enfold.

One foote was set uppon the crocodile,
 And on the ground the other fast did stand;
 So meaning to suppress both forged guile
 And open force: and in her other hand
 She stretched forth a long white slender wand.
 Such was the goddessse: whom when Britomart
 Had long beheld, herselfe uppon the land
 She did prostrate, and with right humble hart
 Unto herselfe her silent prayers did impart.

To which the idoll as it were inclining
 Her wand did move with amiable looke,
 By outward shew her inward sence desining:
 Who well perceiving how her wand she shooke,
 It as a token of good fortune tooke,
 By this the day with dampe was overcast,
 And ioyous light the house of love forsooke;
 Which when she saw, her helmet she unlaste
 And by the altars side herselfe to slumber plaste.

For other beds the priests there used none,
 But on their mother earths deare lap did lie,
 And bake their sides uppon the cold hard stone,
 T' enure themselves to sufferance thereby,
 And proud rebellious flesh to mortify:
 For, by the vow of their religion,
 They tied were to stedfast chastity
 And continence of life; that, all forgon,
 They mote the better tend to their devotion.

Therefore they mote not taste of fleshly food,
 Ne feed on ought the which doth bloud containe,
 Ne drinke of wine; for wine they say is blood,
 Even the bloud of gyants, which were slaine
 By thundring Iove in the Phlegrean plaine:
 For which the earth (as they the story tell)
 Wroth with the gods, which to perpetuall paine
 Had damn'd her sonnes which gainst them did rebell,
 With inward grieve and malice did against them swell:

And of their vitall bloud, the which was shed
 Into her pregnant bosome, forth she brought
 The fruitfull vine; whose liquor bloudy red,
 Having the mindes of men with fury fraught,
 Mote in them stirre up old rebellious thought
 To make new warre against the gods againe:
 Such is the powre of that same fruit, that nought
 The fell contagion may thereof restraîne,
 Ne within reasons rule her madding mood containe.

There did the warlike maide herselfe repose,
 Under the wings of Isis all that night;
 And with sweete rest her heavy eyes did close,
 After that long daies toile and wearie plight:
 Where whilst her earthly parts with soft delight
 Of sencelesse sleepe did deeply drowned lie,
 There did appeare unto her heavenly spright
 A wondrous vision, which did close imple
 The course of all her fortune and posteritie.

Her seem'd as she was doing sacrifico
 To Isis, deckt with mitre on her hed
 And linnen stole after those priestès guise,
 All sodainely she saw transfigured
 Her linnen stole to robe of scarlet red,
 And moone-like mitre to a crowne of gold;
 That even she herselfe much wondered
 At such a chaunge, and ioyed to behold
 Herselfe adorn'd with gems and jewels manifold.

And, in the midst of her felicity,
 An hideous tempest seemed from below,
 To rise through all the temple sodainely,
 That from the altar all about did blow
 The holy fire, and all the embers strow
 Uppon the ground; which, kindled privily,
 Into outrageous flames unwares did grow,
 That all the temple put in icopardy
 Of flaming, and herselfe in great perplexity.

With that the crocodile, which sleeping lay
 Under the idols feete in fearelesse bowre,
 Seem'd to awake in horrible dismay,
 As being troubled with that stormy stowre;
 And gaping greedy wide did streight deuoure
 Both flames and tempest; with which growen great,
 And swolne with pride of his owne peerelesse powre,
 He gan to threaten her likewise to eat:
 But that the goddesse with her rod him backe did beat.

Tho, turning all his pride to humblesse meeke,
 Himselfe before her feete he lowly threw
 And gan for grace and love of her to seeke:
 Which she accepting, he so neare her drew
 That of his game she soone enwombd grew,
 And forth did bring a lion of great might,
 That shortly did all other beasts subdew:
 With that she waked full of feareful fright,
 And doubtfully dismayd through that so uncouth sight.

So thereuppon long while she musing lay,
 With thousand thoughts feeding her fantasie;
 Untill she spide the lampe of lightsome day
 Up-lifted in the porch of heaven hie:
 Then up she rose fraught with melánocholy,
 And forth into the lower parts did pas,
 Whereas, the priestes she found full busily
 About their holy things for morrow mas;
 Whom she saluting faire, faire resaluted was.

But, by the change of her unchearefull looke,
 They might perceiue she was not well in plight,
 Or that some pensiveness to heart she tooke:
 Therefore thus one of them, who seem'd in sight
 To be the greatest and the gravest wight,
 To her bespake; "Sir knight, it seems to me
 That, thorough evill rest of this last night,
 Or ill apayd or much dismayd ye be;
 That by your change of chearie is easie for to see."

"Certes," sayd she, "sith ye so well have spide
 The troublous passion of my pensive mind,
 I will not seeke the same from you to hide:
 But will my cares unfolde, in hope to find
 Your aide to guide me out of errour blind."
 "Say on," quoth he, "the secret of your hart:
 For, by the holy vow which me doth bind,
 I am adiur'd best counsell to impart
 To all that shall require my comfort in their smart."

Then gan she to declare the whole discourse
 Of all that vision which to her appeared,
 As well as to her minde it had recourse.
 All which when he unto the end had heard,
 Like to a weake faint-hearted man he fared
 Through great astonishment of that strange sight,
 And, with long locks up-standing stitly, stared
 Like one adawed with some dreadfull spright:
 So fild with heavenly fury thus he her belight;

"Magnificke virgin, that in queint disguise
 Of British armes doest maske thy royall blood,
 So to pursue a perillous emprize;
 How couldst thou weene, through that disguised hood,
 To hide thy state from being understood?
 Can from th' immortall gods ought hidden bee?
 They doe thy linage, and thy lordly brood,
 They doe thy sire lamenting sore for thee,
 They doe thy love forlorne in womens thraldome see.

"The end whereof, and all the long event,
 They doe to thee in this same dreame discover:
 For that same crocodile doth represent
 The righteous knight that is thy faithfull lover,
 Like to Osyris in all iust endever:
 For that same crocodile Osyris is,
 That under Isis seete doth sleepe for ever;
 To shew that clemence oft, in things amis,
 Restraines those sterne behests and cruell doomes of his.

"That knight shall all the troublous stormes asswage
 And raging flames, that many foes shall reare
 To hinder thee from the iust heritage
 Of thy sires crowne, and from thy countrey deare:
 Then shalt thou take him to thy loved fere,
 And ioyne in equall portion of thy realme:
 And afterwards a sonne to him shalt beare,
 That lion-like shall shew his powre extreame.
 So blesse thee God, and give thee ioyance of thy dreame!"

All which when she unto the end had heard,
 She much was eased in her troublous thought,
 And on those priests bestowed rich reward;
 And royall gifts of gold and silver wrought
 She for a present to their goddesses brought.
 Then taking leave of them she forward went
 To seeke her love, where he was to be sought,
 Ne rested till she came without relent
 Unto the land of amazons, as she was bent.

Whereof when newes to Radigund was brought,
 Not with amaze, as women wonted bee,
 She was confused in her troublous thought;
 But fild with courage and with ioyous glee,
 As glad to heare of armes, the which now she
 Had long surceast, she bad to open bold,
 That she the face of her new foe might see:
 But when they of that yron man had told,
 Which late her folke had slaine, she bad them forth to hold.

So there without the gate, as seemed best,
 She caused her pavilion be pight;
 In which stout Britomart herselfe did rest,
 Whiles Talus watched at the dore all night.
 All night likewise they of the towne in fright
 Upon their wall good watch and ward did keepe.
 The morrow next, so soone as dawning light
 Bad doe away the dampe of drouzie sleepe,
 The warlike amazon out of her bowre did peepe;

And caused streight a trumpet loud to shrill,
 To warne her foe to battell soone be prest:
 Who, long before awoke, (for she full ill
 Could sleepe all night, that in unquiet brest
 Did closely harbour such a iealous guest,)
 Was to the battell whilome ready dight.
 Eftsoones that warriouresse with haughty crest
 Did forth issue all ready for the fight;
 On th' other side her foe appeared soone in sight.

But, ere they reared hand, the amazone
 Began the streight conditions to propound,
 With which she used still to tye her fone.
 To serve her so, as she the rest had bound:
 Which when the other heard, she sternly frownd
 For high disdaine of such indignity,
 And would no lenger treat, but bad them sound:
 For her no other termes should ever tie
 Then what prescribed were by lawes of chevalrie.

The trumpets sound, and they together run
 With greedy rage, and with their faulchins smot;
 Ne either sought the others strokes to shun,
 But through great fury both their skill forgot,
 And practicke use in armes; ne spared not
 Their dainty parts, which nature had created
 So faire and tender without staine or spot
 For other uses then they them translated;
 Which they now hackt and hewd as if such use they hated.

As when a tygre and a lionesse
 Are met at spoyling of some hungry pray,
 Both challenge it with equall greedinesse:
 But first the tygre clawes thereon did lay;
 And therefore loth to loose her right away
 Doth in defence thereof full stoutly stond:
 To which the lion strongly doth gainesay,
 That she to hunt the beast first tooke in hond;
 And therefore ought it have wherever she it fond.

Full fiercely layde the amazon about,
 And dealt her blowes unmercifully sore;
 Which Britomart withstood with courage stout,
 And them repaide againe with double more.
 So long they fought, that all grassie flore
 Was fild with bloud which from their sides did flow,
 And gushed through their armes, that all in gore
 They trode, and on the ground their lives did strow,
 Like fruitles seede, of which untimely death should grow.

At last proud Radigund with fell despight,
 Having by chaunce espide advantage neare,
 Let drive at her with all her dreadfull might,
 And thus upbrayding said; "This token beare
 Unto the man whom thou doest love so deare;
 And tell him for his sake thy life thou gavest."
 Which spitefull words she sore engriev'd to heare
 Thus answer'd; "Lewdly thou my love depravest,
 Who shortly must repent that now so vainely bravest."

Nath'lesse that stroke so cruell passage found,
 That glauncing on her shoulder-plate it bit
 Unto the bone, and made a griesly wound,
 That she her shield through raging smart of it
 Could scarse uphold; yet soone she it requit:
 For, having force increast through furious paine,
 She her so rudely on the helmet smit
 That it empierced to the very braine,
 And her proud person low prostrated on the plaine.

Where being layd, the wrothfull Britonesse
 Stayd not till she came to herselfe againe;
 But in revenge both of her loves distresse
 And her late vile reproch though vaunted vaine,
 And also of her wound which sore did paine.
 She with one stroke both head and helmet cleft:
 Which dreadful sight when all her warlike traine
 There present saw, each one of sence bereft
 Fled fast into the towne, and her sole victor left.

But yet so fast they could not home retrate,
 But that swift Talus did the foremost win;
 And, pressing through the preace unto the gate,
 Pelmell with them attonce did enter in:
 There then a piteous slaughter did begin;
 For all that ever came within his reach
 He with his yron flae did thresh so thin,
 That he no worke at all left for the leach;
 Like to an hideous storme, which nothing may empeach.

And now by this the noble conqueresse
 Herselfe came in, her glory to partake;
 Where though revengefull vow she did professe,
 Yet, when she saw the heapes which he did make
 Of slaughtred carkasses, her heart did quake
 For very ruth, which did it almost rive,
 That she his fury willed him to slake:
 For else he sure had left not one alive;
 But all, in his revenge, of spirite would deprive.

Tho, when she had his execution stayd,
 She for that yron prison did enquire,
 In which her wretched love was captive layd:
 Which breaking open with indignant ire,
 She entred into all the partes entire:
 Where when she saw that lothly uncouth sight
 Of men disguiz'd in womanishe attire,
 Her heart gan grudge for very deepe despight
 Of so unmanly maske in misery misdight.

At last whenas to her owne love she came,
 Whom like disguise no lesse deformed had,
 At sight thereof abasht with secrete shame
 She turnd her head aside, as nothing glad
 To have beheld a spectacle so bad;
 And then too well believ'd that which tofore
 Iealous suspect as true untruely drad:
 Which vaine conceipt now nourishing no more,
 She sought with ruth to salve his sad misfortunes sore.

Not so great wonder and astonishment
 Did the most chast Penelope possesse,
 To see her lord, that was reported drent
 And dead long since in dolorous distresse,
 Come home to her in piteous wretchednesse,
 After long travell of full twenty yeares;
 That she knew not his favours likelinessse,
 For many scarres and many hoary heares;
 But stood long staring on him mongst uncertaine feares.

"Ah! my deare lord, what sight is this," quoth she,
 "What may-game hath misfortune made of you?
 Where is that dreadfull manly looke? where be
 Those mighty palmes, the which ye wont t' embrow
 In bloud of kings, and great hoastes to subdew?
 Could ought on earth so wondrous change have wrought
 As to have robde you of that manly hew?
 Could so great courage stouped have to ought?
 Then farewell, fleshly force; I see thy pride is nought!"

Thenceforth she streight into a bowre him brought,
 And causd him those uncomely weedes undight;
 And in their steede for other rayment sought,
 Whereof there was great store, and armors bright,
 Which had bene reft from many a noble knight;
 Whom that proud amazon subdewed had,
 Whilest fortune favoured her successe in fight.
 In which whenas she him anew had clad,
 She was reviv'd, and ioyd much in his semblance glad.

So there awhile they afterwards remained,
 Him to refresh, and her late wounds to heale:
 During which space she there as princess rained;
 And changing all that forme of common-weale
 The liberty of women did repeale,
 Which they had long usurpt; and, them restoring
 To mens subiection, did true iustice deale:
 That all they, as a goddessse, her adoring,
 Her wisdomme did admire, and hearkned to her loring.

For all those knights, which long in captive shade
 Had shrowded bene, she did from thraldome free;
 And magistrates of all that city made,
 And gave to them great living and large fee:
 And, that they should for ever faithfull bee,
 Made them sweare fealty to Artegall:
 Who when himselfe now well recur'd did see,
 He purposd to proceed, whatso befall,
 Uppon his first adventure which him forth did call.

Full sad and sorrowfull was Britomart
 For his departure, her new cause of griefe;
 Yet wisely moderated her owne smart,
 Seeing his honor, which she tendred chiefe,
 Consisted much in that adventures priefe:
 The care whereof, and hope of his successe,
 Gave unto her great comfort and reliefe;
 That womanish complaints she did repress,
 And tempred for the time her present heavinesse.

There she continu'd for a certaine space,
 Till through his want her woe did more increase:
 Then, hoping that the change of aire and place
 Would change her paine and sorrow somewhat easie
 She parted thence, her anguish to appease.
 Meane while her noble lord Sir Artegall
 Went on his way; ne ever howre did cease,
 Till he redeemed had that lady thrall:
 That for another canto will more fitly fall.

CANTO VIII.

Prince Arthure and Sir Artegall
 Free Samient from feare:
 They slay the soudan; drive his wife,
 Adicia to despaire.

NOUGHT under heaven so strongly doth allure
 The sence of man, and all his minde possesse,
 As beauties lovely baite, that doth procure
 Great warriors oft their rigour to repress,
 And mighty hands forget their manlinesse;
 Drawne with the powre of an heart-robbing eye,
 And wrapt in fetters of a golden tresse,
 That can with melting pleasaunce mollifie
 Their hardned hearts enur'd to blood and cruelty.

So whylome learnd that mighty Iewish swaine,
 Each of whose lockes did match a man in might,
 To lay his spoiles before his lemans traine:
 So also did that great Octean knight
 For his loves sake his lions skin undight;
 And so did warlike Antony neglect
 The worlds whole rule for Cleopatras sight.
 Such wondrous powre hath wemens faire aspect
 To captive men, and make them all the world reiect.

Yet could it not sterne Artegall retaine,
 Nor hold from suite of his avowed quest,
 Which he had undertane to Gloriane;
 But left his love (albe her strong request)
 Faire Britomart in languor and unrest,
 And rode himselſe uppon his first intent:
 Ne day nor night did ever idly rest;
 Ne wight but onely Talus with him went,
 The true guide of his way and vertuous government.

So travelling, he chaunst far off to heed
 A damzell flying on a palfrey fast
 Before two knights that after her did speed
 With all their powre, and her full fiercely chaste
 In hope to have her overhent at last:
 Yet fled she fast, and both them farre outwent,
 Carried with wings of feare, like fowle aghast,
 With locks all loose, and rayment all to rent;
 And ever as she rode her eye was backward bent.

Soone after these he saw another knight,
 That after those two former rode apace
 With speare in rest, and prickt with all his might:
 So ran they all, as they had bene at bace,
 They being chased that did others chace.
 At length he saw the hindmost overtake
 One of those two, and force him turne his face;
 However loth he were his way to slake,
 Yet mote he algates now abide, and answere make.

But th' other still pursu'd the fearefull mayd;
 Who still from him as fast away did flie,
 Ne once for ought her speedy passage stayd,
 Till that at length she did before her spie
 Sir Artegall, to whom she streight did hie
 With gladfull hast, in hope of him to get
 Succour against her greedy enemy:
 Who seeing her approach gan forward set
 To save her from her feare, and him from force to let.

But he, like hound full greedy of his pray,
 Being impatient of impediment,
 Continu'd still his course, and by the way
 Thought with his speare him quight have overwent,
 So both together, ylike felly bent,
 Like fiercely met: but Artegall was stronger,
 And better skild in tilt and turnament,
 And bore him quite out of his saddle, longer [wronger:
 Then two speares length: so mischief over-matcht the

And in his fall misfortune him mistooke;
 For on his head unhappily he pight,
 That his owne waight his necke asunder broke,
 And left there dead. Meane while the other knight
 Defeated had the other faytour quight,
 And all his bowels in his body brast:
 Whom leaving there in that dispiteous plight.
 He ran still on, thinking to follow fast
 His other fellow pagan which before him past.

Instead of whom finding there ready prest
 Sir Artegall, without discretion
 He at him ran with ready speare in rest:
 Who, seeing him come still so fiercely on,
 Against him made againe: so both anon
 Together met, and strongly either strooke,
 And broke their speares; yet neither has forgon
 His horses backe, yet to and fro long shooke
 And tottred, like two towres which through a tempest [quooke.

But, when againe they had recovered sence,
 They drew their swords, in mind to make amends
 For what their speares had fayld of their pretence:
 Which when the damzell, who those deadly ends
 Of both her foes had scene, and now her friends
 For her beginning a more fearefull fray;
 She to them runnes in hast, and her haire rends
 Crying to them their cruell hands to stay,
 Untill they both do heare what she to them will say.

They stayd their hands; when she thus gan to speake;
 "Ah! gentle knights, what meane ye thus unwise
 Upon yourselves anothers wrong to wreake?
 I am the wrong'd, whom ye did enterprise
 Both to redresse, and both redrest likewise:
 Witnesse the paynims both, whom ye may see
 There dead on ground: what doe ye then devise
 Of more revenge? if more, then I am shee
 Which was the roote of all; end your revenge on me."

Whom when they heard so say, they lookt about
 To weete if it were true as she had told;
 Where when they saw their foes dead out of doubt,
 Eftsoones they gan their wrothfull hands to hold,
 And ventailes reare each other to behold.
 Tho, whenas Artegall did Arthure vew,
 So faire a creature and so wondrous bold,
 He much admired both his heart and hew,
 And touched with intire affection nigh him drew;

Saying, "sir knight, of pardon I you pray,
That all unweeting have you wrong'd thus sore,
Suffring my hand against my heart to stray:
Which if ye please forgive, I will therefore
Yeeld for amends myselfe yours evermore,
Or whatso penance shall by you be red."
To whom the prince; "certes me needeth more
To crave the same; whom errour so misled,
As that I did mistake the living for the ded.

"But, sith ye please that both our blames shall die,
Amends may for the trespasse soone be made,
Since neither is endamadg'd much thereby."
So can they both themselves full eath perswade
To faire accordaunce, and both faults to shade,
Either embracing other lovingly,
And swearing faith to either on his blade,
Never thenceforth to nourish enmity,
But either others cause to maintaine mutually.

Then Artegall gan of the prince enquire,
What were those knights which there on ground were layd
And had receiv'd their follies worthy hire,
And for what cause they chased so that mayd.
"Certes I wote not well," the prince then sayd,
"But by adventure found them ~~sar~~ing so,
As by the way unweetingly I strayd,
And lo! the damzell selfe, whence all did grow,
Of whom we may at will the whole occasion know."

Then they that damzell called to them nie,
And asked her, what were those two her fene,
From whom she earst so fast away did flie;
And what was she herselfe so woe-begone,
And for what cause pursu'd of them attone.
To whom she thus; "Then wote ye well, that I
Doe serve a queene that not far hence doth wone,
A princesse of great powre and maiestie,
Famous through all the world, and honor'd far and nie.

"Her name Mercilla most men use to call
That is a mayden queene of high renowne,
For her great bounty knowen over all
And soveraine grace, with which her royall crowne
She doth support, and strongly beateth downe
The malice of her foes, which her envy
And at her happinesse do fret and frowne;
Yet she herselfe the more doth magnify,
And even to her foes her mercies multiply.

"Mongst many which maligne her happy state,
 There is a mighty man, which wonnes here by,
 That with most fell despight and deadly hate
 Seekes to subvert her crowne and dignity,
 And all his powre doth thereunto apply:
 And her good knights, (of which so brave a band
 Serves her as any princesse under sky,)
 He either spoiles, if they against him stand,
 Or to his part allures, and bribeth under hand.

"Ne him sufficeth all the wrong and ill
 Which he unto her people does each day;
 But that he seekes by trayterous traines to spill
 Her person, and her sacred selfe to slay:
 That, O ye heavens, defend! and turne away
 From her unto the miscreant himselfe;
 That neither hath religion nor fay,
 But makes his god of his ungodly pelfe,
 And idoles serves: so let his idols serve the elfe!

"To all which cruell tyranny, they say,
 He is provokt, and stird up day and night
 By his bad wife that hight Adicia;
 Who counsels him, through confidence of might,
 To breake all bonds of law and rules of right:
 For she herselfe professeth mortall foe
 To Iustice, and against her still doth fight,
 Working, to all that love her, deadly woe,
 And making all her knights and people to doe so.

"Which my liege lady seeing, thought it best
 With that his wife in friendly wise to deale
 For stint of strife and stablishment of rest
 Both to herselfe and to her common-weale,
 And all forepast displeasures to repeale.
 So me in message unto her she sent,
 To treat with her, by way of enterdeale,
 Of finall peace and faire attonement
 Which might concluded be by mutuall consent.

"All times have wont safe passage to afford
 To messengers that come for causes iust:
 But this proude dame, disdayning all accord,
 Not onely into bitter termes forth brust,
 Reviling me and rayling as she lust,
 But lastly, to make prooffe of utmost shame,
 Me like a dog she out of dores did thrust,
 Miscalling me by many a bitter name,
 That never did her ill, ne once deserved blame.

"And lastly, that no shame might wanting be,
 When I was gone, soone after me she sent
 These two false knights, whom there ye lying see,
 To be by them dishonoured and shent :
 But, thank't be God, and your good hardiment !
 They have the price of their owne folly payd."
 So said this damzell, that hight Samient ;
 And to those knights for their so noble ayd
 Herselfe most gratefull shew'd, and heaped thanks repayd.

But they now having throughly heard and scene
 All those great wrongs, the which that mayd complained
 To have bene done against her lady queene
 By that proud dame, which her so much disdained,
 Were moved much thereat, and twixt them fained
 With all their force to worke avengement strong,
 Uppon the souldan selfe, which it mayntained,
 And on his lady, th' author of that wrong,
 And uppon all those knights that did to her belong.

But, thinking best by counterfet disguise
 To their deseigne to make the easier way,
 They did this complot twixt themselves devise :
 First, that Sir Artegall should him array
 Like one of those two knights which dead there lay ;
 And then that damzell, the sad Samient,
 Should as his purchast prize with him convey
 Unto the souldans court, her to present
 Unto his scornfull lady that for her had sent.

So as they had deviz'd, Sir Artegall
 Him clad in th' armour of a pagan knight,
 And taking with him, as his vanquisht thrall,
 That damzell, led her to the souldans right :
 Where soone as his proud wife of her had sight,
 Forth of her window as she looking lay,
 She weened streight it was her paynim knight,
 Which brought that damzell as his purchast pray ;
 And sent to him a page that mote direct his way :

Who, bringing them to their appointed place,
 Offred his service to disarm the knight ;
 But he refusing him to let unlace,
 For doubt to be discovered by his sight,
 Kept himselfe still in his straunge armour dight :
 Soone after whom the prince arrived there,
 And, sending to the souldan in despight
 A bold defyance, did of him requere
 That damsell whom he held as wrongfull prisonere.

Wherewith the souldan all with furie fraught,
 Swearing and banning most blasphemously,
 Commaunded straight his armour to be brought;
 And, mounting straight upon a charret hye,
 With yron wheelles and hookes arm'd dreadfully,
 And drawne of cruell steedes which he had fed
 With flesh of men, whom through fell tyranny
 He slaughtred had, and ere they were halfe ded
 Their bodies to his beastes for provender did spred;

So forth he came all in a cote of plate
 Burnisht with bloudie rust; whiles on the greene
 The Briton prince him readie did awayte
 In glistering armes right goodly well besene,
 That shone as bright as doth the heaven sheene;
 And by his stirrup Talus did attend,
 Playing his pages part, as he had beene
 Before directed by his lord; to th' end
 He should his flaile to finall execution bend.

Thus goe they both together to their geare
 With like fierce minds, but meanings different:
 For the proud souldan, with presumptuous cheare
 And countenance sublime and insolent;
 Sought onely slaughter and avengement;
 But the brave prince for honour and for right,
 Gainst tortious powre and lawlesse regiment,
 In the behalfe of wronged weake did fight:
 More in his causes truth he trusted then in might.

Like to the Thracian tyrant, who they say
 Unto his horses gave his guests for meat,
 Till he himselfe was made their greedie pray,
 And torne in pices by Alcides great;
 So thought the souldan, in his follies threat,
 Either the prince in peeces to have torne
 With his sharpe wheelles in his first rages heat,
 Or under his fierce horses feet have borne,
 And trampled downe in dust his thoughts disdained scorne.

But the bold child that perill well espying,
 If he too rashly to his charret drew,
 Gave way unto his horses speedie flying,
 And their resistlesse rigour did eschew:
 Yet, as he passed by, the pagan threw
 A shivering dart with so impetuous force,
 That, had he not it shunn'd with heedful vew,
 It had himselfe transfixt or his horse,
 Or made them both one masse withouten more remorse.

Oft drew the prince unto his charret nigh,
 In hope some stroke to fasten on him neare;
 But he was mounted in his seat so high,
 And his wing-footed coursers him did beare
 So fast away, that, ere his readie speare
 He could advance, he farre was gone and past:
 Yet still he him did follow every where,
 And followed was of him likewise full fast,
 So long as in his steedes the flaming breath did last.

Againe the pagan threw another dart,
 Of which he had with him abundant store
 On every side of his embatteld cart,
 And of all other weapons lesse or more,
 Which warlike uses had devis'd of yore:
 The wicked shaft, guyded through th' ayrie wyde
 By some bad spirit that it to mischief bore,
 Stayd not, till through his curat it did glyde,
 And made a griesly wound in his enriven side.

Much was he grieved with that haplesse throe,
 That opened had the welspring of his blood;
 But much the more that to his hatefull foe
 He mote not come to wreake his wrathfull mood:
 That made him rave, like to a lyon wood,
 Which being wounded of the huntsmans hand
 Cannot come neare him in the covert wood,
 Where he with boughes hath built his shady stand,
 And fenst himselfe about with many a flaming brand.

Still when he sought t'approch unto him ny
 His charret wheelles about him whirled round,
 And made him backe againe as fast to fly;
 And eke his steedes, like to an hungry hound
 That hunting after game hath carrion found,
 So cruelly did him pursew and chace,
 That his good steed, all were he much renound
 For noble courage and for hardie race,
 Durst not endure their sight, but fled from place to place.

Thus long they trast and traverst to and fro,
 Seeking by every way to make some breach;
 Yet could the prince not nigh unto him goe,
 That one sure stroke he might unto him reach,
 Whereby his strengthes assay he might him teach:
 At last, from his victorious shield he drew
 The vaile, which did his powrefull light empeach;
 And comming full before his horses vew,
 As they upon him prest, it plaine to them did shew.

Like lightening flash that hath the gazer burned,
 So did the sight thereof their sense dismay,
 That backe againe upon themselves they turned,
 And with their ryder ranne perforce away:
 Ne could the souldan them from flying stay
 With raynes or wonted rule, as well he knew:
 Nought feared they what he could do or say,
 But th' onely feare that was before their vew;
 From which like mazed deere dismayfully they flew.

Fast did they fly as them there feete could beare
 High over hilles, and lowly over dales,
 As they were follow'd of their former feare:
 In vaine the pagan bannes, and sweares, and rayles,
 And backe with both his hands unto him hayles
 The resty raynes, regarded now no more:
 He to them calles and speakes, yet nought avayles;
 They heare him not, they have forgot his lore;
 But go which way they list; their guide they have forlore

As when the fire-mouthed steedes, which drew
 The sunnes bright wayne to Phaëtons decay,
 Soone as they d'd the monstrous scorpion vew
 With ugly craples crawling in their way,
 The dreadfull sight did them so sore affray,
 That their well-known courses they forwent;
 And, leading th' ever burning lampe astray,
 This lower world nigh all to ashes brent,
 And left their scorched path yet in the firmament.

Such was the furie of these head-strong steeds,
 Soone as the infants sunlike shield they saw,
 That all obedience both to words and deeds
 They quite forgot, and scornd all former law
 Through woods, and rocks, and mountaines they did draw
 The yron charet, and the wheelles did teare,
 And tost the paynim without feare or awe;
 From side to side they tost him here and there,
 Crying to them in vaine that nould his crying heare.

Yet still the prince pursew'd him close behind,
 Oft making offer him to smite, but found
 No easie meanes according to his mind:
 At last they have all overthrowne to ground
 Quite topside turvey, and the pagan hound
 Amongst the yron hookes and graples keene
 Torne all to rags, and rent with many a wound;
 That no whole peece of him was to be seene,
 But scattred all about, and strow'd upon the greene.

Like as the cursed sonne of Thesëus,
 That following his chace in dewy morne,
 To fly his stepdames love outrageous,
 Of his owne steedes was all to peeces torne,
 And his faire limbs left in the woods forlorne;
 That for his sake Diana did lament,
 And all the woody nymphes did wayle and mourne:
 So was this souldain rapt and all to rent,
 That of his shape, appear'd no litle monument.

Onely his shield and armour, which there lay,
 Though nothing whole, but all to brused and broken,
 He up did take, and with him brought away,
 That mote remaine for an eternall token
 To all, mongst whom this storic should be spoken.
 How worthily, by Heavens high decree,
 Iustice that day of wrong herselfe had wroken;
 That all men, which that spectacle did see,
 By like ensample mote for ever warned bee.

So on a tree, before the tyrants dore,
 He caused them be hung in all mens sight,
 To be a monument for evermore,
 Which when his ladie from the castles hight
 Beheld, it much appald her troubled spright:
 Yet not, as women wont, in dolefull fit
 She was dismayd, or faynted through affright,
 But gathered unto her her troubled wit,
 And gan eftswoones devize to be aveng'd for it.

Streight downe she ranne, like an enraged cow
 That is berobbed of her youngling dere,
 With knife in hand, and fally did vow
 To wreake her on that mayden messengere,
 Whom she had causd be kept as prisonere
 By Artegall, misween'd for her owne knight,
 That brought her backe: and, comming present there,
 She at her ran with all her force and might.
 All flaming with revenge and furious despight.

Like raging Ino, when with knife in hand
 She throw her husbands mured infant out;
 Or fell Medea, when on Colchieke strand
 Her brothers bones she scattered all about;
 Or as that madding mother, mongst the rout
 Of Bacchus priests, her owne deare flesh did teare:
 Yet neither Ino, nor Medea stout,
 Nor all the Mœnades so furious were,
 As this bold woman when she saw that dāmzell there.

But Artegall being thereof aware
 Did stay her cruell hand ere she her raught;
 And, as she did herselfe to strike prepare,
 Out of her fist the wicked weapon caught:
 With that, like one enfelon'd or distraught,
 She forth did come whether her rage her bore,
 With franticke passion and with furie fraught;
 And, breaking forth out at a posterne dore,
 Unto the wilde wood ranne, her dolours to deplore:

As a mad bytch, whenas the franticke fit
 Her burning tongue with rage inflamed hath,
 Doth runne at randon, and with furious bit
 Snatching at everything doth wreake her wrath
 On man and beast that commeth in her path.
 There they doe say that she transformed was
 Into a tigre, and that tygres scath
 In crueltie and outrage she did pas,
 To prove her surname true, that she imposed has.

Then Artegall, himselfe discovering plaine,
 Did issue forth gainst all that warlike rout
 Of knights and armed men, which did maintaine
 That ladies part and to the souldan lout:
 All which he did assault with courage stout,
 All were they nigh an hundred knights of name,
 And like wyld goates them chaced all about,
 Flying from place to place with cowheard shame;
 So that with finall force them all he overcame.

Then caused he the gates be opened wyde;
 And there the prince, as victour of that day,
 With tryumph entertayn and glorifyde,
 Presenting him with all the rich array
 And roiall pompe, which ther'e long hidden lay,
 Purchast through lawlesse powre and tortious wrong
 Of that proud souldan, whom he earst did slay.
 So both, for rest, there having stayd not long,
 Marcht with that mayd: fit matter for another song.

CANTO IX.

Arthur and Artegall catch Gaylo
 Whom Talus doth dismay:
 They to Mercillaes pallace come,
 And see her rich array.

WHAT tygre, or what other salvage wight,
 Is so exceeding furious and fell
 As wrong, when it hath arm'd itselfe with might,
 Not fit mongst men that doe with reason mell,
 But mongst wyld beasts, and salvage woods, to dwell;
 Where still the stronger doth the weake devoure,
 And they that most in boldnesse doe excell
 Are dredded most, and feared for their powre
 Fit for Adicia there to build her wicked bowre.

There let her wonne, farre from resort of men,
 Where righteous Artegall her late exyled;
 There let her ever keepe her damned den,
 Where none may be with her lewd parts defyled,
 Nor none but beasts may be of her despoyled:
 And turne we to the noble prince, where late
 We did him leave, after that he had foyled
 The cruell souldan, and with dreadfull fate
 Had utterly subverted his unrighteous state.

Where having with Sir Artegall a space
 Well solast in that souldans late delight,
 They both, resolving now to leave the place,
 Both it and all the wealth therein behight
 Unto that damzell in her ladies right,
 And so would have departed on their way:
 But she them woo'd, by all the meanes she might,
 And earnestly besought to wend that day
 With her, to see her ladie thence not farre away.

By whose entreatie both they overcommen
 Agree to goe with her; and by the way,
 As often falles, of sundry things did commen;
 Mongst which that damzell did to them bewray
 A straunge adventure which not farre thence lay;
 To weet, a wicked villaine, bold and stout,
 Which wonned in a rocke not farre away,
 That robbed all the countrie thereabout,
 And brought the pillage home, whence none could get it out.

Thereto both his owne wylie wit, she sayd,
 And eke the fastnesse of his dwelling place,
 Both unassaylable, gave him great ayde:
 For he so crafty was to forge and face,
 So light of hand, and nymble of his pace,
 So smooth of tongue, and subtil in his tale,
 That could deceive one looking in his face:
 Therefore by name Malengin they him call
 Well known by his feates, and famous over all.

Through these his slights he many doth confound:
 And eke the rocke, in which he wents to dwell,
 Is wondrous strong and hewn farre under ground,
 A dreadfull depth, how deepe no man can tell;
 But some doe say it goeth downe to hell:
 And, all within, it full of wyndings is
 And hidden wayes that scarse an hound by smell
 Can follow out those false footsteps of his,
 Ne none can backe returne that once are gone amis.

Which when those knights had heard, their hearts gan earne
 To understand that villeins dwelling place,
 And greatly it desir'd of her to learne,
 And by which way they towards it should trace.
 "Were not," sayd she, "that it should let your pace
 Towards my ladies presence by you ment;
 I would you guyde directly to the place."
 "Then let not that," said they, "stay your intent;
 For neither will one foot, till we that carle have hent."

So forth they past, till they approached ny
 Unto the rocke where was the villains won:
 Which when the damzell neare at hand did spy,
 She warn'd the knights thereof: who thereupon
 Gan to advize what best were to be done.
 So both agreed to send that mayd afore,
 Where she might sit nigh to the den alone,
 Wayling, and raysing pittifull uprore,
 As if she did some great calamitie deplore.

With noyse whereof whenas the caytive carle
 Should issue forth, in hope to find some spoyle,
 They in awayt would closely him ensnarle,
 Ere to his den he backward could recoyle;
 And so would hope him easily to foyle.
 The damzell straight went, as she was directed,
 Unto the rocke; and there, upon the soyle
 Having herselfe in wretched wize abiected,
 Gan weepe and wayle as if great griefe had her affected.

"When he did view
The armed knights stopping his passage by,
He threw his burden down, and fast away did fly."

Book V. Canto IX. Ver. 14.

The cry whereof entring the hollow cave
 Eftsoones brought forth the villaine, as they ment,
 With hope of her some wishfull boot to have:
 Full dreadfull wight he was as ever went
 Upon the earth, with hollow eyes deepe pent,
 And long curld locks that downe his shoulders shagged,
 And on his backe an uncouth vestiment
 Made of straunge stuffe, but all to worne and ragged.
 And underneath his breech was all to torne and iagged.

And in his hand an huge long staffe he held,
 Whose top was arm'd with many an yron hooke,
 Fit to catch hold of all that he could weld,
 Or in the compasse of his clutches tooke;
 And ever round about he cast his looke:
 Als at his backe a great wyde net he bore,
 With which he seldom fished at the brooke,
 But usd to fish for fooles on the dry shore,
 Of which he in faire weather wont to take great store.

Him when the damzell saw fast by her side,
 So ugly creature, she was nigh dismayd:
 And now for helpe aloud in earnest cride:
 But, when the villaine saw her so affrayd,
 He gan with guilefull words her to perswado
 To banish feare; and with Sardonian smyle
 Laughing on her, his false intent to shade,
 Gan forth to lay his bayte her to beguyle,
 That from herself unwares he might her steale the whyle.

Like as the fouler on his guilefull pype
 Charmes to the birds full many a pleasant lay,
 That they the whiles may take lesse heedie keepe
 How he his nets doth for their ruine lay,
 So did the villaine to her prate and play,
 And many pleasant trickes before her show,
 To turne her eyes from his intent away:
 For he in slights and iugling feates did flow,
 And of legiérdemayne the mysteries did know.

To which whilest she lent her intentive mind,
 He suddenly his net upon her threw,
 That oversprad her like a puffe of wind;
 And snatching her soone up, ere well she knew
 Ran with her fast away unto his mew,
 Crying for helpe aloud: but whenas ny
 He came unto his cave, and there did vew
 The armed knight stopping his passage by,
 He threw his burden downe and fast away did fly.

But Artegall him after did pursew;
The whiles the prince there kept the entrance still:
Up to the rocke he ran, and thereon flew
Like a wyld gote, leaping from hill to hill,
And dauncing on the craggy cliffes at will;
That deadly daunger seem'd in all mens sight
To tempt such steps, where footing was so ill:
Ne ought awayled for the armed knight
To thinke to follow him that was so swift and light.

Which when he saw, his yron man he sent
To follow him; for he was swift in chace:
He him pursewd wherever that he went;
Both over rockes, and hilles, and every place
Whereso he fled, he followed him apace:
So that he shortly forst him to forsake
The light, and downe descend unto the base:
There he him courst afresh, and soone did make
To leave his proper forme, and other shape to take.

Into a foxe himselfe he first did tourne;
But he him hunted like a foxe full fast:
Then to a bush himselfe he did transforme;
But he the bush did beat, till that at last.
Into a bird it chaung'd, and from him past,
Flying from tree to tree, from wand to wand:
But he then stones at it so long did cast,
That like a stone it fell upon the land;
But he then tooke it up, and held fast in his hand.

So he it brought with him unto the knights,
And to his lord Sir Artegall it lent,
Warning him hold it fast for feare of slights:
Who whilest in hand it gryping hard he lent,
Into a hedgehogge all unwares it went,
And prickt him so that he away it threw:
Then gan it runne away incontinent,
Being returned to his former hew;
But Talus soone him overtooke, and backward drew.

But, whenas he would to a snake againe
Have turn'd himselfe, he with his yron flayle
Gan drive at him with so huge might and maine,
That all his bones as small as sandy grayle
He broke, and did his bowels disentrayle,
Crying in vaine for helpe, when helpe was past;
So did decept the selfe-deceiver fayle:
There they him left a carrion outcast
For beasts and foules to feede upon for their repast.

Thence forth they passed with that gentle mayd
 To see her ladie, as they did agree:
 To which when she approched, thus she sayd;
 "Loe now, right noble knights, arriv'd ye nee
 Nigh to the place which ye desir'd to see:
 There shall ye see my soverayne lady queene,
 Most sacred wight, most debonayre and free,
 That ever yet upon this earth was scene,
 Or that with diademe hath ever crowned beene."

The gentle knights reioycecd much to heare
 The prayses of that prince so manifold;
 And, passing litle further, commen were
 Where they a stately pallace did behold
 Of pompous show, much more then she had told,
 With many towres and tarras mounted hye,
 And all their tops bright glistering with gold.
 That seem'd to out-shine the dimmed skye,
 And with their brightnesse daz'd the straunge beholders [eye.

There they alighting, by that damzell were
 Directed in, and shewed all the sight;
 Whose porch, that most magnificke did appeare,
 Stood open wyde to all men day and night;
 Yet warded well by one of mickle might
 That sate thereby, with gyant-like resemblance,
 To keepe out guyle, and malice, and despight,
 That under shew oft-times of fayned semblance [drance:
 Are wont in princes courts to worke great scath and hin-

His name was Awe; by whom they passing in
 Went up the hall, that was a large wyde roome,
 All full of people making troublous din
 And wrondrous noyse, as if that there were some
 Which unto them was dealing righteous doome:
 By whom they passing through the thickest preasse,
 The marshall of the hall to them did come,
 His name light Order; who, commaunding peace, [ceasse.
 Them gyuded through the throng, that did their clamours

They ceast their clamors upon them to gaze;
 Whom seeing all in armour bright as day,
 Straunge there to see, it did them much amaze,
 And with unwonted terror halfe affray:
 For never saw they there the like array;
 Ne ever was the name of warre there spoken,
 But ioyous peace and quietnesse alway
 Dealing iust iudgments, that mote not be broken
 For any brybes, or threatcs of any to be wroken.

There, as they entred at the scriene, they saw
 Some one, whose tongue was for his trespasse vyle
 Nayld to a post, adiudged so by law;
 For that therewith he falsely did revyle
 And foule blaspheme that queene for forged guyle,
 Both with bold speaches which he blazed had,
 And with lewd poems which he did compyle;
 For the bold title of a poet bad
 He on himselfe had ta'en, and rayling rymes had sprad.

Thus there he stood, whylest high over his head
 There written was the purport of his sin,
 In cyphers strange, that few could rightly read,
Bon Fons; but Bon, that once had written bin,
 Was raced out, and Mal was now put in:
 So now Malfont was plainly to be red;
 Eyther for th' evill which he did therein,
 Or that he likened was to a welhed
 Of evill words, and wicked sclaunders by him shed.

They, passing by, were guyled by degree
 Unto the presence of that gracious queene;
 Who sate on high, that she might all men see
 And might of all men royally be seene,
 Upon a throne of gold full bright and sheene,
 Adorned all with gemmes of endlesse price,
 As either might for wealth have gotten beene,
 Or could be fram'd by workmans rare device;
 And all embost with lyons and with flourdelyce.

All over her a cloth of state was spred,
 Not of rich tisew, nor of cloth of gold,
 Nor of ought else that may be richest red,
 But like a cloud, as likest may be told,
 That her brode-spreading wings did wyde unfold;
 Whose skirts were bordred with bright sunny beames,
 Glistring like gold among the plights enrold,
 And here and there shooting forth silverstreames, [gleames.
 Mongst which crept litle angels through the glittering

Seemed those litle angels did uphold
 The cloth of state, and on their purpled wings
 Did beare the pendants through their nimblesse bold;
 Besides, a thousand more of such as sings
 Hymns to high God, and carols heavenly things,
 Encompassed the throne on which she sate;
 She, angel-like, the heyre of ancient kings
 And mightie conquerors, in royall state;
 Whylest kings and kesars at her feet did them prostrate.

Thus she did sit in soverayne maiestie,
 Holding a scepter in her royall hand,
 The sacred pledge of peace and clemencie,
 With which High God had blest her happie land,
 Maugre so many foes which did withstand:
 But at her feet her sword was likewise layde,
 Whose long rest rusted the bright steely brand;
 Yet whenas foes enforst, or friends sought ayde,
 She could it sternely draw, that all the world dismayde.

And round about before her feet there sate
 A bevie of faire virgins clad in white,
 That goodly seem'd t'adorne her royall state;
 All lovely daughters of high Iove, that hight
 Lite, by him begot in loves delight
 Upon the righteous Themis; those they say
 Upon Ioves iudgment-seat wayt day and night;
 And, when in wrath he threats the worlds decay,
 They doe his anger calme and cruell vengeance stay.

They also doe, by his divine permission,
 Upon the thrones of mortall princes tend,
 And often treat for pardon and remission
 To suppliants, through frayltie which offend;
 Those did upon Mercillaes throne attend,
 Iust Dice, wise Eunomie, myld Eirene;
 And them amongst, her glorie to commend,
 Sate goodly Temperance in garments clene,
 And sacred Reverence yborne of heavenly strone.

Thus did she sit in royall rich estate,
 Admyr'd of many, honoured of all;
 Whylest underneath her feete, there as she sate,
 An huge great lyon lay, (that mote appall
 An hardie courage,) like captived thrall
 With a strong yron chaine and collar bound.
 That once he could not move, nor quich at all;
 Yet did he murmure with rebellious sound,
 And softly royne, when salvage choler gan redound.

So sitting high in dreaded soverayntie,
 Those two strange knights were to her presence brought;
 Who, bowing low before her maiestie,
 Did to her myld obeysance, as they ought,
 And meekest boone that they imagine mought:
 To whom she eke inclyning her withall,
 As a faire stoupe of her high-soaring thought,
 A chearefull countenance on them let fall,
 Yet tempred with some maiestie imperiall.

As the bright sunne, what time his fierie teme
Towards the westernne brim begins to draw,
Gins to abate the brightnesse of his beme,
And fervour of his flames somewhat adaw
So did this mightie ladie, when she saw
Those two strange knights such homage to her make,
Bate somewhat of that maiestie and awe
That whylome wont to doe so many quake,
And with more myld aspect those two entertake.

Now at that instant, as occasion fell,
When these two stranger knights arriv'd in place,
She was about affaires of common-wele,
Dealing of iustice with indifferent grace,
And hearing pleas of people mean and base:
Mongst which, as then, there was for to be heard
The tryall of a great and weightie case,
Which on both sides was then debating hard:
But, at the sight of these, those were awhile debard.

But, after all her princely entertayne,
To th' hearing of that former cause in hand
Herselfe eftsoones she gan convert againe,
Which that those knights likewise mote understand,
And witnesse forth aright in forrain land,
Taking them up unto her stately throne,
Where they mote heare the matter thoroughly scand
On either part, she placed th' one on th' one,
Th' other on th' other side, and neare them none.

Then was there brought, as prisoner to the barre,
A ladie of great countenance and place,
But that she it with foule abuse did marre;
Yet did appeare rare beautie in her face,
But blotted with condition vile and base,
That all her other honour did obscure,
And titles of nobilitie deface:
Yet, in that wretched semblant, she did sure
The peoples great compassion unto her allure.

Then up arose a person of deepe reach,
And rare in-sight, hard matters to revele;
That well could charme his tongue, and time his speach
To all assayes; his name was called Zele:
He gan that lady strongly to appele
Of many haynous crymes by her enured;
And with sharp reasons rang her such a pele,
That those, whom she to pitie had allured,
He now t' abhorre and loath her person had procured.

First gan he tell how this, that seem'd so faire
 And royally arayd, Duessa hight;
 That false Duessa, which had wrought great care
 And mickle mischief unto many a knight
 By her beguyled and confounded quight:
 But not for those she now in question came,
 Though also those mote question'd be aright,
 But for vyld treasons and outrageous shame.
 Which she against the dred Mercilla oft did frame.

For she whylome (as ye mote yet right well
 Remember) had her counsels false conspyred
 With faithlesse Blandamour and Paridell,
 (Both two her paramours, both by her hyred,
 And both with hope of shadowes vaine inspyred,
 And with them practiz'd, how for to deprive
 Mercilla of her crowne, by her aspyred,
 That she might it unto herselfe deryve,
 And triumph in their blood whom she to death did dryve.

But through high heavens grace, which favour not
 The wicked driftes of trayterous desynes
 Gainst loiall princes all this cursed plot
 Ere prooffe it tooke discovered was betymes,
 And th' actours won the meede meet for their crymes:
 Such be the meede of all that by such meane
 Unto the type of kingdomes title clymes!
 But false Duessa, now untitled queene,
 Was brought to her sad doome, as here was to be scene.

Strongly did Zele her haynous fact enforce,
 And many other crimes of foule defame
 Against her brought, to banish all remorse,
 And aggravate the horror of her blamo:
 And with him, to make part against her, came
 Many grave persons that against her pled.
 First was a sage old syre, that had to name
 The Kingdomes Care, with a white silver hed,
 That many high regards and reasons gainst her red.

Then gan Authority her to oppose
 With peremptorie powre, that made all mute;
 And then the Law of Nations gainst her rose,
 And reasons brought, that no man could refute;
 Next gan Religion gainst her to impute
 High Gods beheast, and powre of holy lawes;
 Then gan the Peoples Cry and Commons Sute
 Importune care of their owne publicke cause;
 And lastly Iustice charged her with breach of lawes.

But then, for her, on the contrarie part,
 Rose many advocates for her to plead:
 First there came Pittie with full tender hart,
 And with her ioyn'd Regard of Womanhead;
 And then came Daunger threatening hidden dread
 And high alliance unto forren powre;
 Then came Nobilitie of Birth, that bread
 Great ruth through her misfortunes tragicke stowre;
 And lastly Griefe did plead, and many teares forth powre.

With the neare touch whereof in tender hart
 The Briton prince was sore empassionate,
 And woxe inclined much unto her part,
 Through the sad terror of so dreadful fate,
 And wretched ruine of so high estate;
 That for great ruth his courage gan relent:
 Which whenas Zele perceived to abate,
 He gan his earnest fervour to augment,
 And many fearefull obiects to them to present.

He gan t' efforce the evidence anew,
 And new accusements to produce in place:
 He brought forth that old hag of hellish hew
 The cursed Atè, brought her face to face,
 Who privie was and partie in the case:
 She, glad of spoyle and ruinous decay,
 Did her appeach; and, to her more disgrace,
 The plot of all her practise did display,
 And all her traynes and all her treasons forth did lay.

Then brought he forth with griesly grim aspèct
 Abhorred Murder, who with bloudie knyfe
 Yet dropping fresh in hand did her detect,
 And there with guiltie bloudshed charged ryfe:
 Then brought he forth Sedition, breeding stryfe
 In troublous wits and mutinous uprore:
 Then brought he forth Incontinence of lyfe,
 Even foule Adulterie her face before,
 And lewd Impietie, that her accused sore.

All which whenas the prince had heard and seene
 His former fancies ruth he gan repent,
 And from her partie eftsoones was drawn cleene
 But Artegall, with constant firme intent
 For zeale of iustice, was against her bent:
 So was she guiltie deemed of them all.
 Then Zele began to urge her punishment,
 And to their queene for iudgement loudly call,
 Unto Mercilla myld, for iustice gainst the thrall.

But she, whose princely breast was touched neare
 With piteous ruth of her so wretched plight,
 Though plaine she saw, by all that she did heare,
 That she of death was guiltie found by right,
 Yet would not let iust vengeance on her light;
 But rather let, instead thereof, to fall
 Few perling drops from her faire lampes of light;
 The which she covering with her purple pall
 Would have the passion hid, and up arose withall.

CANTO X.

Prince Arthur takes the enterpize
 For Belgee for to fight:
 Gerioncos seneschall
 He slays in Belges right.

SOME clarkes doe doubt in their devicefull art
 Whether this heavenly thing whereof I treat,
 To weeten mercie, be of iustice part,
 Or drawne forth from her by divine extreate:
 This well I wote, that sure she is as great,
 And meriteth to have as high a place,
 Sith in th' Almightyes everlasting seat
 She first was bred, and borne of heavenly race;
 From thence pour'd down on men by influence of grace.

For if that vertue be of so great might
 Which from iust verdict will for nothing start,
 But, to preserve inviolated right,
 Oft spillen the principall to save the part;
 So much more then is that of powre and art
 That seekes to save the subiect of her skill,
 Yet never doth from doome of right depart;
 As it is greater prayso to save then spill,
 And better to reforme then to cut off the ill.

Who then can thee, Mercilla, throughly prayse,
 That herein doest all earthly princes pas?
 What heavenly muse shall thy great honour rayse
 Up to the skies, whence first deriv'd it was,
 And now on earth itselfe enlarged has,
 From th' utmost brinke of the Armericke shore,
 Unto the margent of the Molucas?
 Those nations farre thy iustice doe adore;
 But thine owne people do thy mercy prayse much more.

Much more it prayesd was of those two knights,
 The noble prince and righteous Artegall,
 When they had seene and heard her doome arights
 Against Duessa, damned by them all;
 But by her tempred without griefe or gall,
 Till strong constraint did her thereto enforce:
 And yet even then rung her wilfull fall
 With more then needfull naturall remorse,
 And yeelding the last honour to her wretched corse.

During all which, those knights continu'd there
 Both doing and receiving curtesies
 Of that great ladie, who with goodly chere
 Them entertayn'd fit for their dignities,
 Approving dayly to their noble eyes
 Royall examples of her mercies rare
 And worthie paterns of her clemencies;
 Which till this day mongst many living are,
 Who them to their posterities doe still declare.

Amongst the rest which in that space befell,
 There came two springalls of full tender yeares,
 Farre thence from forrein land where they did dwell
 To seeke for succour of her and her peares,
 With humble prayers and intreatfull teares;
 Sent by their mother who, a widow, was
 Wrapt in great dolours and in deadly feares
 By a strong tyrant, who invaded has
 Her land, and slaine her children ruefully, alas!

Her name was Belgè; who, in former age
 A ladie of great worth and wealth had beene,
 And mother of a frutefull heritage,
 Even seventeene goodly sonnes; which who had seene
 In their first flowre, before this fatall teene
 Them overtooke and their faire blossomes blasted,
 More happie mother would her surely weene
 Then famous Niobe, before she tasted
 Latonaes childrens wrath that all her issue wasted.

But this fell tyrant, through his tortious powre,
 Had left her now but five of all that brood:
 For twelve of them he did by times deuoure,
 And to his idols sacrifice their blood,
 Whylest he of none was stopped nor withstood.
 For soothly he was one of matchlesse might,
 Of horrible aspect and dreadfull mood,
 And had three bodies in one wast empight,
 And th' armes and legs of three to succour him in fight.

And sooth they say that he was borne and bred
 Of gyants race, the sonne of Geryon;
 He that whylome in Spaine so sore was dred
 For his huge powre and great oppression,
 Which brought that land to his subiection,
 Through his three bodies powre in one combyn'd;
 And eke all strangers, in that region
 Arryving, to his kyne for food assynd;
 The fayrest kyne alive, but of the fiercest kynd:

For they were all, they say, of purple hew,
 Kept by a cowheard, hight Eurytion,
 A cruell carle, the which all strangers slew,
 Ne day nor night did sleepe t' attend them on,
 But walkt about them ever and anone
 With his two-headed dogge that Orthrus hight
 Orthrus begotten by great Typhaon
 And foule Echidna in the house of Night:
 But Hercules them all did overcome in fight.

His sonne was this Geryoneo hight;
 Who, after that his monstrous father fell
 Under Alcides club, streight tooke his flight
 From that sad land, where he his syre did quell,
 And came to this, where Belgè then did dwell
 And flourish in all wealth and happinesse,
 Being then new made widow, as befell,
 After her noble husbands late decesse;
 Which gave beginning to her woe and wretchednesse.

Then this bold tyrant, of her widowed
 Taking advantag: and her yet fresh woes,
 Himselfe and service to her offered,
 Her to defend against all forrein foes
 That should their powre against her right oppose:
 Whereof she glad, now needing strong defence,
 Him entertayn'd and did her champion chose;
 Which long he usd with carefull diligence,
 The better to confirme her fearelesse confidence.

By meanes whereof she did at last commit
 All to his hands, and gave him souveraine powre
 To doe whatever he thought good or fit:
 Which having got, he gan forth from that howre
 To stirre up strife and many a tragicke stowre;
 Giving her dearest children one by one
 Unto a dreadfull monster to devoure,
 And setting up an idole of his owne,
 The image of his monstrous parent Geryone

So tyrannizing and oppressing all,
 The woefull widow had no meanes now left,
 But unto gracious great Mercilla call
 For ayde against that cruell tyrants theft,
 Ere all her children he from her had reft:
 Therefore these two, her eldest sonnes, she sent
 To seeke for succour of this ladies giest:
 To whom their sute they humbly did present
 In th' hearing of full many knights and ladies gent.

Amongst the which then fortun'd to bee
 The noble Briton prince with his brave peare;
 Who when he none of all those knights did see
 Hastily bent that enterprize to heare,
 Nor undertake the same for cowheard feare,
 He stepped forth with courage bold and great,
 Admyr'd of all the rest in presence there,
 And humbly gan that mightie queene entreat
 To graunt him that adventure for his former feat.

She gladly graunted it: then he straightway
 Himselfe unto his iourney gan prepare.
 And all his armours readie dight that day,
 That nought the morrow next mote stay his fare.
 The morrow next appear'd with purple hayre
 Yet dropping fresh out of the Indian fount,
 And bringing light into the heavens fayre,
 When he was readie to his steede to mount
 Unto his way, which now was all his care and count.

Then taking humble leave of that great queene,
 Who gave him roial giftes and riches rare,
 As tokens of her thankefull mind bescene,
 And leaving Artegall to his owne care,
 Upon his voyage forth he gan to fare
 With those two gentle youthes, which him did guide
 And all his way before him still prepare:
 Ne after him did Artegall abide,
 But on his first adventure forward forth did ride.

It was not long till that the prince arriv'd
 Within the land where dwelt that ladie sad;
 Whereof that tyrant had her now deprived,
 And into moores and marshes banisht had,
 Out of the pleasant soyle and citties glad,
 In which she wont to harbour happily:
 But now his cruelty so sore she drad,
 That to those fennes for fastnesse she did fly,
 And there herself did hyde from his hard tyranny.

There he her found in sorrow and dismay,
 All solitarie without living wight;
 For all her other children, through affray,
 Had hid themselves, or taken further flight:
 And eke herselfe through sudden strange affright,
 When one in armes she saw, began to fly;
 But, when her owne two sonnes she had in sight,
 She gan take hart and looke up ioyfully;
 For well she wist this knight came succour to supply.

And, running unto them with greedy ioyes,
 Fell straight about their neckes as they did kneele,
 And bursting forth in teares; "Ah! my sweet boyes,"
 Sayd she, "yet now I gin new life to feele;
 And feeble spirits, that gan faint and reele,
 Now rise againe at this your ioyous sight.
 Alreadie seemes that fortunes headlong wheele
 Begins to turne, and sunne to shine more bright
 Then it was wont, through comfort of this noble knight."

Then turning unto him; "And you, sir knight,"
 Said she, "that taken have this toylesome paine
 For wretched woman, miserable wight,
 May you in heaven immortall guerdon gaine
 For so great travell as you doe sustaine!
 For other meede may hope for none of mee,
 To whom nought else but bare life doth remaine;
 And that so wretched one, as ye do see
 Is liker lingring death then loathed life to bee."

Much was he moved with her piteous plight;
 And low dismounting from his loftie steede
 Gan to recomfort her all that he might,
 Seeking to drive away deepe-rooted dreede
 With hope of helpe in that her greatest neede.
 So thence he wished her with him to wend
 Unto some place where they mote rest and seede,
 And she take comfort which God now did send:
 Good hart in evils doth the evils much amend.

"Ay me!" sayd she, "and whither shall I goe?
 Are not all places full of forraine powres?
 My pallaces possessed of my foe,
 My cities sackt, and their sky-threatning towres
 Raced and made smooth fields now full of flowres?
 Onely these marishes and myrie bogs,
 In which the fearefull ewfies do build their bowres
 Yeeld me an hostry mongst the croking frogs,
 And harbour here in safety from those ravenous dogs.

"Nathlesse," said he, "deare ladie, with me goe;
 Some place shall us receive and harbour yield;
 If not, we will it force, maugre your foe,
 And purchase it to us with speare and shield:
 And if all fayle, yet farewell open field!
 The earth to all her creatures lodging lends."
 With such his chearefull speaches he doth wield
 Her mind so well, that to his will she bends; [wends.
 And, bynding up her locks and weeds, forth with him

They came unto a citie farre up land,
 The which whylome that ladies owne had bene;
 But now by force extort out of her hand
 By her strong foe, who had defaced cleene
 Her stately towres and buildings sunny sheene,
 Shut up her haven, mard her marchants trade,
 Robbed her people that full rich had beene,
 And in her necke a castle huge had made,
 The which did her commaund without needing perswade.

That castle was the strength of all that state,
 Untill that state by strength was pulled downe;
 And that same citie, so now ruinate,
 Had bene the keye of all that kingdoms crowne;
 Both goodly castle, and both goodly towne,
 Till that th'offended heavens list to lowre
 Upon their blisse, and balefull fortune frowne.
 When those gainst states and kingdoms do coniure,
 Who then can thinke their hedlong ruine to recure!

But he had brought it now in servile bond,
 And made it beare the yoke of inquisition,
 Stryving long time in vaine it to withstond;
 Yet glad at last to make most base submission,
 And life enioy for any composition:
 So now he hath new lawes and orders new
 Imposd on it with many a hard condition,
 And forced it, the honour that is dew
 To God, to doe unto his idole most untrew.

To him he hath before this castle greene
 Built a faire chappell, and an altar framed
 Of costly ivory full rich bescene,
 On which that cursed idole, farre proclaimed,
 He hath set up, and him his god hath named;
 Offring to him in sinfull sacrifice
 The flesh of men, to Gods owne likenesse framed,
 And powring forth their bloud in brutishe wize,
 That any yron eyes, to see, it would agrize.

And, for more horror and more crueltie,
 Under that cursed idols altar-stone
 An hideous monster doth in darknesse lie,
 Whose dreadfull shape was never seene of none
 That lives on earth; but unto those alone
 The which unto him sacrificed bee:
 Those he deuoures, they say, both flesh and bone;
 What else they haue is all the tyrants fee:
 So that no whit of them remayning one may see.

There eke he placed a strong garrisone,
 And set a seneschall of dreaded might,
 That by his powre oppressed every one,
 And vanquished all venturous knights in fight;
 To whom he wout shew all the shame he might,
 After that them in battell he had wonne:
 To which when now they gan approach in sight,
 The ladie counseld him the place to shonne,
 Whereas so many knights had foully bene fordonne.

Her fearefull speeches nought he did regard;
 But, ryding streight under the castle wall,
 Called aloud unto the watchfull ward
 Which there did wayte, willing them forth to call
 Into the field their tyrants seneschall:
 To whom when tydings thereof came, he streight
 Cals for his armes, and arming him withall
 Eftsoones forth pricked proudly in his might,
 And gan with courage fierce addresse him to the fight.

They both encounter in the middle plaine,
 And their sharpe speares doe both together smite
 Amid their shields with so huge might and maine,
 That seem'd their soules they would haue ryven quight
 Out of their breasts with furious despight:
 Yet could the seneschals no entrance find
 Into the princes shield where it empight,
 (So pure the metall was and well refynd.)
 But shivered all about, and scattered in the wynd.

Not so the princes; but with restlesse force
 Into his shield it readie passage found.
 Both through his haberieon and eke his corse;
 Which tombling downe upon the senselesse ground
 Gave leave unto his ghost from thraldome bound
 To wander in the griesly shades of night:
 There did the princee him leave in deadly swound,
 And thence unto the castle marched right,
 To see if entrance there as yet obtaine he might.

But, as he nigher drew, three knights he spyde,
All arm'd to point issuing forth apace,
Which towards him with all their powre did ryde,
And meeting him right in the middle race
Did all their speares attonce on him enchace.
As three great culverings for batterie bent,
And leveld all against one certaine place,
Doe all attonce their thunders rage forthrent,
That makes the wals to stagger with astonishment:

So all attonce they on the prince did thonder;
Who from his saddle swarved nought asyde,
Ne to their force gave way, that was great wonder;
But like a bulwarke firmly did abyde,
Rebutting him, which in the midst did ryde,
With so huge rigour, that his mortall speare
Past through his shield and pierst through either syde;
That downe he fell uppon his mother deare,
And powred forth his wretched life in deadly dreare.

Whom when his other fellowes saw, they fled
As fast as feete could carry them away;
And after them the prince as swiftly sped,
To be aveng'd of their unknightly play.
There, whilst they entring th' one did th' other stay,
The hindmost in the gate he overhent,
And, as he pressed in, him there did slay:
His carkasse tumbling on the threshold sent
His groning soule unto her place of punishment.

The other which was entred laboured fast
To sperre the gate; but that same lumpe of clay,
Whose grudging ghost was thereout fled and past,
Right in the midst of the threshold lay,
That it the posterne did from closing stay:
The whiles the prince hard preased in betweene,
And entraunce wonne: streight th' other fled away,
And ran into the hall, where he did weene
Himselfe to save; but he there slew him at the skreene.

Then all the rest which in that castle were,
Seeing that sad ensample them before,
Durst not abide, but fled away for feare,
And them conveyd out at a posterne dore.
Long sought the prince; but, when he found no more
To oppose against his powre, he forth issued
Unto that lady, where he her had lore,
And her gan cheare with what she there had vewed,
And, what she had not seene within, unto her shewed:

Who with right humble thanks him goodly greeting
 For so great prowesse as he there had proved,
 Much greater then was ever in her weeting,
 With great admiraunce inwardly was moved,
 And honourd him with all that her beloved.
 Thenceforth into that castle he her led
 With her two sonnes right deare of her beloved;
 Where all that night themselves they cherished,
 And from her balefull minde all care he banished.

•• CANTO XI.

Prince Arthure overcomes the great
 Gerioneo in fight:
 Doth slay the monster, and restore
 Belgè unto her right.

It often fals, in course of common life,
 That right long time is overborne of wrong
 Through avarice; or powre, or guile, or strife,
 That weakens her, and makes her party strong:
 But iustice, though her dome she doe prolong,
 Yet at the last she will her owne cause right:
 As by sad Belgè seemes; whose wrongs though long
 She suffred, yet at length she did requight,
 And sent redresse thereof by this brave Briton knight.

Whereof when newes was to that tyrant brought,
 How that the lady Belgè now had found
 A champion, that had with his champion fought,
 And laid his seneschall low on the ground.
 And eke himselfe did threaten to confound;
 He gan to burne in rage, and friese in feare,
 Doubting sad end of principle unsound:
 Yet, sith he heard but one that did appeare,
 He did himselfe encourage and take better cheare.

Nathelesse himselfe he armed all in hast,
 And forth he far'd with all his many bad,
 Ne stayed step, till that he came at last
 Unto the castle which they conquerd had:
 There with huge terrour, to be more ydrad,
 He sternely marcht before the castle gate,
 And, with bold vaunts and ydle threatning, bad
 Deliver him his owne, ere yet too late,
 To which they had no right, nor any wrongfull state

The prince staid not his aunswere to devise,
 But opening streight the sparre forth to him came,
 Full nobly mounted in right warlike wize;
 And asked him, if that he were the same,
 Who all that wrong unto that wofull dame
 So long had done, and from her native land
 Exiled her, that all the world spake shame.
 He boldly aunswerd him, he there did staid
 That would his doings iustifie with his owne hand.

With that so furiously at him he flew,
 As if he would have over-run him streight;
 And with his huge great yron axe gan hew
 So hideously uppon his armour bright,
 As he to peeces would have chopt it quight;
 That the bold prince was forced foote to give
 To his first rage, and yeeld to his despight;
 The whilest at him so dreadfully he drive,
 That seem'd a marble rocke asunder could have rive.

Thereto a great advauntage eke he has
 Through his three double hands thrise multiplyde,
 Besides the double strength which in them was:
 For stil, when fit occasion did betyde,
 He could his weapon shift from side to syde,
 From hand to hand; and with such nimblesse sly
 Could wield about, that, ere it were espide,
 The wicked stroke did wound his enemy
 Behinde, beside, before, as he it list apply.

Which uncouth use whenas the prince perceived
 He gan to watch the wielding of his hand,
 Least by such slight he were unwares deceived;
 And ever, ere he saw the stroke to land,
 He would it meete and warily withstand.
 One time when he his weapon faynd to shift,
 As he was wont, and chang'd from hand to hand.
 He met him with a counter-stroke so swift,
 That quite smit off his arme as he it up did lift.

Therewith all fraught with fury and disdaine
 He brayd aloud for very fell despight;
 And sodainely, t'avenge himselc againe
 Gan into one assemble all the might
 Of all his hands, and heaved them on hight,
 Thinking to pay him with that one for all:
 But the sad steele seizd not, where it was hight,
 Uppon the childe, but somewhat short did fall,
 And lighting on his horses head him quite did mall.

Down streight to ground fell his astonisht steed,
 And eke to th' earth his burden with him bare;
 But he himselſe full lightly from him freed,
 And gan himselſe to fight on foote prepare:
 Whereof whenas the gyant was aware,
 He wox right blyth, as he had got thereby,
 And laught so loud, that all his teeth wide bare
 One might have ſeene enraung'd disorderly,
 Like to a rancke of piles that pitched are awry.

Eftſoones againe his axe he raught on hie,
 Ere he were throughly buckled to his geare,
 And gan let drive at him so dreadfullie,
 That had he chaunced not his ſhield to reare,
 Ere that huge ſtroke arrived on him neare,
 He had him ſurely cloven quite in twaine:
 But th' adamantine ſhield which he did beare
 So well was tempred, that for all his maine
 It would no paſſage yeeld unto his purpoſe vaine.

Yet was the ſtroke ſo forcibly applide,
 That made him ſtagger with uncertaine ſway,
 As if he would have tottered to one ſide:
 Wherewith full wroth he ſierecly gan aſſay
 That curt'sie with like kindeſſe to repay,
 And ſmote at him with ſo importune might,
 That two more of his armes did fall away,
 Like fruitleſſe braunches, which the hatchets ſlight
 Hath pruned from the native tree and cropped quight.

With that all mad and furious he grew,
 Like a fell maſtiſſe through enraging heat,
 And curſt, and band, and blaſphemies forth threw
 Againſt his gods, and fire to them did threat,
 And hell unto himſelſe with horreur great:
 Thenceforth he car'd no more which way he ſtrooke,
 Nor where it light; but gan to claufe and ſweat,
 And gnaſht his teeth, and his head at him ſhooke,
 And ſternely him beheld with grim and ghastly looke.

Nought fear'd the childe his lookes, ne yet his threats;
 But onely wexed now the more aware
 To ſave himſelſe from thoſe his furious heats,
 And watch advauntage how to worke his care,
 The which good fortune to him offred faire:
 For as he in his rage him overſtrooke,
 He, ere he could his weapon backe repaire,
 His ſide all bare and naked overtooke,
 And with his mortal ſteel quite through the body

Through all three bodies he him strooke attonce,
 That all the three attonce fell on the plaine,
 Else should he thrise have needed for the nonce
 Them to have stricken, and thrise to have slaine.
 So now all three one sencelesse lump remaine,
 Enwallow'd in his owne blacke bloody gore,
 And byting th' earth for very deaths disdaine;
 Who, with a cloud of night him covering, bore
 Downe to the house of dole, his daies there to deplore.

Which when the lady from the castle saw,
 Where she with her two sonnes did looking stand,
 She towards him in hast herselfe did draw
 To greet him the good fortune of his hand:
 And all the people both of towne and land,
 Which there stood gazing from the citties wall
 Uppon these warriours, greedy t' understand
 To whether should the victory befall,
 Now when they saw it falne, they eke him greeted all.

But Belgè with her sonnes prostrated low
 Before his feete, in all that peoples sight,
 Mongst ioyes mixing some tears, mongst wele some wo,
 Him thus bespake; "O most redoubted knight,
 The which hast me, of all most wretched wight,
 That earst was dead, restor'd to life againe,
 And these weake impes replanted by thy might;
 What guerdon can I give thee for thy paine,
 But ev'n that which thou savedst thine still to remaine!"

He tooke her up forby the lilly hand,
 And her recomforted the best he might,
 Saying; "Deare lady, deedes ought not be scand
 By th' authors manhood, nor the doers might,
 But by their trueth and by the causes right:
 That same is it which fought for you this day.
 What other meed then need me to requight,
 But that which yeeldeth vertues meed alway?
 That is, the vertue selfe, which her reward doth pay."

She humbly thank't him for that wondrous grace,
 And further say; "Ah! sir, but mote ye please,
 Sith ye thus farre have tendred my poore ease,
 As from my chieftest foe me to release,
 That your victorious arme will not yet cease,
 Til ye have rooted all the reliques out
 Of that vilde race, and stablished my peace."
 "What is there else," sayd he, "left of their rout?
 Declare it boldly, dame, and doe not stand in doubt."

"Then wote you, sir, that in this church hereby
 There stands an idole of great note and name,
 The which this gyant reared first on hie,
 And of his owne vaine fancies thought did frame:
 To whom, for endlesse horror of his shame,
 He offred up for daily sacrifice
 My children and my people, burnt in flame
 With all the tortures that he could devise,
 The more t'aggrate his god with such his bloudy guize.

"And underneath this idoll there doth lie
 An hideous monster, that doth it defend,
 And feedes on all the carkasses that die
 In sacrifice unto that cursed seed:
 Whose ugly shape none ever saw, nor kend,
 That ever scap'd: for of a man they say
 It has the voice, that speeches forth doth send,
 Even blasphemous words, which she doth bray
 Out of her poysnous entrails fraught with dire decay."

Which when the prince heard tell, his heart gan carne
 For great desire that monster to assay;
 And prayd the place of her abode to learne:
 Which being shew'd, he gan himselfe streightway
 Thereto addresse, and his bright shield display.
 So to the church he came, where it was told
 The monster underneath the altar lay;
 There he that idoll saw of massy gold
 Most richly made, but there no monster did behold.

Upon the image with his naked blade
 Three times, as in defiance, there he strooke;
 And, the third time, out of an hidden shade
 There forth issewd from under th'altars smooke
 A dreadfull feend with fowle deformed looke,
 That stretcht itselfe as it had long lyen still;
 And her long taile and fethers strongly shooke,
 That all the temple did with terroure fill;
 Yet him nought terrifide that feared nothing ill!

An huge great beast it was, when it in length
 Was stretched forth that nigh fild all the place,
 And seem'd to be of infinite great strength;
 Horrible, hideous, and of hellish race,
 Borne of the brooding of Echidna base,
 Or other like infernall furies kinde:
 For of a mayd she had the outward face,
 To hide the horror which did lurke behinde,
 The better to beguile whom she so fond did finde.

Thereto the body of a dog she had.
 Full of fell ravin and fierce greedinesse;
 A lions clawes, with powre and rigour clad,
 To rend and teare whatso she can oppresse;
 A dragons taile, whose sting without redresse
 Full deadly wounds whereso it is empight;
 And eagles wings, for scope and speedinesse,
 That nothing may escape her reaching might,
 Whereto she ever list to make her hardy flight.

Much like in foulnesse and deformity
 Unto that monster, whom the Theban knight,
 The father of that fatall progeny,
 Made kill herselfe for very hearts despight
 That he had red her riddle, which no wight
 Could ever loose, but suffred deadly doole:
 So also did this monster use like slight
 To many a one which came unto her schoole,
 Whom she did put to death deceived like a foole.

She comming forth, whenas she first beheld
 The armed prince with shield so blazing bright
 Her ready to assaile, was greatly queld,
 And much dismayd with that dismayfull sight,
 That backe she would have turnd for great affright:
 But he gan her with courage fierce assay,
 That forst her turne againe in her despight
 To save herselfe, least that he did her slay:
 And sure he had her slaine, had she not turnd her way.

Tho, when she saw that she was forst to fight,
 She flew at him like to an hellish feend,
 And on his shield tooke hold with all her might,
 As if that it she would in pcees rend,
 Or reeve out of the hand that did it hend:
 Strongly he strove out of her greedy gripe
 To loose his shield, and long while did contend;
 But, when he could not quite it, with one stripe
 Her lions clawes he from her feete away did wipe.

With that aloude she gan to bray and yell,
 And fowle blasphemous speaches forth did cast,
 And bitter curses, horrible to tell;
 That even the temple, wherein she was plast,
 Did quake to heare, and nigh asunder brast;
 Tho with her huge long taile she at him strooke,
 That made him stagger and stand halfe aghast
 With trembling ioynts, as he for terrour shooke;
 Who nought was terrifide, but greater courage tooke.

As when the mast of some well-timbred hulke
Is with the blast of some outrageous storme
Blowne downe, it shakes the bottome of the bulke,
And makes her ribs to cracke as they were torne;
Whilest still she stands as stonisht and forlorne;
So was he stound with stroke of her huge taile:
But, ere that it she backe againe had borne,
He with his sword it strooke, that without faile
He ioynted it, and mard the swinging of her flaile.

Then gan she cry much louder than afore,
That all the people, there without, it heard,
And Belgè selfe was therewith stonied sore,
As if the onely sound thereof she feard.
But then the feend herselfe more fiercely reard
Uppon her wide great wings, and strongly flew
With all her body at his head and beard,
That had he not foreseene with heedfull vew,
And thrown his shield atween, she had him done to rew:

But, as she prest on him with heavy sway,
Under her wombe his fatall sword he thrust,
And for her entrailes made an open way
To issue forth; the which, once being burst,
Like to a great mill-damb forth fiercely gusht.
And powred out of her infernall sinke
Most ugly filth; and poyson therewith rusht,
That him nigh choked with the deadly stinke:
Such loathly matter were small lust to speake or thinke.

Then downe to ground fell that deformed masse,
Breathing out clouds of sulphure fowle and blacke,
In which a puddle of contagion was,
More loathd then Lerna, or then Stygian lake,
That any man would nigh awbaped make:
Whom when he saw on ground, he was full glad,
And streight went forth his gladnesse to partake
With Belgè, who watcht all this while full sad,
Wayting what end would be of that same daunger drad.

Whom when she saw so ioyously come forth,
She gan reioyce and shew triumphant chere,
Lauding and praying his renowned worth
By all the names that honorable were.
Then in he brought her, and her shewed there
The present of his paines, that monsters spoyle,
And eke that idoll deem'd so costly dere;
Whom he did all to peeces breake, and foyle
In filthy durt, and left so in the loathely soyle.

Then all the people which beheld that day
 Gan shout aloud, that unto heaven it rong;
 And all the damzels of that towne in ray
 Came dauncing forth, and ioyous carrols song:
 So him they led through all their streetes along
 Crowned with girlonds of immortall baies;
 And all the vulgar did about them throng
 To see the man, whose everlasting praise
 They all were bound to all posterities to raise.

There he with Belgè did awhile remaine
 Making great feast and ioyous merriment,
 Untill he had her settled in her raine
 With safe assuraunce and establishment.
 Then to his first emprise his mind he lent,
 Full loath to Belgè and to all the rest;
 Of whom yet taking leave thenceforth he went,
 And to his former iourney him address;
 On which long way he rode, ne ever day did rest.

But turne we now to noble Artegall;
 Who, having left Mercilla, streightway went
 On his first quest, the which him forth did call,
 To weet, to worke Irenæs franchisement,
 And eke Grantortoes worthy punishment.
 So forth he fared, as his manner was,
 With onely Talus wayting diligent,
 Through many perils; and much way did pas,
 Till nigh unto the place at length approcht he has.

There as he traveld by the way, he met
 An aged wight wayfaring all alone,
 Who through his yeares long since aside had set
 The use of armes, and battell quite forgone.
 To whom as he approcht, he knew anone
 That it was he which whilome did attend
 On faire Irene in her affliction,
 When first to faery court he saw her wend,
 Unto his souveraine queene her suite for to commend.

Whom by his name saluting, thus he gan;
 "Haile, good Sir Sergis, truest knight alive,
 Well tride in all thy ladies troubles than
 When her that tyrant did of crowne deprive;
 What new occasion doth thee hither drive,
 Or is she thrall, or doth she not survive?"
 To whom he thus; "She liveth sure and sound;
 But by that tyrant is in wretched thraldome bound:

"For she presuming on th' appointed tyde
 In which ye promist, as ye were a knight,
 To meete her at the salvage lands syde,
 And then and there for triall of her right
 With her unrighteous enemy to fight,
 Did thither come; where she, afayd of nought,
 By guilefull treason and by subtyll slight
 Surprized was, and to Grantorto brought,
 Who her imprison'd hath, and her life often sought.

"And now he hath to her prefixt a day,
 By which if that no champion doe appeare,
 Which will her cause in battailous array
 Against him iustifie, and prove her cleare
 Of all those crimes that he gainst her doth reare,
 She death shall sure aby." Those tidings sad
 Did much abash Sir Artegall to heare,
 And grieved sore, that through his fault she had Fallen into that tyrants hand and usage bad.

Then thus replide: "Now sure and by my life,
 Too much am I to blame for that faire maide,
 That have her drawne to all this troublous strife,
 Through promise to afford her timely aide,
 Which by default I have not yet defraide:
 But witnesse unto me, ye heavens! that know
 How cleare I am from blame of this upbraide:
 For ye into like thraldome me did throw,
 And kept from complishing the faith which I did owe.

"But now aread, Sir Sergis, how long space Hath he her lent a champion to provide."
 "Ten daies," quoth he, "he graunted hath of grace,
 For that he weeneth well before that tide
 None can have tidings to assist her side:
 For all the shores, which to the sea accoste,
 He day and night doth ward both farre and wide,
 That none can there arrive without an hoste:
 So her he deemeth already but a damned ghoste."

"Now turne againe," sir Artegall then sayd;
 "For, if I live till those ten daies have end,
 Assure yourselfe, sir knight, she shall have ayd,
 Though I this dearest life for her doe spend."
 So backward he attone with him did wend.
 Tho, as they rode together on their way,
 A rout of people they before them kend,
 Flocking together in confusde array;
 As if that there were some tumultuous affray.

To which as they approcht the cause to know,
 They saw a knight in daungerous distresse
 Of a rude rout him chasing to and fro,
 That sought with lawlesse powre him to oppresse,
 And bring in bondage of their brutishnesse:
 And farre away, amid their rakehell bands,
 They spide a lady left all succourlesse,
 Crying, and holding up her wretched hands
 To him for aide, who long in vaine their rage withstands.

Yet still he strives, ne any perill spares,
 To reskue her from their rude violence!
 And like a lion wood amongst them fares,
 Dealing his dreadfull blowes with large dispençe,
 Gainst which the pallid death findes no defence:
 But all in vaine: their numbers are so great,
 That naught may boot to banishe them from thence;
 For, soone as he their outrage backe doth beat,
 They turne afresh, and oft renew their former threat.

And now they doe so sharply him assay,
 That they his shield in peeces battred have,
 And forced him to throw it quite away,
 Fro dangers dread his doubtfull life to save;
 Albe that it most safety to him gave,
 And much did magnifie his noble name:
 For, from the day that he thus did it leave,
 Amongst all knights he blotted was with blame,
 And counted but a recreant knight with endles shame.

Whom when they thus distressed did behold,
 They drew unto his aide; but that rude rout
 Them also gan assaile with outrage bold,
 And forced them, however strong and stout
 They were, as well approv'd in many a doubt,
 Backe to recule; untill that yron man
 With his huge slaile began to lay about;
 From whose sterne presence they diffused ran,
 Like scattred chaffe, the which the wind away doth fan.

So when that knight from perill cleare was freed,
 He drawing neare began to greete them faire,
 And yeeld great thanks for their so goodly deed,
 In saving him from daungerous despaire
 Of those which sought his life for to empaire:
 Of whom Sir Artegall gan then enquire
 The whole occasion of his late misfare,
 And who he was, and what those villaines were.
 The which with mortall malice him pursu'd so nere.

To whom he thus; "My name is Burbon hight,
Well knowne, and far renowned heretofore,
Untill late mischief did uppon me light,
That all my former praise hath blemisht sore:
And that faire lady, which in that uprore
Ye with those caytives saw, Flourdellis hight
Is mine owne love, though me she have forsore;
Whether withheld from me by wrongfull might,
Or with her owne good will, I cannot read aright.

"But sure to me her faith she first did plight
To be my love, and take me for her lord;
Till that a tyrant, which Grandtorto hight,
With golden giftes and many a guilefull word
Entyceed her to him for to accord.
O, who may not with gifts and words be tempted!
Sith which she hath me ever since abhord,
And to my foe hath guilefully consented:
Ay me, that ever guyle in women was invented.

"And now he hath this troupe of villains sent
By open force to fetch her quite away:
Gainst whom myselfe I long in vaine have bent
To rescue her, and daily meanes assay;
Yet rescue her thence by no meanes I may;
For they doe me with multitude oppresse,
And with upequall might doe overlay,
That oft I driven am to great distresse,
And forced to forgoe th' attempt remedillesse."

"But why have ye," said Artegall, "forborne
Your owne good shield in daungerous dismay?
That is the greatest shame and foulest scorne,
Which unto any knight be happen may,
To loose the badge that should his deedes display."
To whom sir Burbon, blushing halfe for shame;
"That shall I unto you," quoth he, "bewray;
Least ye therefore mote happily me blame,
And deeme it doen of will, that through inforcement came.

"True is that I at first was dubbed knight
By a good knight, the knight of the Red-crosse;
Who, when he gave me armes in field to fight,
Gave me a shield, in which he did endosse
His deare Redeemers badge upon the bosse:
The same long while I bore, and therewithall
Fought many battels without wound or losse;
Therewith Grandtorto selfe I did appall,
And made him oftentimes in field before me fall.

"But for that many did that shield envie,
 And cruell enemies increased more;
 To stint all strife and troublous enmitie,
 That bloudie scutchin being battred sore
 I layd aside, and have of late forbore;
 Hoping thereby to have my love obtayned:
 Yet can I not my love have nathemore;
 For she by force is still fro me detayned,
 And with corruptfull brybes is to untruth mistrayned."

To whom thus Artegall; "Certes, sir knight,
 Hard is the case the which ye doe complaine;
 Yet not so hard (for nought so hard may light
 That it to such a streight mote you constraîne)
 As to abandon that which doth containe
 Your honours stile, that is, your warlike shield.
 All perill ought be lesse, and lesse all paine
 Then losse of fame in dis-aventrous field:
 Dye, rather then doe ought that mote dishonour yield!"

"Not so," quoth he; "for yet, when time doth serve,
 My former shield I may resume againe:
 To temporize is not from truth to swerve,
 Ne for advantage terme to entertaine,
 Whenas necessitie doth it constraîne."
 "Fie on such forgerie," said Artegall,
 "Under one hood to shadow faces twaine:
 Knights ought be true, and truth is one in all;
 Of all things, to dissemble, foully may befall!"

"Yet let me you of courtesie request,"
 Said Burbon, "to assist me now at need
 Against these pesants which have me opprest,
 And forced me to so infâmous deed,
 That yet my love may from their hands be freed."
 Sir Artegall, albe he earst did wyte
 His wavering mind, yet to his aide agreed,
 And buckling him eftsoones unto the fight
 Did set upon those troupes with all his powre and might.

Who flocking round about them, as a swarme
 Of flies upon a birchen bough doth cluster,
 Did them assault with terrible allarme,
 And over all the fields themselves did muster,
 With bills and glayves making a dreadfull luster;
 That forst at first those knights backe to retyre;
 As when the wrathfull Boreas doth bluster,
 Nought may abide the tempest of his yre,
 Both man and beast doe fly, and succour doe inquire.

But, whenas overblowen was that brunt,
 Those knights began afresh them to assayle,
 And all about the fields like squirrels hunt;
 But chiefly Talus with his yron flayle,
 Gainst which no flight nor rescue mote awayle,
 Made cruell harocke of the baser crew,
 And chaced them both over hill and dale:
 The raskall manie soone they overthrew;
 But the two knights themselves their captains do subdew.

At last they came whereas that ladie bode,
 Whom now her keepers had forsaken quight
 To save themselves, and scattered were abroad:
 Her halfe dismayd they found in doubtfull plight
 As neither glad nor sorie for their sight;
 Yet wondrous faire she was, and richly clad
 In roiall robes, and many iewels dight;
 But that those villens through their usage bad
 Them foully rent, and shamefully defaced had.

But Burbon, streight dismounting from his steed,
 Unto her ran with greedie great desyre,
 And catching her fast by her ragged weed
 Would have embraced her with hart entyre:
 But she, backstarting, with disdainefull yre
 Bad him avaunt, ne would unto his lore
 Allured be for prayer nor for meed:
 Whom when those knights so froward and forlore
 Beheld, they her rebuked and upbrayded sore.

Sayd Artegall; "What foule disgrace is this
 To so faire ladie, as ye seeme in sight,
 To blot your beautie, that unblemisht is,
 With so foule blame as breach of faith once plight,
 Or change of love for any worlds delight?
 Is ought on earth so pretious or deare
 As prayse and honour? or is ought so bright
 And beautifull as glories beames appeare, [clearer
 Whose goodly light then Phœbus lampe doth shine more

"Why then will ye, fond dame, attempted bee
 Unto a strangers love, so lightly placed,
 For guiftes of gold or any worldly glee,
 To leave the love that ye before embraced,
 And let your fame with falshood be defaced?
 Fie on the pelfe for which good name is sold,
 And honour with indignitie debased!
 Dearer is love then life, and fame then gold;
 But dearer then them both your faith once plighted hold."

Much was the ladie in her gentle mind
 Abasht at his rebuke, that bit her neare;
 Ne ought to answere thereunto did find:
 But, hanging down her head with heaueie cheare,
 Stood long amaz'd as she amated weare:
 Which Burbon seeing, her againe assayd;
 And, clasping twixt his armes, her up did reare
 Upon his steede, whiles she no whit gainesayd:
 So bore her quite away nor well nor ill apayd.

Nathlesse the yron man did still pursew
 That raskall many with unpittied spoyle;
 Ne ceassed not, till all their scattred crew
 Into the sea he drove quite from that soyle,
 The which they troubled had with great turmoyle:
 But Artegall, seeing his cruell deed,
 Commaunded him from slaughter to recoyle,
 And to his voyage gan againe proceed;
 For that the terme, approching fast, required speed.

CANTO XII.

Artegall doth Sir Burbon aide,
 And blames for changing shield:
 He with the great Grantorto fights,
 And slaieth him in field.

O SACRED hunger of ambitious mindes,
 And impotent desire of men to raine!
 Whom neither dread of God, that devils bindes,
 Nor lawes of men, that common-weales containe,
 Nor bands of nature, that wilde beastes restraine,
 Can keepe from outrage and from doing wrong,
 Where they may hope a kingdome to obtaine:
 No faith so firme, no trust can be so strong,
 No love so lasting then, that may endure long.

Witnesse may Burbon be; whom all the bands,
 Which may a knight assure, had surely bound,
 Untill the love of lordship and of lands
 Made him become most faithles and unsound:
 And witnesse be Gerioneo found,
 Who for like cause faire Belgè did oppresse,
 And right and wrong most cruelly confound:
 And so be now Grantorto, who no lesse
 Than all the rest burst out to all outragiousnesse

Gainst whom Sir Arte all long having since
 Taken in hand th' exploit, (being theretoo
 Appointed by that mightie faerie princee,
 Great Gloriane, that tyrant to fordoe,)
 Through other great adventures hether too
 Had it forslackt: but now time drawing ny,
 To him asynd her high behest to doo,
 To the sea-shore he gan his way apply
 To weete if shipping readie he mote there descry

The, when they came to the sea-coast, they found
 A ship all readie, as good fortune fell,
 To put to sea, with whom they did compound
 To passe them over where them list to tell:
 The winde and weather served them so well,
 That in one day they with the coast did fall;
 Whereas they readie found, them to repell,
 Great hostes of men in order martiall,
 Which them forbad to land, and footing did forstall.

But nathemore would they from land refraine:
 But, whenas nigh unto the shore they drew
 That foot of man might sound the bottome plaine,
 Talus into the sea did forth issew
 Though darts from shore and stones they at him threw;
 And wading through the waves with stedfast sway,
 Maugre the might of all those troupes in vew,
 Did win the shore; whence he them chast away
 And made to fly like doves, whom th' eagle doth affray.

The whyles Sir Artegall with that old knight
 Did forth descend, there being none them neare,
 And forward marched to a towne in sight.
 By this came tydings to the tyrants eare,
 By those which earst did fly away for feare,
 Of their arrivall: wherewith troubled sore
 He all his forces streight to him did reare,
 And, forth issuing with his scouts afore,
 Meant them to have incountred ere they left the shore:

But ere he marched farre he with them met,
 And fiercely charged them with all his force;
 But Talus sternely did upon them set,
 And brusht and battred them without remorse,
 That on the ground he left full many a corse;
 Ne any able was him to withstand,
 But he them overthrew both man and horse,
 That they lay scattred over all the land,
 As thicke as doth the seede after the sowers hand.

Till Artegall him seeing so to rage
 Willd him to stay, and signe of truce did make:
 To which all harkning did awhile asswage
 Their forces furie, and their terror slake;
 Till he an herauld cald, and to him spake,
 Willing him wend unto the tyrant streight,
 And tell him that not for such slaughters sake
 He thether came, but for to trie the right
 Of fayre Irenas cause with him in single fight:

And willed him for to reclayme with speed
 His seattred people, ere they all were slaine;
 And time and place convenient to areed,
 In which they two the combat might darraigne.
 Which message when Grantorto heard, full fayne
 And glad he was the slaughter so to stay;
 And pointed for the combat twixt them twayne
 The morrow next, ne gave him longer day:
 So sounded the retraite, and drew his folke away.

That night Sir Artegall did cause his tent
 There to be pitched on the open plaine;
 For he had given streight commaundement
 That none should dare him once to entertaine:
 Which none darst breake, though many would right faine
 For faire Irena whom they loved deare:
 But yet old Sergis did so well him paine,
 That from close friends, that dar'd not to appeare,
 He all things did purway which for them needfull weare.

The morrow next that was the dismall day
 Appointed for Irenas death before.
 So soone as it did to the world display
 His chearefull face, and light to men restore,
 The heavy mayd, to whom none tydings bore
 Of Artegals arrivall her to free,
 Lookt up with eyes full sad and hart full sore,
 Weening her lifes last howre then neare to bee;
 Sith no redemption nigh she did nor heare nor see.

Then up she rose, and on herselfe did dight
 Most squalid garments, fit for such a day;
 And with dull countenance and with doleful spright
 She forth was brought in sorrowfull dismay
 For to receive the doome of her decay:
 But comming to the place, and finding there
 Sir Artegall in battailous array
 Wayting his foe, it did her dead hart cheare,
 And new life to her lent in midst of deadly feare.

Like as a tender rose in open plaine,
That with untimely drought nigh withered was,
And hung the head, soone as few drops of raine
Thereon distill and deaw her daintie face,
Gins to look up, and with fresh wonted grace
Dispreeds the glorie of her leavës gay;
Such was Irenas countenance, such her case,
When Artegall she saw in that array,
There wayting for the tyrant till it was farre day:

Who came at length with proud presumptuous gate
Into the field, as if he fearelesse were,
All armed in a cote of yron plate
Of great defence to ward the deadly feare,
And on his head a steele-cap he did weare
Of colour rustic-browne, but sure and strong;
And in his hand an huge polaxe did beare,
Whose steale was yron-studded, but not long,
With which he went to fight, to justifie his wrong.

Of stature huge and hideous he was,
Like to a giant for his monstrous hight,
And did in strength most sorts of men surpas,
Ne ever any found his match in might;
Therefo he had great skill in single fight:
His face was ugly and his countenance sterne,
That could have frayd one with the very sight,
And gaped like a gulfe when he did gerne;
That whether man or monster one could scarce discern.

Soone as he did within the listes appeare,
With dreadfull looke he Artegall beheld,
As if he would have daunted him with feare;
And, grinning griesly, did against him weld
His deadly weapon which in hand he held:
But th' ellin swayne, that oft had scene like sight,
Was with his ghastly count'nance nothing queld;
But gan him streight to buckle to the fight,
And cast his shield about to be in readie plight.

The trompets sound; and they together goe
With dreadfull terror and with fell intent;
And their huge strokes full dangerously bestow,
To doe most damage whereas most they ment:
But with such force and furie violent
The tyrant thundred his thicke blowes so fast,
That through the yron walles their way they rent,
And even to the vitall parts they past,
Ne ought could them endure, but all they cleft or brast.

Which cruell outrage whenas Artegall
 Did well advise, thenceforth with warie heed
 He shund his strokes, where-ever they dar'd fall,
 And way did give unto their gracelesse speed:
 As when a skilfull mariner doth reed
 A storme approaching that doth perill threat,
 He will not bide the daunger of such dread,
 But strikes his sayles, and vereth his main-sheet,
 And lends unto it leave the emptie ayre to beat.

So did the faerie knight himselſe abeare,
 And stouped oft his head from shame to shield:
 No shame to stoupe, one head more high to reare
 And, much to gaine, a title for to yield:
 So stoutest knights doen oftentimes in field,
 But still the tyrant sternely at him layd,
 And did his yron axe so nimble wield,
 That many wounds into his flesh it made,
 And with his burdenous blowes him sore did overlade.

Yet whenas fit advantage he did spy,
 The whiles the cursed felon high did reare
 His cruell hand to smite him mortally,
 Under his stroke he to him stepping neare
 Right in the flauke him strooke with deadly dreare,
 That the gore-bloud thence gushing grievously
 Did underneath him like a pond appeare
 And all his armour did with purple dye:
 Thereat he brayed loud, and yelled dreadfully.

Yet the huge stroke, which he before intended,
 Kept on his course, as he did it direct,
 And with such monstrous poise adowne descended,
 That seemed nought could him from death protect:
 But he it well did ward with wise respect,
 And twixt him and the blow his shield did cast,
 Which thereon seizing tooke no great effect;
 But, byting deepe, therein did sticke so fast
 That by no meanes it backe again he forth could wrast.

Long while he tug'd and strove to get it out,
 And all his powre applyed thereunto,
 That he therewith the knight drew all about:
 Nathlesse, for all that ever he could doe,
 His axe he could not from his shield undoe.
 Which Artegall perceiving, strooke no more,
 But loosing soone his shield did it forgoe;
 And, whiles he combred was therewith so sore,
 He gau at him let drive more fiercely than afore.

So well he him pursew'd, that at the last
 He stroke him with Chrysaor on the head,
 That with the souse thereof fall sore aghest
 He staggered to and fro in doubtfull sted:
 Againe, whiles he him saw so ill bested,
 He did him smite with all his might and maine,
 That, falling, on his mother earth he fed:
 Whom when he saw prostrated on the plaine,
 He lightly reft his head to ease him of his paine.

Which when the people round about him saw,
 They shouted all for ioy of his successe,
 Glad to be quit from that proud tyrant's awe,
 Which with strong powre did them long time oppresso;
 And, running all with greedie ioyfulnessse
 To faire Irena, at her feet did fall,
 And her adored with due humblenesse
 As their true liege and princessse naturall;
 And eke her champions glorie sounded over all:

Who, streight her leading with meete maiestie
 Unto the pallace where their kings did rayne,
 Did her therein establish peaceable,
 And to her kingdomes seat restore agayne;
 And all such persons, as did late maintayne
 That tyrants part with close or open ayde,
 He sorely punished with heauie payne;
 That in short space, whiles there with her he stayd,
 Not one was left that durst her once have disobayd.

During which time that he did there remayne,
 His studie was true iustice how to deale,
 And day and night employ'd his busie paine
 How to reforme that ragged common-weale:
 And that same yron man, which could reveale
 All hidden crimes, through all that realme he sent
 To search out those that used to rob and steale,
 Or did rebell gainst lawfull government;
 On whom he did inflict most grievous punishment.

But, ere he could reforme it thoroughly,
 He through occasion called was away
 To faerie court, that of necessity
 His course of iustice he was forst to stay,
 And Talus to reuoke from the right way,
 In which he was that realme for to redresse:
 But envies cloud still dimmeth vertues ray!
 So, having freed Irena from distresse,
 He tooke his leave of her there left in heavinessse.

Tho, as he backe returned from that land,
 And there arriv'd againe whence forth he set,
 He had not passed farre upon the strand,
 Whenas two old ill-favour'd lags he met,
 By the way-side being together set,
 Two griesly creatures; and, to that their faces
 Most foule and filthie were, their garments yet,
 Being all rag'd and tatter'd, their disgraces
 Did much the more augment, and made most ugly cases.

The one of them, that elder did appeare,
 With her dull eyes did seeme to looke askew,
 That her mis-shape much helpt; and her foule heare
 Hung loose and loathsomely; thereto her hew
 Was wan and leane, that all her teeth arew
 And all her bones might through her cheekes be red;
 Her lips were, like raw lether, pale and blew:
 And as she spake, therewith she slavered;
 Yet spake she seldom; but thought more, the lesse she sed:

Her hands were foule and durtie, never washt
 In all her life, with long nayles over-raught
 Like puttocks clawes; with th' one of which she scratcht
 Her cursed head, although it itched naught;
 The other held a snake with venime fraught,
 On which she fed and gnawed hungrily,
 As if that long she had not eaten ought;
 That round about her iawes one night desery
 The bloudie gore and poyson dropping lothsomely.

Her name was Envie, knowen well thereby;
 Whose nature is to grieve and grudge at all
 'That ever she sees doen prays-worthily;
 Whose sight to her is greatest crosse may fall
 And vexeth so, that makes her eat her gall:
 For, when she wanteth other thing to eat,
 She feedes on her owne maw unnaturall,
 And of her owne foule entrayles makes her meat;
 Meat fit for such a monsters monstrous dyeat:

And if she hapt of any good to heare,
 That had to any happily betid,
 Then would she inly fret, and grieve, and teare
 Her flesh for felnesse, which she inward hid;
 But if she heard of ill that any did,
 Or harme that any had, then would she make
 Great cheare, like one unto a banquet bid;
 And in anothers losse great pleasure take,
 As she had got thereby and gayned a great stake.

The other nothing better was then shée;
 Agreeing in bad will and cancred kynd,
 But in bad maner they did disagree:
 For whatso envie good or bad did fynd
 She did conceale, and murder her owne mynd;
 But this, whatever evill she conceived,
 Did spred abroad and throw in th' open wynd:
 Yet this in all her words might be perceived,
 That all she sought was mens good name to have bereaved.

For, whatsoever good by any sayd
 Or doen she heard, she would streightwayes invent
 How to deprave or slaunderously upbrayd,
 Or to misconstrue of a mans intent,
 And turne to ill the thing that well was ment:
 Therefore she used often to resort
 To common haunts, and companies frequent,
 To hearke what any one did good report,
 To blot the same with blame, or wrest in wicked sort:

And if that any ill she heard of any,
 She would it ceke, and make much worse by telling,
 And take great ioy to publish it to many,
 That every matter worse was for her melling:
 Her name was hight Detraction, and her dwelling
 Was neare to Envie, even her neighbour next;
 A wicked hag, and Envy selfe excelling
 In mischiefe; for herselfe she only vext:
 But this same both herselfe and others eke perplex.

Her face was ugly, and her mouth distort,
 Foming with poyson round about her gils,
 In which her cursed tongue full sharpe and short
 Appear'd like aspis sting, that closely kills,
 Or cruelly does wound whomso she wils;
 A distaffe in her other hand she had,
 Upon the which she litle spinnes, but spils;
 And faynes to weave false tales and leasings bad,
 To throw amongst the good, which others had disprad.

These two now had themselves combynd in one,
 And linckt together gainst Sir Artegall;
 For whom they wayted as his mortall fone,
 How they might make him into mischiefe fall,
 For freeing from their snares Irena thrall:
 Besides, unto themselves they gotten had
 A monster which the blatant beast men call,
 A dreadfull feend of gods and men ydrad,
 Whom they by slights allur'd and to their purpose lad.

Such were these hags, and so unhandsome drest;
 Who when they nigh approaching had espyde
 Sir Artegall return'd from his late quest,
 They both arose, and at him loudly cryde.
 As it had bene two shepheards cures had seryde
 A ravenous wolfe amongst the scattered flockes:
 And Envie first, as she that first him eyed,
 Towardes him runs, and with rude flaring lockes
 About her eares does beat her brest and forehead knockes.

Then from her mouth the gobbet she does take,
 The which whylere she was so greedily
 Devouring, even that halfe-gnawen snake,
 And at him throws it most despyghtfully:
 The cursed serpent, though she hungrily
 Earst chawed thereon, yet was not all so dead,
 But that some life remayned secretly;
 And, as he past afore withouten dread,
 Bit him behind, that long the marke was to be read.

Then th' other comming neare gan him revile,
 And foully rayle, with all she could invent;
 Saying that he had, with unmanly guile
 And foule abusyon, both his honour blent,
 And that bright sword, the sword of Iustice lent
 Had stayned with reprochfull crueltie
 In guiltlesse blood of many an innocent:
 As for Grantorto, him with treacherie
 And traynes having surpriz'd he foully did to die.

Thereto the blatant beast, by them set on,
 At him began aloud to barke and bay
 With bitter rage and fell contention,
 That all the woods and rockes nigh to that way
 Began to quake and tremble with dismay;
 And all the aire rebellowed againe;
 So dreadfully his hundred tongues did bray:
 And evermore those hags themselves did paine
 To sharpen him, and their owne cursed tongs did straine.

And, still among, most bitter wordes they spake,
 Most shamefull, most unrighteous, most untrew,
 That they the mildest man alive would make
 Forget his patience, and yeeld vengeance dew
 To her, that so false sleanders at him threw:
 And more to make them pierce and wound more deepe,
 She, with the sting which in her vile tongue grew
 Did sharpen them, and in fresh poyson steepe;
 Yet he past on, and seem'd of them to take no keepe.

But Talus, hearing her so lewdly raile
And speake so ill of him that well deserved.
Would her have chástiz'd with his yron flaile,
If her Sir Artegall had not preserved,
And him forbidden, who his heast observed:
So much the more at him still did she scold,
And stones did cast; yet he for nought would swerve
From his right course, but still the way did hold
To Faerie court; where what him fell shall else be told.

THE SIXTH BOOKE
THE FAERIE QUEENE,

CONTAYNING

The Legend of Sir Calidore, or of Courtesie.

---

THE waies, through which my weary steps I guyde
In this delightful land of Faëry,
Are so exceeding spacious and wyde,
And sprinckled with such sweet variety
Of all that pleasant is to care or eye,
That I, nigh ravisht with rare thoughts delight,
My tedious travell doe forget thereby;
And, when I gin to feele decay of might,
It strength to me supplies and chears my dulled spright.

Such secret comfort and such heavenlie pleasures,
Ye sacred imps, that on Parnasso dwell,
And there the keeping have of learnings treasures
Which doe all worldly riches farre excell,
Into the mindes of mortall men doe well,
And goodly fury into them infuse;
Guyde ye my footing, and conduct me well
In these strange waies where never foote did use,
Ne none can find but who was taught them by the muse:

Revele to me the sacred nursery
Of vertue, which with you doth there remaine,
Where it in silver bowre does hidden ly
From view of men and wicked worlds disdain;
Since it at first was by the gods with paine
Planted in earth, being deriv'd at furst
From heavenly seedes of bounty soveraine,
And by them long with carefull labour nurst,
Till it to ripenesse grew, and forth to honour burst.

Amongst them all growes not a fairer flowre
Then is the bloosme of comely courtesie;
Which though it on a lowly stalke doe bowre,
Yet brancheth forth in brave nobilitie,
And spreads itselfe through all civilitie:
Of which though present age doe plenteous seeme,
Yet, being matcht with plaine antiquitie,
Ye will them all but fayned shewes esteeme,
Which carry colours faire that feeble eies misdeeme.

Bat, in the triall of true curtesie,
 Its now so farre from that which then it was,
 That it indeed is nought but forgerie,
 Fashioned to please the eies of them that pas,
 Which see not perfect things but in a glas:
 Yet is that glasse so gay that it can blynd
 The wisest sight, to thinke gold that is bras:
 But vertues seat is deepe within the mynd,
 And not in outward shows but inward thoughts defynd.

But where shall I in all antiquity
 So faire a patterne finde, where may be seene
 The goodly praise of princely curtesie,
 As in yourselfe, O soveraine lady queene?
 In whose pure minde, as in a mirrour sheene,
 It shoves, and with her brightnesse doth inflame
 The eyes of all which thereon fixed beene;
 But meriteth indeede an higher name:
 Yet so from low to high, uplifted is your name.

Then pardon me, most dreaded soveraine,
 That from yourselfe I doe this vertue bring,
 And to yourselfe doe it returne againe:
 So from the ocean all rivers spring,
 And tribute backe repay as to their king:
 Right so from you all goodly vertues well
 Into the rest which round about you ring,
 Faire lords and ladies which about you dwell,
 And doe adorne your court where courtesies excell.

CANTO I.

Calidore saves from Maleffort

A damzell used vylde:

Doth vanquish Crudor; and doth make

Briana wexe more mylde.

OF court, it seemes, men courtesie doe call,
 For that it there most useth to abound;
 And well beseemeth that in princes hall
 That vertue should be plentifully found,
 Which of all goodly manners is the ground,
 And roote of civill conversation:
 Right so in faery court it did redound,
 Where curteous knights and ladies most did won
 Of all on earth, and made a matchlesse paragon.

But mongst them all was none more courteous knight
 Then Calidore, beloved over all:
 In whom it seemes that gentlenesse of spright
 And manners mylde were planted naturall;
 To which he adding comely guize withall
 And gracious speach, did steale mens hearts away:
 Nathlesse thereto he was full stout and tall,
 And well approv'd in batteilous assay,
 That him did much renowne, and far his fame display.

Ne was there knight ne was there lady found
 In facrie court, but him did deare embrace
 For his faire usage and conditions sound,
 The which in all mens liking gayned place,
 And with the greatest purchast greatest grace;
 Which he could wisely use, and well apply,
 To please the best, and th' evill to embase:
 For he loathd leusing and base flattery,
 And loved simple truth and stedfast honesty.

And now he was in travell on his way,
 Uppon an hard adventure sore bestad,
 Whenas by chaunce he met uppon a day
 With Artegall, returning yet halfe sad
 From his late conquest which he gotten had:
 Who whenas each of other had a sight,
 They knew themselves, and both their persons rad:
 When Calidore thus first; "haile, noblest knight
 Of all this day on ground that breathe living spright!

"Now tell, if please you, of the good successe
 Which ye have had in your late enterprize."

To whom Sir Artegall gan to expresse
 His whole exploite and valorous emprise,
 In order as it did to him arize.

"Now, happy man," said then Sir Calidore,

"Which have, so goodly as ye can devise,

Achiev'd so hard a quest, as few before;

That shall you most renowned make for evermore.

"But where ye ended have, now I begin
 To tread an endlesse trace; withouten guyde
 Or good direction how to enter in,

Or how to issue forth in waies untryde,
 In perils strange, in labours long and wide;

In which although good fortune me befall,
 Yet shall it not by none be testifyde."

"What is that quest," quoth then Sir Artegall,

"That you into such perils presently doth call?"

"The blattant beast," quoth he, "I doe pursew,
 And through the world incessantly doe chase,
 Till I him overtake, or else subdew:
 Yet know I not or how or in what place
 To find him out, yet still I forward trace."
 "What is that blattant beast then?" he replide.
 "It is a monster bred of hellishe race,"
 Then answered he, "which often hath annoyd
 Good knights and ladies true, and many else destroyd.

"Of Cerberus whilome he was begot
 And fell Chimara, in her darkesome den,
 Through fowle commixture of his filthy blot;
 Where he was fostred long in Stygian fen,
 Till he to perfect ripenesse grew; and then
 Into this wicked world he forth was sent
 To be the plague and scourge of wretched men:
 Whom with vile tongue and venemous intent
 He sore doth wound, and bite, and cruelly torment."

"Then, since the Salvage Island I did leave,"
 Sayd Artegall, "I such a beast did see,
 The which did seeme a thousand tongues to have,
 That all in spight and malice did agree,
 With which he bayd and loudly barkt at mee,
 As if that he attonce would me deuoure:
 But I, that knew myselfe from perill free,
 Did nought regard his malice nor his powre;
 But he the more his wicked poyson forth did poure."

"That surely is that beast," saide Calidore,
 "Which I pursue, of whom I am right glad
 To heare these tidings which of none afore
 Through all my weary travell I have had:
 Yet now some hope your words unto me add."
 "Now God you speed," quoth then Sir Artegall,
 "And keepe your body from the daunger drad;
 For ye have much adoe to deale withall!"
 So both tooke goodly leave, and parted severall.

Sir Calidore thence travelled not long,
 Whenas by chaunce a comely squire he found,
 That thorough some more mighty enemies wrong
 Both hand and foote unto a tree was bound;
 Who, seeing him from farre, with piteous sound
 Of his shrill cries him called to his aide:
 To whom approching, in that painefull stound
 When he him saw, for no demaunds he staide,
 But first him losde, and afterwards thus to him said;

"Unhappy squire, what hard mishap thee brought
 Into this bay of perill and disgrace?
 What cruell hand thy wretched thraldome wrought,
 And thee captyved in this shamefull place?"
 To whom he answered thus; "My haplesse case
 Is not occasioned through my misdesert,
 But through misfortune, which did me abase
 Unto this shame, and my young hope subvert,
 Ere that I in her guilefull traines was well expert.

"Not farre from hence, uppon yond rocky hill,
 Hard by a streight there stands a castle strong,
 Which doth observe a custome lewd and ill,
 And it hath long mayntaind with mighty wrong:
 For may no knight nor lady passe along
 That way, (and yet they needs must passe that way,
 By reason of the streight, and rocks among.)
 But they that ladies lockes doe shave away,
 And that knights beard, for toll which they for passage pay."

"A shamefull use as ever I did heare,"
 Sayd Calidore, "and to be overthrowne.
 But by what meanes did they at first it reare,
 And for what cause? tell if thou have it knowne."
 Sayd then that squire; "The lady, which doth owne
 This castle, is by name Briana hight;
 Then which a prouder lady liveth none:
 She long time hath deare lov'd a doughty knight,
 And sought to win his love by all the meanes she might.

"His name is Crudor; who, through high disdaine
 And proud despight of his selfe-pleasing mynd,
 Refused hath to yeeld her love againe,
 Untill a mantle she for him doe fynd,
 With beards of knights and locks of ladies lynd:
 Which to provide, she hath this castle dight,
 And therein hath a seneschall assynd,
 Cald Maleffort, a man of mickle might,
 Who executes her wicked will with worse despight.

"He, this same day as I that way did come
 With a faire damzell my beloved deare,
 In execution of her lawlesse doome
 Did set upon us flying both for feare;
 For little bootes against him hand to reare:
 Me first he tooke unhable to withstond,
 And whiles he her pursued every where,
 Till his returne unto this tree he bond;
 Ne wote I surely whether he her yet have fond."

Thus whiles they spake they heard a ruefull shricke
 Of one loud crying, which they streightway ghest
 That it was she the which for helpe did seeke.
 Tho, looking up unto the cry to lest,
 They saw that carle from farre with hand unblest
 Hayling that mayden by the yellow heare,
 That all her garments from her snowy brest,
 And from her head her lockes he nigh did teare,
 Ne would he spare for pitty, nor refraine for feare.

Which haynous sight when Calidore beheld,
 Eftsoones he loosd that squire, and so him left
 With hearts dismay and inward dolour queld,
 For to pussue that villaine, which had rest
 That piteous spoile by so iniurious theft:
 Whom overtaking, loude to him he cryde;
 "Leave, faytor, quickely that misgotten west"
 To him that hath it better iustifyde,
 And turne thee soone to him of whom thou art defyde.

Who, hearkning to that voice, himselfe upreard,
 And, seeing him so fiercely towards make,
 Against him stoutly ran, as nought afeard,
 But rather more enrag'd for those words sake;
 And with sterne count'naunce thus unto him spake;
 "Art thou the caytive that defyest me,
 And for this mayd, whose party thou doest take,
 Wilt give thy beard, though it but little bee?
 Yet shall it not her lockes for raunsome fro me free."

With that he fiercely at him flew, and layd
 On hideous strokes with most importune might,
 That oft he made him stagger as unstayd,
 And oft recuile to shunne his sharpe despight:
 But Calidore, that was well skild in fight,
 Him long forbore, and still his spirite spar'd,
 Lying in waite how him he damadge might:
 But when he felt him shrinke, and come to ward,
 He greater grew, and gan to drive at him more hard.

Like as a water-streame, whose swelling sourse
 Shall drive a mill, within strong bancks is pent,
 And long restrayned of his ready course;
 So soone as passage is unto him lent,
 Breakes forth, and makes his way more violent;
 Such was the fury of Sir Calidore:
 When once he felt his foe-man to relent,
 He fiercely him pursu'd, and pressed sore;
 Who as he still decayd, so he encreased more.

The heavy burden of whose dreadfull might
 Whenas the carle no longer could sustaine,
 His heart gan faint, and streight he tooke his flight
 Toward the castle, where, if need constraine,
 His hope of refuge used to remaine:
 Whom Calidore perceiving fast to flie,
 He him pursu'd and chaced through the plaine,
 That he for dread of death gan loude to crie
 Unto the ward to open to him hastilie.

They, from the wall him seeing so aghast,
 The gate soone opened to receive him in;
 But Calidore did follow him so fast,
 That even in the porch he him did win,
 And cleft his head asunder to his chin:
 The carkasse tumbling downe within the dore
 Did choke the entraunce with a lumpe of sin,
 That it could not be shut; whilst Calidore
 Did enter in, and slew the porter on the flore.

With that the rest the which the castle kept
 About him floekt, and hard at him did lay;
 But he them all from him full lightly swept,
 As doth a steare, in heat of sommers day,
 With his long taile the bryzes brush away.
 Thence passing forth into the hall he came,
 Where of the lady selfe in sad dismay
 He was ymett, who with uncomely shame
 Gan him salute, and fowle upbrayd with faulty blame:

"False traytor knight," said she, "no knight at all,
 But scorne of armes! that hast with guilty hand
 Murdered my men, and slaine my seneschall;
 Now comest thou to rob my house unmand,
 And spoile myselfe, that cannot thee withstand?
 Yet doubt thou not, but that some better knight
 Then thou, that shall thy treason understand,
 Will it avenge, and pay thee with thy right:
 And if none do, yet shame shall thee with shame requight."

Much was the knight abashed at that word;
 Yet answer'd thus; "Not unto me the shame,
 But to the shamefull doer it afford.
 Bloud is no blemish; for it is no blame
 To punish those that doe deserve the same,
 But they th at breake bands of civilitie,
 And wicked customes make, those doe defame
 Both noble armes and gentle curtesie:
 No greater shame to man then inhumanitie.

"Then doe yourselfe, for dread of shame forgoe,
 This evill manner which ye here maintaine,
 And doe instend thereof mild curt'sie showe
 To all that passe: that shall you glory gaine
 More then his love, which thus ye seeke t'obtaine."
 Wherewith all full of wrath she thus replyde;
 "Vile recreant! know that I doe much disdaine
 Thy courteous lore, that doest my love deride,
 Who scornes thy ydle scoffe, and bids thee be defyde."

"To take defiaunce at a ladies word,"
 Quoth he, "I hold it no indignity;
 But were he here, that would it with his sword
 Abett, perhaps he mote it deare aby."
 "Cowherd," quoth she, "were not that thou wouldst fly
 Ere he doe come, he should be soone in place."
 "If I doe so," sayd he, "then liberty
 I leave to you for aye me to disgrace
 With all those shames, that erst ye spake me to deface."

With that a dwarfe she cald to her in hast,
 And taking from her hand a ring of gould
 (A privy token which betweene them past)
 Bad him to flie with all the speed he could
 To Crudor; and desire him that he would
 Vouchsafe to reskue her against a knight,
 Who through strong powre had now herself in hould,
 Having late slaine her seneschall in fight,
 And all her people murdred with outrageous might:

The dwarfe his way did hast, and went all night:
 But Calidore did with her there abyde
 The comming of that so much threatned knight;
 Where that discourteous dame with scornfull pryde
 And fowle entreaty him indignifyde,
 That yron heart it hardly could sustaine:
 Yet he, that could his wrath full wisely guyde,
 Did well endure her womanish disdainie,
 And did himselfe from fraile impatience refrain:

The morrow next, before the lampe of light
 Above the earth upreard his flaming head,
 The dwarfe, which bore that message to her knight,
 Brought aunswere backe, that ere he tasted bread
 He would her succour, and alive or dead
 Her foe deliver up into her hand:
 Therefore he wil'd her doe away all dread;
 And, that of him she mote assured stand,
 He sent to her his basenet as a faithfull band.

Thereof full blyth the lady streight became,
 And gan t' augment her bitternesse much more:
 Yet no whit more appalled for the same,
 Ne ought dismayed was Sir Calidore;
 But rather did more chearefull seeme therefore
 And, having soone his armes about him dight,
 Did issue forth to meete his foe afore;
 Where long he stayed not, whenas a knight
 He spide come pricking on with all his powre and might.

Well weend he streight that he should be the same
 Which tooke in hand her quarrell to maintaine,
 Ne stayd to aske if it were he by name,
 But coucht his speare, and ran at him amaine.
 They bene ymett in midst of the plaine
 With so fell fury and despiteous forse,
 That neither could the others stroke sustaine,
 But rudely rowld to ground both man and horse,
 Neither of other taking pittie nor remorse.

But Calidore uprose againe full light,
 Whiles yet his foe lay fast in sencelesse sound;
 Yet would he not him hurt although he might:
 For shame he weend a sleeping wight to wound.
 But when Briana saw that drery stound,
 There where she stood upon the castle wall,
 She deem'd him sure to have bene dead on ground,
 And made such piteous mourning therewithall,
 That from the battlements she ready seem'd to fall.

Nathlesse at length himselfe he did upreare
 In lustlesse wise; as if against his will,
 Ere he had slept his fill, he wakened were,
 And gan to stretch his limbs; which feeling ill
 Of his late fall, awhile he rested still:
 But, when he saw his foe before in vew,
 He shooke off luskishnesse; and, courage chill
 Kindling afresh, gan battell to renew.
 To prove if better foote then horsebacke would ensew.

There then began a fearefull cruell fray
 Betwixt them two for maystery of might:
 For both were wondrous practicke in that play,
 And passing well expert in single fight,
 And both inflam'd with furious despight;
 Which as it still encreast, so still increast
 Their cruell strokes and terrible affright;
 Ne once for ruth their rigour they releast,
 Ne once to breath awhile their angers tempest ceast.

Thus long they trac'd and traverst to and fro,
 And tryde all waies how each mote entrance make
 Into the life of his malignant foe;
 They hew'd their helmes, and plates asunder brake,
 As they had potshares bene; for nought mote slake
 Their greedy vengeaunces but goary blood;
 That at the last like to a purple lake
 Of bloudy gore congeal'd about them stood,
 Which from their riven sides forth gushed like a flood.

At length it chaunst that both their hands on hie
 At once did heave with all their powre and might,
 Thinking the utmost of their force to trie,
 And prove the finall fortune of the fight;
 But Calidore, that was more quicke of sight
 And nimbler-handed then his enemie,
 Prevented him before his stroke could light,
 And on the helmet smote him formerlie,
 That made him stoupe to ground with meeke humilitie:

And, ere he could recover foote againe,
 He following that faire advantage fast
 His stroke redoubled with such might and maine,
 That him upon the ground he groveling cast;
 And leaping to him lig't would have unlust
 His helme, to make unto his vengeance way:
 Who, seeing in what daunger he was plast,
 Cryde out; "Ah mercie, sir! doe me not slay.
 But save my life, which lot before your foot doth lay."

With that his mortall hand aw'hile he stayd;
 And, having somewhat calm'd his wrathfull heat
 With goodly patience, thus he to him sayd;
 "And is the boast of that proud ladies threat,
 That menaced me from the field to beat,
 Now brought to this? By this now may ye learne
 Strangers no more so rudely to entreat:
 But put away proud looke and usage sterne.
 The which shal nought to you but foule dishonor yearne.

"For nothing is more blamefull to a knight,
 That court'sie doth as well as armes professe,
 However strong and fortunate in fight,
 Then the reproch of pride and crueltie:
 In vaine he seeketh others to suppress,
 Who hath not learnd himselfe first to subdew:
 All flesh is frayle and full of sicklenesse,
 Subiect to fortunes chance, still chaunging new;
 What haps to day to me to morrow may to you.

"Who will not mercie unto others shew,
 How can he mercy ever hope to have?
 To pay each with his owne is right and dew:
 Yet since ye mercie now doe need to crave,
 I will it graunt, your hopelesse life to save,
 With these conditions which I will propound:
 First, that ye better shall yourselfe behave
 Unto all errant knights, whereso on ground;
 Next, that ye ladies ayde in every stead and stound."

The wretched man, that all this while did dwell
 In dread of death, his heasts did gladly heare,
 And promist to performe his precept well,
 And whatsoever else he would requere.
 So, suffring him to rise, he made him sweare
 By his owne sword, and by the crosse thereon,
 To take Briana for his loving fere
 Withouten dowre or composition:
 But to release his former foule condition.

All which accepting, and with faithfull oth
 Bynding himselfe most firmly to obay,
 He up arose, however lief or loth,
 And swore to him true fealtie for aye.
 Then forth he cald from sorrowfull dismay
 The sad Briana which all this beheld;
 Who comming forth yet full of late affray
 Sir Calidore upheard, and to her teld
 All this accord to which he Crudor had compeld.

Whereof she now more glad than sory earst,
 All overcome with infinite affect
 For his exceeding courtesie, that pearst
 Her stubborne hart with inward deepe effect,
 Before his feet herselfe she did proiect;
 And him adoring as her lives deare lord,
 With all due thankes and dutifull respect,
 Herselfe acknowledg'd bound for that accord,
 By which he had to her both life and love restord.

So all returning to the castle glad,
 Most ioyfully she them did entertaine;
 Where goodly glee and feast to them she made,
 To shew her thankfull mind and meaning faine,
 By all the meanes she mote it best explaine
 And, after all, unto Sir Calidore
 She freely gave that castle for his paine,
 And herselfe bound to him for evermore;
 So wondrously now chaung'd from that she was afore.

But Calidore himselfe would not retaine
 Nor land nor fee for hyre of his good deede,
 But gave them streight unto that squire againe,
 Whom from her seneschall he lately freed,
 And to his damzell, as their rightfull meed
 For recompence of all their former wrong:
 There he remaind with them right well agreed,
 Till of his wounds he waxed hole and strong;
 And then to his first quest he passed forth along.

CANTO II.

Calidore sees young Tristram slay
 A prond discourteous knight:
 He makes him squire, and of him learns
 His state and present plight.

WHAT vertue is so fitting for a knight,
 Or for a ladie whom a knight should love,
 As curtesie; to beare themselves aright
 To all of each degree as doth behove?
 For whether they be placed high above
 Or low beneath, yet ought they well to know
 Their good; that none them rightly may reprove
 Of rudenesse for not yeelding what they owe:
 Great skill it is such duties timely to bestow.

There to great helpe dame Nature selfe doth lend:
 For some so goodly gracious are by kind,
 That every action doth them much commend,
 And in the eyes of men great liking find;
 Which others that have greater skill in mind,
 Though they enforce themselves, cannot attaine:
 For everie thing, to which one is inclin'd,
 Doth best become and greatest grace doth gaine:
 Yet praise likewise deserve good thewes enforst with paine.

That well in courteous Calidore appears;
 Whose everie act and deed, that he did say,
 Was like enchantment, that through both the eyes
 And both the eares did steale the hart away.
 He now againe is on his former way
 To follow his first quest, whenas he spyde
 A tall young man, from thence not farre away
 Fighting on foot, as well he him descryde,
 Against an armed knight that did on horsebacke ryde.

And them beside a ladie faire he saw
 Standing alone on foote in foule array ;
 To whom himselfe he hastily did draw
 To weet the cause of so uncomely fray,
 And to depart them, if so be he may :
 But, ere he came in place, that youth had kild
 That armed knight, that low on ground he lay ;
 Which when he saw, his hart was inly child
 With great amazement, and his thought with wonder fild.

Him stedfastly he markt, and saw to bee
 A goodly youth of amiable grace,
 Yet but a slender slip, that scarse did see
 Yet seventene yeares, but tall and faire of face,
 That sure he deem'd him borne of noble race :
 All in a woodmans iacket he was clad
 Of Lincolne greene, belayd with silver lace ;
 And on his head an hood with aglets sprad,
 And by his side his hunters horne he hanging had.

Buskins he wore of costliest cordwayne,
 Pinckt upon gold, and paled part per part,
 As then the guize was for each gentle swayne :
 In his right hand he held a trembling dart,
 Whose fellow he before had sent apart ;
 And in his left he held a sharpe bore-speare,
 With which he wont to launch the salvage hart
 Of many a lyon and of many a beare,
 That first unto his hand in chase did happen neare.

Whom Calidore awhile well having vewed,
 At length bespake ; " what meanes this, gentle swaine !
 Why hath thy hand too bold itselfe embrewed
 In blood of knight, the which by thee is slaine,
 By thee no knight ; which armes impugneth plaine !"
 " Certes," said he, " loth were I to have broken
 The law of armes ; yet breake it should againe,
 Rather then let myselfe of wight be stroken,
 So long as these two armes were able to be wroken.

" For not I him, as this his ladie here
 May witnesse well, did offer first to wrong,
 No surely thus unarm'd I likely were ;
 But he me first through pride and puissance strong
 Assayld, not knowing what to armes doth long."
 " Perdie grent blame," then said Sir Calidore,
 " For armed knight a wight unarm'd to wrong :
 But then aread, thou gentle chyld, wherefore
 Betwixt you two began this strife and sterne uprore.

"That shall I sooth," said he, "to you declare.
 I, whose unryper yeares are yet unfit
 For thing of weight or worke of greater care,
 Doe spend my dayes and bend my carelesse wit
 To salvage chace, where I th reon may hit
 In all this forrest and wyld woodie raine;
 Where, as this day I was enraunging it,
 I chaunst to meete this knight who there lyes slaine,
 Together with this ladie, passing on the plaine.

"The knight, as ye did see, on horsebacke was,
 And this his ladie, that him ill became,
 On her faire feet by his horse-side did pas
 Through thicke and thin, unfit for any dame:
 Yet not content, more to increase his shame,
 Whenso she lagged, as shee needs mote so,
 He with his speare (that was to him great blame)
 Would thumpe her forward and inforce to goe,
 Weeping to him in vaine and making piteous woo.

"Which when I saw, as they me passed by,
 Much was I moved in indignant mind,
 And gan to blame him for such cruelty
 Towards a ladie, whom with usage kind
 He rather should have taken up behind.
 Wherewith he wroth and full of proud disdain
 Tooke in foule scorne that I such fault did find,
 And me in lieu thereof revil'd againe,
 Threatning to chastize me, as doth t' a chyld pertaine.

"Which I no lesse disdayning, backe returned
 His scornefull taunts unto his teeth againe,
 That he streightway with haughtie choler burned,
 And with his speare strooke me one stroke or twaine;
 Which I, enforst to beare though to my paine,
 Cast to requite; and with a slender dart,
 Fellow of this I beare, throwne not in vaine,
 Strooke him, as seemeth, underneath the hart,
 That through the wound his spirit shortly did depart."

Much did Sir Calidore admyre his speech
 Tempred so well, but more admyr'd the stroke
 That through the mayles had made so strong a breach
 Into his hart, and had so sternely wroke
 His wrath on him that first occasion broke.
 Yet rested not, but further gan inquire
 Of that same ladie, whither what he spoke
 Were soothly so, and that th' unrighteous ire
 Of her owne knight had given him his owne due hire.

Of all which whenas she could nought deny,
 But cleard that stripling of th' imputed blame;
 Sayd then Sir Calidore; "Neither will I
 Him charge with guilt, but rather doe quite clame:
 For, what he spake, for you he spake it, dame;
 And what he did, he did himselfe to save:
 Against both which that knight wrought knightlesse shame:
 For knights and all men this by nature have,
 Towards all womenkind them kindly to behave.

"But, sith that he is gone irrevocable,
 Please it you, ladie, to us to aread
 What cause could make him so dishonourable
 To drive you so on foot, unfit to tread
 And lackey by him, gainst all womanhead."
 "Certes, sir knight," sayd she, "full loth I wereo
 To rayse a lyving blame against the dead:
 But, since it me concernes myselfe to clere,
 I will the truth discover as it chaunst whylere.

"This day, as he and I together roade
 Upon our way to which we weren bent,
 We chaunst to come foreby a covert glade
 Within a wood, whereas a ladie gent
 Sate with a knight in ioyous iolliment
 Of their franke loves, free from all gealous spyres:
 Faire was the ladie sure, that mote content
 An hart not carried with too curious eyes,
 And unto him did shew all lovely curtesyes.

"Whom when my knight did see so lovely faire,
 He inly gan her lover to envy,
 And wish that he part of his spoyle might share:
 Whereto whenas my presence he did spy
 To be a let, he bad me by and by
 For to alight: but, whenas I was loth
 My loves owne part to leave so suddenly,
 He with strong hand down from his steed me throw'th,
 And with presumptuous powre against that knight streight
 go'th.

"Unarm'd all was the knight, as then more meete
 For ladies service and for loves delight.
 Then fearing any foeman there to meete:
 Whereof he taking oddes, streight bids him dight
 Himselfe to yeeld his love or else to fight:
 Whereat the other starting up dismayd,
 Yet boldly answer'd, as he rightly might,
 To leave his love he should be ill apayd,
 In which he had good right gainst all that it gainesayd.

"Yet since he was not presently in plight
 Her to defend, or his to iustifie,
 He him requested, as he was a knight,
 To lend him day his better right to trie,
 Or stay till he his armes, which were thereby,
 Might lightly fetch: but he was fierce and whot
 Ne time would give, nor any termes aby,
 But at him flew, and with his speare him smot;
 From which to thinke to save himselfe it bootet not.

"Meane while his ladie, which this outrage saw,
 Whilest they together for the quarrey strove,
 Into the covert did herselfe withdraw,
 And closely hid herselfe within the grove.
 My knight hers soone, as seemes, to daunger drove
 And left sore wounded: but, when her he mist,
 He woxe halfe mad: and in that rage gau rove
 And range through all the wood, whereso he wist
 She hidden was, and sought her so long as him list.

"But, whenas her he by no meanes could find,
 After long search and chauff he turned backe
 Unto the place where me he left behind:
 There gan he me to curse and ban, for lacke
 Of that faire bootie, and with bitter wracke
 To wreake on me the guilt of his owne wrong:
 Of all which I yet glad to beare the packe
 Strove to appease him, and perswaded long;
 But still his passion grew more violent and strong.

"Then, as it were t'avenge his wrath on mee,
 When forward we should fare, he flat refused
 To take me up (as this young man did see)
 Upon his steed, for no iust cause accused,
 But forst to trot on foot, and foule misused,
 Pouching me with the butt-end of his speare,
 In vaine complayning to be so abused;
 For he regarded neither playnt nor teare,
 But more enforst my paine, the more my plaints to heare.

"So passed we, till this young man us met;
 And being moov'd with pittie of my plight
 Spake as was meete, for ease of my regret:
 Whereof befell what now is in your sight."
 "Now sure," then said Sir Calidore, "and right
 Meseemes that him befell by his owne fault:
 Whoever thinkes through confidence of might,
 Or through support of count'nance proud and hault,
 To wrong the weaker, oft falles in his owne assault."

All which when well Sir Calidore had heard,
 Him much more now, then earst, he gan admire
 For the rare hope which in his yeares appear'd,
 And thus replide; " Faire chyld, the high desire
 To love of armes, which in you doth aspire,
 I may not certes without blame denie;
 But rather wish that some more noble hire
 (Though none more noble then is chevalrie)
 I had, you to reward with greater dignitie."

There him he causd to kneele, and made to sweare
 Faith to his knight, and truth to ladies all.
 And never to be recreant for feare
 Of perill, or of ought that might befall:
 So he him dubbed, and his squire did call.
 Full glad and ioyous then young Tristram grew;
 Like as a flowre, whose silken leavës small
 Long shut up in the bud from heavens vew,
 At length breaks forth, and brode displayes his smyling hew,

Thus when they long had treated to and fro,
 And Calidore betooke him to depart,
 Chyld Tristram prayd that he with him might goe
 On his adventure, vowing not to start,
 But wayt on him in every place and part:
 Whereat Sir Calidore did much delight,
 And greatly ioy'd at his so noble hart,
 In hope he sure would prove a doughtie knight:
 Yet for the time this answer he to him beight;

" Glad would I surely be, thou courteous squire,
 To have thy presence in my present quest,
 That mote thy kindled courage set on fire,
 And flame forth honour in thy noble breast:
 But I am bound by vow, which I profest
 To my dread souveraine, when I it assayd,
 That in atchievement of her high behest
 I should no creature ioyne unto mine ayde;
 Forthy I may not graunt that ye so greatly prayde.

" But since this ladie is all desolate,
 And needeth safegard now upon her way,
 Ye may doe well in this her needfull state
 To succour her from daunger of dismay,
 That thankfull guerdon may to you repay."
 The noble ympe, of such new service fayne,
 It gladly did accept, as he did say:
 So taking courteous leave they parted twayne;
 And Calidore forth passed to his former payne.

But Tristram, then despoyling that dead knight
 Of all those goodly implements of prayse,
 Long fed his greedie eyes with the sayre sight
 Of the bright mettall shynning like sunne rayes,
 Handling and turning them a thousand wayes;
 And, after having them upon him dight,
 He tooke that ladie, and her up did rayse
 Upon the steed of her owne late dead knight:
 So with her marched forth, as she did him behight.

There to their fortune leave we them awhile,
 And turne we backe to good Sir Calidore;
 Who, ere he thence had traveild many a mile,
 Came to the place whereas ye heard afore
 This knight, whom Tristram slew, had woundgd sore
 Another knight in his despiteous pryde;
 There he that knight found lying on the flore
 With many wounds full perilous and wyde,
 That all his garments and the grasse in vermeill dyde:

And there beside him sate upon the ground
 His wofull ladie, piteously complayning
 With loud laments that most unluckie stound,
 And her sad selfe with carefull hand constrayning
 To wype his wounds, and ease their bitter payning.
 Which sorie sight when Calidore did vew,
 With heavie eyne from teares uneath refrayning,
 His mightie hart their mournefull case can rew,
 And for their better comfort to them nigher drew.

Then, speaking to the ladie, thus he said;
 "Ye dolefull dame, let not your griefe empeach
 To tell what cruell hand hath thus arayd
 This knight unarm'd with so unknighly breach
 Of armes, that, if I yet him nigh may reach
 I may avenge him of so foule despight."
 The ladie, hearing his so courteous speach,
 Gan reare her eyes as to the chearefull light,
 And from her sory hart few heavie words forth sigh't,

In which she shew'd, how that discourteous knight
 Whom Tristram slew, them in that shadow found
 Ioying together in unblam'd delight;
 And him unarm'd, as now he lay on ground,
 Charg'd with his speare, and mortally did wound,
 Withouten cause, but onely her to reave
 From him, to whom she was for ever bound:
 Yet, when she fled into that covert greave,
 He, her not finding, both them thus nigh dead did leave.

When Calidore this ruefull storie had
 Well understood, he gan of her demand,
 What manner wight he was, and how yclad,
 Which had this outrage wrought with wicked hand.
 She then, like as she best could understand,
 Him thus describ'd, to be of stature large,
 Clad all in gilden armes, with azure band
 Quartred athwart, and bearing in his targe
 A ladie on rough waves row'd in a sommer barge.

Then gan Sir Calidore to ghesse streightway,
 By many signes which she described had,
 That this was he whom Tristram earst did slay,
 And to her said; " Dame, be no longer sad;
 For he, that hath your knight so ill bestad,
 Is now himselfe in much more wretched plight;
 These eyes him saw upon the cold earth sprad,
 The meede of his desert for that despight,
 Which to yourselfe he wrought and to your loved knight.

" Therefore, faire ladie, lay aside this grieve,
 Which ye have gathered to your gentle hart
 For that displeasure; and thinke what reliefe
 Were best devise for this your lovers smart:
 And how ye may him hence, and to what part,
 Convey to be recur'd." She thank't him deare,
 Both for that newes he did to her impart,
 And for the courteous care which he did beare
 Both to her love and to herselfe in that sad dreare.

Yet could she not devise by any wit,
 How thence she might convey him to some place;
 For him to trouble she it thought unfit,
 That was a straunger to her wretched case:
 And him to beare, she thought it thing too base
 Which whenas he perceiv'd he thus bespake;
 " Faire lady, let it not you seeme disgrace
 To beare this burden on your dainty backe;
 Myselfe will beare a part, coportion of your packe."

So off he did his shield, and downeward layd
 Upon the ground, like to an hollow beare;
 And pourcing balme, which he had long purvayd,
 Into his wounds, him up thereon did reare,
 And twixt them both with parted paines did beare,
 Twixt life and death, not knowing what was donne:
 Thence they him carried to a castle neare,
 In which a worthy auncient knight did wonne:
 Where what ensu'd shall in next canto be begonne.

" And 'twixt them both, with parted paines, did beare,
Twixt life and death, not knowing what was donne,
Thence they him carried to a castle neare."

CANTO III.

Calidore brings Priscilla home;
 Pursues the blatant beast;
 Saves Sérena, whilst Calepine
 By Turpine is oppress.

TRUE is, that whilome that good poet sayd,
 The gentle minde by gentle deeds is knowne:
 For a man by nothing is so well bewrayd
 As by his manners; in which plaine is showne
 Of what degree and what race he is growne:
 For seldome seene a trotting stalion get
 An ambling colt, that is his proper owne:
 So seldome scene that one in basenesse set
 Doth noble courage shew with curteous manners met.

But evermore contráry hath bene tryde,
 That gentle blood will gentle manners breed;
 As well may be in Calidore descryde,
 By late ensample of that courteous deed
 Done to that wounded knight in his great need.
 Whom on his backe he bore, till he him brought
 Unto the castle where they had decreed:
 There of the knight, the which that castle ought,
 To make abode that night he greatly was besought,

He was to weete a man of full ripe yeares,
 That in his youth had beene of mickle might,
 And borne great sway in armes among his peares!
 But now weake age had dimd his candlelight:
 Yet was he courteous still to every wight,
 And loved all that did to armes incline;
 And was the father of that wounded knight,
 Whom Calidore thus carried on his chine;
 And Aldus was his name; and his sonnes, Aladine.

Who when he saw his sonne so ill bedight
 With bleeding wounds, brought home upon a beare
 By a faire lady and a straunger knight,
 Was inly touched with compassion deare,
 And deare affection of so dolefull dreare,
 That he these words burst forth; "Ah! sory boy!
 Is this the hope that to my hoary heare
 Thou brings? aie me! is this the timely ioy,
 Which I expected long, now turnd to sad annoy?"

"Such is the weakenesse of all mortall hope,
 So tickle is the state of earthly things;
 That, ere they come unto their aymed scope,
 They fall too short of our fraile reckonings,
 And bring us bale and bitter sorrowings,
 Instead of comfort which we should embrace:
 This is the state of keasars and of kings!
 Let none therefore, that is in meaner place,
 Too greatly grieve at any his unlucky case;"

So well and wisely did that good old knight
 Temper his griefe, and turned it to cheare,
 To cheare his guests whom he had stayd that night,
 And make their welcome to them well appeare:
 That to Sir Calidore was easie geare;
 But that faire lady would be heard for nought,
 But sigh'd and sorrow'd for her lover deare,
 And inly did afflict her pensive thought
 With thinking to what case her name should now be brought.

For she was daughter to a noble lord
 Which dwelt thereby, who sought her to affy
 To a great pere; but she did disaccord,
 Ne could her liking to his love apply,
 But lov'd this fresh young knight who dwelt her ny,
 The lusty Aladine, though meaner borne
 And of less livelood and hability,
 Yet full of valour the which did adorne
 His meanesse much, and make her th' others riches scorne.

So, having both found fit occasion,
 They met together in that luckelesse glade;
 Where that proud knight in his presumption
 The gentle Aladine did earst invade,
 Being unarm'd and set in secret shade.
 Whereof she now bethinking, gan t' advize
 How great a hazard she at earst had made
 Of her good fame; and further gan devize
 How she the blame might salve with coloured disguise.

But Calidore with all good courtesie
 Fain'd her to frolicke, and to put away
 The pensive fit of her melánocholie;
 And that old knight by all meanes did assay
 To make them both as merry as he may.
 So they the evening past till time of rest;
 When Calidore in seemly good array
 Unto his bowre was brought, and there undrest
 Did sleepe all night through weary travell of his quest.

But faire Priscilla (so that lady hight)
 Would to no bed, nor take no kindly sleepe,
 But by her wounded love did watch all night,
 And all the night for bitter anguish weepe,
 And with her teares his wounds did wash and steepe,
 So well she washt them, and so well she watcht him,
 That of the deadly swound, in which full deepe
 He drenched was, she at the length dispatcht him,
 And drove away the stound which mortally attacht him.

The morrow next, when day gan to uplooke,
 He also gan uplooke with drery eye,
 Like one that out of deadly dreame awooke:
 Where when he saw his faire Priscilla by,
 He deeply sigh'd, and groaned inwardly,
 To thinke of this ill state in which she stood;
 To which she for his sake had weetingly
 Now brought herselfe, and blam'd her noble blood:
 For first, next after life, he tendered her good.

Which she perceiving did with plenteous teares
 His care more then her owne compassionate,
 Forgetfull of her owne to minde his teares:
 So both conspiring gan to intimate
 Each others grieffe with zeale affectionate,
 And twixt them twaine with equall care to cast
 How to save whole her hazarded estate;
 For which the onely helpe now left them last
 Seem'd to be Calidore: all other helpes were past.

Him they did deeme, as sure to them he seemed,
 A courteous knight and full of faithfull trust;
 Therefore to him their cause they best esteemed
 Whole to commit, and to his dealing iust.
 Earely, so soone as Titans beames forth brust
 Through the thicke clouds, in which they steeped lay
 All night in darknesse, duld with yron rust,
 Calidore rising up as fresh as day
 Gan freshly him addressse unto his former way.

But first him seemed fit that wounded knight
 To visite, after this nights perillous passe;
 And to salute him if he were in plight,
 And eke that lady his faire lovely lasse.
 There he him found much better then he was,
 And moved speach to him of things of course,
 The anguish of his paine to over-passe;
 Mongst which he namely did to him discourse
 Of former daies mishap, his sorrowes wicked sourse

Of which occasion Aldine taking hold
 Gan breake to him the fortunes of his love,
 And all his disadvantages to unfold;
 That Calidore it nearly deepe did move
 In th' end, his kyndly courtesie to prove;
 He him by all the bands of love besought,
 And as it mote a faithfull friend behove,
 To safe-conduct his love, and not for ought
 To leave, till to her fathers house he had her brought.

Sir Calidore his faith thereto did plight
 It to performe: so after little stay,
 That she herselfe had to the journey dight,
 He passed forth with her in faire array,
 Fearlesse who ought did thinke or ought did say,
 Sith his own thought he knew most cleare from wite.
 So, as they past together on their way,
 He gan devise this counter-cast of slight,
 To give faire colour to that ladies cause in sight.

Streight to the carkasse of that knight he went,
 (The cause of all this evill, who was slaine
 The day before by iust avengement
 Of noble Tristram,) where it did remaine;
 There he the necke thereof did cut in twaine,
 And tooke with him the head, the signe of shame.
 So forth he passed thorough that daies paine,
 Till to that ladies fathers house he came;
 Most pensive man, through feare what of his childe became.

There he arriving boldly did present
 The fearefull lady to her father deare,
 Most perfect pure, and guiltless innocent
 Of blame, as he did on his knighthood sweare,
 Since first he saw her, and did free from feare
 Of a discourteous knight, who her had reft
 And by outrageous force away did beare:
 Witness thereof he shew'd his head there left,
 And wretched life forlorne for vengeance of his theft.

Most ioyfull man her sire was, her to see,
 And hear th' adventure of her late mischaunce;
 And thousand thanks to Calidore for fee
 Of his large paines in her deliveraunce
 Did yeeld; ne lesse the lady did advaunce,
 Thus having her restored trustily,
 As he had vow'd, some small continuance
 He there did make, and then most carefully
 Unto his first exploite he did himselfe apply.

So, as he was pursuing of his quest,
 He chaunst to come whereas a iolly knight
 • In covert shade himselfe did safely rest,
 To solace with his lady in delight:
 His warlike armes he had from him undight;
 For that himselfe he thought from daunger free,
 And far from envious eyes that mote him spight:
 And eke the lady was full faire to see,
 And courteous withall, becomming her degree.

To whom Sir Calidore approaching nye,
 Ere they were well aware of living wight,
 Them much abasht, but more himselfe thereby,
 That he so rudely did upon them light,
 And troubled had their quiet loves delight:
 Yet since it was his fortune, not his fault,
 Himselfe thereof he labour'd to acquite,
 And pardon crav'd for his so rash default,
 That he gainst courtesie so fowly did default.

With which his gentle words and goodly wit
 He soone allayd that knights conceiv'd displeasure,
 That he besought him downe by him to sit,
 That they mote treat of things abroad at leasure
 And of adventures, which had in his measure
 Of so long waies to him befallen late.
 So downe he sate, and with delightfull pleasure
 His long adventures gan to him relate
 Which he endured had through daungerous debate.

Of which whilest they discoursed both together,
 The faire Serena (so his lady hight)
 Allur'd with myldnesse of the gentle wether
 And plesaunce of the place, the which was dight
 With divers flowres distinct with rare delight,
 Wandred about the fields, as liking led
 Her wavering lust after her wandring sight,
 To make a garland to adorne her hed,
 Without suspect of ill or daungers hidden dred.

All sodainely out of the Forrest nere
 The blatant beast forth rushing unaware
 Caught her thus loosely wandring here and there,
 And in his wide great mouth away her bare
 Crying aloud to shew her sad misfare
 Unto the knights, and calling oft for ayde;
 Who with the horror of her haplesse care
 Hastily starting up, like men dismayde,
 Ran after fast to reskue the distressed mayde.

The beast, with their pursuit incited more,
 Into the wood was bearing her apace
 For to have spoyled her; when Calidore,
 Who was more light of foote and swift in chace,
 Him overtooké in midst of his race;
 And, fiercely charging him with all his might,
 Forst to forgoe his pray there in the place,
 And to betake himselfe to fearefull flight;
 For he durst not abide with Calidore to fight.

Who nathëllesse, when he the lady saw
 There left on ground, though in full evill plight,
 Yet knowing that her knight now neare did draw,
 Staide not to succour her in that affright,
 But follow'd fast the monster in his flight:
 Through woods and hils he follow'd him so fast,
 That he nould let him breath nor gather spright,
 But forst him gape and gaspe, with dread aghast,
 As if his lungs and lites were nigh asunder brast.

And now by this Sir Calepine, so hight,
 Came to the place where he his lady found
 In dolorous dismay and deadly plight,
 All in gore bloud there tumbled on the ground,
 Having both sides through grypt with griesly wound:
 His weapons soone from him he threw away,
 And stouping downe to her in drery swound
 Uprear'd her from the ground whereon she lay
 And in his tender armes her forced up to stay.

So well he did his busie paines apply,
 That the faint spright he did revoke againe
 To her fraile mansion of mortality:
 Then up he tooke her twixt his armes twaine,
 And setting on his steede her did sustaine
 With carefull hands, soft footing her beside;
 Till to some place of rest they mote attaine,
 Where she in safe assuraunce mote abide,
 Till she recured were of those her woundes wide.

Now whenas Phœbus with his fiery waine
 Unto his inne began to draw apace;
 Tho, waxing weary of that toylesome paine,
 In travelling on foote so long a space,
 Not wont on foote with heavy armes to trace;
 Downe in a dale forby a rivers syde
 He chaunst to spie a faire and stately place,
 To which he meant his weary steps to guyde,
 In hope there for his love some succour to provyde.

But, comming to the rivers side, he found
 That hardly passable on foote it was;
 Therefore there still he stood as in a stound,
 Ne wist which way he through the foord mote pas:
 Thus whilest he was in this distressed case,
 Devising what to doe, he nigh espyde
 An armed knight approaching to the place
 With a faire lady lincked by his syde.
 The which themselves prepard thorough the foord to ride.

Whom Calepine saluting, as became,
 Besought of courtesie, in that his neede,
 For safe conducting of his sickely dame
 Through that same perillous foord with better heede,
 To take him up behinde upon his steed:
 To whom that other did this taunt returne;
 "Perdy, thou peasant knight mightst rightly reed
 Me then to be full base and evill borne,
 If I would beare behinde a burden of such scorne.

"But, as thou hast thy steed forlorne with shame,
 So fare on foote till thou another gayne,
 And let thy lady likewise doe the same,
 Or beare her on thy backe with pleasing payne,
 And prove thy manhood on the billowes vayne."
 With which rude speach his lady much displeased
 Did him reprove, yet could him not restrayne,
 And would on her owne palfrey him have eased
 For pittie of his dame whom she saw so diseased.

Sir Calepine her thanckt; yet, inly wroth
 Against her knight, her gentlenesse refused,
 And carelesly into the river go'th,
 As in despight to be so fowle abused
 Of a rude churle, whom often he accused
 Of fowle discourtesie, unfit for knight;
 And, strongly wading through the waves unused,
 With speare in th' one hand stayd himselfe upright,
 With th' other staide his lady up with steddy might.

And all the while that same discourteous knight
 Stood on the further bancke beholding him;
 At whose calamity, for more despight,
 He laught, and mockt to see him like to swim.
 But whenas Calepine came to the brim,
 And saw his carriage past that perill well,
 Looking at that same carle with count'nance grim,
 His heart with vengeance inwardly did swell,
 And forth at last did breake in speeches sharp and fell:

"Unknightly knight, the blemish of that name,
 And blot of all that armes uppon them take,
 Which is the badge of honour and of fame,
 Loe! I defie thee; and here challenge make,
 That thou for ever doe those armes forsake,
 And be for ever held a recreant knight,
 Unlesse thou dare, for thy deare ladies sake
 And for thine owne defence, on foote alight
 To iustifie thy fault gainst me in equall fight."

The dastard, that did heare himselfe defyde,
 Seem'd not to weigh his threatfull words at all,
 But laught them out, as if his greater pryde
 Did scorne the challenge of so base a thrall;
 Or had no courage, or else had no gall.
 So much the more was Calepine offended,
 That him to no revenge he forth could call,
 But both his challenge and himselfe contemned,
 Ne cared as a coward so to be condemned.

But he, nought weighing what he sayd or did,
 Turned his steede about another way,
 And with his lady to the castle rid,
 Where was his won; ne did the other stay,
 But after went directly as he may,
 For his sicke charge some harbour there to seeko;
 Where he arriving with the fall of day
 Drew to the gate, and there with prayers meeke
 And myld entreaty lodging did for her beseeke.

But the rude porter that no manners had
 Did shut the gate against him in his face
 And entraunce boldly unto him forbad:
 Nath'lesse the knight, now in so needy case,
 Gan him entreat even with submission base,
 And humbly praid to let them in that night:
 Who to him aunswer'd, that there was no place
 Of lodging fit for any errant knight,
 Unlesse that with his lord he formerly did fight.

"Full loth am I," quoth he, "as now at earst
 When day is spent, and rest us needeth most,
 And that this lady, both whose sides are pearst
 With wounds, is ready to forgo the ghost;
 Ne would I gladly combate with mine host,
 That should to me such curtesie afford,
 Unlesse that I were thereunto enforst:
 But yet aread to me, how hight thy lord,
 That doth thus strongly ward the castle of the ford."

"His name," quoth he, "if that thou list to learne,
Is hight Sir Turpine, one of mickle might
And manhood rare, but terrible and stearne
In all assaies to every errant knight,
Because of one that wrought him fowle despight."
"Ill seemes," sayd he, "if he so valiaunt be,
That he should be so sterne to stranger wight:
For seldome yet did living creature see
That curtesie and manhood ever disagree.

"But go thy waies to him, and fro me say
That here is at his gate an errant knight,
That house-rome craves; yet would be loth t' assay
The prooffe of battell now in doubtfull night,
Or curtesie with rudenesse to requite:
Yet, if he needes will fight, crave leave till morne,
And tell withall the lamentable plight
In which this lady languisheth forlorne,
That pittie craves, as he of woman was yborne."

The groome went streightway in, and to his lord
Declar'd the message which that knight did move;
Who, sitting with his lady then at bord,
Not onely did not his demaund approve,
But both himselfe revil'd and eke his love;
Albe his lady, that Blandina hight,
Him of ungentle usage did reprove,
And earnestly entreated that they might
Finde favour to be lodged there for that same night.

Yet would he not perswaded be for ought,
Ne from his currish will awhit reclame.
Which answer when the groome returning brought
To Calepine, his heart did inly flame
With wrathfull fury for so foule a shame,
That he could not thereof avenged bee;
But most for pittie of his dearest dame,
Whom now in deadly daunger he did see;
Yet had no meanes to comfort, nor procure her glee.

But all in vaine; for why? no remedy
He saw the present mischiefe to redresse,
But th' utmost end perforce for to aby,
Which that nights fortune would for him addresse.
So downe he tooke his lady in distresse,
And layd her underneath a bush to sleepe,
Cover'd with cold, and wrapt in wretchednesse;
Whiles he himselfe all night did nought but weepe,
And wary watch about her for her safeguard keepe.

The morrow next, so soone as ioyous day
 Did shew itselfe in sunny beames bedight,
 Serena full of dolorous dismay,
 Twixt darknesse dread and hope of living light,
 Upheard her head to see that cheareful sight.
 Then Calepine, however inly wroth,
 And greedy to avenge that vile despight,
 Yet for the feeble ladies sake, full loth
 To make their lenger stay, forth on his iourney go'th.

He go'th on foote all armed by her side,
 Upstaying still herselfe uppon her steede,
 Being unhable else alone to ride;
 So sore her sides, so much her wounds did bleede:
 Till that at length, in his extreamest neede,
 He chaunst far off an armed knight to spy
 Pursuing him apace with greedy speede;
 Whom well he wist to be some enemy,
 That meant to make advantage of his misery.

Wherefore he stayd, till that he nearer drew,
 To weet what issue would thereof betyde:
 Tho, whenas he approched nigh in vew,
 By certaine signes he plainly him descryde
 To be the man that with such scornfull pryde
 Had him abusde and shamed yesterday:
 Therefore, misdoubting least he should misguyde
 His former malice to some new assay,
 He cast to keepe himselfe so safely as he may.

By this the other came in place likewise,
 And couching close his speare and all his powre,
 As bent to some malicious enterprise,
 He bad him stand t' abide the bitter stoure
 Of his sore vengeaunce, or to make avoure
 Of the lewd words and deedes which he had done
 With that ran at him, as he would deuoure
 His life attonce; who nought could do but shun
 The perill of his pride, or else be over-run.

Yet he him still pursew'd from place to place,
 With full intent him cruelly to kill.
 And like a wilde goate round about did chace
 Flying the fury of his bloudy will;
 But his best succour and refuge was still
 Behind his ladies back; who to him cryde,
 And called oft with prayers loud and shrill,
 As ever he to lady was affyde,
 To spare her knight, and rest with reason pacifyde.

But he the more thereby enraged was,
 And with more eager felnesse him pursew'd;
 So that at length, after long weary chace,
 Having by chaunce a close advantage vew'd,
 He over-raught him, having long eschew'd
 His violence in vaine; and with his spere
 Strooke through his shoulder, that the blood essew'd
 In great aboundance, as a well it were,
 That forth out of an hill fresh gushing did appere.

Yet ceast he not for all that cruell wound,
 But chaste him still for all his ladies cry;
 Not satisfyde till on the fatall ground
 He saw his life powrd forth despitously;
 The which was certes in great ieopardy,
 Had not a wondrous chaunce his reskue wrought,
 And saved from his cruell villany,
 Such chaunces oft exceed all humaine thought:
 That in another canto shall to end be brought.

CANTO IV.

Calepine by a salvage man
 From Turpine reskewed is;
 And, whylest an infant from a beare
 He saves, his love doth misse.

LIKE as a ship with dreadfull storme long tost,
 Having spent all her mastes and her groundhold,
 Now farre from harbour likely to be lost,
 At last some fisher-barke doth neare behold,
 That giveth comfort to her courage cold;
 Such was the state of this most courteous knight
 Being oppressed by that faytour bold,
 That he remayned in most perilous plight,
 And his sad ladie left in pitifull affright:

Till that, by fortune passing all foresight,
 A salvage man, which in those woods did wonne,
 Drawne with that ladies loud and piteous shrigh
 Toward the same incessantly did ron
 To understand what there was to be donne:
 There he this most discourteous craven found
 As fiercely yet, as when he first begonne,
 Chasing the gentle Calepine around,
 Ne sparing him the more for all his grievous wound.

The salvage man, that never till this houre
 Did taste of pittie, neither gentlesse knew,
 Seeing his sharpe assault and cruell stoure
 Was much emmoved at his perils vew,
 That even his ruder hart began to rew,
 And feele compassion of his evill plight,
 Against his foe that did him so pursew;
 From whom he meant to free him, if he might,
 And him avenge of that so villenous despight.

Yet armes or weapon had he none to fight,
 Ne knew the use of warlike instruments,
 Save such as sudden rage him lent to smite;
 But naked, without needfull vestiments
 To clad his corpse with meete habiliments,
 He cared not for dint of sword nor speere,
 No more then for the stroke of straws or bents:
 For from his mothers wombe, which him did beare,
 He was invulnerable made by magicke leare.

He stayed not t'advize which way were best
 His foe t'assayle, or how himselfe to gard,
 But with fierce fury and with force infest
 Upon him ran: who being well prepard
 His first assault full warily did ward,
 And with the push of his sharp-pointed speare
 Full on the breast him strooke, so strong and hard
 That forst him backe recoyle and reele areare;
 Yet in his bodie made no wound nor bloud appeare.

With that the wyld man more enraged grew,
 Like to a tygre that hath mist his pray,
 And with mad moode againe upon him flew,
 Regarding neither speare that mote him slay,
 Nor his fierce steed that mote him much dismay:
 The salvage nation doth all dread despize:
 Tho on his shield he griple hold did lay,
 And held the same so hard, that by no wize
 He could him force to loose, or leave his enterprize.

Long did he wrest and wring it to and fro,
 And every way did try, but all in vaine;
 For he would not his greedie grype forgoe,
 But hayld and puld with all his might and maine,
 That from his steed him nigh he drew againe:
 Who having now no use of his long speare
 So nigh at hand, nor force his shield to straine,
 Both speare and shield, as things that needlesse were,
 He quite forsooke, and fled himselfe away for feare.

But after him the wyld man ran apace,
And him pursewed with impórtune speed,
For he was swift as any bucke in chace;
And, had he not in his extreamest need
Bene helped through the swiftnesse of his steed,
He had him overtaken in his flight,
Who, ever as he saw him nigh succeed,
Gan cry aloud with horrible affright,
And shrieked out; a thing uncomely for a knight.

But, when the salvage saw his labour vaine
In following of him that fled so fast,
He wearie woxe, and backe return'd againe
With speede unto the place, whereas he last
Had left that couple nere their utmost east:
There he that knight full sorely bleeding found
And eke the ladie fearefully aghast,
Both for the perill of the present stound,
And also for the sharpnesse of her rankling wound.

For though she were right glad so rid to bee
From that vile lozell which her late offended;
Yet now no lesse encombrance she did see
And perill, by this salvage man pretended;
Gainst whom she saw no meanes to be defended
By reason that her knight was wounded sore:
Therefore herselfe she wholly recommended
To Gods sole grace, whom she did oft implore
To send her succour, being of all hope forelo.

But the wyld man, contrárie to her feare,
Came to her creeping like a fawning hound,
And by rude tokens made to her appeare
His deepe compassion of her dolefull stound,
Kissing his hands, and crouching to the ground;
For other language had he none nor speach,
But a soft murmure and confused sound
Of senselesse words (which nature did him teach
T' expresse his passions) which his reason did empeach:

And comming likewise to the wounded knight
When he beheld the streames of purple blood
Yet flowing fresh, as moved with the sight,
He made great mone after his salvage mood;
And, running streight into the thickest wood,
A certaine herbe from thence unto him brought,
Whose vertue he by use well understood;
The iuyce whereof into his wound he wrought,
And stopt the bleeding straight, ere he it stauched thought.

Then taking up that recreants shield and speare,
 Which earst he left, he signes unto them made
 With him to wend unto his winning neare;
 To which he easily did them perswade.
 Farre in the forrest, by a hollow glade
 Covered with mossie shrubs, which spredding brode
 Did underneath them make a gloomy shade,
 Where foot of living creature never trode, [abode.
 Ne scarce wyld beasts durst come, there was this wights

Thither he brought these unacquainted guests;
 To whom faire semblance, as he could, he shewed
 By signes, by lookes, and all his other gests:
 But the bare ground with hoarie mosse bestrowed
 Must be their bed; their pillow was unsowed;
 And the frutes of the forrest was their feast:
 For their bad stuard neither plough'd nor sowed,
 Ne fed on flesh, ne ever of wyld beast
 Did taste the bloud, obeying natures first behest.

Yet, howsoever base and meane it were,
 They tooke it well, and thanked God for all,
 Which had them freed from that deadly feare,
 And sav'd from being to that caytive thrall.
 Here they of force (as fortune now did fall)
 Compelled were themselves awhile to rest,
 Glad of that easement, though it were but small;
 That, having there their wounds awhile redrest,
 They mote the abler be to passe unto the rest.

During which time that wyld man did apply
 His best endeavour and his daily paine
 In seeking all the woods both farre and nye
 For herbes to dresse their wounds; still seeming faine
 When ought he did, that did their lyking gaine.
 So as ere long he had that knightes wound
 Recured well, and made him whole againe:
 But that same ladies hurts no herbe he found
 Which could redresse, for it was inwardly unsound.

Now whenas Calepine was woxen strong,
 Upon a day he cast abroad to wend,
 To take the ayre and heare the thrushes song,
 Unarm'd, as fearing neither foe nor frend,
 And without sword his person to defend;
 There him befell, unlooked for before,
 An hard adventure with unhappie end,
 A cruell beare, the which an infant bore,
 Betwixt his bloodie iawes, besprinckled all with gore.

The litle babe did loudly serike and squall,
 And all the woods with piteous plaints did fill,
 As if his cry did meane for to helpe to call
 To Calepine, whose eares those shrieches shrill,
 Percing his hart, with pitics point did thrill;
 That after him he ran with zealous haste
 To rescue th' infant, ere he did him kill:
 Whom though he saw now somewhat overpast,
 Yet by the cry he follow'd, and pursewed fast.

Well then him chaunst his heavy armes to want,
 Whose burden mote impeach his needful speed,
 And hinder him from libertie to pant:
 For having long time, as his deadly weed,
 Them wont to weare, and wend on foot for need,
 Now wanting them he felt himselfe so light,
 That like an hauke, which feeling herselfe freed
 From bels and iessies which did let her flight,
 Him seem'd his feet did fly and in their speed delight.

So well he sped him, that the wearie beare
 Ere long he overtooke and forst to stay;
 And, without weapon him assayling neare,
 Compeld him soone the spoyle adowne to lay.
 Wherewith the beast enrag'd to loose his pray
 Upon him turned, and, with greedie force
 And furie, to be crossed in his way,
 Gaping full wyde, did thinke without remorse
 To be aveng'd on him, and to deuoure his corse.

But the bold knight no whit thereat dismayd,
 But catching up in hand a ragged stone
 Which lay thereby (so fortune him did ayde)
 Upon him ran, and thrust it all attone
 Into his gaping throte, that made him grone
 And gaspe for breath, that he nigh choked was,
 Being unable to digest that bone;
 Ne could it upward come, nor downward passe.
 Ne could he brocke the coldnesse of the stony masse.

Whom whenas he thus combred did behold,
 Stryving in vaine that nigh his bowels brast,
 He with him closd, and, laying mightie hold
 Upon his throte, did gripe his gorge so fast,
 That wanting breath him downe to ground he cast;
 And, then oppressing him with urgent paine,
 Ere long enforst to breath his utmost blast,
 Gnashing his cruell teeth at him in vaine, [straine.
 And threatning his sharpe clawes, now wanting powre to

Then tooke he up betwixt his armes twaine
 The little babe, sweet reliques of his pray;
 Whom pitying to heare so sore complaine,
 From his soft eyes the teares he wypt away,
 And from his face the filth that did it ray;
 And every little limbe he searcht around,
 And every part that under sweath-bands lay,
 Least that the beasts sharpe teeth had any wound
 Made in his tender flesh; but whole them all he found.

So, having all his bands againe uptyde,
 He with him thought backe to returne againe;
 But when he lookt about on every syde,
 To weete which way were best to entertaine
 To bring him to the place where he would faine,
 He could no path nor tract of foot desery,
 Ne by inquirie learne, nor ghesse by ayme;
 For nought but woods and forrests farre and nye,
 That all about did close the compasse of his eye.

Much was he then encombred, ne could tell
 Which way to take: now west he went awhile,
 Then north, then neither, but as fortune fell:
 So up and downe he wandred many a mile
 With wearie travell and uncertaine toile,
 Yet nought the nearer to his iourneys end;
 And evermore his lovely little spoile
 Crying for food did greatly him offend:
 So all that day, in wandring, vainely he did spend.

At last, about the setting of the sunne,
 Himselfe out of the forest he did wynd,
 And by good fortune the plaine champion wonne:
 Where, looking all about where he mote tynd
 Some place of succour to content his mynd,
 At length he heard under the forrests syde
 A voice, that seemed of some womankynd,
 Which to herselfe lamenting loudly cryde,
 And oft complayn'd of fate, and fortune oft defyde.

To whom approaching, whenas she perceived
 A stranger wight in place, her plaint she stayd,
 As if she doubted to have bene deceived,
 Or loth to let her sorrowes be bewrayd:
 Whom whenas Calepine saw so dismayd,
 He to her drew, and, with faire blandishment
 Her chearing up, thus gently to her said:
 "What be you, wofull dame, which thus lament,
 And for what cause, declare; so mote ye not repent.

To whom she thus ; "What need me, sir, to tell
 That which yourself have earst aared so right?
 A wofull dame ye have me termed well ;
 So much more wofull, as my wofull plight
 Cannot redressed be by living wight!"
 "Nathlesse," quoth he, "if need doe not you bynd,
 Doe it disclose, to ease your grieved spright:
 Oftimes it haps that sorrowes of the mynd
 Find remedie unsought, which seeking cannot fynd."

Then thus began the lamentable dame ;
 "Sith then ye needs will know the grieve I hoord,
 I am th' unfortunate Matilde by name,
 The wife of bold Sir Bruin, who is lord
 Of all this land, late conquer'd by his sword
 From a great gyant, called Cormoraunt,
 Whom he did overthrow by yonder foord;
 And in three battailes did so deadly daunt,
 That he dare not returne for all his daily vaunt.

"So is my lord now seiz'd of all the land,
 As in his fee, with peaceable estate,
 And quietly doth hold it in his hand,
 Ne any dares with him for it debate:
 But to these happie fortunes cruell fate
 Hath ioyn'd one evill, which doth overthrow
 All this our ioyes, and all our blisse abate;
 And like in time to further ill to grow,
 And all this land with endlesse losse to over-flow.

"For th' heavens, envying our prosperitie,
 Have not vouchsaft to graunt unto us twaine
 The gladfull blessing of posteritie,
 Which we might see after ourselves remaine
 In th' heritage of our unhappie paine:
 So that for want of heires it to defend,
 All is in time like to returne againe
 To that foule feend, who dayly doth attend
 To leape into the same after our lives end.

"But most my lord is grieved herewithall,
 And makes exceeding mone, when he does thinke
 That all this land unto his foe shall fall,
 For which he long in vaine did sweat and swinke,
 That now the same he greatly doth forthinke.
 Yet was it sayd, *there should to him a sonne
 Be gotten, not begotten; which should drinke
 And dry up all the water which doth ronne
 In the next brooke, by whom that feend should be fordonne.*

"Well hop't he then, when this was propheside,
 That from his sides some noble chyld should rize,
 The which through fame should farre be magnifide,
 And this proud gyant should with brave emprize
 Quite overthrow, who now ginnes to despize
 The good Sir Bruin growing farre yn years,
 Who thinkes from me his sorrow all doth rize.
 Lo! this my cause of grieve to you appeares; [teares."
 For which I thus doe mourne, and poure forth ceaselesse

Which when he heard, he inly touched was
 With tender ruth for her unworthy grieve;
 And, when he had devized of her case,
 He gan in mind conceive a fit reliefe
 For all her paine, if please her make the prieve:
 And, having cheared her, thus said; "Faire Dame,
 In evils counsell is the comfort chiefe;
 Which though I be not wise enough to frame,
 Yet, as I well it meane, vouchsafe it without blame.

"If that the cause of this your languishment
 Be lacke of children to supply your place,
 Lo! how good fortune doth to you present
 This litle babe, of sweete and lovely face,
 And spotlesse spirit in which ye may enchace
 Whatever formes ye list thereto apply,
 Being now soft and fit them to embrace;
 Whether ye list him traine in chevalry,
 Or nourle up in lore of learn'd philosophy.

"And, certes, it hath oftentimes bene scene,
 That of the like, whose linage was unknowne,
 More brave and noble knights have rayased beene
 (As their victorious deedes have often shoven,
 Being with fame through many nations blowen.)
 Then those which have bene dandled in the lap.
 Therefore some thought that those brave imps were sown
 Here by the gods, and fed with heavenly sap,
 That made them grow so high t' all honorable hap."

The ladie, hearkning to his sensefull speach,
 Found nothing that he said unmeet nor geason,
 Having oft scene it tryde as he did teach:
 Therefore inclyning to his goodly reason, ●
 Agreeing well both with the place and season,
 She gladly did of that same babe accept,
 As of her owne by liverey and seisin;
 And, having over it a litle wept,
 She bore it thence, and ever as her owne it kept.

Right glad was Calepine to be so rid
 Of his young charge whereof he skilled nought;
 Ne she lesse glad; for she so wisely did,
 And with her husband under hand so wrought,
 That when that infant unto him she brought,
 She made him think it surely was his owne;
 And it in goodly thewes so well upbrought,
 That it became a famous knight well knowne,
 And did right noble deedes; the which elsewhere are showne.

But Calepine, now being left alone
 Under the greenewoods side in sorie plight,
 Withouten armes or steede to ride upon,
 Or house to hide his head from heavens spight;
 Albe that dame, by all the meanes she might,
 Him oft desired home with her to wend,
 And offred him, his courtesie to requite
 Both horse and armes and whatso else to lend,
 Yet he them all refusd, though thankd her as a frend,

And, for exceeding griefe which inly grew,
 That he his love so lucklesse now had lost,
 On the cold ground maugre himselfe he threw
 For fell despight, to be so sorely crost;
 And there all night himselfe in anguish tost,
 Vowing that never he in bed againe
 His limbes would rest, ne lig in ease embost,
 Till that his ladies sight he mote attaine,
 Or understand that she in safetie did remaine.

CANTO V.

The salvage serves Serena well,
 Till she Prince Arthure synd;
 Who her, together with his squire,
 With th' Hermit leaves behynd.

O WHAT an easie thing is to descry
 The gentle bloud, however it be wrapt
 In sad misfortunes foule deformity
 And wretched sorrowes, which have often hapt!
 For howsoever it may grow mis-shapt,
 Like this wyld man being undisciplynd,
 That to all vertue it may seeme unapt;
 Yet will it shew some sparkes of gentle mynd,
 And at the last breake forth in his owne proper kynd.

That plainely may in this wyld man be red,
 Who, though he were still in this desert wood,
 Mongst salvage beasts, both rudely borne and bred,
 Ne'ever saw faire guize, ne learned good,
 Yet shewd some token of his gentle blood
 By gentle usage of that wretched dame:
 For certes he was borne of noble blood,
 However by hard hap he hether came;
 As ye may know, when time shall be to tell the same.

Who, whenas now long time he lacked had
 The good Sir Calepine, that farre was strayd
 Did wexe exceeding sorrowfull and sad,
 As he of some misfortune were afrajd;
 And, leaving there this ladie all dismayd,
 Went forth streightway into the forrest wyde
 To seeke if he perchance asleep were layd,
 Or whatso else were unto him betyde:
 He sought him farre and neare, yet him no where he spyde.

Tho, backe returning to that sorie dame,
 He shewed semblant of exceeding mone
 By speaking signes, as he them best could frame,
 Now wringing both his wretched hands in one,
 Now beating his hard head upon a stone,
 That ruth it was to see him so lament:
 By which she well perceiving what was done,
 Gan teare her hayre, and all her garments rent,
 And beat her breast, and piteously herselfe torment.

Upon the ground herselfe she fiercely threw,
 Regardlesse of her wounds yet bleeding rife,
 That with their bloud did all the flore imbrew,
 As if her breast new launcht with murtherous knife
 Would streight dislodge the wretched wearie life:
 There she long groveling and deepe groning lay,
 As if her vitall powers were at strife
 With stronger death, and feared their decay:
 Such were this ladies pangs and dolorous assay.

Whom when the salvage saw so sore distrest,
 He reared her up from the bloudie ground,
 And sought, by all the meanes that he could best,
 Her to recure out of that stony swound,
 And staunch the bleeding of her dreary wound:
 Yet nould she be recomforted for nought,
 Nor cease her sorrow and impatient stound,
 But day and night did vexe her carefull thought,
 And ever more and more her owne affliction wrought.

At length, whenas no hope of his retourne
 She saw now left, she cast to leave the place,
 And wend abroad, though feeble and forlorne,
 To seeke some comfort in that sorie case:
 His steede, now strong through rest so long a space
 Well as she could she got, and did bedight;
 And being thereon mounted forth did pace
 Withouten guide her to conduct aright,
 Or guard her to defend from bold oppressors might.

Whom when her host saw readie to depart,
 He would not suffer her alone to fare,
 But gan himselfe addresse to take her part.
 Those warlike armes, which Calepine whyleare
 Had left behind, he gan eftsoones prepare,
 And put them all about himselfe unfit,
 His shield, his helmet, and his curats bare,
 But without sword upon his thigh to sit;
 Sir Calepine himselfe away had hidden it.

So forth they traveld an uneven payre,
 That mote to all men seeme an uncouth sight;
 A salvage man matcht with a ladie fayre
 That rather seem'd the conquest of his might
 Gotten by spoyle then purchaced aright:
 But he did her attend most carefully,
 And faithfully did serve both day and night
 Withouten thought of shame or villeny,
 Ne ever shewed signe of foule disloyalty.

Upon a day, as on their way they went,
 It chaunst some furniture about her steed
 To be disordred by some accident;
 Which to redresse she did th' assistance need-
 Of this her groome; which he by signes did reede;
 And streight his combrous armes aside did lay
 Upon the ground, withouten doubt or dreed;
 And, in his homely wize, began to assay
 T'amend what was amisse, and put in right aray.

Bout which whilest he was busied thus hard,
 Lo! where a knight, together with his squire,
 All arm'd to point came ryding thetherward;
 Which seemed, by their portance and attire,
 To be two errant knights, that did inquire
 After adventures, where they mote them get:
 Those were to weet (if that ye it require)
 Prince Arthur and young Timias, which met
 By straunge occasion, that here needs forth be set.

After that Timias had againe recured
 The favour of Belphebe, as ye heard,
 And of her grace did stand againe assured,
 To happie blisse he was full high uprear'd,
 Nether of envy nor of chaunge afeard:
 Though many foes did him maligne therefore,
 And with uniuert detraction him did beard;
 Yet he himselfe so well and wisely bore,
 That in her souveraine lyking he dwelt evermore.

But, of them all which did his ruine seeke,
 Three mightie enemies did him most despight,
 Three mightie ones, and cruell minded ecke,
 That him not onely sought by open might
 To overthrow, but to supplant by slight:
 The first of them by name was cald Despetto,
 Exceeding all the rest in powre and hight;
 The second, not so strong but wise, Decetto;
 The third, nor strong nor wise but spightfullest, Defetto.

Oftimes their sundry powres they did employ,
 And several deceipts, but all in vaine;
 For neither they by force could him destroy,
 Ne yet entrap in treasons subtile traine:
 Therefore, conspiring all together plaine,
 They did their counsels now in one compound
 Where singled forces faile, conioynd may gaine.
 The blatant beast the fittest meanes they found
 To worke his utter shame, and throughly him confound.

Upon a day, as they the time did waite
 When he did raunge the wood for salvage game,
 They sent that blatant beast to be a baite
 To draw him from his deare beloved dame
 Unwares into the daunger of defame:
 For well they wist that squire to be so bold,
 That no one beast in forrest wyld or tame
 Met him in chase, but he it challenge would,
 And plucke the pray oftimes out of their greedy hould.

The hardy boy, as they devised had,
 Seeing the ugly monster passing by,
 Upon him set, of perill nought adrad,
 Ne skilfull of the uncouth ieopardy;
 And charged him so fierce and furiously,
 That, his great force unable to endure,
 He forced was to turne from him and fly:
 Yet, ere he fled, he with his tooth impure
 Him heedlesse bit, the whiles he was thereof secure.

Securely he did after him pursew,
 Thinking by speed to overtake his flight;
 Who through thicke woods and brakes and briers him drew,
 To weary him the more and waste his spight,
 So that he now had almost spent his spright;
 Till that at length unto a woody glade
 He came, whose covert stopt his further sight;
 There his three foes shrowded in guilefull shade
 Out of their ambush broke, and gan him to invade.

Sharpely they all attonce did him assaile,
 Burning with inward rancour and despight,
 And heaped strokes did round about him haile
 With so huge force, that seemed nothing might
 Beare off their blowes from piercing thorough quite:
 Yet he them all so warily did ward,
 That none of them in his soft flesh did bite;
 And all the while his backe for best safegard
 He lent against a tree, that backward onset bard.

Like a wylde bull, that, being at a bay,
 Is bayted of a mastiffe and a hound
 And a curre-dog, that doe him sharpe assay
 On every side, and beat about him round;
 But most that curre, barking with bitter sownd,
 And creeping still behinde, doth him incoember,
 That in his chauffe he digs the trampled ground,
 And threats his horns, and bellowes like the thonder:
 So did that squire his foes disperse and drive asonder.

Him well behoved so; for his three foes
 Sought to encompassse him on every side,
 And dangerously did round about enclose:
 But, most of all. Defetto him annoyde,
 Creeping behinde him still to have destroyde;
 So did Decetto eke him circumvent;
 But stout Despetto in his greater pryde
 Did front him, face to face against him bent:
 Yet he them all withstood, and often made relent.

Till that at length nigh tyrd with former chace,
 And weary now with carefull keeping ward,
 He gan to shrinke and somewhat to give place,
 Full like ere long to have escaped hard;
 Whenas unwares he in the Forrest heard
 A trampling steede, that with his neighing fast
 Did warne his rider be uppon his gard;
 With noise whereof the squire, now nigh aghast
 Revived was, and sad dispaire away did cast.

Eftsoones he spide a knight approching nye
 Who, seeing one in so great daunger set
 Mongst many foes, himself did faster hye
 To reskue him, and his weake part abet,
 For pittie so to see him overset:
 Whom soone as his three enemies did vew,
 They fled, and fast into the wood did get:
 Him booted not to thinke them to pursew;
 The covert was so thicke, that d:d no passage shew.

Then, turning to that swaine, him well he knew
 To be his Timias, his owne true squire;
 Whereof exceeding glad, he to him drew,
 And, him embracing twixt his armes entire,
 Him thus bespake; "My liefe, my lifes desire,
 Why have ye me alone thus long yleft?
 Tell me what world's despight, or heavens yre,
 Hath you thus long away from me bereft? [weft?"
 Where have ye all this while bin wandring, where bene

With that he sighed deepe for inward tyne:
 To whom the squire nought aunswered againe,
 But, shedding few soft teares from tender eyne,
 His dear affect with silence did restraine,
 And shut up all his plaint in privy paine.
 There they awhile some gracious speeches spent,
 As to them seem'd fit time to entertaine:
 After all which up to their steedes they went,
 And forth together rode, a comely couplement.

So now they be arrived both in sight
 Of this wyld man, whom they full busie found
 About the sad Serena things to dight,
 With those brave armours lying on the ground,
 That seem'd the spoile of some right well renownd,
 Which when that squire beheld, he to them stept
 Thinking to take them from that hylding hound;
 But he it seeing lightly to him lept,
 And sternely with strong hand it from his handling kept.

Gnashing his grinded teeth with griesly looke,
 And sparkling fire out of his furious eyne.
 Him with his fist unwares on th' head he strooke,
 That made him downe unto the earth encline;
 Whence soone upstarting, much he gan repine,
 And laying hand uppon his wrathfull blade
 Thought therewithall forthwith him to have slaine;
 Who it perceiving hand upon him layd,
 And greedily him griping his avengement stayd.

With that aloude the faire Serena cryde
 Unto the knight, them to dispart in twaine;
 Who to them stepping did them soone divide,
 And did from further violence restraine,
 Albe the wyld man hardly would refraine.
 Then gan the prince of her for to demand
 What and from whence she was; and by what traine
 She fell into that salvage villaines hand;
 And whether free with him she now were, or in band.

To whom she thus; "I am, as now ye see,
 The wretchedst dame that lives this day on ground,
 Who both in minde (the which most grieveth me)
 And body have receiv'd a mortall wound,
 That hath me driven to this dreery stound.
 I was erewhile the love of Calpine;
 Who whether he alive be to be found,
 Or by some deadly chaunce be done to pine,
 Since I him lately lost, uneath is to define.

"In salvage forrest I him lost of late,
 Where I had surely long ere this bene dead,
 Or else remained in most wretched state,
 Had not this wylde man in that wofull stead
 Kept and delivered me from deadly dread.
 In such a salvage wight, of brutish kynd,
 Amongst wilde beastes in desert forrests bred,
 It is most straunge and wonderful to fynd
 So milde humanity and perfect gentle mynd.

"Let me therefore this favour for him finde,
 That ye will not your wrath upon him wreake,
 Sith he cannot expresse his simple minde,
 Ne yours conceive, ne but by tokens speake:
 Small praise to prove your powre on wight so weake!"
 With such faire words she did their heate asswage,
 And the strong course of their displeasure breake,
 That they to pitty turnd their former rage,
 And each sought to supply the office of her page.

So, having all things well about her dight,
 She on her way cast forward to proccede;
 And they her forth conducted, where they might
 Finde harbour fit to comfort her great neede:
 For now her wounds corruption gan to breed:
 And eke this squire, who likewise wounded was
 Of that same monster late, for lacke of heed
 Now gan to faint, and further could not pas
 Through feeblenesse, which all his limbes oppressed has.

So forth they rode together all in troupe
 To seeke some place, the which mote yeeld some ease
 To these sicke twaine that now began to droupe:
 And all the way the prince sought to appease
 The bitter anguish of their sharpe disease
 By all the courteous meanes he could invent;
 Somewhile with merry purpose, fit to please,
 And otherwhile with good encouragement,
 To make them to endure the pains did them torment.

Mongst which, Serena did to him relate
 The foule discourt'sies and unknightly parts,
 Which Turpine had unto her shewed late
 Without compassion of her cruell smarts:
 Although Blandina did with all her arts
 Him otherwise perswade all that she might,
 Yet he of malice, without her desarts,
 Not onely her excluded late at night,
 But also trayterously did wound her weary knight.

Wherewith the prince sore moved there avoud
 That, soone as he returned backe againe,
 He would avenge th' abuses of that proud
 And shameful knight, of whom she did complaine.
 This wize did they each other entertaîne
 To passe the tedious travell of the way;
 Till towards night they came unto a plaine,
 By which a little hermitage there lay,
 Far from all neighbourhood, the which annoy it may.

And nigh thereto a little chappel stooode,
 Which being all with yvy overspred
 Deckt all the roofe, and, shadowing the roode,
 Seem'd like a grove faire braunched over hed:
 Therein the hermite, which his life here led
 In streight observaunce of religious vow,
 Was wont his howres and holy things to bed;
 And therein he likewise was praying now,
 Whenas these knights arrived, they wist not where nor how.

They stayd not there, but streightway in did pas:
 Whom when the hermite present saw in place,
 From his devotion streight he troubled was;
 Which breaking off he toward them did pace
 With stayed steps and grave beseeming grace:
 For well it seem'd that whilome he had beene
 Some goodly person, and of gentle race,
 That could his good to all; and well did weene
 How each to entertaîne with curt'sie well beseene:

And soothly it was sayd by common fame,
 So long as age enabled him thereto,
 That he had bene a man of mickle name,
 Renowmed much in armes and derring doe:
 But being aged now, and weary to
 Of warres delight and worlds contentions toyle,
 The name of knighthood he did disavow;
 And, hanging up his armes and warlike spoyle,
 From all this worlds incombrance did himselfe assoyle.

He thence them led into his hermitage,
 Letting their steedes to graze upon the greene;
 Small was his house, and, like a little cage,
 For his owne turne; yet inly neate and clene,
 Deckt with greene boughes and flowers gay besene:
 Therein he them full faire did entertaine
 Not with such forged shewes, as fitter beene
 For courting fooles that curtesies would faine
 But with entire affection and appearaunce plaine.

Yet was their fare but homely, such as hee
 Did use his feeble body to sustaine;
 The which full gladly they did take in glee,
 Such as it was, ne did of want complaine,
 But, being well suffiz'd, them rested faine:
 But fair Serene all night could take no rest,
 Ne yet that gentle squire, for grievous paine
 Of their late woundes, the which the blatant beast [creast.
 Had given them, whose grieffe through suffraunce sore in-

So all that night they past in great disease;
 Till that the morning, bringing carely light
 To guide mens labours, brought them also ease,
 And some asswagement of their painfull plight.
 Then up they rose, and gan themselves to dight
 Unto their iourney; but that squire and dame
 So faint and feeble were, that they ne might
 Endure to travell, nor one foote to frame: [were lame.
 Their hearts were sicke; their sides were sore; their feete

Therefore the prince, whom great affaires in mynd
 Would not permit to make there lenger stay,
 Was forced there to leave them both behynd
 In that good hermits charge, whom he did pray
 To tend them well: So forth he went his way,
 And with him eke the salvage (that whyleare
 Seeing his royal usage and array
 Was greatly growne in love of that brave pere)
 Would needes depart; as shall declared be elsew here.

CANTO VI.

The hermite heales both squire and dame
 Of their sore maladies :
 He Turpine doth defeat and shame
 For his late villanies.

No wound, which warlike hand of enemy
 Inflicts with dint of sword, so sore doth light
 As doth the poysnous sting, which infamy
 Infixeth in the name of noble wight :
 For, by no art nor any leaches might,
 It ever can recured be againe ;
 Ne all the skill, which that immortall spright
 Of Podalyrius did in it retaine,
 Can remedy such hurts ; such hurts are hellish paine.

Such were the wounds the which that blatant beast
 Made in the bodics of that squire and dame ;
 And, being such, were now much more increast
 For want of taking heede unto the same,
 That now corrupt and curelesse they became :
 Howbe that carefull hermite did his best,
 With many kindes of medicines meete, to tame
 The poysnous humour which did most infest
 Their ranekling wounds, and every day them duely drest.

For he right well in leaches craft was scene ;
 And, through the long experience of his dayes,
 Which had in many fortunes tossed beene
 And past through many perillous assayes,
 He knew the diverse went of mortall wayes,
 And in the mindes of men had great insight ;
 Which with sage counsell, when they went astray,
 He could enforme, and them reduce aright ;
 And all the passions heale, which wound the weaker spright.

For whylome he had bene a doughty knight,
 As any one that lived in his daies,
 And proved oft in many perillous fight,
 In which he grace and glory wonne alwaies,
 And in all battels bore away the baies :
 But being now attacht with timely age,
 And weary of this worlds unquiet waies,
 He tooke himselfe unto this hermitage,
 In which he liv'd alone, like carelesse bird in cage.

One day, as he was searching of their wounds,
 He found that they had festred privily;
 And, ranckling inward with unruly stounds,
 The inner parts now gan to putrify,
 That quite they seem'd past helpe of surgery;
 And rather needed to be disciplinde
 With holesome reede of sad sobriety,
 To rule the stubborne rage of passion blinde:
Give salve to every sore, but counsell to the minde.

So, taking them apart into his cell,
 He to that point fit speeches gan to frame,
 As he the art of words knew wondrous well,
 And eke could doe as well as say the same;
 And thus he to them sayd; "Faire daughter dame,
 And you, faire sonne, which here thus long now lie
 In piteous languor since ye hither came;
 In vaine of me ye hope for remedie,
 And I likewise in vaine doe salves to you applie:

"For in yourselfe your onely helpe doth lie
 To heale yourselves, and must proceed alone
 From your owne will to cure your maladie.
 Who can him cure that will be eur'd of none?
 If therefore health ye seeke, observe this one:
 First learne your outward senses to refraine
 From things that stirre up fraile affection;
 Your eies, your cares, your tongue, your talk restraine
 From that they most affect, and in due termes containe.

"For from those outward sences, ill affected,
 The seede of all this evill first doth spring,
 Which at the first, before it had infected,
 Mote easie be suppress with little thing:
 But, being growen strong, it forth doth bring
 Sorrow, and anguish, and impatient paine,
 In th'inner parts; and lastly, scattering
 Contagious poyson close through every vaine,
 It never rests till it have wrought his finall bane.

"For that beastes teeth, which wounded you tofore,
 Are so exceeding venomous and keene,
 Made all of rusty yron ranckling sore,
 That, where they bite, it booteth not to weene
 With salve, or antidote, or other mene,
 It ever to amend: ne marvaile ought;
 For that same beast was bred of hellish strene,
 And long in darksome stygian den upbrought,
 Begot of foule Echidna, as in bookes is taught.

" Echidna is a monster direfull dred,
Whom gods doe hate, and heavens abhor to see;
So hideous is her shape, so huge her hed,
That even the hellish fiends affrighted bee
At sight thereof, and from her presence flee:
Yet did her face and former parts professe
A faire young mayden, full of comely glee;
But all her hinder parts did plaine expresse
A monstrous dragon, full of fearfull uglinesse.

" To her the gods, for her so dreadfull face,
In fearefull darknesse, furthest from the skie
And from the earth, appointed have her place
Mongst rocks and caves, where she enrold doth lie
In hideous horror and obscurity,
Wasting the strength of her immortall ago:
There did Typhaon with her company;
Cruell Typhaon, whose tempestuous rage
Makes th' heavens tremble oft, and him with vowes assuage.

" Of that commixtion they did then beget
This hellish dog, that hight the blatant beast;
A wicked monster, that his tongue doth whet
Gainst all, both good and bad, both most and least,
And pours his poysonous gall forth to infest
The noblest wights with notable defame;
Ne ever knight that bore so lofty creast,
Ne ever lady of so honest name,
But he them spotted with reproch, or secrete shamo.

" In vaine therefore it were with medicine
To goe about to salve such kind of sore,
That rather needes wise read and discipline
Then outward salves that may augment it more."

" Aye me!" sayd then Serena, sighing sore,

" What hope of helpe doth then for us remaine,
If that no salves may us to health restore!"

" But sith we need good counsell," sayd the swaine,

" Aread, good sire, some counsell that may us sustaine."

" The best," sayd he, " that I can you advize,
Is, to avoide th' occasion of the ill:
For when the cause, whence evill doth arize,
Removed is, th' effect surceaseth still.
Abstaine from pleasure, and restraine your will;
Subdue desire, and bridle loose delight;
Use scanted diet, and forbear your fill;
Shun secresie, and talke in open sight:
So shall you soone repaire your present evill plight."

Thus having sayd, his sickely patients
 Did gladly hearken to his grave behest,
 And kept so well his wise commaundements,
 That in short space their malady was ceast,
 And eke the biting of that harmefull beast
 Was throughly heal'd. Tho when they did perceave
 Their wounds recur'd, and forces reincrease,
 Of that good hermite both they tooke their leave,
 And went both on their way, ne ech would other leave;

But each the other vow'd t' accompany:
 The lady, for that she was much in dred,
 Now left alone in great extremity;
 The squire, for that he courteous was indeed,
 Would not her leave alone in her great need.
 So both together traveld, till they met
 With a faire mayden clad in mourning weed,
 Upon a mangy iade unmeetely set,
 And a lewd foole her leading thorough dry and wet.

But by what meanes that shame to her befell,
 And how thereof herselfe she did acquite,
 I must awhile forbear to you to tell;
 Till that, as comes by course, I doe recite
 What fortune to the Briton prince did lye,
 Pursuing that proud knight, the which whileare
 Wrought to Sir Calepine so foule despight;
 And eke his lady, though she sickly were,
 So lewdly had abusde, as ye did lately heare.

The prince, according to former token,
 Which faire Serena to him delivered had,
 Pursu'd him straight; in mind to bene ywroken
 Of all the vile demeane and usage bad,
 With which he had those two so ill bestad:
 Ne wight with him on that adventure went.
 But that wylde man; whom though he oft forbad,
 Yet for no bidding, nor for being shent,
 Would he restrained be from his attendment.

Arriving there, as did by chaunce befall,
 He found the gate wyde ope, and in he rode,
 Ne stayd, till that he came into the hall;
 Where soft dismounting, like a weary lode,
 Upon the ground with feeble feete he trode,
 As he unable were for very neede
 To move one foote, but there must make abode;
 The whyles the salvage man did take his steede
 And in some stable neare did set him up to feede.

Ere long to him a homely groome there came,
 That in rude wise him asked what he was,
 That durst so boldly, without let or shame
 Into his lords forbidden hall to passe:
 To whom the prince, him sayning to embase,
 Mylde answer made, he was an errant knight,
 The which was fall'n into this feeble case
 Through many wounds, which lately he in fight
 Received had, and prayd to pittie his ill plight.

But he, the more outrageous and bold
 Sternely did bid him quickly thence avaunt,
 Or deare aby; for why? his lord of old
 Did hate all errant knights which there did haunt,
 Ne lodging would to any of them graunt;
 And therefore lightly bad him packe away,
 Not sparing him with bitter words to taunt;
 And therewithall rude hand on him did lay,
 To thrust him out of dore doing his worst assay.

Which when the salvage comming now in place
 Beheld, cftsoones he all enraged grew,
 And, running streight upon that villaine base,
 Like a fell lion at him fiercely flew,
 And with his teeth and nailes, in present vew,
 Him rudely rent and all to peeces tore;
 So miserably him all helpelesse slew,
 That with the noise, whilst he did loudly rore,
 The people of the house rose forth in great uprore.

Who when on ground they saw their fellow slaine,
 And that same knight and salvage standing by,
 Upon them two they fell with might and maine
 And on them layd so huge and horribly,
 As if they would have slaine them presently:
 But the bold prince defended him so well,
 And their assault withstood so mightily,
 That, maugre all their might, he did repell
 And beat them back, whilst many underneath him fell.

Yet he them still so sharply did cursew,
 That few of them he left alive, which fled,
 Those evill tidings to their lord to shew:
 Who, hearing how his people badly sped,
 Came forth in hast; where whenas with the dead
 He saw the ground all strow'd, and that same knight
 And salvage with their bloud fresh steeming red,
 He woxe nigh mad with wrath and fell despight,
 And with reproachfull words him thus bespake on hight

"Art thou he, traytor, that with treason vile
 Hast slaine my men in this unmanly maner,
 And now triumphest in the piteous spoile
 Of these poore folk, whose soules with black dishonor
 And foule defame doe decke thy bloudy baner?
 The meede whereof shall shortly be thy shame,
 And wretched end which still attendeth on her."
 With that himselfe to battell he did frame;
 So did his forty yeomen, which there with him came.

With dreadfull force they all did him assaile,
 And round about with boystrous strokes oppresse,
 That on his shield did rattle like to haile
 In a great tempest; that in such distresse
 He wist not to which side him to addresse:
 And evermore that craven cowherd knight
 Was at his backe with heartlesse heedinesse,
 Wayting if he unwares him murther might:
 For cowardize doth still in villany delight.

Whereof whenas the prince was well aware,
 He to him turnd with furious intent,
 And him against his powre gan to prepare;
 Like a fierce bull, that being busie bent
 To fight with many foes about him ment,
 Feeling some curre behinde his heeles to bite,
 Turnes him about with fell avengement:
 So likewise turnde the prince upon the knight,
 And layd at him amaine with all his will and might.

Who, when he once his dreadfull strokes had tasted
 Durst not the furie of his force abyde,
 But turn'd abacke, and to retyre him hasted
 Through the thick prease, there thinking him to hyde:
 But, when the prince had once him plainely eyde,
 He foot by foot him followed alway,
 Ne would him suffer once to shrinke asyde;
 But, ioyning close, huge lode at him did lay;
 Who flying still did ward, and warding fly away.

But, when his foe he still so eger saw,
 Unto his heeles himselfe he did betake,
 Hoping unto some refuge to withdraw:
 Ne would the prince him ever foot forsake
 Whereso he went, but after him did make.
 He fled from roome to roome, from place to place,
 Whylest every ioynt for dread of death did quake,
 Still looking after him that did him chase;
 That made him evermore increase his speedie pace.

At last he up into the chamber came
 Whereas his love was sitting all alone,
 Wayting what tydings of her folke became.
 There did the prince him overtake anone
 Crying in vaine to her him to bemone;
 And with his sword him on the head did smyte,
 That to the ground he fell in senselesse swone:
 Yet, whether thwart or flatly it did lyte,
 The tempred steele did not into his brayneþan byte.

Which when the ladie saw, with great affright
 She starting up began to shrieke aloud;
 And, with her garment covering him from sight,
 Seem'd under her protection him to shroud;
 And, falling lowly at his feet, her bowd
 Upon her knee, intreating him for grace,
 And often him besought, and prayd, and vowd;
 That, with the ruth of her so wretched case,
 He stayd his second strooke and did his hand abase.

Her weed she then withdrawing did him discover;
 Who now come to himselfe yet would not rize,
 But still did lie as dead, and quake, and quiver,
 That even the prince his baseness did despize,
 And eke his dame, him seeing in such guize,
 Gan him recomfort and from ground to reare:
 Who rising up at last in ghastly wize,
 Like troubled ghost, did dreadfully appeare,
 As one that had no life him left through former fear.

Whom when the prince so deadly saw dismayd,
 He for such basenesse shamefully him shent,
 And with sharpe words did bitterly upbrayd;
 "Vile cowheard dogge, now doe I much repent,
 That ever I this life unto thee lent,
 Whereof thou caytive so unworthie art,
 That both thy love, for lacke of hardiment,
 And eke thyselfe for want of manly hart,
 And eke all knights hast shamed with this knightlesse part.

"Yet further hast thou heaped shame to shame,
 And crime to crime, by this thy cowheard feare:
 For first it was to thee reprochfull blame,
 T' erect this wicked custome, which I heare
 Gainst errant knights and ladies thou dost reare;
 Whom when thou mayst thou dost of arms despoile,
 Or of their upper garment which they weare:
 Yet dost thou not with manhood, but with guile,
 Maintaine this evil use, thy foes thereby to foile.

" And lastly, in approvance of thy wrong,
 To shew such faintnesse and foule cowardize
 Is greatest shame; for oft it falles, that strong
 And valiant knights doe rashly enterprize
 Either for fame, or else for exercize,
 A wrongfull quarrell to maintaine by fight;
 Yet have through prowesse and their brave emprize
 Gotten great worship in this worldes sight:
 For greater force there needs to maintaine wrong then right.

" Yet since thy life unto this ladie sayre
 I given have, live in reproch and scorne!
 Ne ever armes ne ever knighthood dare
 Hence to professe; for shame is to adorne
 With so brave badges one so basely borne;
 But onely breath, sith that I did forgive!"
 So having from his craven bodie torne
 Those goodly armes, he them away did give,
 And onely suffred him this wretched life to live.

There whilest he thus was settling things above,
 Atwene that ladie myld and recreant knight,
 To whom his life he graunted for her love.
 He gan bethinke him in what perilous plight
 He had behynd him left that salvage wight
 Amongst so many foes, whom sure he thought
 By this quite slaine in so unequal fight:
 Therefore descending backe in haste he sought
 If yet he were alive, or to destruction brought.

There he him found environed about
 With slaughtred bodies, which his hand had slaine;
 And laying yet afresh with courage stout
 Upon the rest that did alive remaine;
 Whom he likewise right sorely did constraine,
 Like scattred sheepe to seeke for safetie,
 After he gotten had with busie paine
 Some of their weapons which thereby did lie,
 With which he layd about, and made them fast to flie.

Whom when the prince so felly saw to rage,
 Approaching to him neare, his hand he stayd,
 And sought, by making signes, him to assuage:
 Who them perceiving, streight to him obeyd,
 As to his lord, and downe his weapons layd,
 As if he long had to his beasts bene trayned.
 Thence he him brought away, and up conveyd
 Into the chamber, where that dame remaind
 With hër unworthy knight, who ill him entertayned.

Whom when the salvage saw from daunger free,
 Sitting beside his ladie there at ease,
 He well remembred that the same was hee,
 Which lately sought his lord for to displease:
 Tho all in rage he on him streight did seaze,
 As if he would in peeces him have rent;
 And, were not that the prince did him appeaze,
 He had not left one limbe of him unrent:
 But streight he held his hand at his commaundement.

Thus having all things well in peace ordayned,
 The prince himselfe there all that night did rest;
 Where him Blandina fayrely entertayned
 With all the courteous glee and goodly feast
 The which for him she could imagine best:
 For well she knew the wayes to win good will
 Of every wight, that were not too infest;
 And how to please the minds of good and ill, [skill.
 Through tempering of her words and lookes by wondrous

Yet were her words and lookes but false and fayned,
 To some hid end to make more easie way,
 Or to allure such fondlings whom she trayned
 Into her trap unto their owne decay:
 Thereto, when needed, she could weepe and pray,
 And when her listed she could fawne and flatter;
 Now smyling smoothly like to sommers day,
 Now glooming sadly, so to choke her matter;
 Yet were her words but wynd, and all her tears but water.

Whether such grace were given her by kynd,
 As women wont their guilefull wits to guyde;
 Or learnd the art to please, I doe not fynd:
 This well I wote, that she so well applyde
 Her pleasing tongue, that soon she pacifyde
 The wrathfull prince, and wrought her husbands peace:
 Who nathëllesse, not therewith satisfyde,
 His rancorous despyght did not releasse,
 Ne secretly from thought of fell revenge surcasse:

For all that night, the whyles the prince did rest
 In carelesse couch not weeting what was ment,
 He watcht in close awayt with weapons prest,
 Willing to worke his villenous intent,
 On him, that had so shamefully him shent:
 Yet durst he not for very cowardize
 Effect the same, whylest all the night was spent.
 The morrow next the prince did early rize,
 And passed forth to follow his first enterprize.

CANTO VII.

Turpine is baffuld; his two knights
 Doe gaine their treasons meed.
 Fayne Mirabellaes punishment
 For loves disdain decreed.

LIKE as the gentle hart itselfe bewrayes
 In doing gentle deedes with franke delight,
 Even so the baser mind itselfe displayes
 In cancred malice and revengefull spight:
 For to maligne, t' envie, t' use shifting slight,
 Be arguments of a vile donghill mind;
 Which, what it dare not doe by open might,
 To worke by wicked treason wayes doth find,
 By such discourteous deeds discovering his base kind.

That well appears in this discourteous knight,
 The coward Turpine, whereof now I treat;
 Who notwithstanding that in former fight
 He of the prince his life received late,
 Yet in his mind malicious and ingrate
 He gan devise to be aveng'd anew
 For all that shame, which kindled inward hate:
 Therefore, so soone as he was out of vew,
 Himselfe in hast he arm'd, and did him fast pursew.

Well did he tract his steps as he did ryde,
 Yet would not neare approch in daungers eye,
 But kept aloofe for dread to be descryde,
 Untill fit time and place he mote espy,
 Where he mote worke him scath and villeny.
 At last he met two knights to him unknowne,
 The which were armed both agreeably,
 And both combynd, whatever chaunce were blowne,
 Betwixt them to divide and each to make his owne.

To whom false Turpine comming courteously,
 To cloke the mischief which he inly ment,
 Gan to complaine of great discourtesie.
 Which a straunge knight, that neare afore him went,
 Had doen to him, and his deare ladie shent;
 Which if they would afford him ayde at need
 For to avenge in time convenient,
 They should accomplish both a knightly deed,
 And for their paines obtaine of him a goodly meed.

The knights beleev'd that all he sayd was trew
 And, being fresh and full of youthly spright,
 Were glad to heare of that adventure new,
 In which they mote make triall of their might
 Which never yet they had approv'd in fight,
 And eke desirous of the offred meed:
 Said then the one of them; "Where is that wight,
 The which hath doen to thee this wrongfull de d,
 That we may it avenge, and punish him with speed?"

'He rides," said Turpine, "there not farre afore,
 With a wyld man soft footing by his syde;
 That, if ye list to haste a litle more,
 Ye may him overtake in timely tyde."
 Eftsoones they pricked forth with forward prido;
 And, ere that litle while they ridden had,
 The gentle prince not farre away they spyde,
 Ryding a softly pace with portance sad,
 Devizing of his love more then of daunger drad.

- Then one of them aloud unto him cryde,
 Bidding him turne againe; "False traytour knight,
 Foule woman-wronger!"—for he him defyde.
 With that they both at once with equall spight
 Did bend their speares, and both with equall might
 Against him ran; but th' one did misse his marke,
 And being carried with his force forthright
 Glaunst swiftly by; like to that heavenly sparke,
 Which glyding through the ayre lights all the heavens darke.

But th' other, ayming better, did him smite
 Full in the shield with so impetuous powre,
 That all his lance in peeces shivered quite,
 And scattered all about fell on the flowre:
 But the stout prince with much more steddly stowre
 Full on his bever did him strike so sore,
 That the cold steel through piercing did devowre
 His vitall breath, and to the ground him bore,
 Where still he bathed lay in his own bloody gore.

As when a cast of faulcons make their flight
 At an hernessaw, that lyes aloft on wing,
 The whyles they strike at him with heedlesse might,
 The warie foule his bill doth backward wring;
 On which the first, whose force her first doth bring,
 Herselfe quite through the bodie doth engore,
 And falleth downe to ground like senselesse thing;
 But th' other, not so swift as she before,
 Fayles of her souse, and passing by doth hurt no more.

By this the other, which was passed by,
 Himselfe recovering, was return'd to fight;
 Where when he saw his fellow lifelesse ly,
 He much was daunted of so dismal sight;
 Yet, nought abating of his former spight,
 Let drive at him with so malicious mynd,
 As if he would have passed through him quight:
 But the steele-head no stedfast hold could fynd,
 But glauncing by deceiv'd him of that he desynd.

Not so the prince; for his well-learned speare
 Tooke surer hould, and from his horses backe
 Above a launces length him forth did beare,
 And gainst the cold hard earth so sore him strake,
 That all his bones in peeces nigh he brake,
 Where seeing him so lie, he left his steed,
 And, to him leaping, vengeance thought to take
 Of him, for all his former follies meed,
 With flaming sword in hand his terror more to breed.

The fearefull swayne beholding death so nie
 Cryde out aloud, for mercie, him to save;
 In lieu whereof he would to him descrie
 Great treason to him meant, his life to reave.
 The prince soone hearkned, and his life forgave.
 Then thus said he: "There is a straunger knight,
 The which, for promise of great meed, us drave
 To this attempt, to wreake his hid despight,
 For that himselfe thereto did want sufficient might."

The prince much mused at such villenie,
 And sayd: "Now sure ye well have earn'd your meed;
 For th' one is dead, and th' other soone shall die,
 Unlesse to me thou hither bring with speed
 The wretch that hyr'd you to this wicked deed."
 He glad of life, and willing eke to wreake
 The guilt on him which did this mischief breed,
 Swore by his sword, that neither day nor weeke
 He would surceasse, but him whereso he were would seeke.

So up he rose, and forth streightway he went
 Backe to the place where Turpine late he lore;
 There he him found in great astonishment,
 To see him so bedight with bloodie gore
 And griesly wounds, that him appalled sore.
 Yet thus at length he said; "How now, sir knight,
 What meaneth this which here I see before?
 How fortuneth this foule uncomely plight,
 So different from that which earst ye seem'd in sight?"

"Perdie," said he, "in evill houre it fell,
That ever I for meed did undertake
So hard a taske as life for hyre to sell;
The which I earst adventur'd for your sake;
Witnesse the wounds, and this wide bloudie lake,
Which ye may see yet all about me steeme.
Therefore now yeeld, as ye did promise make,
My due reward, the which right well I deeme
I yearded have, that life so dearely did redeeme."

"But where then is," quoth he halfe wrothfully,
"Where is the bootie, which therefore I bought,
That cursed caytive, my strong enemy,
That recreant knight, whose hated life I sought?
And where is eke your friend which halfe it ought?"
"He lyes," said he, "upon the cold bare ground,
Slayne of that errant knight with whom he fought;
Whom afterwards myselfe with many a wound
Did slay againe, as ye may see there in the stound."

Thereof false Turpin was full glad and faine,
And needs with him streight to the place would ryde,
Where he himselfe might see his foeman slaine;
For else his feare could not be satisfyde.
So, as they rode, he saw the way all dyde
With streames of blood; which tracting by the traile,
Ere long they came, whenas in evill tyde
That other swayne, like ashes deadly pale,
Lay in the lap of death, rewing his wretched bale.

Much did the craven seeme to mone his case,
That for his sake his deare life had forgone;
And, him bewayling with affection base,
Did count: rfeit kind pittie where was none:
For where's no courage, there's no ruth nor mone.
Thence passing forth, not farre away he found
Whereas the prince himselfe lay all alone,
Loosely displayd upon the grassie ground,
Possessed of sweete sleepe that luld him soft in swound.

Wearie of travell in his former fight,
He there in shade himselfe had layd to rest,
Having his armes and warlike things undight,
Fearelesse of foes that mote his peace molest;
The whyles his salvage page, that wont be prest,
Was wandred in the wood another way,
To doe some thing, that seemed to him best;
The whiles his lord in silver slomber lay,
Like to the evening starre adorn'd with dewy ray.

Whom whenas Turpin saw so loosely layd,
 He weened well that he indeed was dead,
 Like as that other knight to him had sayd:
 But, when he nigh approcht, he mote aread
 Plaine signes in him of life and livelihead.
 Whereat much griev'd against that straunger knight,
 That him too light of credence did mislead,
 He would have backe retyred from that sight,
 That was to him on earth the deadliest despyght.

But that same knight would not once let him start:
 But plainely gan to him declare the case
 Of all his mischiefe and late lucklesse smart;
 How both he and his fellow there in place
 Were vanquished, and put to foule disgrace;
 And how that he, in lieu of life him lent,
 Had vow'd unto the victor, him to trace
 And follow through the world whereso he went,
 Till that he him delivered to his punishment.

He, therewith much abashed and affrayd
 Began to tremble every limbe and vaine;
 And, softly whispering him, entirely prayd
 T' advize him better then by such a traine
 Him to betray unto a straunger swaine;
 Yet rather counseld him contrárywise,
 Sith he likewise did wrong by him sustaine,
 To ioyne with him and vengeance to devize,
 Whylest time did offer meanes him sleeping to surprize.

Nathelesse, for all his speach, the gentle knight
 Would not be tempted to such villenie,
 Regarding more his faith which he did plight,
 All were it to his mortall enemie,
 Then to entrap him by false treacherie:
 Great shame in lieges blood to be embrew'd!
 Thus whylest they were debating diverslie,
 The salvage forth out of the wood issew'd
 Backe to the place, whereas his lord he sleeping vew'd.

There when he saw those two so neare him stand,
 He doubted much what mote their meaning bee;
 And, throwing downe his load out of his hand,
 (To weet, great store of forrest frute which hee
 Had for his food late gathered from the tree,)
 Himselfe unto his weapon he betooke,
 That was an oaken plant, which lately hee
 Rent by the root; which he so sternly shooke,
 That like an hazell wand it quivered and quooke.

Whereat the prince awaking, when he spyde
 The traytour Turpin with that other knight,
 He started up; and snatching neare his syde
 His trustie sword, the servant of his night,
 Like a fell lyon leaped to him light,
 And his left hand upon his collar layd.
 Therewith the cowheard, deaded with affright,
 Fell flat to ground, ne word unto him sayd,
 But, holding up his hands, with silence mercie prayd.

But he so full of indignation was,
 That to his prayer nought he would incline,
 But, as he lay upon the humbled gras,
 His foot he set on his vile necke, in signe
 Of servile yoke, that nobler harts repine.
 Then, letting him arise like abiect thrall,
 He gan to him obiect his haynous crime,
 And to revile, and rate, and recreant call,
 And lastly to despoyle of knightly bannerall.

And after all, for greater infamie,
 He by the heeles him hung upon a tree,
 And bassfuld so, that all which passed by
 The picture of his punishment might see,
 And by the like ensample warned bee,
 However they through treason doe trespassse.
 But turne we now backe to that ladie free,
 Whom late we left ryding upon an asse,
 Led by a carle and foole which by her side did passe.

She was a ladie of great dignitie,
 And lifted up to honorable place,
 Famous through all the land of Faërie:
 Though of meane parentage and kindred base,
 Yet deckt with wondrous giftes of natures grace,
 That all men did her person much admire,
 And praise the feature of her goodly face;
 The beames whereof did kindle lovely fire
 In th' harts of many a knight, and many a gentle squire:

But she thereof grew proud and insolent,
 That none she worthie thought to be her fere,
 But scornd them all that love unto her ment;
 Yet was she lov'd of many a worthy pere:
 Unworthy she to be belov'd so dere,
 That could not weigh of worthinesse aright:
 For beautie is more glorious bright and clere,
 The more it is admir'd of many a wight,
 And noblest she that served is of noblest knight

But this coy damzell thought contrariwise,
 That such proud looks would make her prayesd more;
 And that, the more she did all love despize,
 The more would wretched lovers her adore.
 What cared she who sighed for her sore,
 Or who did wayle or watch the wearie night?
 Let them that list their lucklesse lot deplore;
 She was borne free, not bound to any wight.
 And so would ever live, and love her own delight.

Through such her stubborne stifnesse and hard hart,
 Many a wretch for want of remedie
 Did languish long in life-consuming smart,
 And at the last through dreary dolour die:
 Whylest she, the ladie of her libertie,
 Did boast her beautie had such souveraine might,
 That with the onely twinkle of her eye
 She could or save or spill whom she would hight:
 What could the gods doe more, but doe it more aright?

But loe! the gods, that mortall follies vew,
 Did worthily revenge this maydens pride;
 And, nought regarding her so goodly hew,
 Did laugh at her that many did deride.
 Whilest she did weepe, of no man mercifide:
 For on a day, when Cupid kept his court,
 As he is wont at each Saint Valenteide,
 Unto the which all lovers doe resort,
 That of their loves successe they there may make report;

It fortun'd then, that when the roules were red,
 In which the names of all Loves folke were fyled,
 That many there were missing; which were ded,
 Or kept in bands, or from their loves exyled,
 Or by some other violence despoyled.
 Which whenas Cupid heard, he waxed wroth;
 And, doubting to be wronged or beguyled,
 He bad his eyes to be unblindfold both,
 That he might see his men, and muster them by oth.

Then found he many missing of his crew,
 Which wont doe suit and service to his might;
 Of whom what was becomen no man knew.
 Therefore a iurie was impaneld streight
 To enquire of them, whether by force or sleight,
 Or their owne guilt, they were away conveyd:
 To whom foule Infamie and fell Despight
 Gave evidence, that they were all betrayd
 And mured cruelly by a rebellious mayd.

Fayre Mirabella was her name, whereby
 Of all those crymes she there indited was:
 All which when Cupid heard, he by and by
 In great displeasure wil'd a capias
 Should issue forth t'attach that scornefull lasse.
 The warrant straight was made, and therewithall
 A baylieffe errant forth in post did passe,
 Whom they by name their Portamore did call;
 He which doth summon lovers to Loves iudgement hall.

The damzell was attacht, and shortly brought
 Unto the barre whereas she was arrayned:
 But she thereto nould plead, nor answere ought,
 Even for stubborne pride, which her restrayned:
 So iudgement past, as is by law ordayned
 In cases like; which, when at last she saw,
 Her stubborne hart, which love before disdayned,
 Gan stoupe; and, falling downe with humble awe,
 Cryde mercie, to abate the extremitie of law.

The sonne of Venus, who is myld by kynd,
 But where he is provokt by peevishnesse,
 Unto her prayers piteously enclynd,
 And did the rigour of his doome repressse;
 Yet not so freely, but that nathëllesse
 He unto her a penance did impose,
 Which was, that through this worlds wyde wildernes
 She wander should in companie of those,
 Till she had sav'd so many loves as she did lose.

So now she had bene wandring two whole yeares
 Throughout the world, in this uncomely case,
 Wasting her goodly hew in heavie teares,
 And her good dayes in dolorous disgrace;
 Yet had she not in all these two yeares space
 Saved but two; yet in two yeares before,
 Through her dispiteous pride, whilest love lackt place,
 She had destroyed two and twenty more.
 Aie me, how could her love make halfe amends therefore!

And now she was uppon the weary way,
 Whenas the gentle squire, with faire Serene,
 Met her in such misseeming foule array;
 The whiles that mighty man did her demeane
 With all the evill termes and cruell meane
 That he could make; and eeke that angry foole
 Which follow'd her, with cursed hands uncleane
 Whipping her horse, did with his smarting tooles
 Oft whip her daintie selfe, and much augment her doole.

Ne ought it mote availe her to entreat
 The one or th' other better her to use;
 For both so wilfull were and obstinate
 That all her piteous plaint they did refuse,
 And rather did the more her beate and bruse:
 But most the former villaine, which did lead
 Her tyreling iade, was bent her to abuse;
 Who, though she were with wearinesse nigh dead,
 Yet would not let her lite, nor rest a little stead:

For he was sterne and terrible by nature,
 And eeke of person huge and hideous,
 Exceeding much the measure of man's stature,
 And rather like a gyant monstrous:
 For sooth he was descended of the hous
 Of those old gyants, which did warres darraine
 Against the heaven in order battailous;
 And sib to great Orgolio, which was slaine
 By Arthure, whenas Unas knight he did maintaine.

His lookes were dreadfull, and his fiery eies,
 Like two great beacons, glared bright and wyde,
 Glauncing askew, as if his enemies
 He scorned in his overweening pryde;
 And stalking stately, like a crane, did stryde,
 At every step uppon the tiptoes hie;
 And, all the way he went, on every syde
 He gazed about and stared horrible,
 As if he with his lookes would all men terrifie.

He wore no armour, ne for none did care,
 As no whit dreading any living wight;
 But in a iacket, quilted richly rare
 Upon checklaton, he was straungely dight;
 And on his head a roll of linnen plight,
 Like to the Mores of Malaber, he wore,
 With which his locks, as blacke as pitchy night,
 Were bound about, and voyded from before;
 And in his hand a mighty yron club he bore.

This was Disdaine, who led that ladies horse
 Through thick and thin, through mountains and through
 Compelling her, where she would not, by force, [plaine,
 Haling her palfrey by the hempen raines:
 But that same foole, which most increast her paines,
 Was Scorne; who, having in his hand a whip,
 Her therewith yirks; and still, when she complaines,
 The more he laughes, and does her closely quip,
 To see her sore lament, and bite her tender lip.

Whose cruell handling when that squire beheld,
 And saw those villaines her so vildely use,
 His gentle heart with indignation sweld,
 And could no lenger beare so great abuse
 As such a lady so to beate and bruse;
 But, to him stepping, such a stroke him lent,
 That forst him th' halter from his hand to loose,
 And, maugre all his might, backe to relent:
 Else had he surely there bene slaine, or fowly shent.

The villaine, wroth for greeting him so sore,
 Gathered himselfe together soone againe,
 And with his yron batton which he bore
 Let drive at him so dreadfully amaine,
 That for his safety he did him constraîne
 To give him ground, and shift to every side,
 Rather than once his burden to sustaine:
 For bootlesse thing him seemed to abide
 So mighty blowes, or prove the puissaunce of his pride.

Like as a mastiffe having at a bay
 A salvage bull, whose cruell hornes doe threat
 Desperate daunger, if he them assay,
 Traceth his ground, and round about doth beat,
 To spy where he may some advantage get,
 The whiles the beast doth rage and loudly rore;
 So did the squire, the whiles the carle did fret
 And fume in his disdainefull mynd the more,
 And oftentimes by Turmagant and Mahound swore.

Nathelesse so sharpely still he him pursewd,
 That at advantage him at last he tooke,
 When his foote slipt, (that slip he dearely rewd,)
 And with his yron club to ground him strooke;
 Where still he lay, ne out of swoune awooke,
 Till heavy hand the carle upon him layd,
 And bound him fast: tho when he up did looke
 And saw himselfe captiv'd, he was dismayd,
 Ne powre had to withstand, ne hope of any ayd.

Then up he made him rise, and forward fare,
 Led in a rope which both his hands did bynd;
 Ne ought that foole for pittie did him spare,
 But with his whip him following behynd
 Him often scourg'd, and forst his feete to fynd:
 And otherwhiles with bitter mockes and mowes
 He would him scorne, that to his gentle mynd
 Was much more grievous then the other blowes: [growes.
 Wordes sharpely wound, but greatest grieve of scorn. 25

The faire Serena, when she saw him fall
 Under that villaines club, then surely thought
 That slaine he was, or made a wretched thrall,
 And fled away with all the speede she mought
 To seeke for safety; which long time she sought,
 And past through many perils by the way,
 Ere she againe to Calepine was brought:
 The which discourse as now I must delay,
 Till Mirabellaes fortunes I doe further say.

CANTO VIII.

Prince Arthure overcomes Disdaine;
 Quites Mirabell from dreed:
 Serena, found of salvages,
 By Calepine is freed.

YE gentle ladies, in whose soveraine powre
 Love hath the glory of his kingdome left,
 And th' hearts of men, as your eternal dowre,
 In yron chaines, of liberty bereft,
 Delivered hath unto your hands by gift;
 Be well aware how ye the same doe use,
 That pride doe not to tyranny you lift;
 Least, if men you of cruelty accuse,
 He from you take that chiefedome which ye doe abuse.

And as ye soft and tender are by kynde,
 Adorn'd with goodly gifts of beauties grace,
 So be ye soft and tender eke in mynde;
 But cruelty and hardnesse from you chace,
 That all your other praises will deface,
 And from you turne the love of men to hate:
 Ensample take of Mirabellaes case,
 Who from the high degree of happy state
 Fell into wretched woes, which she repented late.

Who after thralldome of the gentle squire,
 Which she beheld with lamontable eye,
 Was touched with compassion entire,
 And much lamented his calamity,
 That for her sake fell into misery;
 Which bootied nought for prayers nor for threat
 To hope for to release or mollify;
 For aye the more that she did them entreat,
 The more they him misust, and cruelly did beat.

So as they forward on their way did pas,
 Him still reviling and afflicting sore.
 They met Prince Arthure with Sir Enias,
 (That was that courteous knight, whom he before Having subdew'd yet did to life restore;) Before
 To whom as they approcht, they gan augment
 Their cruelty, and him to punish more,
 Scourging and haling him more vehement;
 As if it them should grieve to see his punishment.

The squire himselfe, whenas he saw his lord
 The wittenesse of his wretchednesse in place,
 Was much asham'd that with an hempen cord
 He like a dog was led in captive case,
 And did his head for bashfulnesse abase,
 As loth to see or to be scene at all;
 Shame would be hid; but whenas Enias
 Beheld two such, of two such villaines thrall,
 His manly mynde was much emmoved therewithall;

And to the prince thus sayd; "See you, sir knight,
 The greatest shame that ever eye yet saw,
 Yond lady and her squire with foule despight
 Abusde, against all reason and all law,
 Without regard of pittie or of awe!
 See! how they doe that squire beat and revile!
 See! how they doe the lady hale and draw!
 But, if ye please to lend me leave awhile,
 I will them soone acquite, and both of blame assoile."

The prince assented; and then he, streightway
 Dismounting light, his shield about him threw,
 With which approaching thus he gan to say;
 "Abide ye caytive treachetours untrew,
 That have with treason thrall'd unto you
 These two, unworthy of your wretched bands;
 And now your crime with cruelty pursew:
 Abide, and from them lay your loathly hands;
 Or else abide the death that hard before you stands."

The villaine stayd not aunswere to invent;
 But, with his yron club preparing way,
 His mindes sad message backe unto him sent;
 The which descended with such dreadfull sway,
 That seemed nought the course thereof could stay,
 No more then lightening from the lofty sky:
 Ne list the knight the powre thereof assay,
 Whose doome was death; but, lightly slipping by.
 Unwares defrauded his intended destiny:

And, to requite him with the like againe,
 With his sharpe sword he fiercely at him flew,
 And strooke so strongly, that the carle with paine
 Saved himselfe but that he there him slew;
 Yet sav'd not so, but that the blood it drew,
 And gave his foe good hope of victory:
 Who, therewith flesht, upon him set anew,
 And with the second stroke thought certainly
 To have supplyde the first, and paid the usury.

But fortune aunswerd not unto his call;
 For, as his hand was heaved up on hight,
 The villaine met him in the middle fall,
 And with his club bet backe his brond-yrón bright
 So forcibly, that with his owne hands might
 Rebeaten backe upon himselfe againe
 He driven was to ground in selfe despiht;
 From whence ere he recovery could gaine,
 He in his necke had set his foote with fell disdain.

With that the foole, which did that end awayte,
 Came running in; and, whilest on ground he lay,
 Laide heavie hands on him and held so strayte,
 That downe he kept him with his scornefull sway,
 So as he could not weld him any way:
 The whiles that other villaine went about
 Him to have bound and thrald without delay;
 The whiles the foole did him revile and flout,
 Threatning to yoke them two and tame their corage stout.

As when a sturdy ploughman with his hynde
 By strength have overthrowne a stubborne steare,
 They downe him hold, and fast with cords do bynde,
 Till they him force the buxome yoke to beare:
 So did these two this knight oft tug and teare.
 Which when the prince beheld, there standing by,
 He left his lofty steede to aide him neare;
 And, buckling soone himselfe, gan fiercely fly
 Upon that carle, to save his friend from ieopardy.

The villaine, leaving him unto his mate
 To be captiv'd and handled as he list,
 Himselfe addrest unto this new debate,
 And with his club him all about so blist,
 That he which way to turne him scarcely wist:
 Sometimes aloft he layd, sometimes alow,
 Now here, now there, and oft him neare he mist,
 So doubtfully, that hardly one could know
 Whether more wary were to give or ward the blow.

But yet the prince so well enured was
 With such huge strokes, approved oft in fight,
 That way to them he gave forth right to pas;
 Ne would endure the daunger of their might,
 But wayt advantage when they downe did light.
 At last the caytive after long discourse,
 When all his strokes he saw avoyded quite,
 Resolved in one t' assemble all his force,
 And make one end of him without ruth or remorse.

His dreadfull hand he heaved up aloft,
 And with his dreadfull instrument of yre
 Thought sure have pownded him to powder soft,
 Or deepe emboweld in the earth entyre;
 But fortune did not with his will conspire:
 For, ere his stroke attayned his intent,
 The noble childe, preventing his desire,
 Under his club with wary boldnesse went,
 And smote him on the knee that never yet was bent.

It never yet was bent, ne bent it now,
 Albe the stroke so strong and puissant were,
 That seem'd a marble pillour it could bow;
 But all that leg, which did his body beare,
 It crackt throughout, (yet did no bloud appeare,)
 So as it was unable to support
 So huge a burden on such broken geare,
 But fell to ground like to a lumpe of durt;
 Whence he assayed to rise, but could not for his hurt.

Eftsoones the prince to him full nimbly stept
 And, least he should recover foote againe,
 His head meant from his shoulders to have swept:
 Which when the lady saw, she cryde amaine;
 "Stay, stay, sir knight, for love of God abstaine
 From that unwares ye weetlesse doe intend;
 Slay not that carle, though worthy to be slaine;
 For more on him doth then himselfe depend;
 My life will by his death have lamentable end."

He staide his hand according her desire,
 Yet nathemore him suffred to arise;
 But, still suppressing, gan of her inquire,
 What meaning mote those uncouth words comprize,
 That in that villaines health her safety lies;
 That were no might in man, nor heart in knights,
 Which durst her dreaded reskue enterprize;
 Yet heavens themselves, that favour feeble rights,
 Would for itselfe redresse, and punish such despights.

Then bursting forth in teares, which gushed fast
 Like many water-streams, awhile she stayed ;
 Till the sharpe passion being overpast,
 Her tongue to her restord, then thus she sayd ;
 " Nor heavens, nor men, can me most wretched mayd
 Deliver from the doome of my desart,
 The which the god of love hath on me layd,
 And damned to endure this direfull smart,
 For penaunce of my proud and hard rebellious hart.

" In prime of youthly yeares, when first the flowre
 Of beauty gan to bud, and bloosme delight ;
 And nature me endu'd with plenteous dowe
 Of all her gifts, that pleasse each living sight ;
 I was belov'd of many a gentle knight,
 And sude and sought with all the service dew :
 Full many a one for me deepe groand and sigh't,
 And to the dore of death for sorrow drew,
 Complaining out on me that would not on them rew.

" But let them love that list, or live or die ;
 Me list not die for any lovers doole :
 Ne list me leave my loved libertie
 To pittie him that list to play the foole :
 To love myself I learned had in schoole.
 Thus I triumphed long in lovers paine,
 And, sitting carelesse on the scorers stoole,
 Did laugh at those that did lament and plaine :
 But all is now repayd with interest againe.

" For loe ! the winged god, that woundeth harts,
 Causde me be called to accompt therefore ;
 And for revengement of those wrongfull smart,
 Which I to others did inflict afore,
 Addeem'd me to endure this penaunce sore ;
 That in this wize, and this unmeete array,
 With these two lewd companions, and no more,
 Disdaine and Scorne, I through the world should stray,
 Till I have sav'd so many as I earst did slay."

" Certes," sayd then the prince, " the god is iust,
 That taketh vengeaunce of his peoples spoile :
 For were no law in love, but all that lust
 Might them oppresse, and painefully turmoile,
 His kingdome would continue but a while.
 But tell me, lady, wherefore doe you beare
 This bottle thus before you with such toile,
 And eeke this wallet at your backe arreare,
 That for these earles to carry much more comely were?"

"Here in this bottle," sayd the sory mayd,
 "I put the tears of my contrition,
 Till to the brim I have it full defrayd:
 And in this bag, which I behinde me don,
 I put repentaunce for things past and gon.
 Yet is the bottle leake, and bag so torne,
 That all which I put in fals out anon.
 And is behinde me trodden downe of Scorne,
 Who mocketh all my paine, and laughs the more I mourn."

The infant hearkned wisely to her tale,
 And wondred much at Cupids iudgment wise,
 That could so meekly make proud hearts avale,
 And wreake himselfe on them that him despise.
 Then suffred he Disdaine up to arise,
 Who was not able up himselfe to reare,
 By meanes his leg, through his late lucklesse prise,
 Was craekt in twaine, but by his foolish feare
 Was holpen up, who him supported standing neare.

But being up he lookt againe aloft,
 As if he never had received fall;
 And with sterne eye-brows stared at him oft,
 As if he would have daunted him withall:
 And standing on his tiptoes, to seeme tall,
 Downe on his golden feete he often gazed,
 As if such pride the other could apall;
 Who was so far from being ought amazed,
 That he his lookes despised, and his boast dispraised.

Then turning backe unto that captive thrall,
 Who all this while stood there beside them bound,
 Unwilling to be knowne or seene at all,
 He from those bands weend him to have unwound;
 But when approaching neare he plainly found
 It was his owne true groome, the gentle squire,
 He thereat wext exceedingly astound,
 And him did oft embrace, and oft admire,
 Ne could with seeing satisfie his great desire.

Meane while the salvage man, when he beheld
 That huge great foole oppressing th' other knight,
 Whom with his weight unweldy downe he held,
 He flew upon him like a greedy light
 Unto some carrion offered to his sight;
 And, downe him plucking, with his nayles and teeth
 Gan him to hale, and teare, and scratch, and bite;
 And, from him taking his owne whip, therewith
 So sore him scourgeth that the blood downe followeth.

And sure I weene, had not the ladies cry
 Procur'd the prince his cruell hand to stay,
 He would with whipping him have done to dye:
 But, being checkt, he did abstaine streightway
 And let him rise. Then thus the prince gan say;
 "Now, lady, sith your fortunes thus dispose,
 That, if ye list have liberty, ye may;
 Unto yourselfe I freely leave to chose,
 Whether I shall you leave, or from these villaines lose."

"Ah! nay, sir knight," said she, "it may not be,
 But that I needes must by all meanes fulfill
 This penance, which enioyned is to me,
 Least unto me betide a greater ill:
 Yet no lesse thanks to you for your good will."
 So humbly taking leave she turnd aside:
 But Arthure with the rest went onward still
 On his first quest, in which did him betide
 A great adventure, which did him from them deuide.

But first it falleth me by course to tell
 Of faire Serena; who, as earst you heard,
 When first the gentle squire at variaunce fell
 With those two carles, fled fast away, afeard
 Of villany to be to her inferd:
 So fresh the image of her former dread,
 Yet dwelling in her eye, to her appeard,
 That every foote did tremble which did tread,
 And every body two, and two she foure did read.

Through hils and dales, through bushes and through breeres,
 Long thus she fled, till that at last she thought
 Herselfe now past the perill of her feares:
 Then looking round about, and seeing nought
 Which doubt of daunger to her offer mought,
 She from her palfrey lighted on the plaine;
 And, sitting downe, herselfe awhile bethought
 Of her long travell and turmoyling paine;
 And often did of love, and oft of lucke, complaine.

And evermore she blamed Calepine,
 The good Sir Calepine, her owne true knight,
 As th' onely author of her wofull tino;
 For being of his love to her so light,
 As her to leave in such a piteous plight.
 Yet never turtle truer to his make,
 Then he was true unto his lady bright:
 Who all this while endured for her sako
 Great perill of his life, and restlesse paines did take.

Tho whenas all her plaints she had displayd,
 And well disburdened her engrieved brest
 Upon the grasse herselfe adowne she layd;
 Where, being tyrd with travell, and opprest
 With sorrow, she betooke herselfe to rest:
 There whilst in Morpheus bosome safe she lay
 Fearelesse of ought that mote her peace molest,
 False fortune did her safety betray
 Unto a strange mischaunce, that menac'd her decay.

In these wylde deserts, where she now abode,
 There dwelt a salvage nation, which did live
 Of stealth and spoile, and making nightly rode
 Into their neighbours borders; ne did give Themselves to any trade, (as for to drive
 The painfull plough, or attell for to breed,
 Or by adventrous merchandize to thrive,)
 But on the labours of poor men to feed,
 And serve their owne necessities with others need.

Thereto they usde one most accursed order,
 To eate the flesh of men, whom they mote fynde,
 And straungers to devoure, which on their border
 Were brought by errour or by wreckfull wynde:
 A monstrous cruelty gainst course of kynde
 They, towards evening wandering every way
 To seeke for booty, came by fortune blynde
 Whereas this lady, like a sheepe astray,
 Now drowned in the depth of sleepe all fearlesse lay.

Soone as they spide her, lord ! what gladfull glee
 They made amongst themselves ! but when her face
 Like the faire yvory shining they did see
 Each gan his fellow solace and embrace
 For ioy of such good hap by heavenly grace
 Then gan they to devize what course to take;
 Whether to slay her there upon the place,
 Or suffer her out of her sleepe to wake,
 And then her eate attonce, or many meales to make.

The best advizement was, of bad, to let her
 Sleepe out her fill without encomberment;
 For sleepe, they sayd, would make her battill better
 Then, when she wakt, they all gave one consent
 That, since by grace of God she there was sent,
 Unto their god they would her sacrifice,
 Whose share, her guiltlesse bloud they would present
 But of her dainty flesh they did devize
 To make a common feast, and feed with gurmandize.

"Then can they to devise what course to take,
Whether to slay her there upon the place,
Or suffer her out of her sleeps to wake,"

Book VI. Canto VIII. Ver. 37.

So round about her they themselves did place
 Upon the grasse, and diversely dispose,
 As each thought best to spend the lingring space:
 Some with their eyes the daintest morsels chose;
 Some praise her paps; some praise her lips and nose;
 Some whet their knives, and strip their elboes bare;
 The priest himselve a garland doth compose
 Of finest flowers, and with full busie care
 His bloody vessels wash and holy fire prepare.

The damzell wakes; then all attonce upstart,
 And round about her flocke, like many flies,
 Whooping and hallowing on every part,
 As if they would have rent the brasen skies.
 Which when she sees with ghastly griefful eies,
 Her heart does quake, and deadly pallid hew
 Benumbs her cheeks: then out aloud she cries,
 Where none is nigh to heare, that will her rew,
 And rends her golden locks, and snowy brests embrew.

But all bootes not; they hands upon her lay:
 And first they spoile her of her iewels deare,
 And afterwards of all her rich array;
 The which amongst them they in peeces teare
 And of the pray each one a part doth beare.
 Now being naked, to their sordid eyes
 The goodly treasures of nature appeare:
 Which as they view with lustfull fantasyes,
 Each wisheth to himselve, and to the rest envyes,

Her yvorie neck; her alabaster brest;
 Her paps, which like white silken pillowes were
 For Love in soft delight thereon to rest;
 Her tender sides; her bellie white and clere
 Which like an altar did itselfe uprere
 To offer sacrifice divine thereon;
 Her goodly thighes, whose glorie did appeare
 Like a triumphall arch, and thereupon
 The spoiles of princes hang'd which were in battel won,

Those daintie parts, the dearlings of delight,
 Which mote not be prophan'd of common eyes,
 Those villcins vew'd with loose lascivious sight,
 And closely tempted with their crafty spyas;
 And some of them gan mongst themselves devise
 Thereof by force to take their beastly pleasure:
 But them the priest rebuking did advize
 To dare not to pollute so sacred treasure
 Vow'd to the gods: religion held even theeves in measure.

So, being stayd, they her from thence directed
 Unto a litle grove not farre asyde,
 In which an altar shortly they erected
 To slay her on. And now the eventyde
 His brode black wings had through the heavens wyde
 By this dispred, that was the tyme ordayned,
 For such a dismall deede, their guilt to hyde:
 Of few greene turfes an altar soone they fayned,
 And deckt it all with flowres which they nigh hand obtayned.

Tho, whenas all things readie were aright,
 The damzell was before the altar set,
 Being already dead with fearefull fright:
 To whom the priest with naked armes full net
 Approching nigh, and murderous knife well whet,
 Gan mutter close a certaine secret charme,
 With other divelish ceremonies met:
 Which doen, he gan aloft t'advance his arme,
 Whereat they shouted all, and made a loud alarme.

Then gan the bagpipes and the hornes to shrill
 And shrieke aloud, that, with the peoples voyce
 Confused, did the ayre with terror fill,
 And made the wood to tremble at the noyce:
 The whyles she wayld, the more they did reioyce.
 Now mote ye understand that to this grove
 Sir Calepine, by chaunce more then by cloyce,
 The selfe same evening fortune hether drove,
 As he to seeke Serena, through the woods did rove.

Long had he sought her, and through many a soyle
 Had traveld still on foot in heavie armes,
 Ne ought was tyred with his endlesse toyle,
 Ne ought was feared of his certaine harmes:
 And now, all weetlesse of the wretched stormes
 In which his love was lost, he slept full fast;
 Till, being waked with these loud alarmes,
 He lightly started up like one aghast,
 And catching up his armes streight to the noise forth past.

There by th' uncertaine glims of starry night,
 And by the twinkling of their sacred fire,
 He mote perceive a little dawning sight
 Of all which there was doing in that quire:
 Mongst whom a woman spoyled of all attire
 He spyde lamenting her unluckie strife,
 And groning sore from grieved hart entire:
 Eftsoones he saw one with a naked knife
 Readie to launch her brest, and let out loved life.

With that he thrusts into the thickest throng;
 And, even as his right hand adowne descends,
 He him preventing lays on earth along,
 And sacrificeth to th' infernall feends:
 Then to the rest his wrathfull hand he bends;
 Of whom he makes such havoeke and such hew,
 That swarmes of damned soules to hell he sends:
 The rest, that scape his sword and death eschew,
 Fly like a flocke of doves before a faulcons vew.

From them returning to that ladie backe,
 Whom by the altar he doth sitting find
 Yet fearing death, and next to death the lacke
 Of clothes to cover what she ought by kind;
 He first her hands beginneth to unbind.
 And then to question of her present woe;
 And afterwards to cheare with speeches kind:
 But she, for nought that he could say or doe,
 One word durst speake, or answere him a whit thereto.

So inward shame of her uncomely case
 She did conceive, through care of womanhood,
 That though the night did cover her disgrace,
 Yet she in so unwomanly a mood
 Would not bewray the state in which she stood:
 So all that night to him unknown she past:
 But day, that doth discover bad and good,
 Unsewing, made her knownen to him at last:
 The end whereof He keepe untill another cast.

CANTO IX.

Calidore hostes with Melibee,
 And loves sayre Pastorell:
 Coridon envies him, yet he,
 For ill, rewards him well.

Now turne againe my teme, thou iolly swayne,
 Backe to the furrow which I lately left;
 I lately left a furrow one or twayne
 Unplough'd, the which my coulter had not cleft;
 Yet seem'd the soyle both sayre and frutefull cft,
 As I it past; that were too great a shame,
 That so rich frute should be from us bereft;
 Besides the great dishonour and defame,
 Which should befall to Calidores immortall name.

Great travell hath the gentle Calidore
 And toyle endured, sith I left him last
 Sewing the blatant beast; which I forbore
 To finish then, for other present hast.
 Full many pathes and perils he hath past, [plaines,
 Through hils, through dales, through forests, and through
 In that same quest which fortune on him cast,
 Which he atchieved to his owne great gaines,
 Reaping eternall glorie of his restlesse paines.

So sharply he the monster did pursew,
 That day nor night he suffred him to rest,
 Ne rested he himselfe (but natures dew)
 For dread of daunger not to be redrest,
 If he for slouth forslackt so famous quest.
 Him first from court he to the citties coursed,
 And from the citties to the townes him prest,
 And from the townes into the countrie forsed,
 And from the country back to private farmes he scorsed.

From thence into the open fields he fled,
 Whereas the heardes were keeping of their neat,
 And shepheards singing, to their flockes that fed,
 Layes of sweet love and youthes delightfull heat:
 Him thether eke for all his fearefull threat
 He followed fast, and chaced him so nie,
 That to the folds, where sheepe at night doe seat,
 And to the litle cots, where shepherds lie
 In winters wrathfull time, he forced him to flie.

There on a day, as he pursew'd the chace,
 He chaunst to spy a sort of shepheard groomes
 Playing on pypes and caroling apace,
 The whyles their beasts there in the budded broomes
 Beside them fed, and nipt the tender bloomes;
 For other worldly wealth they cared nought:
 To whom Sir Calidore yet sweating comes,
 And then to tell him courteously besought,
 If such a beast they saw, which he had thether brought.

They answer'd him that no such beast they saw,
 Nor any wicked feend that mote offend
 Their happie flockes, nor daunger to them draw;
 But if that such there were (as none they kend)
 They prayd High God them farre from them to send:
 Then one of them him seeing so to sweat,
 After his rusticke wise, that well he weend,
 Offred him drinke to quenche his thirstie heat,
 And, if he hungry were, him offred eke to eat.

The knight was nothing nice, where was no need,
And tooke their gentle offer: so adowne
They prayd him sit, and gave him for to feed
Such homely what as serves the simple clowne,
That doth despise the dainties of the towne:
Tho, having fed his fill, he there besyde
Saw a faire damzell, which did weare a crowne
Of sundry flowres with silken ribbands tyde,
Yclad in home-made greene that her owne hands had dyde.

Upon a litle hillocke she was placed
Higher then all the rest, and round about
Environ'd with a girland, goodly graced,
Of lovely lasses; and them all without
The lustie shepheard swaynes sate in a rout,
The which did pype and sing her prayes dew,
And oft reioyce, and oft for wonder shout,
As if some miracle of heavenly hew
Were downe to them descended in that earthly vew.

And soothly sure she was full fayre of face,
And perfectly well shapt in every lim,
Which she did more augment with modest grace
And comely carriage of her count'nance trim.
That all the rest like lesser lamps did dim.
Who, her admiring as some heavenly wight,
Did for their souveraine goddesses her esteeme,
And, caroling her name both day and night,
The fayrest Pastorella her by name did light.

No was there heard, ne was there shepherds swayne
But her did honour; and eke many a one
Burnt in her love, and with sweet pleasing payne
Full many a night for her did sigh and grone:
But most of all the shepheard Coridon
For her did languish, and his deare life spend;
Yet neither she for him nor other none
Did care a whit, ne any liking lend:
Though meane her lot, yet higher did her mind ascend.

Her whyles Sir Calidore there vewed well,
And markt her rare demcanure, which him seemed
So farre the meane of shepherds to excell,
As that he in his mind her worthy deemed
To be a princes paragone esteemed,
He was unwares surprisd in subtile bands
Of the blynd boy; ne thence could be redeemed
By any skill out of his cruell hands:
Caught like the bird which gazing still on others stands.

So stood he still long gazing thereupon,
 Ne any will had thence to move away,
 Although his quest were farre afore him gon:
 But after he had fed, yet did he stay
 And sate there still, untill the flying day
 Was farre forth spent, discoursing diversly
 Of sundry things, as fell to worke delay;
 And evermore his speech he did apply
 To th' heards, but meant them to the damzels fantasy.

By this the moystie night approching fast
 Her deawy humour gan on th' earth to shed,
 That warn'd the shepheards to their homes to hast
 Their tender flocks, now being fully fed,
 For feare of wetting them before their bed:
 Then came to them a good old aged syre,
 Whose silver lockes bedeckt his beard and hed,
 With shepheards hooke in hand, and fit attyre,
 That wil'd the damzell rise; the day did now expyre.

He was to weet, by common voice, esteemed
 The father of the fayrest Pastorell,
 And of herselfe in very deece so deemed;
 Yet was not so; but, as old stories tell,
 Found her by fortune, which to him befell,
 In th' open fields an infant left alone;
 And, taking up, brought home and noursed well
 As his owne chyld; for other he had none;
 That she in tract of time accompted was his owne.

She at his bidding meekely did arise,
 And streight unto her litle flocke did fare:
 Then all the rest about her rose likewise,
 And each his sundrie sheepe with severall care
 Gathered together, and them homeward bare:
 Whylest everie one with helping hands did strive
 Amongst themselves, and did their labours share,
 To helpe faire Pastorella home to drive
 Her fleecie flocke; but Coridon most helpe did give.

But Melibee (so hight that good old man)
 Now seeing Calidore left all alone,
 And night arrived hard at hand, began
 Him to invite unto his simple home;
 Which though it were a cottage clad with lome,
 And all things therein meane, yet better so
 To lodge then in the salvage fields to rome.
 The knight full gladly soone agreed thereto,
 Being his harts owne wish; and home with him did go.

There he was welcom'd of that honest syre
 And of his aged beldame homely well;
 Who him besought himselfe to disattyre,
 And rest himselfe, till supper time befell;
 By which home came the fayrest Pastorell,
 After her flocke she in their fold had tyde;
 And, supper readie dight, they to it fell
 With small adoe, and nature satisfyde,
 The which doth litle crave contented to abyde.

Tho when they had their hunger slaked well,
 And the fayre mayd the table ta'ne away;
 The gentle knight, as he that did excell
 In courtesie and well could doe and say,
 For so great kindnesse as he found that day
 Gan greatly thanke his host and his good wife;
 And, drawing thence his speach another way,
 Gan highly to commend the happie life
 Which shepherds lead, without debate or bitter strife.

"How much," sayd he, "more happie is the state
 In which ye, father, here doe dwell at ease,
 Leading a life so free and fortunate
 From all the tempests of these worldly seas,
 Which tosse the rest in dangerous disease;
 Where warres, and wreckes, and wicked enmitie
 Doe them afflict, which no man can appease!
 That certes I your happinesse envie,
 And wish my lot were plast in such felicitie!"

"Surely, my sonne," then answer'd he againe,
 "If happie; then it is in this intent,
 That having small yet doe I not complaine
 Of want, ne wish for more it to augment,
 But doe myselfe, with that I have, content;
 So taught of nature, which doth litle need
 Of forreine helpes to lifes due nourishment:
 The fields my food, my flocke my rayment breed;
 No better doe I weare, no better doe I feed.

"Therefore I doe not any one envy,
 Nor am envyde of any one therefore:
 They, that have much, feare much to loose thereby,
 And store of cares doth follow riches store.
 The litle that I have growes dayly more
 Without my care, but onely to attend it;
 My lambes doe every yeare increase their score,
 And my flockes father daily doth amend it.
 What have I, but to praise th' Almighty that doth send it!

"To them, that list, the worlds gay showes I leave,
 And to great ones such follies doe forgive;
 Which oft through pride do their owne perill weave,
 And through ambition downe themselves doe drive
 To sad decay, that might contented live.
 Me no such cares nor combrous thoughts offend,
 Ne once my minds unmoved quiet grieve;
 But all the night in silver sleepe I spend,
 And all the day, to what I list, I doe attend.

"Sometimes I hunt the fox, the vowed foe
 Unto my lambes, and him dislodge away;
 Sometime the fawne I practise from the doe,
 Or from the goat her kidde, how to convey;
 Another while I baytes and nets display
 The birds to catch or fishes to beguyle;
 And when I wearie am, I downe doe lay
 My limbes in every shade to rest from toyle; [boyle.
 And drinke of every brooke, when thirst my throte doth

"The time was once, in my first prime of yeares,
 When pride of youth forth pricked my desire,
 That I disdain'd among mine equall peares
 To follow sheepe and shepheards base attire;
 For further fortune then I would inquire:
 And, leaving home, to roiall court I sought,
 Where I did sell myselfe for yearely hire,
 And in the princes gardin daily wrought:
 There I beheld such vainesse as I never thought.

"With sight whereof soone cloyd, and long deluded
 With idle hopes which them doe entertaine,
 After I had ten yeares myselfe excluded
 From native home, and spent my youth in vaine,
 I gan my follies to myselfe to plaine,
 And this sweet peace, whose lacke did then appeare:
 Tho, backe returning to my sheepe againe,
 I from thenceforth have learn'd to love more deare
 This lowly quiet life which I inherite here."

Whylest thus he talkt, the knight with greedy eare
 Hong still upon his melting mouth attent;
 Whose sensefull words empierst his hart so neare,
 That he was wrapt with double ravishment,
 Both of his speach that wrought him great content,
 And also of the obiect of his vew,
 On which his hungry eye was alwayes bent;
 That twixt his pleasing tongue, and her faire hew.
 He lost himselfe, and like one halfe-entraunced grew.

Yet to occasion meanes to worke his mind,
 And to insinuate his harts desire,
 He thus replyde; "Now surely, syre, I find,
 That all this worlds gay shoves, which we admire,
 Be but vaine shadows to this safe retyre
 Of life, which here in lowlinesse ye lead,
 Fearelesse of foes, or fortunes wrackfull yre,
 Which tosseth states, and under foot doth tread
 The mightie ones affrayd of every chaunges dred.

"That even I, which daily doe behold
 The glorie of the great mongst whom I won,
 And now have prov'd what happinesse ye hold
 In this small plot of your dominion,
 Now loath great lordship and ambition;
 And wish the heavens so much had graced mee,
 As graunt me live in like condition;
 Or that my fortunes might transposed bee
 From pitch of higher place unto this low degree."

"In vaine," said then old Melibee, "doe men
 The heavens of their fortunes fault accuse;
 Sith they know best what is the best for them:
 For they to each such fortune doe diffuse,
 As they doe know each can most aptly use.
 For not that, which men covet most, is best;
 Nor that thing worst, which men do most refuse;
 But fittest is, that all contented rest
 With that they hold; each hath his fortune in his brest.

"It is the mynd, that maketh good or ill,
 That maketh wretch or happie, rich or poore:
 For some, that hath abundance at his will,
 Hath not enough, but wants in greatest store;
 And other, that hath litle, asks no more,
 But in that litle is both rich and wise;
 For wisdom is most riches: fooles therefore
 They are, which fortunes doe by vowes devize;
 Sith each unto himselfe his life may fortunize."

"Since then in each mans self," said Calidore,
 "It is to fashion his owne lyfes estate,
 Give leave awhyle, good father, in this shore
 To rest my barcke, which hath bene beaten late
 With stormes of fortune and tempestuous fate,
 In seas of troubles and of toylesome paine;
 That, whether quite from them for to retrate
 I shall resolve or backe to turne againe,
 I may here with yourselfe some small repose obtaine.

"Not that the burden of so bold a guest
 Shall chargefull be, or chaunge to you at all;
 For your meane food shall be my daily feast.
 And this your cabin both my bowre and hall;
 Besides, for recompence hereof, I shall
 You well reward, and golden guerdon give.
 That may perhaps you better much withall,
 And in this quiet make you safer live."
 So forth he drew much gold, and toward him it drive.

But the good man, nought tempted with the offer
 Of his rich mould, did thrust it farre away,
 And thus bespake; "Sir knight, your bounteous proffer
 Be farre fro me, to whom ye ill display
 That mucky masse, the cause of mens decay,
 That mote empaire my peace with daungers dread:
 But, if ye algates covet to assay
 This simple sort of life that shepheards lead,
 Be it your owne: our rudenesse to yourselfe aread."

So there that night Sir Calidore did dwell,
 And long while after, whilst him list remaine,
 Dayly beholding the faire Pastorell,
 And reeding on the bayt of his owne bane:
 During which time he did her entertaine
 With all kind courtesies he could invent;
 And every day, her companie to gaine,
 When to the field she went, he with her went:
 So for to quench his fire he did it more augment.

But she that never had acquainted beene
 With such quient usage, fit for queens and kings,
 Ne ever had such knightly service scene;
 But, being bred under base shepheards wings,
 Had ever learn'd to love the lowly things;
 Did litle whit regard his courteous guize,
 But cared more for Colins carolings
 Then all that he could doe, or e'er devize;
 His layes, his loves, his lookes, she did them all despize.

Which Calidore perceiving, thought it best
 To chaunge the manner of his lottie looke;
 And dosing his bright armes himselie addrest
 In shepheards weed; and in his hand he tooke,
 Instead of steele-head speare, a shepheards hooke;
 That who had seene him then, would have be thought
 On Phrygian Paris by Plexippus brooke,
 When he the love of fayre Benone sought,
 What time the golden apple was unto him brought.

So being clad unto the fields he went
 With the faire Pastorella every day,
 And kept her sheepe with diligent attent,
 Watching to drive the ravenous wolfe away,
 The whylest at pleasure she mote sport and play;
 And every evening helping them to fold:
 And otherwhiles, for need, he did assay
 In his strong hand their rugged teats to hold,
 And out of them to presse the milke: Love so much could.

Which seeing Coridon, who her likewise
 Long time had lov'd, and hop'd her love to gaine,
 He much was troubled at that straungers guize,
 And many gealous thoughts conceiv'd in vaine,
 That this of all his labour and long paine
 Should reap the harvest ere it ripened were;
 That made him scoule, and pout, and oft complaine
 Of Pastorell to all the shepheards there,
 That she did love a stranger swayne then him more dere.

And ever, when he came in companie
 Where Calidore was present, he would loure
 And byte his lip, and even for gealousie
 Was readie oft his owne hart to devoure,
 Impatient of any paramoure:
 Who on the other side did seeme so farre
 From malicing, or grudging his good houre,
 That, all he could, he graced him with her,
 Ne ever shewed signe of rancour or of iarre.

And oft, when Coridon unto her brought
 Or litle sparrows stolen from their nest,
 Or wanton squirrels in the woods farre sought,
 Or other daintie thing for her adrest,
 He would commend his guift, and make the best:
 Yet she no whit his presents did regard,
 Ne him could find to fancie in her brest:
 This new-come shepheard had his market mard.
 Old love is litle worth when new is more prefard.

One day, whenas the shepheard swaynes together
 Were met to make their sports and merrie glee,
 As they are wont in faire sunshynie weather,
 The whiles their flockes in snadowes shrouded bee;
 They fell to daunce: then did they all agree
 That Colin Clout should pipe, as one most fit;
 And Calidore should lead the ring, as hee
 That most in Pastorellaes grace did sit:
 Thnercat frown'd Coridon, and his lip closely bit.

But Calidore, of courteous inclination,
 Tooke Coridon and set him in his place,
 That he should lead the daunce, as was his fashion;
 For Coridon could daunce, and trimly trace;
 And whenas Pastorella, him to grace,
 Her flowry garland tooke from her owne head,
 And plast on his, he did it soone displace,
 And did it put on Coridons instead:
 Then Coridon woxe frolicke, that earst seemed dead.

Another time, whenas they did dispose
 To practise games and maisteries to try,
 They for their iudge did Pastorella chose;
 A garland was the meed of victory:
 There Coridon, forth stepping, openly
 Did challenge Calidore to wrestling game;
 For he, through long and perfect industry,
 Therein well practisd was, and in the same [shame.
 Thought sure t'avenge his grudge, and worke his foe great

But Calidore he greatly did mistake;
 For he was strong and mightily stiffe pight,
 That with one fall his necke he almost brake;
 And, had he not upon him fallen light,
 His dearest ioynt he sure had broken quight.
 Then was the oaken crowne by Pastorell
 Given to Calidore as his due right;
 But he, that did in courtesie excell,
 Gave it to Coridon, and said he wonne it well.

Thus did the gentle knight himselfe abcare
 Amongst that rusticke rout in all his deeds,
 That even they, the which his rivals were,
 Could not maligne him, but commend him needs:
 For courtesie amongst the rudest breeds
 Good will and favour: so it surely wrought
 With this faire mayd, and in her mynde the seeds
 Of perfect love did sow, that last forth brought
 The fruite of ioy and blisse, though long time dearely bought.

Thus Calidore continu'd there long time
 To pinne the love of the faire Pastorell;
 Which having got, he used without crime
 Or blamefull blot; but menaged so well,
 That he, of all the rest which there did dwell,
 Was favoured and to her grace commended:
 But what straunge fortunes unto him befell,
 Ere he attain'd the point by him intended,
 Shall more conveniently in other place be ended.

CANTO X.

Calidore sees the graces daunce
 To Colins melody:
 The whiles his Pastorell is led
 Into captivity.

Who now does follow the foule blatant beast,
 Whilest Calidore does follow that faire mayd,
 Unmyndfull of his vow, and high beheast
 Which by the Faery Queene was on him layd,
 That he should never leave, nor be delayd
 From chacing him, till he had it attchieved?
 But now, entrapt of Love which him betrayd,
 He mindeth more how he may be relieved [grieved.
 With grace from her, whose love his heart hath sore en-

That from henceforth he meanes no more to sew
 His former quest, so full of toile and paine;
 Another quest, another game in vew
 He hath, the guerdon of his love to gaine;
 With whom he myndes for ever to remaine,
 And set his rest amongst the rusticke sort,
 Rather then hunt still after shadowes vaine
 Of courtly favour fed with light report
 Of every blaste, and sayling alwaies in the port.

Ne certes mote he greatly blamed be
 From so high step to stoupe unto so low;
 For who had tasted once, as oft did he,
 The happy peace which there doth overflow,
 And prov'd the perfect pleasures which doe grow
 Amongst poore hyndes, in hils, in woods, in dales;
 Would never more delight in painted show
 Of such false blisse, as there is set for stales
 T' entrap unwary fooles in their eternall bales.

For what hath all that goodly glorious gaze
 Like to one sight which Calidore did vew?
 The glaunce whereof their dimmed eies would daze,
 That never more they should endure the shew
 Of that sunne-shine, that makes them looke askew,
 Ne ought, in all that world of beauties rare,
 (Save onely Glorinnaes heavenly hew,
 To which what can compare?) can it compare;
 The which, as commeth now by course, I will declare.

One day, as he did raunge the fields abroad,
 Whilest his faire Pastorella was elsewhere,
 He chaunst to come, far from all peoples troad,
 Unto a place, whose pleasaunce did appere
 To passe all others on the earth which were :
 For all that ever was by Nature's skill
 Deviz'd to worke delight was gathered there ;
 And there by her were poured forth at fill,
 As if, this to adorne, she all the rest did pill.

It was an hill plaste in an open plaine,
 That round about was bordered with a wood
 Of matchlesse light, that seem'd th' earth to disdaine ;
 In which all trees of honour stately stood,
 And did all winter as in sommer bud,
 Spredding pavilions for the birds to bowre,
 Which in their lower braunches sung aloud ;
 And in their tops the soring hauke did towre,
 Sitting like king of fowles in maiesty and powre :

And at the foote thereof a gentle flud,
 His silver waves did softly tumble downe,
 Unmard with ragged mosse or filthy mud ;
 Ne mote wylde beastes, ne mote the ruder clowne
 Thereto approach ; ne filth mote therein drowne :
 But nymphes and faeries by the bancks did sit
 In the woods shade which did the waters crowne,
 Keeping all noysome things away from it,
 And to the waters fall tuning their accents fit.

And on the top thereof a spacious plaine
 Did 'spred itselfe, to serve to all delight,
 Either to daunce, when they to daunce would faine
 Or else to course-about their bases light ;
 Ne ought there wanted, which for pleasure might
 Desired be, or thence to banish bale :
 So pleasauntly the hill with equall hight
 Did seeme to overlooke the lowly vale ;
 Therefore it rightly cleeped was Mount Acidale.

They say that Venus, when she did dispose
 Herselfe to pleasaunce, used to resort
 Unto this place, and therein to repose
 And rest herselfe as in a gladsome port,
 Or with the graces there to play and sport ;
 That even her owne Cytheron, though in it
 She used most to keepe her royall court
 And in her souveraine majesty to sit,
 She in regard hereof refused and thought unfit.

Unto this place whenas the elfin knight
 Approcht, him seemed that the merry sound
 Of a shrill pipe he playing heard on hight,
 And many feete fast thumping th' hollow ground,
 That through the woods their eccho did rebound.
 He nigher drew, to weete what mote it be :
 There he a troupe of ladies dauncing found
 Full merrily, and making gladfull glee,
 And in the midst a shepheard piping he did see.

He durst not enter into th' open greene,
 For dread of them unwares to be descryde,
 For breaking of their daunce, if he were seene ;
 But in the covert of the wood did byde,
 Beholding all, yet of them unespyde :
 There he did see, that pleased much his sight,
 That even he himselfe his eyes envyde,
 An hundred naked maidens lilly white
 All raunged in a ring, and dauncing in delight.

All they without were raunged in a ring,
 And daunced round ; but in the midst of them
 Three other ladies did both daunce and sing,
 The whilest the rest them round about did hemme,
 And like a girlond did in compasse stemme ;
 And in the midst of those same three was placed
 Another damzell, as a precious gemme,
 Amidst a ring most richly well enchaiced,
 That with her goodly presence all the rest much graced.

Looke ! how the crowne, which Ariadne wore
 Upon her yvory forehead that same day
 That Theseus her unto his bridale bore,
 When the bold Centaures made that bloody fray
 With the fierce Lapithes which did them dismay ;
 Being now placed in the firmament,
 Through the bright heaven doth her beams display,
 And is unto the starres an ornament,
 Which round about her move in order excellent.

Such was the beauty of this goodly band,
 Whose sundry parts were here too long to tell :
 But she, that in the midst of them did stand,
 Seem'd all the rest in beauty to excell,
 Crownd with a rosie girlond that right well
 Did her beseme : and ever, as the crew
 About her daunst, sweet flowres that far did smell
 And fragrant odours they uppon her threw ;
 But, most of all, those three did her with gifts endew.

Those were the Graces, daughters of delight,
 Handmaidens of Venus, which are wont to haunt
 Uppon this hill, and daunce there day and night:
 Those three to men all gifts of grace do graunt;
 And all, that Venus in herself doth vaunt,
 Is borrowed of them: but that faire one,
 That in the midst was placed paravaunt,
 Was she to whom that shepheard pypt alone;
 That made him pipe so merrily, as never none.

She was, to weete, that iolly shepherds lasse,
 Which piped there unto that merry rout;
 That iolly shepheard, which there piped, was
 Poore Colin Clout, (who knows not Colin Clout?)
 He pypt apace, whilst they him daunst about.
 Pype, iolly shepheard, pype thou now apace
 Unto thy love that made thee low to lout;
 Thy love is present there with thee in place;
 Thy love is there advaunst to be another grace.

Much wondred Calidore at this straunge sight,
 Whose like before his eye had never scene;
 And standing long astonished in spright,
 And rapt with pleasaunce, wist not what to weene;
 Whether it were the traine of beauties queene,
 Or nymphes, or faeries, or enchaunted show;
 With which his eyes mote have deluded beene.
 Therefore, resolving what it was to know,
 Out of the wood he rose, and toward them did go.

But, soone as he appeared to their vew,
 They vanisht all away out of his sight,
 And cleane were gone, which way he never knew,
 All save the shepheard, who, for fell despight
 Of that displeasure, broke his bag-pipe quight,
 And made great mone for that unhappy turne:
 But Calidore, though no lesse sory wight
 For that mishap, yet seeing him to mourne,
 Drew neare, that he the truth of all by him mote learne:

And, first him greeting, thus unto him spake;
 "Haile, iolly shepheard, which thy ioyous dayes
 Here ledest in this goodly merry-make,
 Frequented of these gentle nymphes alwayes,
 Which to thee flocke to heare thy lovely layes!
 Tell me what mote these dainty damzels be,
 Which here with thee doe make their pleasant playes;
 Right happy thou, that mayest them freely see!
 But why, when I them saw, fled they away from me?"

"Not I so happy," answerd then that swaine,
 "As thou unhappy, which them thence didst chace,
 Whom by no meanes thou canst recall againe ;
 For, being gone, none can them bring in place,
 But whom they of themselves list so to grace."
 "Right sorry I," saide then Sir Calidore,
 "That my ill-fortune did them hence displace :
 But since things passed none may now restore,
 Tell me what were they all, whose lacke thee grieues so sore."

Tho gan that shepheard thus for to dilate ;
 "Then wote, thou shepheard, whatsoe'er thou bee,
 That all those ladies which thou sawest late,
 Are Venus damzels, all within her fee,
 But differing in honour and degree ;
 They all are graces which on her depend ;
 Besides a thousand more which ready bee
 Her to adorne, whenso she forth doth wend ;
 But those three in the midst, doe chiefe on her attend.

"They are the daughters of sky-ruling Love,
 By him begot of faire Eurynome,
 The Oceans daughter, in this pleasant grove,
 As he, this way comming from feastful glee
 Of Thetis wedding with Accidee,
 In sommers shade himselfe here rested weary.
 The first of them hight mylde Euphrosyne,
 Next faire Aglaia, last Thalia merry ;
 Sweete goddesses all three, which me in mirth do cherry !

"These three on men all gracious gifts bestow,
 Which decke the body or adorne the mynde.
 To make them lovely or well-favoured show ;
 As comely carriage, entertainment kinde,
 Sweete semblaunt, friendly offices that byndo,
 And all the complements of curtesie :
 They teach us, how to each degree and kynde
 We should ourselves demeane, to low, to hie,
 To friends, to foes ; which skill men call civility.

"Therefore they alwaies smoothly seeme to smile,
 That we likewise should mylde and gentle be ;
 And also naked are, that without guile
 Or false dissemblaunce all them plaine may see,
 Simple and true from covert malice free ;
 And ecke themselves so in their daunce they bore,
 That two of them still froward seem'd to bee,
 But one still towards shew'd herselfe afore ;
 That good should from us goe, then come in greater store.

"Such were those goddesses which ye did see:
 But that fourth mayd, which there amidst them traced,
 Who can aread what creature mote she bee,
 Whether a creature, or a goddesse graced
 With heavenly gifts from heven first enraced!
 But whatso sure she was, she worthy was
 To be the fourth with those three other placed:
 Yet was she certes but a countrey lasse;
 Yet she all other countrey lasses farre did passe:

"So farre, as doth the daughter of the day
 All other lesser lights in light excell;
 So farre doth she in beautyfull array
 Above all other lasses beare the bell;
 Ne lesse in vertue that beseemes her well
 Doth she exceede the rest of all her race;
 For which the graces, that here wont to dwell,
 Have for more honor brought her to this place,
 And graced her so much to be another grace.

"Another grace she well deserves to be,
 In whom so many graces gathered are,
 Excelling much the meane of her degree;
 Divine resemblaunce, beauty souveraine rare,
 Firme chastity, that spight ne blemish dare!
 All which she with such courtesie doth grace,
 That all her peres cannot with her compare,
 But quite are dimmed when she is in place:
 She made me often pipe, and now to pipe apace.

"Sunne of the world, great glory of the sky,
 That all the earth doest lighten with thy rayes,
 Great Gloriana, greatest majesty!
 Pardon thy Shepheard, mongst so many layes
 As he hath sung of thee in all his dayes,
 To make one minime of thy poore handmayd,
 And underneath thy feete to place her prayse,
 That, when thy glory shall be farre displayd
 To future age, of her this mention may be made!"

When thus that shepheard ended had his speach,
 Sayd Calidore: "Now sure it yrketh mee,
 That to thy blisse I made this lucklesse breach,
 As now the author of thy bale to be,
 Thus to bereave thy loves deare sight from thee:
 But, gentle shepheard, pardon thou my shame,
 Who rashly sought that which I mote not see."
 Thus did the courteous knight excuse his blame,
 And to recomfort him all comely meanes did frame.

In such discourses they together spent
Long time, as fit occasion forth them led;
With which the knight himselfe did much content,
And with delight his greedy fancy fed
Both of his words, which he with reason red,
And also of the place, whose pleasures rare
With such regard his senses ravished,
That thence he had no will away to fare,
But wisht that with that shepheard he mote dwelling share.

But that envenim'd sting, the which of yore
His poysonous point deepe fixed in his hart
Had left, now gan afresh to rancle sore,
And to renue the rigour of his smart;
Which to recure, no skill of leaches art
Mote him availe, but to returne againe
To his wounds worker, that with lovely dart
Dinting his brest had bred his restlesse paine;
Like as the wounded whale to shore flies from the maine.

So, taking leave of that same gentle swaine,
He backe returned to his rustieke wonne,
Where his faire Pastorella did remaine:
To whome in sort, as he at first begonne,
He daily did apply himselfe to donne
All dewfull service, voide of thoughts impure;
Ne any paines ne perill did he shonne,
By which he might her to his love allure,
And liking in her yet untamed heart procure.

And evermore the shepheard Coridon,
Whatever thing he did her to aggrate,
Did strive to match with strong contention,
And all his paines did closely emulate;
Whether it were to caroll, as they sate
Keeping their sheepe, or games to exercize,
Or to present her with their labours late:
Through which if any grace chaunst to arise
To him, the shepheard straight with iealousie did frize.

One day, as they all three together went
To the greene wood to gather strawberries,
There chaunst to them a dangerous accident:
A tigre forth out of the wood did rise,
That with fell clawes full of fierce gourmandize,
And greedy mouth wide-gaping like hell-gate,
Did runne at Pastorell her to surprize;
Whom she beholding, now all desolate,
Gan cry to them aloud to helpe her all too late.

Which Coridon first hearing, ran in hast
 To reskue her; but, when he saw the feend,
 Through cowherd feare he fled away as fast,
 Ne durst abide the daunger of the end;
 His life he steemed dearer then his frend:
 But Calidore soone comming to her ayde,
 When he the beast saw ready now to rend
 His loves deare spoile, in which his heart was prayde,
 He ran at him enraged, instead of being frayde.

He had no weapon but his shepheards hooke
 To serve the vengeance of his wrathfull will;
 With which so sternely he the monster strooke,
 That to the ground astonished he fell;
 Whence ere he could recou'r, he did him quell,
 And hewing off his head, it presented
 Before the feete of the faire Pastorell;
 Who, scarcely yet from former feare exempted,
 A thousand times him thank't that had her death prevented.

From that day forth she gan him to affect,
 And daily more her favour to augment;
 But Coridon for cowherdize reiect,
 Fit to keepe sheepe, unfit for loves content:
 The gentlo heart scornes base disparagement.
 Yet Calidore did not despise him quight,
 But usde him friendly for further intent,
 That by his fellowship he colour might
 Both his estate and love from skill of any wight.

So well he wood her, and so well he wrought her,
 With humble service, and with daily sute,
 That at the last unto his will he brought her;
 Which he so wisely well did prosecute,
 That of his love he reapt the timely frute,
 And ioyed long in close felicity:
 Till Fortune, fraught with malice, blinde and brute,
 That envies lovers long prosperity,
 Blew up a bitter storme of foule adversity.

It fortun'd one day, when Calidore
 Was hunting in the woods, as was his trade,
 A lawlesse people, brigants hight of yore,
 That never usde to live by plough nor spade,
 But fed on spoile and booty which they made
 Upon their neighbours, which did nigh them border,
 The dwelling of these shepheards did invade;
 And spoyld their houses, and themselves did murder,
 And drove away their flocks: with other much disorder.

Amongst the rest, the which they then did pray,
 They spoyld old Melibee of all he had,
 And all his people captive led away ;
 Mongst which this lucklesse mayd away was lad,
 Faire Pastorella, sorrowfull and sad,
 Most sorrowfull, most sad, that ever sigh't.
 Now made the spoile of theeves and brigants bad,
 Which was the conquest of the gentlest knight
 That ever liv'd, and th' onely glory of his might.

With them also was taken Coridon,
 And carried captive by those theeves away ;
 Who in the covert of the night, that none
 Mote them descry, nor reskue from their pray,
 Unto their dwelling did them close convey :
 Their dwelling in a little island was,
 Covered with shrubby woods, in which no way
 Appeared for people in nor out to pas'
 Nor any footing fynde for overgrown gras :

For underneath the ground their way was made
 Through hollow caves, that no man mote discover
 For the thicke shrubs, which did them alwaies shade
 From view of living wight and covered over ;
 But Darknesse dred and daily Night did hover
 Through all the inner parts, wherein they dwelt ;
 Ne lightned was with window, nor with lover,
 But with continuall candle light, which delt
 A doubtfull sense of things, not so well seene as felt.

Hither those brigants brought their present pray,
 And kept them with continuall watch and ward ;
 Meaning, so soone as they convenient may,
 For slaves to sell them for no small reward
 To merchants, which them kept in bondage hard,
 Or sold againe. Now when faire Pastorell
 Into this place was brought, and kept with gard
 Of griesly theeves, she thought herself in hell, [dwell.
 Where with such damned, fiends she should in darknesse

But for to tell the dolefull dreriment
 And pittifull complaints which there she made,
 (Where day and night she nought did but lament
 Her wretched life shut up in deadly shade,
 And waste her goodly beauty, which did fade
 Like to a flowre that feelles no heate of sunne
 Which may her feeble leaves with comfort glade ;)
 And what befell her in that theevish wonne
 Will in another canto better be begonne.

CANTO XL.

The theeves fall out for Pastorell,
 Whilest Melibee is slain :
 Her Calidore from them redeemes,
 And bringeth backe againe.

THE ioyes of love, if they should ever last
 Without affliction or disquietnesse
 That worldly chaunces doe amongst them cast,
 Would be on earth too great a blessednesse,
 Likier to heaven then mortall wretchednesse :
 Therefore the winged god, to let men weete
 That here on earth is no sure happinesse,
 A thousand sowres hath tempred with one sweet,
 To make it seeme more deare and dainty, as is meet.

Like as is now befallne to this faire mayd,
 Faire Pastorell, of whom is now my song :
 Who being now in dreadfull darknesse layd
 Amongst those theeves, which her in bondage strong
 Detaynd; Yet Fortune, not with all this wrong
 Contented, greater mischiefe on her threw,
 And sorrowes heapt on her in greater throng;
 That whose heares her heavinesse, would rewe
 And pittie her sad plight, so chang'd from pleasaunt hew.

Whylest thus she in these hellish dens remayned,
 Wrapped in wretched cares and hearts unrest,
 It so befell, as Fortune had ordayned,
 That he which was their capitaine profest,
 And had the chiefe commaund of all the rest,
 One day, as he did all his prisoners vew,
 With lustfull eyes beheld that lovely guest,
 Faire Pastorella, whose sad mournefull hew
 Like the faire morning clad in misty fog did shew.

At sight whereof his barbarous heart was fired,
 And inly burnt with flames most raging whot,
 That her alone he for his part desired
 Of all the other pray which they had got,
 And her in mynde did to himselfe allot.
 From that day forth he kyndnesse to her showed,
 And sought her love by all the meanes he mote;
 With looks, with words, with gifts he oft her wowed,
 And mixed threats among, and much unto her vowed.

But all that ever he could doe or say
 Her constant mynd could not a whit remove,
 Nor draw unto the lure of his lewd lay,
 To graunt him favour or afford him love :
 Yet ceast he not to sew, and all waies prove,
 By which he mote accomplish his request,
 Saying and doing all that mote behove ;
 Ne day nor night he suffred her to rest,
 But her all night did watch, and all the day molest.

At last, when him she so impórtune saw,
 Fearing least he at length the raines would lend
 Unto his lust, and make his will his law,
 Sith in his powre she was to foe or friend ;
 She thought it best, for shadow, to pretend
 Some shew of favour, by him gracing small,
 That she thereby mote either freely wend,
 Or at more ease continue there his thrall :
 A little well is lent that gaineth more withall.

So from thenceforth, when love he to her made,
 With better tearmes she did him entertaine,
 Which gave him hope, and did him halfe perswade,
 That he in time her ioyance should obtaine :
 But when she saw, through that small favours gaine,
 That further then she willing was he prest :
 She found no meanes to barre him, but to faine
 A sodaine sicknesse which her sore opprest,
 And made unfit to serve his lawlesse mindes behest.

By meanes whereof she would not him permit
 Once to approach to her in privy,
 But onely mongst the rest by her to sit,
 Mourning the rigour of her malady,
 And seeking all things meete for remedy :
 But she resolv'd no remedy to fynde,
 Nor better cheare to shew in misery.
 Till Fortune would her captive bonds unbynde :
 Her sicknesse was not of the body but the mynde.

During which space that she thus sicke did lie,
 It chaunst a sort of merchants, which were wount
 To skim those coastes for bondmen there to buy,
 And by such trallicke after gaines to hunt
 Arrived in this isle, though bare and blunt,
 T' inquire for slaves ; where being readie met
 By some of these same theeves at th' instant brunt,
 Werc brought unto their captaine, who was set
 By his faire patients side with sorrowfull regret.

To whom they shewed, how those marchants were
 Arriv'd in place their bondslaves for to buy;
 And therefore pray'd that those same captives there
 Mote to them for their most commodity
 Be sold, and mongst them shared equally.
 This their request the captaine much appalled;
 Yet could he not their iust demand deny,
 And willed streight the slaves should forth be called,
 And sold for most advantage not to be forstalled.

Then forth the good old Melibee was brought.
 And Coridon with many other moe,
 Whom they before in diverse spoyles had caught;
 All which he to the marchants sale did shewe:
 Till some, which did the sundry prisoners knowe,
 Gan to inquire for that faire shepherdesse,
 Which with the rest they tooke not long agoe;
 And gan her forme and feature to expresse,
 The more t' augment her price through praise of comlinesse.

To whom the captaine in full angry wize
 Made answer, that "the mayd of whom they spake
 Was his owne purchase and his onely prize;
 With which none had to doe, ne ought partake,
 But he himselfe which did that conquest make;
 Little for him to have one silly lasse;
 Besides through sicknesse now so wan and weake,
 That nothing meet in merchandise to passe:"
 So shew'd them her, to prove how pale and weake she was.

The sight of whom, though now decayd and mard,
 And eke but hardly seene by candle-light,
 Yet, like a diamond of rich regard,
 In doubtfull shadow of the darkesome night
 With starrie beames about her shining bright,
 These marchants fixed eyes did so amaze,
 That what through wonder, and what through delight,
 A while on her they greedily did gaze,
 And did her greatly like, and did her greatly praise.

At last when all the rest them offred were,
 And prises to them placed at their pleasure,
 They all refused in regard of her;
 Ne ought would buy, however prisd with measure,
 Withouten her, whose worth above all threasure
 They did esteeme, and offred store of gold:
 But then the captaine, fraught with more displeasure,
 Bad them be still: "his love should not be sold;
 The rest take if they would; he her to him would hold."

Therewith some other of the chiefeſt theeues
 Boldly him bad ſuch iniurie forbear;e;
 For that ſame mayd, however it him greeues,
 Should with the reſt be ſold before him theare,
 To make the priſes of the reſt more deare.
 That with great rage he ſtoutly doth deny;
 And, fiercely drawing forth his blade, doth ſweare
 That whoſo hardie hand on her doth lay,
 It dearly ſhall aby, and death for handſell pay.

Thus, as they words amongst them multiply,
 They fall to ſtrokes the frute of too much talke,
 And the mad ſteele about doth fiercely fly,
 Not ſparing wight, ne leaving any balke,
 But making way for Death at large to walke;
 Who, the horror of the griesly night,
 In thouſand dreadful ſhapes doth mongſt them ſtalke,
 And makes huge havocke; whiles the candle-light
 Out-quenched leaves no ſkill nor difference of wight.

Like as a ſort of hungry dogs, ymet
 About ſome carcaſe by the common way,
 Doe fall together, ſtryving each to get
 The greateſt portion of the greedie pray;
 All on confuſed heapes themſelves aſſay,
 And ſnatch, and byte, and rend, and tug, and teare;
 That who them ſees would wonder at their fray,
 And who ſees not would be affrayd to heare:
 Such was the conflict of thoſe cruell brigants there.

But, firſt of all, their captives they doe kill,
 Leaſt they ſhould ioyne againſt the weaker ſide,
 Or riſe againſt the remnant at their will:
 Old Melibee is ſlaine; and him beſide
 His aged wife; with many others wide:
 But Coridon, eſcaping craftily,
 Creepes forth of dores, whiſt darknes him doth hide,
 And flies away as faſt as he can hie,
 Ne ſtayeth leave to take before his friends doe dye.

But Paſtorella, wofull wretched elfe,
 Was by the captaine all this while defended,
 Who, minding more her ſafety then himſelfe,
 His target alwayes over her pretended;
 By meanes whereof, that mote not be amended,
 He at the length was ſlaine and layd on ground,
 Yet holding faſt twixt both his armes extended
 Fayre Paſtorell, who with the ſelfe ſame wound [ſwound
 Launcht through the arme fell down with him in drearie

There lay she covered with confused preasse
 Of carcases, which dying on her fell:
 Tho, whenas he was dead, the fray gan cease;
 And each to other calling did compell
 To stay their cruell hands from slaughter fell,
 Sith they that were the cause of all were gone:
 Thereto they all attonce agreëd well;
 And, lighting candles new, gan search anone,
 How many of their friends were slaine, how many fone.

Their captaine there they cruelly found kild,
 And in his armes the dreary dying mayd,
 Like a sweet angell twixt two clouds uphild;
 Her lovely light was dimmed and decayd
 With cloud of death upon her eyes displayd;
 Yet did the cloud make even that dimmed light
 Seeme much more lovely in that darknesse layd,
 And twixt the twinckling of her eye-lids bright
 To sparke out litle beames, like starres in foggie night.

But, when they mov'd the carcases aside,
 They found that life did yet in her remaine;
 Then all their helps they busily applyde
 To call the soule backe to her home againe:
 And wrought so well, with labour and long paine,
 That they to life recovered her at last:
 Who, sighing sore, as if her hart in twaine
 Had riven bene and all her hart-strings brast,
 With drearie drouping eyne lookt up like one aghast.

There she beheld, that sore her griev'd to see,
 Her father and her friends about her lying,
 Herselfe sole left a second spoyle to bee
 Of those, that having saved her from dying
 Renew'd her death by timely death denying.
 What now is left her but to wayle and weepe,
 Wringing her hands, and ruefully loud crying!
 Ne cared she her wounds in teares to steepe,
 Albe with all their might those brigants her did keepe.

But when they saw her now reliv'd againe,
 They left her so, in charge of one, the best
 Of many worst, who with unkind disdaine
 And cruell rigour her did much molest;
 Scarse yeelding her due food or timely rest.
 And scarcely suffering her infestred wound,
 That sore her payn'd, by any to be drest.
 So leave we her in wretched thraldome bound.
 And turne we backe to Calidore, where we him found.

Who when he backe returned from the wood,
 And saw his shepheards cottage spoyled quight,
 And his love reft away; he wexed wood
 And halfe enraged at that ruefull sight;
 That even his hart, for very fell despight,
 And his owne flesh he readie was to teare:
 He chaunft, he griev'd, he fretted, and he sigh't,
 And fared like a furious wyld beare,
 Whose whelpes are stolne away, she being otherwhere.

Ne wight he found to whom he might complaine,
 Ne wight he found of whom he might inquire;
 That more increast the anguish of his paine:
 He sought the woods, but no man could see there;
 He sought the plaines, but could no tidings heare:
 The woods did nought but ecchoes vaine rebound;
 The playnes all waste and emptie did appeare;
 Where wont the shepheards oft their pypes resound,
 And feed an hundred flocks, there now not one he found.

At last, as there he romed up and downe,
 He chaunst one coming towards him to spy,
 That seem'd to be some sorie simple clowne,
 With ragged weedes, and lockes upstaring hye,
 As if he did from some late daunger fly,
 And yet his feare did follow him behynd:
 Who as he unto him approached nye,
 He mote perceive, by signes which he did fynd,
 That Coridon it was, the silly shepheards hynd.

Tho, to him running fast, he did not stay
 To greet him first, but askt where were the rest,
 Where Pastorell?—who full of fresh dismay,
 And gushing forth in teares, was so opprest,
 That he no word could speake, but smit his brest,
 And up to heaven his eyes fast-streming threw;
 Whereat the knight amaz'd, yet did not rest,
 But askt againe, What ment that rufull hew;
 Where was his Pastorell? Where all the other crew?

"Ah! well away," sayd he, then sighing sore,
 "That ever I did live this day to see,
 This dismall day, and was not dead before,
 Before I saw faire Pastorella dye!"
 "Die! out alas!" then Calidore did cry,
 "How could the death dare ever her to quell!
 But read thou, Shepheard, read what destiny
 Or other dyrefull hap from heaven or hell
 Hath wrought this wicked deed: doe feare away, and tell."

Tho, when the shepheard breathed had awhyle,
 He thus began; "Where shall I then commence
 This wofull tale? or how those brigants vyle
 With cruell rage and dreadfull violence
 Spoyld all our cots, and caried us from hence;
 Or how faire Pastorell should have bene sold
 To marchants, but was sav'd with strong defence;
 Or how those theeves, whilst one sought her to hold
 Fell all at ods, and fought through fury fierce and bold.

"In that same conflict (woe is me!) befell
 This fatall chaunce, this dolefull accident,
 Whose heavy tydings now I have to tell.
 First all the captives, which they here had hent,
 Were by them slaine by generall consent;
 Old Melibee and his good wife withall
 These eyes saw die, and dearely did lament
 But, when the lot to Pastorell did fall,
 Their Captaine long withstood, and did her death forstall.

"But what could he gainst all them doe alone?
 It could not boot; needs mote she die at last!
 I onely scapt through great confusions
 Of cryes and clamors, which amongst them past,
 In dreadfull darknesse, dreadfully aghast;
 That better were with them to have bene dead,
 Then here to see all desolate and wast,
 Despoyled of those ioyes and iollyhead,
 Which with those gentle shepheards here I wont to lead."

When Calidore these ruefull newes had raught,
 His hart quite deaded was with anguish great,
 And all his wits with doole were nigh distraught,
 That he is face, his head, his brest did beat,
 And death itselke unto himselke did threat;
 Oft cursing th' heavens, that so cruell were
 To her, whose name he often did repeat;
 And wishing oft, that he were present there
 When she was slaine, or had bene to her succour nere.

But after grieve awhile had had his course,
 And spent itselke in mourning, he at last
 Began to mitigate his swelling sourse,
 And in his mind with better reason cast
 How he might save her life, if life did last;
 Or, if that dead, how he her death might wreake;
 Sith otherwise he could not mend thing past;
 Or, if it to revenge he were too weake,
 Then for to die with her, and his lives threed to break.

Tho Coridon he prayd, sith he well knew
The readie way unto that theevish wonne,
To wend with him, and be his conduct trew
Unto the place, to see what should be donne:
But he, whose hart through fearé was late fordonne,
Would not for ought be drawne to former drede;
But by all meanes the daunger knowne did shonne:
Yet Calidore so well him wrought with meed,
And faire bespoke with words, that he at last agreed.

So forth they goe together (God before)
Both clad in shepherds weeds agreeably,
And both with shepherds hookes; but Calidore
Had, underneath, him armed privily:
Tho, to the place when they approached nye,
They chaunst, upon an hill not farre away,
Some flockes of sheepe and shepherds to espy;
To whom they both agreed to take their way,
In hope there newes to learne, how they mote best assay.

There did they find, that which they did not feare,
The self-same flockes the which those theeves had reft
From Melibee and from themselves whyleare;
And certaine of the theeves there by them left,
The which, for want of heards, themselves then kept:
Right well knew Coridon his owne late sheepe,
And, seeing them, for tender pittie wept:
But, when he saw the theeves which did them keepe,
His hart gan fayle, albe he saw them all asleepe.

But Calidore recomforting his grieve,
Though not his feare; for nought may feare disswade;
Him hardly forward drew, whereas the thiefe
Laying sleeping soundly in the bushes shade,
Whom Coridon him counseld to invade
Now all unwares, and take the spoyle away;
But he, that in his mind had closely made
A further purpose, would not so them slay,
But gently waking them gave them the time of day.

Tho, sitting downe by them upon the greene,
Of sundrie things he purpose gan to faine,
That he by them might certaine tydings weene
Of Pastorell, were she alive or slaine:
Mongst which the theeves them questioned againe,
What mister men, and eke from whence they were.
To whom they answer'd, as did appertaine,
That they were poore heardgroomes, the which whylere
Had from their maisters fled, and now sought hyre elsewhere.

Whereof right glad they seem'd, and offer made
 To hyre them well if they their flockes would keepe:
 For they themselves were evill groomes, they sayd,
 Unwont with heards to watch or pasture sheepe,
 But to forray the land, or scoure the deepe.
 Thereto they soone agreed, and earnest tooke
 To keepe their flockes for litle hyre and chepe;
 For they for better hyre did shortly lookē:
 So there all day they bode, till light the sky forsooke.

Tho, whenas towards darksome night it drew,
 Unto their hellish dens those theeves them brought,
 Where shortly they in great acquaintance grew,
 And all the secrets of their entrayles sought:
 There did they find, contrarie to their thought,
 That Pastorell yet lived; but all the rest
 Were dead, right so as Coridon had taught;
 Whereof they both full glad and blyth did rest,
 But chiefly Calidore, whom grieve had most possest.

At length, when they occasion fittest found,
 In dead of night, when all the theeves did rest
 After a late forray, and slept full sound,
 Sir Calidore him arm'd, as he thought best;
 Having of late by diligent inquest
 Provided him a sword of meanest sort;
 With which he streight went to the captaines nest:
 But Coridon durst not with him consort,
 Ne durst abide behind for dread of worse effort.

When to the cave they came, they found it fast
 But Calidore with huge resistlesse might
 The dores assayled, and the locks up brast:
 With noyse whereof the theefe awaking light
 Unto the entrance ran; where the bold Knight
 Encountering him with small resistance slew:
 The whiles faire Pastorell through great affright
 Was almost dead, misdoubting least of new
 Some uprore were like that which lately she did vew.

But whenas Calidore was comen in,
 And gan aloud for Pastorell to call,
 Knowing his voice, although not heard long sin,
 She sudden was revived therewithall,
 And wondrous ioy felt in her spirits thrall:
 Like him that being long in tempest tost,
 Looking each houre into Deathes mouth to fall,
 At length espyes at hand the happie cost,
 On which he safety hopes that earst feared to be lost.

Her gentle hart, that now long season past
 Had never ioyance felt nor chearefull thought,
 Began some smacke of comfort new to tast,
 Like lyfeful heat to nummed senses brought,
 And life to feele that long for death had sought.
 Ne lesse in hart reioyced Calidore,
 When he her found; but, like to one distraught
 And robd of reason, towards her him bore;
 A thousand times embrast, and kist a thousand more.

But now by this, with noyse of late uprore,
 The hue and cry was raysed all about;
 And all the brigants flocking in great store
 Unto the cave gan preasse, nought having doubt
 Of that was doen, and entered in a rout.
 But Calidore in th' entry close did stand,
 And, entertayning them with courage stout,
 Still slew the formost that came first to hand;
 So long, till all the entry was with bodies mand.

Tho, when no more could nigh to him approch,
 He breath'd his sword, and rested him till day;
 Which when he spyde upon the earth t' enroch,
 Through the dead carcasses he made his way,
 Mongst which he found a sword of better say,
 With which he forth went into th' open light,
 Where all the rest for him did readie stay,
 And, fierce assayling him, with all their might
 Gan all upon him lay: there gan a dreadfull fight.

How many flies in whottest summers day
 Do seize upon some beast, whose flesh is bare,
 That all the place with swarmes do overlay,
 And with their litle stings right felly fare;
 So many theeves about him swarming are,
 All which do him assayle on every side,
 And sore oppresse, ne any him doth spare;
 But he doth with his raging brond divide
 Their thickest troupes, and round about him scattreth wide.

Like as a lion mongst an heard of dere,
 Disperseth them to catch his choysest pray;
 So did he fly amongst them here and there,
 And all that nere him came did hew and slay,
 Till he had strowd with bodies all the way;
 That none his daunger daring to abide
 Fled from his wrath, and did themselves convey
 Into their caves, their heads from death to hide,
 Ne any left that victorie to him envide.

Then, backe returning to his dearest deare,
 He her gan to recomfort, all he might,
 With gladfull speaches and with lovely cheare;
 And forth her bringing to the ioyous light,
 Whereof she long had lackt the wishfull sight,
 Deviz'd all goodly meanes from her to drive
 The sad remembrance of her wretched plight:
 So her uneath at last he did revive
 That long had lyen dead, and made againe alive.

This doen, into those theevish dens he went,
 And thence did all the spoyles and treasures take,
 Which they from many long had robd and rent:
 But fortune now the victors meed did make;
 Of which the best he did his love betake;
 And also all those flockes, which they before
 Had rest from Melibee and from his make,
 He did them all to Coridon restore:
 So drove them all away, and his love with him bore.

CANTO XII.

Fayre Pastorella by great hap
 Her parents understands.
 Calidore doth the blatant beast
 Subdew, and bynd in bands.

LIKE as a ship, that through the ocean wyde
 Directs her course unto one certaine cost,
 It met of many a counter winde and tyde,
 With which her winged speed is let and crost,
 And she herselfe in stormie surges tost;
 Yet, making many a borde and many a bay,
 Still winneth way, ne hath her compasse lost;
 Right so it fares with me in this long way,
 Whose course is often stayd, yet never is astray.

For all that hetherto hath long defayd
 This gentle knight from sewing his first quest,
 Though out of course, yet hath not bene mis-sayd,
 To shew the courtesie by him profest
 Even unto the lowest and the least.
 But now I come into my course againe,
 To his atchievement of the blatant beast;
 Who all this while at will did range and raine,
 Whilst none was him to stop, nor none him to restraine.

Sir Calidore, when thus he now had raught
 Faure Pastorella from those brigants powre,
 Unto the Castle of Belgard her brought,
 Whereof was lord the good Sir Bellamoure;
 Who whylome was, in his youtthes freshest flowre,
 A lustie knight as ever wielded speare,
 And had endured many a dreadfull stoure
 In bloudy battell for a ladie deare,
 The fayrest ladie then of all that living were.

Her name was Claribell; whose father hight
 The lord of many ilands, farre renound
 For his great riches and his greater might:
 He, through the wealth wherein he did abound,
 This daughter thought in wedlocke to have bound
 Unto the Prince of Picteland, bordering nere;
 But she, whose sides before with secret wound
 Of love to Bellamoure empierced were,
 By all meanes shund to match with any forreign fere:

And Bellamour againe so well her pleased
 With dayly service and attendance dew,
 That of her love he was entyrelly seized,
 And closely did her wed, but knowne to few:
 Which when her father understood, he grew
 In so great rage that them in dongeon deepe
 Without compassion cruelly he threw;
 Yet did so streightly them asunder keepe,
 That neither could to company of th' other creepe.

Nathlesse Sir Bellamour, whether through grace
 Or secret guifts, so with his keepers wrought,
 That to his love sometimes he came in place;
 Whereof her wombe unwist to wight was fraught,
 And in dew time a mayden child forth brought:
 Which she streightway (for dread least if her syre
 Should know thereof to slay he would have sought)
 Delivered to her handmayd, that for hyre
 She should it cause be fostred under straunge attyre.

The trustie damzell bearing it abroad
 Into the emptie fields, where living wight
 Mote not bewray the secret of her lode,
 She forth gan lay unto the open light
 The litle babe, to take thereof a sight:
 Whom whylest she did with watrie cyne behold,
 Upon the litle brest, like christall bright,
 She mote perceive a little purple mold,
 That like a rose her silken leaves did faire unfold.

Well she it markt, and pittied the more,
 Yet could not remedie her wretched case;
 But, closing it againe like as before,
 Bedeaw'd with teares there left it in the place;
 Yet left not quite, but drew a little space
 Behind the bushes, where she her did hyde,
 To weet what mortall hand, or heavens grace,
 Would for the wretched infants helpe provyde;
 For which it loudly cald, and pittifully cryde.

At length a shepheard, which thereby did keepe
 His fleecie flocke upon the playnes around,
 Led with the infants cry that loud did weepe,
 Came to the place; where when he wrapped found
 Th' abandond spoyle, he softly it unbound;
 And, seeing there that did him pittie sore,
 He tooke it up and in his mantle wound;
 So home unto his honest wife it bore,
 Who as her owne it nurst and named evermore.

Thus long continu'd Claribell a thrall,
 And Bellamour in bands; till that her syre
 Departed life, and left unto them all:
 Then all the stormes of fortunes former yre
 Were turnd, and they to freedome did retyre.
 Thenceforth they ioy'd in happinesse together,
 And lived long in peace and love entyre,
 Without disquiet or dislike of ether,
 Till time that Calidore brought Pastorella thether.

Both whom they goodly well did entertaine;
 For Bellamour knew Calidore right well,
 And loved for his prowesse, sith they twaine
 Long since had fought in field: als Claribell
 Ne lesse did tender the faire Pastorell,
 Seeing her weake and wan through durance long.
 There they awhile together thus did dwell
 In much delight, and many ioyes among,
 Untill the damzell gan to wex more sound and strong.

Tho gan Sir Calidore him to advize
 Of his first quest, which he had long forlore,
 Asham'd to thinke how he that enterprize,
 The which the Faery Queene had long afore
 Bequeath'd to him, forslacked had so sore;
 That fowle he feared least reproachfull blame
 With foule dishonour him mote blot therefore;
 Besides the losse of so much loos and fame.
 As through the world thereby should glorifie his name.

Therefore, resolving to returne in hast
 Unto so great atchievement, he bethought
 To leave his love, now perill being past,
 With Claribell; whylest he that monster sought
 Throughout the world, and to destruction brought.
 So taking leave of his faire Pastorell,
 Whom to recomfort all the meanes he wrought,
 With thanks to Bellamour and Claribell,
 He went forth on his quest, and did that him befell.

But first, ere I doe his adventures tell
 In this exploite, me needeth to declare
 What did betide to the faire Pastorell,
 During his absence left in heavy care,
 Through daily mourning and nightly misfare:
 Yet did that auncient matrone all she might,
 To cherish her with all things choice and rare;
 And her owne handmayd, that Melissa hight,
 Appointed to attend her dewly day and night.

Who in a morning, when this maiden faire
 Was dighting her, having her snowy brest
 As yet not laced, nor her golden haire
 Into their comely tresses dewly drest,
 Chaunst to espy upon her yvory chest
 The rosie marke, which she remembered well
 That litle infant had, which forth she kest,
 The daughter of her Lady Claribell,
 The which she bore the whiles in prison she did dwell.

Which well avising, streight she gan to cast
 In her conceiptfull mynd that this faire mayd
 Was that same infant, which so long sith past
 She in the open fields had loosely layd
 To fortunes spoile, unable it to ayd:
 So, full of ioy, streight forth she ran in hast
 Unto her mistresse, being halfe dismayd,
 To tell her, how the heavens had her graste,
 To save her chylde, which in misfortunes mouth was plaste.

The sober mother seeing such her mood,
 Yet knowing not what meant that sodaine thro,
 Askt her, how mote her words be understood,
 And what the matter was that mov'd her so.
 "My lief," sayd she, "ye know that long ygo,
 Whilest ye in durance dwelt, ye to me gave
 A litle mayde, the which ye chylded tho;
 The same againe if now ye list to have,
 The same is yonder lady, whom High God did save."

Much was the lady troubled at that speach,
 And gan to question streight how she it knew.
 "Most certaine markes," sayd she, "do me it teach;
 For on her breast I with these eyes did vew
 The little purple rose which thereon grew,
 Whereof her name ye then to her did give,
 Besides, her countenaunce and her likely hew,
 Matched with equall years, do surely prieve
 That yond same is your daughter sure, which yet doth live."

The matrone stayd no lenger to enquire,
 But forth in hast ran to the straunger mayd;
 Whom catchling greedily, for great desire
 Rent up her brest, and bosome open layd,
 In which that rose she plainely saw displayd:
 Then, her embracing twixt her armes twaine,
 So long so held, and softly weeping sayd;
 "And livest thou, my daughter, now againe?
 And art thou yet alive, whom dead I long did faine?"

Tho further asking her of sundry things,
 And times comparing with their accidents,
 She found at last, by very certaine signes
 And speaking markes of passed monuments,
 That this young mayd, whom chance to her presents,
 Is her owne daughter, her owne infant deare.
 Tho, wondring long at those so straunge events,
 A thousand times she her embraced nere,
 With many a ioyfull kisse and many a melting teare.

Whoever is the mother of one chylde,
 Which having thought long dead she fyndes alive,
 Let her by prooffe of that which she hath fylde
 In her owne breast, this mothers ioy describe:
 For other none such passion can contrive
 In perfect forme, as this good lady felt,
 When she so faire a daughter saw survive,
 As Pastorella was; that nigh she swelt
 For passing ioy, which did all into pittie melt.

Thence running forth unto her loved lord,
 She unto him recounted all that fell:
 Who, ioyning ioy with her in one accord,
 Acknowledg'd, for his owne, faire Pastorell.
 There leave we them in ioy, and let us tell
 Of Calidore; who, seeking all this while
 That monstrous beast by finall force to quell,
 Through every place with restlesse paine and toile
 Him follow'd by the tract of his outragious spoile.

Through all estates he found that he had past,
In which he many massacres had left,
And to the clergy now was come at last;
In which such spoile, such havocke, and such theft
He wrought, that thence all goodnesse he bereft
That endlesse were to tell. The elfin knight,
Who now no place besides unsought had left,
At length into a monastere did light,
Where he him found despoyling all with maine and might.

Into their cloysters now he broken had,
Through which the monckes he chaced here and there,
And them pursu'd into their dortours sad,
And searched all their eels and secrets neare;
In which what filth and ordure did appeare,
Were yrkesome to report; yet that foule beast,
Nought sparing them, the more did tosse and teare,
And ransacke all their dennes from most to least,
Regarding nought religion nor their holy heast.

From thence into the sacred church he broke,
And robd the chancell, and the desks downe threw,
And altars fouled, and blasphemie spoke,
And the images, for all their goodly hew,
Did cast to ground, whilst none was them to rew;
So all confounded and disordered there:
But, seeing Calidore, away he flew,
Knowing his fatall hand by former feare;
But he him fast pursuing soone approached neare.

Him in a narrow place he overtooke,
And fierce assailing forst him turne againe:
Sternely he turnd againe, when he him strooke
With his sharpe steele, and ran at him amaine
With open mouth, that seemed to containe
A full good pecke within the utmost brim,
All set with yron teeth in raunges twaine,
That terrifide his foes, and armed him,
Appearing like the mouth of Orcus griesly grim:

And therein were a thousand tongs empight
Of sundry kindes and sundry quality;
Some were of dogs, that barked day and night;
And some of cats, that wrawling still did cry;
And some of beares, that groynd continually;
And some of tygres, that did seeme to gren
And snar at all that ever passed by:
But most of them were tongues of mortall men,
Which spake reproachfully, not caring where nor when.

And them amongst were mingled here and there
 The tongues of serpents, with three-forked stings,
 That spat out poyson, and gore-bloudy gere,
 At all that came within his ravenings;
 And spake licentious words and hatefull things
 Of good and bad alike, of low and hie,
 Ne kesars spared he a whit nor kings;
 But either blotted them with infamie,
 Or bit them with his banefull teeth of iniury.

But Calidore, thereof no whit afraid,
 Rencountred him with so impetuous might,
 That th' outrage of his violence he stayd,
 And bet abacke threatning in vaine to bite,
 And spitting forth the poyson of his spight
 That fomed all about his bloody iawes:
 Tho, rearing up his former feete on hight,
 He rampt upon him with his ravenous pawes,
 As if he would have rent him with his cruell clawes:

But he right well aware, his rage to ward,
 Did cast his shield atweene; and, therewithall
 Putting his puissance forth, pursu'd so hard,
 That backward he enforced him to fall;
 And, being downe, ere he new helpe could call,
 His shield he on him threw, and fast downe held;
 Like as a bullocke, that in bloudy stall
 Of butchers balefull hand to ground is feld,
 Is forcibly kept downe, till he be thoroughly queld.

Full cruelly the beast did rage and rore
 To be downe held, and maystred so with might,
 That he gan fret and fume out bloudy gore,
 Striving in vaine to rere himself upright:
 For still, the more he strove, the more the knight
 Did him suppress, and forcibly subdew;
 That made him almost mad for fell despight:
 He grind, he bit, he scracht, he venom threw,
 And fared like a feend right horrible in hew:

Or like the hell-borne hydra, which they faine
 That great Alcides whilome overthrew,
 After that he had laboured long in vaine
 To crop his thousand heads, the which still new
 Forth budded, and in greater number grew.
 Such was the fury of this hellish beast,
 Whilest Calidore him under him downe threw;
 Who nathemore his heavy load releast,
 But aye, the more he rag'd, the more his powre increast.

Tho. when the beast saw he mote nought availle
 By force, he gan his hundred tongues apply,
 And sharply at him to revile and raile
 With bitter termes of shamefull infamy;
 Oft interlacing many a forged lie,
 Whose like he never once did speake, nor heare,
 Nor ever thought thing so unworthily:
 Yet did he nought, for all that, him forbearc,
 But strained him so streightly that he chokt him neare.

At last, whenas he found his force to shrinke
 And rage to quaille, he tooke a muzzle strong
 Of surest yron made with many a lincke;
 Therewith he mured up his mouth along,
 And therein shut up his blasphemous tong,
 For never more defaming gentle knight,
 Or unto lovely lady doing wrong:
 And thereunto a great long chaine he tight,
 With which he drew him forth, even in his own despight.

Like as whylome that strong Tirynthian swaine
 Brought forth with him the dreadfull dog of hell,
 Against his will fast bound in yron chaine,
 And roring horribly did him compell
 To see the hatefull sunne, that he might tell
 To griesly Pluto, what on earth was donne.
 And to the other damned ghosts which dwell
 For aye in darknesse which day-light doth shonne:
 So led this knight his captyve with like conquest wonne.

Yet greatly did the beast repine at those
 Straunge bands, whose like till then he never bore,
 Ne ever any durst till then impose;
 And chauffed inly, seeing now no more
 Him liberty was left aloud to rore:
 Yet durst he not draw backe, nor once withstand
 The proved powre of noble Calidore;
 But trembled underneath his mightie hand,
 And like a fearefull dog him followed through the land.

Him through all Faery land he follow'd so,
 As if he learned had obedience long,
 That all the people, whereso he did go,
 Out of their townes did round about him throng.
 To see him leade that beast in bondage strong;
 And seeing it, much wonder'd at the sight:
 And all such persons, as he earst did wrong,
 Reioyced much to see his captive plight,
 And much admyr'd the beast, but more admyr'd the knight.

Thus was this monster, by the maystring might
Of doughty Calidore, suppress and tamed,
That never more he mote endammadge wight
With his vile tongue, which many had defamed,
And many causelesse caused to be blamed:
So did he ecke long after this remaine,
Untill that, (whether wicked fate so framed
Or fault of men,) he broke his yron chaine,
And got into the world at liberty againe.

Thenceforth more mischiefe and more seath he wrought
To mortall men than he had done before;
Ne ever could, by any, more be brought
Into like bands, ne maystred any more:
Albe that, long time after Calidore,
The good Sir Pelleas him tooke in hand;
And after him Sir Lamoracke of yore;
And all his brethren borne in Britaine land;
Yet none of them could ever bring him into band.

So now he raungeth through the world againe,
And rageth sore in each degree and state;
Ne any is that may him now restraine,
He growen is so great and strong of late,
Barking and biting all that him doe bate,
Albe they worthy blame, or cleare of crime;
Ne spareth he most learned wits to rate,
Ne spareth he the gentle poets rime;
But rends, without regard of person or of time.

Ne may this homely verse, of many meanest,
Hope to escape his venemous despite,
More than my former writs, all were they cleanest
From blamefull blot, and free from all that wite
With which some wicked tongues did it backebite,
And bring into a mighty peres displeasure,
That never so deserved to endite;
Therefore do you, my rimes, keep better measure,
And seeke to please; that now is counted wise men threasure.

OF MUTABILITIE:

The Legend of Constance.

CANTO VI.

Proud Change (not pleas'd in mortall things
Beneath the moone to raigne)
Pretends, as well of gods as men,
To be the soveraine.

WHAT man that sees the ever-whirling wheele
Of Change, the which all mortall things doth sway,
But that thereby doth find, and plainly feeles,
How Mutability in them doth play
Her cruell sports to many mens decay?
Which that to all may better yet appeare,
I will rehearse, that whylome I heard say,
How she at first herselfe began to reare [beare.
Gainst all the gods, and th' empire sought from them to

But first, here falleth fittest to unfold
Her antique race and linage ancient,
As I have found it registred of old
In Faery land mongst records permanent.
She was, to weet, a daughter by descent
Of those old Titans that did whylome strive
With Saturnes sonne for heavens regiment;
Whom though high love of kingdome did deprive,
Yet many of their stemme long after did survive:

And many of them afterwards obtain'd
Great power of love, and high authority:
As Hecaté, in whose almighty hand
He plac't all rule and principality,
To be by her disposed diversly
To gods and men, as she them list divide;
And drad Bellona, that doth sound on hie
Warres and allarums unto nations wide,
That makes both heaven and earth to tremble at her pride.

So likewise did this Titanesse aspire
 Rule and dominion to herselfe to gaine;
 That as a goddesse men might her admire,
 And heavenly honours yield, as to them twaine;
 And first, on earth she sought it to obtaine;
 Where she such prooffe and sad examples shewed
 Of her great power, to many ones great paine,
 That not men onely (whom she soone subdewed)
 But eke all other creatures her bad dooings rewed.

For she the face of earthly things so changed,
 That all which Nature had establisht first,
 In good estate, and in meet order ranged,
 She did pervert, and all their statutes burst:
 And all the worlds faire frame (which none yet durst
 Of gods or men to alter or misguide)
 She alter'd quite; and made them all accurst
 That God had blest, and did at first provide
 In that still happy state for ever to abide.

Ne shee the lawes of Nature onely brake,
 But eke of iustice, and of policie;
 And wrong of right, and bad of good did make,
 And death for life exchanged foolishlie:
 Since which, all living wights have learned to die,
 And all this world is woxen daily worse.
 O pittious worke of Mutabilitie,
 By which we all are subiect to that curse,
 And death, instead of life, have sucked from our nurse!

And now, when all the earth she thus had brought
 To her behest and thrall'd to her might,
 She gan to cast in her ambitious thought
 T' attempt the empire of the heavens hight,
 And Iove himselfe to shoulder from his right.
 And first, she past the region of the ayre
 And of the fire, whose substance thin and slight
 Made no resistance, ne could her contraire,
 But ready to her pleasure did repaire.

Thence to the circle of the moone she clambe,
 Where Cynthia raignes in everlasting glory,
 To whose bright shining palace straight she came,
 All fairely deckt with heavens goodly story;
 Whose silver gates (by which there sate an hory
 Old aged sire, with howre-glasse in hand,
 Hight Tyme,) she entered, were he liefe or sory;
 Ne staide till she the highest stage had scand,
 Where Cynthia did sit, that never still did stand.

Her sitting on an ivory throne shee found,
 Drawne of two steeds, th' one black, the other white,
 Environ'd with tenne thousand starres around,
 That duly her attended day and night;
 And by her side there ran a page, that hight
 Vesper, whom we the evening-starre intend;
 That with his torche, still twinkling like twilight
 Her lightened all the way where she would wend
 And ioy to weary wandering travellers did lend:

That when the hardy Titanesse beheld
 The goodly building of her palace bright,
 Made of the heavens substance, and up-held,
 With thousand crystall pillors of huge hight;
 Shee gan to burne in her ambitious spright
 And t' envie her that in such glorie raigned.
 Eftsoones she cast by force and tortious might
 Her to displace, and to herselfe t' have gained
 The kingdome of the night, and waters by her wained.

Boldly she bid the goddesse downe descend,
 And let herselfe into that ivory throne;
 For she herselfe more worthy thereof wend,
 And better able it to guide alone;
 Whether to men whose fall she did bemone,
 Or unto gods whose state she did maligne,
 Or to th' infernall powers her need give lone
 Of her faire light and bounty most benigne,
 Herselfe of all that rule shee deemed most condigne.

But shee that had to her that soveraigne seat
 By highest Love assign'd, therein to beare
 Nights burning lamp, regarded not her threat,
 Ne yielded ought for favour or for feare;
 But, with sterno countenance and disdainfull cheare,
 Bending her horned browes, did put her back;
 And, boldly blaming her for coming there,
 Bade her attonce from heavens cost to pack,
 Or at her perill bide the wrathfull thunders wrack.

Yet nathemore the giantesse forbare;
 But boldly preacing on, raught forth her hand
 To pluck her downe perforce from off her chaire;
 And, there-with lifting up her golden wand,
 Threatened to strike her if she did with-stand:
 Whereat the starres, which round about her blazed,
 And eke the moones bright wagon still did stand,
 All beeing with so bold attempt amazed,
 And on her uncouth habit and sterne looke still gazed.

Meanwhile the lower world, which nothing knew
 Of all that chaunced here, was darkened quite;
 And eke the heavens, and all the heavenly crew
 Of happy wights, now unpurvaide of light,
 Were much afraid and wondred at that sight;
 Fearing lest Chaos broken had his chaine,
 And brought againe on them eternall night;
 But chiefly Mercury, that next doth raigne,
 Ran forth in haste unto the king of gods to plaine

All ran together with a great out-cry
 To Ioves faire palace fixt in heaven's hight;
 And, beating at his gates full earnestly,
 Gan call to him aloud with all their might,
 To know what meant that suddaine lack of light.
 The father of the gods, when this he heard,
 Was troubled much at their so strange affright,
 Doubting least Typhon were againe uprear'd,
 Or other his old foes that once him sorely fear'd.

Eftsoones the sonne of Maie forth he sent
 Downe to the circle of the moone, to knowe
 The cause of this so strange astonishment,
 And why shee did her wonted course forslowe;
 And, if that any were on earth belowe
 That did with charmes or magick her molest,
 Him to attache, and down to hell to throwe;
 But if from heaven it were, then to arrest
 The author, and him bring before his presence prest.

The wingd-foot god so fast his plumes did beat,
 That soon he came whereas the Titanesse
 Was striving with faire Cynthia for her seat;
 At whose strange sight and haughty hardinesse
 He wondred much, and feared her no lesse:
 Yet, laying feare aside to doe his charge,
 At last he bade her, with bold stedfastnesse,
 Ceasse to molest the moone to walke at large,
 Or come before high Iove her dooings to discharge.

And therewithall he on her shoulder laid
 His snaky-wreathed mace, whose awfull power
 Doth make both gods and hellish fiends affraid:
 Whereat the Titanesse did sternely lower,
 And stoutly answer'd; That in evill hower
 He from his Iove such message to her brought,
 To bid her leave faire Cynthias silver bower;
 Sith shee his Iove and him esteemed nought,
 No more then Cynthias selfe; but all their kingdoms sought.

The heavens herald staid not to reply,
 But past away, his doings to relate
 Unto his lord ; who now, in th' highest sky,
 Was placed in his principall estate,
 With all the gods about him congregate:
 To whom when Hermes had his message told,
 It did them all exceedingly amate,
 Save Love ; who changing nought his count'nance bold,
 Did unto them at length these speeches wise unfold.

“ Harken to mee awhile, ye heavenly powers :
 Ye may remember since th' earths cursed seed
 Sought to assaile the heavens eternall towers,
 And to us all exceeding feare did breed ;
 But, how we then defeated all their deed,
 Yee all doe know, and them destroyed quite ;
 Yet not so quite, but that there did succeed
 An off-spring of their blood, which did alite
 Upon the fruitfull earth, which doth us yet despise,

“ Of that bad seed is this bold woman bred,
 That now with bold presumption doth aspire
 To thrust faire Phœbe from her silver bed,
 And eke ourselves from heavens high empire,
 If that her might were match to her desire :
 Wherefore it now behoves us to advise
 What way is best to drive her to retire ;
 Whether by open force, or counsell wise :
 Arceid, ye sonnes of God, as best ye can devise.”

So having said, he ceast ; and with his brow
 (His black eye-brow, whose doomefull dreaded beek
 Is wont to wield the world unto his vow,
 And even the highest powers of heaven to check,)
 Made signe to them in their degrees to speake :
 Who straight gan cast their counsell grave and wise.
 Meanewhile th' earths daughter, though she nought did reek
 Of Hermes message, yet gan now advise
 What course were best to take in this hot bold emprise.

Eftsoones she thus resolv'd ; that whilst the gods
 (After returne of Hermes embassie)
 Were troubled, and amongst themselves at ods ;
 Before they could new counsells re-allie,
 To set upon them in that extasie,
 And take what fortune, time, and place would lend :
 So forth she rose, and through the purest sky
 To Loves high palace straight cast to ascend,
 To prosecute her plot : good onset boads good end.

Shee there arriving boldly in did pass;
 Where all the gods she found in counsell close,
 All quite unarm'd, as then her manner was.
 At sight of her they suddaine all arose
 In great amaze, ne wist what way to chose:
 But love, all fearlesse, forc't them to aby;
 And in his sovaine throne gan straight dispose
 Himselfe, more full of grace and maiestie,
 That mote encheare his friends, and foes mote terrifie.

That when the haughty Titanesse beheld,
 All were she fraught with pride and impudence,
 Yet with the sight thereof was almost queld;
 And, inly quaking, seem'd as reft of sense
 And voyd of speech in that drad audience;
 Untill that Iove himselfe herselfe bespake:
 "Speake, thou fraile woman, speake with confidence;
 Whence art thou, and what doost thou here now make?
 What idle errand hast thou earths mansion to forsake?"

Shee, halfe confused with his great commaund,
 Yet gathering spirit of her natures pride,
 Him boldly answer'd thus to his demaund;
 "I am a daughter, by the mothers side,
 Of her that is grand-mother magnifide
 Of all the gods, great Earth, great Chaos child:
 But by the fathers, be it not envie,
 I greater am in bloud, whereon I build,
 Then all the gods, though wrongfully from heaven exil'd.

"For Titan, as ye all acknowledge must,
 Was Saturnes elder brother by birth-right;
 Both sonnes of Uranus; but by uniust
 And guilefull meanes, through Corybantes slight,
 The younger thrust the elder from his right:
 Since which thou, Iove, iniuriously hast held
 The heavens rule from Titans sonnes by might;
 And them to hellish dungeons downe hast feld:
 Witnesse, ye heavens, the truth of all that I have told!"

Whil'st she thus spake, the gods that gave good eare
 To her bold words, and marked well her grace,
 (Beeing of stature tall as any there
 Of all the gods, and beautifull of face
 As any of the goddesses in place,
 Stood all astonied; like a sort of steeres,
 Mongst whom some beast of strange and forraine race
 Unwares is chaunc't, far straying from his peeres:
 So did their ghastly gaze bewray their hidden feares.

Till, having pauz'd awhile, Love thus bespake,
 "Will never mortall thoughts cease to aspire
 In this bold sort to heaven claime to make,
 And touch celestiall seates with earthly mire?
 I would have thought that bold Procrustes hire,
 Or Typhons fall, or proud Ixions paine
 Or great Prometheus tasteing of our ire,
 Would have suffiz'd the rest for to restraine,
 And warn'd all men, by their example, to refraine;

"But now this off-scum of that cursed fry
 Dare to renew the like bold enterprize,
 And challenge th' heritage of this our skie;
 Whom what should hinder, but that we likewise
 Should handle as the rest of her allies,
 And thunder-drive to hell?" With that he shooke
 His nectar-deawed locks, with which the skyes
 And all the world beneath for terror quooke,
 And eft his burning levin-brond in hand he tooke.

But when he looked on her lovely face,
 In which faire beames of beauty did appeare
 That could the greatest wrath soone turne to grace,
 (Such sway doth beauty even in heaven beare,)
 He staide his hand; and, having chang'd his cheare,
 He thus againe in milder wise began;
 "But ah! if gods should strive with flesh yfere
 Then shortly should the progeny of man
 Be rooted out, if Iove should doe still what he can."

"But thee, faire Titans child, I rather weene,
 Through some vaine errour, or inducement light,
 To see that mortall eyes have never seene;
 Or through ensample of thy sisters might,
 Bellona, whose great glory thou doost spight,
 Since thou hast seene her dreadfull power belowe:
 Mongst wretched men, dismaide with her affright,
 To bandie crownes, and kingdoms to bestowe:
 And sure thy worth no lesse then hers doth seem to showe.

"But wote thou this, thou hardy Titanesse,
 That not the worth of any living wight
 May challenge ought in heavens interesse;
 Much lesse the title of old Titans right:
 For we by conquest, of our sovaine might,
 And by eternall doome of Fates decree,
 Have wonne the empire of the heavens bright;
 Which to ourselves we hold, and to whom wee
 Shall worthy deeme partakers of our blisse to bee.

"Then cease thy idle claime, thou foolish gerle;
 And seeke by grace and goodnesse to obtaine
 That place, from which by folly Titan fell;
 Thereto thou maist perhaps, if so thou faine,
 Have Iove thy gracious lord and soveraigne."
 So having said, she thus to him replyde;
 "Ceasse, Saturnes sonne, to seeke by proffers vaine
 Of idle hopes t' allure mee to thy side,
 For to betray my right before I have it tride.

"But thee, O Iove, no equal iudge I deeme
 Of my desert, or of my dewfull right;
 That in thine owne behalfe maist partiall seeme:
 But to the highest him, that is belight
 Father of gods and men by equall might,
 To weet, the god of Nature, I appeale."
 Thereat Iove waxed wroth, and in his spright
 Did inly grudge, yet did it well conceale;
 And bade Dan Phœbus scribe her appellation seale.

Eftsoones the time and place appointed were,
 Where all, both heavenly powers and earthly wights,
 Before great Natures presence should appeare,
 For triall of their titles and best rights:
 That was, to weet, upon the highest hights
 Of Arlo-hill (who knowes not Arlo-hill?)
 That is the highest head, in all mens sights,
 Of my old father MOLE, whom Shepheards quill
 Renowned hath with hymnes fit for a rurall skill.

And, were it not ill fitting for this file
 To sing of hilles and woods mongst warres and knights,
 I would abate the sternenesse of my stile,
 Mongst these sterne stounds to mingle soft delights;
 And tell how Arlo, through Dianaes spights,
 (Beeing of old the best and fairest hill
 That was in all this Holy-Islands hights.)
 Was made the most unpleasant and most ill:
 Meane while, O Clio, lend Calliope thy quill.

Whylome when Ireland flourished in fame
 Of wealth and goodnesse, far above the rest
 Of all that beare the British Islands name,
 The gods then used, for pleasure and for rest,
 Oft to resort thereto, when seem'd them best:
 But none of all therein more pleasure found
 Then Cynthia, that is soveraine queene profest
 Of woods and forrests, which therein abound,
 Sprinkled with wholsom waters more then most on ground:

But mongst them all, as fittest for her game,
 (Either for chace of beasts with hound or bowe,
 Or for to shroude in shade from Phœbus flame,
 Or bathe in fountaines that doe freshly flowe
 Or from high hilles, or from the dales belowe,)
 She chose this Arlo; where shee did resort
 With all her nymphes enranged on a rowe,
 With whom the woody gods did oft consort;
 For with the nymphes the satyres love to play and sport:

Amongst the which there was a nymph that hight
 Molanna: daughter of old Father Mole,
 And sister unto Mulla faire and bright:
 Unto whose bed false Bregog whylome stole
 That Shepheard Colin dearely did condole,
 And made her lucklesse loves well knowne to be:
 But this Molanna, were she not so shole,
 Were no lesse faire and beautifull then shee:
 Yet, as she is, a fairer flood may no man see.

For first she springs out of two marble rocks,
 On which a grove of oakes high-mounted growes
 That as a girlond seemes to deck the locks
 Of some faire bride, brought forth with pompous shoves
 Out of her bowre, that many flowers strowes;
 So through the flowry dales she tumbling downe
 Through many woods and shady coverts flowes
 That on each side her silver channell crowne,
 Till to the plaine she come, whose valleyes shee drowne.

In her sweet streames Diana used oft,
 After her sweatic chace and toilesome play,
 To bathe herselfe; and, after, on the soft
 And downy grasse her dainty limbes to lay
 In covert shade, where none behold her may,
 For much she hated sight of living eye:
 Foolish god Faunus, though full many a day
 He saw her clad, yet longed foolishly
 To see her naked mongst her nymphes in privy.

No way he found to compasse his desire,
 But to corrupt Molauna, this her maid,
 Her to discover for some secret hire:
 So her with flattering words he first assaid;
 And, after, pleasing gifts for her purvaid,
 Queene-apples, and red cherries from the tree,
 With which he her allured and betraid
 To tell what time he might her lady see
 When she herselfe did bathe, that he might secret beo.

Thereto hee promist, if she would him pleasure
 With this small boone, to quit her with a better;
 To weet, that whereas shee had out of measure
 Long lov'd the Fanchin, who by nought did set her,
 That he would undertake for this to get her
 To be his love, and of him liked well:
 Besides all which, he vow'd to be her debter
 For many moe good turnes then he would tell;
 The least of which this little pleasure should excell.

The simple maid did yield to him anone;
 And eft him placed where he close might view
 That never any saw, save onely one,
 Who, for his hire to so foole-hardy dew,
 Was of his hounds devour'd in hunters hew.
 Tho, as her manner was on sunny day,
 Diana, with her nymphes about her, drew
 To this sweet spring; where, doffing her array,
 She bath'd her lovely limbes, for Iove a likely pray.

There Faunus saw that pleased much his eye,
 And made his hart to tickle in his brest,
 That, for great ioy of somewhat he did spy,
 He could him not containe in silent rest;
 But, breaking forth in laughter, loud profest
 His foolish thought: a foolish faune indeed,
 That couldst not hold thyselfe so hidden blest,
 But wouldest needs thine owne conceit areed!
 Babblers unworthy been of so divine a meed.

The goddessse, all abashed with that noise,
 In haste forth started from the guilty brooke;
 And, running straight whereas she heard his voice,
 Enclos'd the bush about, and there him tooke
 Like darred lark, not daring up to looke
 On her whose sight before so much he sought.
 Thenceforth they drew him by the hornes, and shooke
 Nigh all to peeces, that they left him nought;
 And then into the open light they forth him brought.

Like as an huswife, that with busic care
 Thinks of her dairie to make wondrous gaine,
 Finding whereas some wicked beast unware
 That breakes into her dayr' house, there doth draine
 Her creaming pannes, and frustrate all her paine;
 Hath, in some snare or gin set close behind,
 Entrapped him, and caught into her traine,
 Then thinks what punishment were best assign'd,
 And thousand deathes deviseth in her vengefull mind:

So did Diana and her maydens all
 Use silly Faunus, now within their baile :
 They mocke and scorne him, and him foule miscall;
 Some by the nose him pluckt, some by the taile,
 And by his goatish beard some did him haile:
 Yet he (poore soule!) with patience all did beare;
 For nought against their wils might countervaille:
 Ne ought he said, whatever he did heare;
 But, hanging downe his head, did like a mome appeare.

At length, when they had flouted him their fill,
 They gan to cast what penaunce him to give.
 Some would have gelt him; but that same would spill
 The wood-gods breed, which must for ever live:
 Others would through the river him have drive
 And ducked deepe; but that seem'd penaunce light:
 But most agreed, and did this sentence give,
 Him in deares skin to clad; and in that plight
 To hunt him with their hounds, himselfe save how hee might.

But Cynthia's selfe, more angry then the rest,
 Thought not enough to punish him in sport,
 And of her shame to make a gamesome iest:
 But gan examine him in straighter sort,
 Which of her nymphes, or other close consort,
 Him thither brought, and her to him betraid.
 He, much affeard, to her confessed short
 That 'twas Molanna which her so bewraid.
 Then all attonce their hands upon Molanna laid.

But him (according as they had decreed)
 With a deeres-skin they covered, and then chast
 With all their hounds that after him did speed;
 But he, more speedy, from them fled more fast
 Then any deere; so sore him dread aghast.
 They after follow'd all with shrill out-cry,
 Shouting as they the heavens would have brast;
 That all the woods and dales, where he did flie,
 Did ring againe, and loud reeccho to the skie.

So they him follow'd till they weary were;
 When, back returning to Molann' againe,
 They, by commaund'ment of Diana, there
 Her whelm'd with stones: Yet Faunus, for her paine,
 Of her beloved Fanchin did obtaine,
 That her he would receive unto his bed.
 So now her waves passe through a pleasant plaine,
 Till with the Fanchin she herselfe doe wed,
 And both combin'd, themselves in one faire river spred.

Nath'lesse Diana, full of indignation,
 Thenceforth abandond her delicious brooke:
 In whose sweete streame, before that bad occasion,
 So much delight to bathe her limbes she tooke:
 Ne onely her, but also quite forsooke
 All those faire forrests about Arlo hid;
 And all that mountaine, which doth overlooke
 The richest champion that may else be rid;
 And the faire Shure, in which are thousand salmons bred.

Them all, and all that she so deare did way,
 Thenceforth she left; and, parting from the place,
 Thereon an heavy haplesse curse did lay;
 To weet, that wolves, where she was wont to space
 Shou'd harbour'd be and all those woods deface,
 And thieves should rob and spoile that coast around.
 Since which, those woods, and all that goodly chase
 Doth to this day with wolves and thieves abound:
 Which too-too true that lands in-dwellers since have found.

CANTO VII.

Peeling from Iove to Natures bar,
 Bold Alteration pleades
 Large evidence: but Nature soone
 Her righteous doome areads.

Ar! whither dost thou now, thou greater muse,
 Me from these woods and pleasing forrests bring?
 And my fraile spirit, that dooth oft refuse
 This too high flight unfit for her weake wing,
 Lift up aloft, to tell of heavens king
 (Thy souveraine sire) his fortunate successe;
 And victory in bigger noates to sing,
 Which he obtain'd against that Titanesse,
 That him of heavens empire sought to dispossesse?

Yet, sith I needs follow thy behest,
 Doe thou my weaker wit with skill inspire,
 Fit for this turne; and in my sable brest
 Kindle fresh sparks of that immortall fire
 Which learned minds inflameth with desire
 Of heavenly things: for who, but thou alone
 That art yborne of heaven and heavenly sire,
 Can tell things doen in heaven so long ygone,
 So farre past memory of man that may be knowne?

Now, at the time that was before agreed,
 The gods assembled all on Arlo Hill;
 As well those that are sprung of heavenly seed,
 As those that all the other world doe fill,
 And rule both sea and land unto their will:
 Onely th' infernall powers might not appeare;
 As well for horror of their count'naunce ill,
 As for th' unruly fiends which they did feare;
 Yet Pluto and Prosérpina were present there.

And thither also came all other creatures,
 Whatever life or motion doe retaine,
 According to their sundry kinds of features;
 That Arlo scarsly could them all containe;
 So full they filled every hill and plaine:
 And had not Natures Sergeant (that is Order)
 Them well disposed by his buisie paine,
 And raunged farre abroad in every border,
 They would have caused much confusion and disorder.

Then forth issew'd (great goddesse) great Dame Nature,
 With goodly port and gracious maiesty,
 Being far greater and more tall of stature
 Than any of the gods or powers on hie;
 Yet certes by her face and physnomy,
 Whether she man or woman inly were,
 That could not any creature well descry;
 For, with a veile that wimpled every where,
 Her head and face was hid that mote to none appeare.

That, some doe say, was so by skill devized,
 To hide the terror of her uncouth hew
 From mortall eyes that should be sore agrized;
 For that her face did like a lion shew,
 That eye of wight could not indure to view:
 But others tell that it so beautilous was,
 And round about such beames of splendor threw,
 That it the sunne a thousand times did pass,
 Ne could be seene but like an image in a glass.

That well may seemen true; for well I weene
 That this same day, when she on Arlo sat,
 Her garment was so bright and wondrous sheene,
 That my fraile wit cannot devize to what
 It to compare, nor finde like stuffe to that:
 As those three sacred saints, though else most wise,
 Yet on Mount Thabor quite their wits forgot
 When they their glorious lord in strange disguise
 Transfigur'd saw; his garments so did daze their eyes.

In a fayre plaine upon an equall hill
 She placed was in a pavilion;
 Not such as craftesmen by their idle skill
 Are wont for princes states to fashion;
 But th' earth herself, of her owne motion,
 Out of her fruitfull bosome made to growe
 Most dainty trees, that, shooting up anon,
 Did seeme to bow their bloosming heads full lowe
 For homage unto her, and like a throne did shew.

So hard it is for any living wight
 All her array and vestiments to tell,
 That old Dan Geffrey (in whose gentle spright,
 The pure well-head of poesie did dwell)
 In his Foules Parley durst not with it mell,
 But it transferred to Alane, who he thought
 Had in his Plaint of Kindes describ'd it well:
 Which who will read set forth so as it ought,
 Go seek he out that Alane where he may be sought.

And all the earth far underneath her feete
 Was dight with flowers, that voluntary grew
 Out of the ground, and sent forth odours sweet;
 Tenne thousand mores of sundry sent and hew,
 That might delight the smell, or please the view,
 The which the nymphes from all the brooks thereby
 Had gathered, they at her foot-stoole threw;
 That richer seem'd then any tapestry,
 That princes bowres adorne with painted imagery.

And Mole himsele, to honour her the more,
 Did deck himself in freshest faire attire;
 And his high head, that seemeth alwaies hore
 With hardned frosts of former winters ire,
 He with an oaken girland now did tire,
 As if the love of some new nymph late scene
 Had in him kindled youthfull fresh desire,
 And made him change his gray attire to greene:
 Ah! gentle Mole, such ioyance hath thee well bescene.

Was never so great ioyance since the day
 That all the gods whylome assembled were
 On Hæmus hill in their divine array,
 To celebrate the solemne bridall cheare
 Twixt Peleus and Dame Thetis pointed there;
 Where Phœbus self, that god of poets hight,
 They say, did sing the spousall hymne full cleere,
 That all the gods were ravisht with delight
 Of his celestiall song and musicks wondrous might.

This great grandmother of all creatures bred,
 Great Nature, ever young, yet full of eld;
 Still mooving, yet unmoved from her sted;
 Unseene of any, yet of all beheld;
 Thus sitting in her throne, as I have teld,
 Before her came Dame Mutabilitie;
 And, being lowe before her presence feld
 With meek obaysance and humilitie,
 Thus gan her plaintif plea with words to amplifie:

"To thee, O greatest goddesse, onely great,
 An humble suppliant loe! I lowely fly,
 Seeking for right, which I of thee entreat;
 Who right to all dost deale indifferently,
 Damning all wrong and tortious iniurie,
 Which any of thy creatures doe to other
 Oppressing them with power unequally,
 Sith of them all thou art the equall mother,
 And knittest each to each, as brother unto brother.

"To thee therefore of this same Love I plaine,
 And of his fellow gods that faine to be,
 That challenge to themselves the whole worlds raig, n,
 Of which the greatest part is due to me,
 And heaven itselfe by heritage in fee:
 For heaven and earth I both alike do deeme,
 Sith heaven and earth are both alike to thee;
 And gods no more then men thou doest esteeme:
 For even the gods to thee, as men to gods, do seeme.

"Then weigh, O soveraigne goddesse, by what right
 These gods do claime the worlds whole soverainty;
 And that is onely dew unto my might
 Arrogate to themselves ambitiously:
 As for the gods owne principality,
 Which Love usurpes uniuistly, that to be
 My heritage, Love's selfe cannot deny,
 From my great grandsire Titan unto mee
 Deriv'd by dew descent; as is well known to thee.

"Yet mauer Love, and all his gods beside,
 I doe possesse the worlds most regiment;
 As if ye please it into parts divide,
 And every parts inholders to convent,
 Shall to your eyes appeare incontinent.
 And first, the earth (great mother of us all)
 That only seems unmov'd and permanent,
 And unto Mutability not thrall,
 Yet is she chang'd in part, and eeke in generall:

“For all that from her springs, and is ybredde,
 However fayre it flourish for a time,
 Yet see we soone decay; and, being dead,
 To turne again unto their earthly slime
 Yet, out of their decay and mortall crime,
 We daily see new creatures to arize,
 And of their Winter spring another Prime,
 Unlike in forme, and chang'd by strange disguise:
 So turne they still about, and change in restlesse wise.

“As for her tenants; that is, man and beasts;
 The beasts we daily see massâcred dy
 And thralls and vassals unto mens beaests;
 And men themselves doe change continually,
 From youth to eld, from wealth to poverty,
 From good to bad, from bad to worst of all:
 Ne doe their bodies only flit and fly;
 But ecke their minds (which they immortall call)
 Still change and vary thoughts, as new occasions fall.

“Ne is the water in more constant case;
 Whether those same on high, or these bellowe:
 For th' ocean moveth still from place to place;
 And every river still doth ebbe and flowe;
 Ne any lake, that seems most still and slowe,
 Ne poole so small, that can his smoothnesse holde
 When any winde doth under heaven blowe;
 With which the clouds are also tost and roll'd,
 Now like great hills; and streight, like sluces, them unfold.

“So likewise are all watry living wights
 Still tost and turned with continuall change,
 Never abiding in their stedfast plights:
 The fish, still floting, doe at random range,
 And never rest, but evermore exchange
 Their dwelling places, as the streames them carrie:
 Ne have the watry foules a certaine grange.
 Wherein to rest, ne in one stead do tarry;
 But flitting still doe flie, and still their places vary.

“Next is the ayre: which who feeles not by sense
 (For of all sense it is the middle meane)
 To flit still, and with subtill influence
 Of his thin spirit all creatures to maintaine
 In state of life? O weake life! that does leane
 On thing so fickle as th' unsteady ayre.
 Which every howre is chang'd, and alfred cleane
 With every blast that bloweth fowle or faire:
 The faire doth it prolong; the fowle doth it impaire.

"Therein the changes infinite beholde,
Which to her creatures every minute chaunce;
Now boyling hot; streight friezing deadly cold;
Now faire sun-shine, that makes all skip and daunce;
Streight bitter storms, and balefull countenance
That makes them all to shiver and to shake:
Rayne, hayle, and snowe do pay them sad penance,
And dreadfull thunder-claps (that make them quake)
With flames and flashing lights that thousand changes make.

"Last is the fire; which, though it live for ever,
Ne can be quenched quite; yet, every day,
We see his parts, so soone as they do sever,
To lose their heat and shortly to decay;
So makes himself his owne consuming pray;
Ne any living creatures doth he breed;
But all, that are of others bredd, doth slay;
And with their death his cruell life dooth feed;
Nought leaving but their barren ashes without seede.

"Thus all these fower (the which the groundwork bee
Of all the world and of all living wights)
To thousand sorts of change we subject see:
Yet are they chang'd by other wondrous slights
Into themselves, and lose their native might;
The fire to aire, and th' ayre to water sheere,
And water into earth; yet water fights
With fire, and aire with earth, approaching neere;
Yet all are in one body, and as one appeare.

"So in them all raignes Mutabilitie;
However these, that gods themselves do call,
Of them doe claime the rule and soverainty;
As Vesta, of the fire æthereall;
Vulcan, of this with us so usuall;
Ops, of the earth; and Iuno, of the ayre;
Neptune, of seas; and nymphes, of rivers all:
For all those rivers to me subiect are;
And all the rest, which they usurp, be all my share.

"Which to approven true, as I have told,
Vouchsafe, O goddesse, to thy presence call
The rest which doe the world in being hold;
As times and seasons of the yeare that fall:
Of all the which demand in generall,
Or iudge thyselfe, by verdict of thine eye,
Whether to me they are not subiect all."
Nature did yeeld thereto; and by-and-by
Bade Order call them all before her maiesty.

So forth issew'd the seasons of the yeare:
 First, lusty Spring all dight in leaves of flowres
 That freshly budded and new bloosmes did beare,
 In which a thousand birds had built their bowres
 That sweetly sung to call forth paramours;
 And in his hand a iavelin he did beare,
 And on his head (as fit for warlike stoures)
 A guilt engraven morion he did weare;
 That as some did him love, so others did him feare.

Then came the iolly Sommer, being dight
 In a thin silken cassock coloured greene,
 That was unlyned all, to be more light:
 And on his head a girlond well besene
 He wore, from which as he had chauffed been
 The sweat did drop; and in his hand he bore
 A bowe and shaftes, as he in forrest greene
 Had hunted late the libbard or the bore,
 And now would bathe his limbes with labor heated sore.

'Then came the Autumne all in yellow clad
 As though he ioyed in his plentious store,
 Laden with fruits that made him laugh, full glad
 That he had banisht hunger, which to-fore
 Had by the belly oft him pinched sore:
 Upon his head a wreath, that was enrold
 With ears of corne of every sort, he bore,
 And in his hand a sickle he did holde,
 To reape the ripened fruits the which the earth had yold.

Lastly, came Winter cloathed all in frize,
 Chattering his teeth for cold that did him chill;
 Whil'st on his hoary beard his breath did freese,
 And the dull drops, that from his purpled bill
 As from a limbeck did adown distill:
 In his right hand a tipped staffe he held,
 With which his feeble steps he stayed still;
 For he was faint with cold, and weak with eld;
 That scarce his loosed limbes he hable was to weld.

These, marching softly, thus in order went.
 And after them the monthes all riding came;
 First, sturdy March, with brows full sternly bent
 And armed strongly, rode upon a ram,
 The same which over Hellespontus swam;
 Yet in his hand a spade he also hent,
 And in a bag all sorts of seeds ysame,
 Which on the earth he strowed as he went,
 And fild her womb with fruitfull hope of nourishment.

Next came fresh Aprill, full of lustyhed,
 And wanton as a kid whose horne new buds:
 Upon a bull he rode, the same which led
 Europa floting through th' Argolick fluids:
 His hornes were gilden all with golden studs,
 And garnished with garlonds goodly dight
 Of all the fairest flowres and freshest buds
 Which th' earth brings forth; and wet he seem'd in sight
 With waves, through which he waded for his loves delight

Then came faire May, the fayrest mayd on ground,
 Deckt all with dainties of her seasons pryde,
 And throwing flowres out of her lap around:
 Upon two brethrens shoulders she did ride,
 The twinnes of Leda; which on cyther side
 Supported her like to their soveraine queene:
 Lord! how all creatures laught when her they spide
 And leapt and daunc't as they had ravisht beene!
 And Cupid selfe about her fluttred all in greene.

And after her came iolly Iune, arrayd
 All in greene leaves, as he a player were:
 Yet in his time he wrought as well as playd,
 That by his plough-yrons mote right well appeare:
 Upon a crab he rode, that him did beare
 With crooked crawling steps an uncouth pase,
 And backward yode, as bargemen wont to fare
 Bending their force contráry to their face;
 Like that ungracious crew which faines demurest grace.

Then came hot Iuly boyling like to fire,
 That all his garments he had cast away:
 Upon a lyon raging yet with ire
 He boldly rode, and made him to obey:
 (It was the beast that whylome did forray
 The Némæan forrest, till th' Amphytrionide
 Him slew, and with his hide did him array:)
 Behinde his backe a sithe, and by his side
 Under his belt he bore a sickle circling wide.

The sixt was August, being rich arrayd
 In garment all of gold downe to the ground:
 Yet rode he not, but led a lovely mayd
 Forth by the lilly hand, the which was cround
 With eares of corne, and full her hand was found:
 That was the righteous virgin, which of old
 Liv'd here on earth, and plenty made abound;
 But, after Wrong was lov'd and Iustice solde,
 She left th' unrighteous world, and was to heaven extold.

Next him September marched eeke on foote;
 Yet was he heavy laden with the spoyle
 Of harvests riches, which he made his boot,
 And him enricht with bounty of the soyle:
 In his one hand, as fit for harvests toyle,
 He held a knife-hook; and in th' other hand
 A paire of waights, with which he did assoyle
 Both more and lesse, where it in doubt did stand,
 And equall gave to each as Iustice duly scann'd.

Then came October full of merry glee;
 For yet his noule was totty of the must,
 Which he was treading in the wine-fats see,
 And of the ioyous oyle, whose gentle gust
 Made him so frolick and so full of lust:
 Upon a dreadfull scorpion he did ride,
 The same which by Diinaes doom uniust
 Slew great Orion; and eeke by his side
 He had his ploughing-share and coulter ready tyde.

Next was November; he full grosse and fat
 As fed with lard, and that right well might seeme;
 For he had been a satting hogs of late,
 That yet his browes with sweat did reek and steem,
 And yet the season was full sharp and breem;
 In planting eeke he took no small delight:
 Whereon he rode, not easie was to deeme;
 For it a dreadfull centaure was in sight,
 The seed of Saturne and faire Nais, Chiron hight.

And after him came next the chill December:
 Yet he, through merry feasting which he made
 And great bonfires, did not the cold remember;
 His Saviours birth his mind so much did glad:
 Upon a shaggy-bearded goat he rode,
 The same wherewith Dan Iove in tender yeares,
 They say, was nourisht by th' Iean mayd;
 And in his hand a broad deepe bowle he beares,
 Of which he freely drinks an health to all his peeres.

Then came old January, wrapped well
 In many weeds to keep the cold away;
 Yet did he quake and quiver like to quell,
 And blowe his nayles to warme them if he may;
 For they were numbd with holding all the day
 An hatchet keene, with which he felled wood
 And from the trees did lop the needlesse spray:
 Upon an huge great earth-pot steane he stood,
 From whose wide mouth there flowed forth the Romano

[flood.

And lastly came cold February, sitting
 In an old wagon, for he could not ride,
 Drawne of two fishes for the season fitting,
 Which through the flood before did softly slyde
 And swim away; yet had he by his side
 His plough and harness fit to till the ground,
 And tooles to prune the trees, before the pride
 Of hasting Prime did make them burgein round.
 So past the twelve months forth, and their dew places found.

And after these there came the Day and Night,
 Riding together both with equall pace;
 Th' one on a palfrey blacke, the other white:
 But Night had covered her uncomely face
 With a blacke veile, and held in hand a mace,
 On top whereof the moon and stars were pight,
 And Sleep and Darknesse round about did trace:
 But Day did beare upon his scepters light
 The goodly sun encompassed all with beamēs bright.

Then came the Howres, faire daughters of high Love
 And timely Night; the which were all endowed
 With wondrous beauty fit to kindle love;
 But they were virgins all, and love eschewed
 That might forslack the charge to them foreshewed
 By mighty Love; who did them porters make
 Of heavens gate (whence all the gods issued)
 Which they did dayly watch, and nightly wake
 By even turnes, no over did their charge forsake.

And after all came Life; and lastly Death:
 Death with most grim and griesly visage seene,
 Yet is he nought but parting of the breath;
 Ne ought to see, but like a shade to weene,
 Unbodied, unsoul'd, unheard, unseene:
 But Life was like a faire young lusty boy,
 Such as they faine Dan Cupid to have beene,
 Full of delightfull health and lively ioy,
 Deckt all with flowres and wings of gold fit to employ.

When these were past, thus gan the Titanesse;
 "Lo! mighty mother, now be iudge, and say
 Whether in all thy creatures more or lesse
 CHANGE doth not raign and beare the greatest sway;
 For who sees not that time on all doth pray?
 But times do change and move continually:
 So nothing here long standeth in one stay:
 Wherefore this lower world who can deny
 But to be subiect still to Mutabilitie?"

Then thus gan Iove; "right true it is, that these
 And all things else that under heaven dwell
 Are chaung'd of time, who doth them all disseise
 Of being: but who is it (to me tell)
 That Time himselfe doth move and still compell
 To keepe his course? Is not that namely wee,
 Which poure that vertue from our heavenly cell
 That moves them all, and makes them changed be?
 So them we gods doe rule, and in them also thee."

To whom thus Mutability; "The things,
 Which we see not how they are mov'd and swayd,
 Ye may attribute to yourselves as kings,
 And say, they by your secret power are made:
 But what we see not, who shall thus perswade?
 But were they so, as ye them faine to be,
 Mov'd by your might, and ordered by your ayde,
 Yet what if I can prove, that even yee
 Yourselves are likewise chang'd, and subiect unto mee?"

"And first, concerning her that is the first,
 Even you, faire Cynthia; whom so much ye make
 Loves dearest darling, she was bred and nurst
 On Cynthus hill, whence she her name did take;
 Then is shee mortall borne, howso ye crake:
 Besides, her face and countenance every day
 We changed see and sundry forms partake,
 Now hornd, now round, now bright, now brown and gray:
 So that as changefull as the moone men use to say.

"Next Mercury; who though he lesse appeare
 To change his hew, and alwayes seeme as one;
 Yet he his course doth alter every yeare,
 And is of late far out of order gone:
 So Venus eeke, that goodly paragone,
 Though faire all night, yet is she darke all day:
 And Phœbus self, who lightsome is alone,
 Yet is he oft eclipsed by the way,
 And fills the darkned world with terror and dismay.

"Now Mars, that valiant man, is changed most;
 For he sometimes so far runs out of square,
 That he his way doth seem quite to have lost,
 And cleane without his usuall sphere to fare;
 That even these star-gazers stonisht are
 At sight thereof, and damne their lying bookes:
 So likewise grim Sir Saturne oft doth spare
 His sterne aspect, and calme his crabbed lookes:
 So many turning cranks these have, so many crookes.

" But you, Dan Iove, that only constant are,
 And king of all the rest, as ye do clame,
 Are you not subject eeke to this misfare?
 Then let me aske you this withouten blame;
 Where were ye borne? Some say in Crete by name,
 Others in Thebes, and others otherwhere;
 But, wheresoever they comment the same,
 They all consent that ye begotten were
 And borne here in this world; ne other can appeare.

" Then are ye mortall borne, and thrall to me;
 Unlesse the kingdome of the sky ye make
 Immortall and unchangeable to be:
 Besides, that power and vertue, which ye spake,
 That ye here worke, doth many changes take,
 And your owne natures change: for each of you,
 That vertue have or this or that to make,
 Is chekt and changed from his nature trew,
 By others opposition or obliquid view.

" Besides, the sundry motions of your spheares,
 So sundry waies and fashions as clerkes faine,
 Some in short space, and some in longer yeares;
 What is the same but alteration plaine?
 Onely the starrie skie doth still remaine:
 Yet do the starres and signes therein still move,
 And even itself is mov'd, as wizards saine.
 But all that moveth doth mutation love:
 Therefore both you and them to me I subiect prove.

" Then since within this wide great universe
 Nothing doth firme and permanent appeare,
 But all things tost and turned by transverse;
 What then should let, but I aloft should reare
 My trophee, and from all the triumph beare?
 Now iudge then, O thou greatest goddesse trew,
 According as thyselfe doest see and heare,
 And unto me addoom that is my dew:
 That is, the rule of all; all being rul'd by you."

So having ended, silence long ensewed;
 Ne Nature to or fro spake for a space,
 But with firme eyes asfixt the ground still view'd.
 Meane while all creatures, looking in her face,
 Expecting th' end of this so doubtfull case,
 Did hang in long suspence what would ensue,
 To whether side should fall the soveraigne place:
 At length she, looking up with chearefull view,
 The silence brake, and gave her doome in speeches few:

"I well consider all that ye have sayd;
 And find that all things stedfastnes doe hate
 And changed be; yet, being rightly wayd,
 They are not changed from their first estate;
 But by their change their being doe dilate;
 And, turning to themselves at length againe,
 Doe worke their owne perfection so by fate:
 Then over them Change doth not rule and raigne;
 But they raigne over Change, and doe their states maintaine.

"Cease therefore, daughter, further to aspire,
 And thee content thus to be rul'd by me:
 For thy decay thou seekst by thy desire:
 But time shall come that all shall changed bee,
 And from thenceforth none no more change shall see."
 So was the Titaness put downe and whist,
 And love confirm'd in his imperiall see.
 Then was that whole assembly quite dismiss,
 And Natures selfe did vanish, whither no man wist.

THE VIIITH CANTO, UNPERFITE.

WHEN I bethinke me on that speech whyleare
 Of Mutability, and well it way;
 Me seemes, that though she all unworthy were
 Of the heav'ns rule; yet, very sooth to say,
 In all things else she bears the greatest sway:
 Which makes me loath this state of life so tickle,
 And love of things so vaine to cast away;
 Whose flowring pride, so fading and so fickle,
 Short Time shall soon cut down with his consuming sickle!

Then gin I thinke on that which Nature sayd,
 Of that same time when no more change shall be,
 But stedfast rest of all things, firmly stayd
 Upon the pillours of Eternity,
 That is contrayr to Mutabilitie:
 For all that moveth doth in change delight:
 But thenceforth all shall rest eternally
 With him that is the God of Sabaoth hight:
 O! that great Sabaoth God, grant me that Sabbaths sight!

EPITHALAMION.

---

YE learned sisters, which have oftentimes
Beene to me ayding, others to adorne,
Whom ye thought worthy of your gracefull rymes,
That even the greatest did not greatly scorne
To heare theyr names sung in your simple layes,
But ioyed in theyr praise;
And when ye list your own mishaps to mourne,
Which death, or love, or fortunes wreck did rayse,
Your string could soone to sadder tenor turne,
And teach the woods and waters to lament
Your dolefull dreriment:
Now lay those sorrowfull complaints aside;
And, having all your heads with girlands crownd,
Helpe me mine owne loves prayses to resound;
Ne let the same of any be envie:
So Orpheus did for his owne bride!
So I unto my selfe alone will sing;
The woods shall to me answer, and my eccho ring.

Early, before the worlds light-giving lampe
His golden beame upon the hills doth spred,
Having disperst the nights unchearefull dampe,
Doe ye awake; and, with fresh lustyhed,
Go to the bowre of my beloved love,
My truest turtle dove;
Bid her awake; for Hymen is awake,
And long since ready forth his maske to move,
With his bright tead that flames with many a flake,
And many a bachelor to waite on him,
In theyr fresh garments trim.
Bid her awake therefore, and soone her dight,
For loe! the wished day is come at last,
That shall, for all the paynes and sorrowes past,
Pay to her usury of long delight:
And, whylest she doth her dight,
Doe ye to her of ioy and solace sing,
That all the woods may answer, and your eccho ring.

Bring with you all the nymphes that you can heare
Both of the rivers and the forrests greene,
And of the sea that neighbours to her neare:
All with gay girlands goodly wel beseene.

And let them also with them bring in hand
 Another gay girland,
 For my fayre love, of lillyes and of roses,
 Bound truelove wize, with a blew silke riband.
 And let them make great store of bridale poses,
 And let them eke bring store of other flowers,
 To deck the bridale bowers.
 And let the ground whereas her foot shall tread,
 For feare the stones her tender foot should wrong,
 Be strewd with fragrant flowers all along,
 And diapred lyke the discolored mead.
 Which done, doe at her chamber dore awayt,
 For she will waken strait;
 The whiles do ye this song unto her sing,
 The woods shall to you answer, and your echo ring.

Ye nymphes of Mulla, which with carefull heed
 The silver scaly trouts do tend full well,
 And greedy pikes which use therein to feed;
 (Those trouts and pikes all others doe excell;)
 And ye likewise, which keepe the rushy lake,
 Where none doo fishes take;
 Bynd up the locks the which hang scatterd light,
 And in his waters, which your mirror make,
 Behold your faces as the christall bright,
 That when you come whereas my love doth lie,
 No blemish she may spie.
 And eke, ye lightfoot mayds, which keepe the doore,
 That on the hoary mountayne use to towre;
 And the wylde wolves, which seeke them to devoure,
 With your steele darts doe chace from coming neer:
 Be also present here,
 To helpe to decke her, and to help to sing,
 That all the woods may answer, and your eccho ring.

Wake now, my love, awake; for it is time;
 The rosy morne long since left Tithons bed,
 All ready to her silver coche to clyme;
 And Phœbus gins to shew his glorious hed.
 Hark! how the cheerfull birds do chaunt theyr laies
 And carroll of Loves praise.
 The merry larke hir mattins sings aloft;
 The thrush replyes; the mavis descant playes:
 The ouzell shrills; the ruddock warbles soft;
 So goodly all agree, with sweet consent,
 To this dayes merriment.
 Ah! my deere love: why doe ye sleepe thus long,
 When meeter were that ye should now awake,
 T' awayt the comming of your ioyous make,

And hearken to the birds love-learned song,
 The dewy leaves among!
 For they of ioy and pleasance to you sing,
 That all the woods them answer, and theyr eccho ring.

My love is now awake out of her dreame,
 And her fayre eyes, like stars that dimmed were
 With darksome cloudes, now shew theyr goodly beams
 More bright then Hesperus his head doth rere.
 Come now, ye damzels, daughters of delight,
 Helpe quickly her to dight:
 But first come ye fayre houres, which were begot,
 In Loves sweet paradise of day and night;
 Which doe the seasons of the year allot,
 And all, that ever in this world is fayre,
 Do make and still repayre:
 And ye three handmayds of the Cyprian queene,
 The which doe still adorn her beauties pride,
 Helpe to adorne my beautifullest bride:
 And, as ye her array, still throw betweene
 Some graces to be seene;
 And, as ye use to Venus, to her sing,
 The whiles the woods shal answer, and your eccho ring.

Now is my love all ready forth to come:
 Let all the virgins therefore well awayt:
 And ye fresh boyes, that tend upon her groome,
 Prepare your selves; for he is comming strayt.
 Set all your things in seemely good aray.
 Fit for so ioyfull day:
 The ioyfulst day that ever sunne did see.
 Fair sun! shew forth thy favourable ray,
 And let thy lifull heat not fervent be,
 For feare of burning her sunshyny face,
 Her beauty to disgrace.
 O fayrest Phœbus! father of the muse!
 If ever I did honour thee aright,
 Or sing the thing that mote thy mind delight,
 Doe not thy servants simple boone refuse;
 But let this day, let this one day, be mine;
 Let all the rest be thine.
 Then I thy soverayne prayses loud wil sing,
 That all the woods shal answer, and theyr eccho ring.

Harke! how the minstrils gin to shrill aloud
 Their merry musick that resounds from far,
 The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling croud,
 That well agree withouten breach or iar.

But, most of all, the damzels doe delight,
 When they their tymbrels smyte,
 And thereunto doe daunce and carrol sweet,
 That all the sences they doe ravish quite;
 The whyles the boyes run up and downe the street,
 Crying aloud with strong confused noyce,
 As if it were one voyce,
 Hymen, Iö Hymen, Hymen, they do shout;
 That even to the heavens theyr shouting shrill
 Doth reach, and all the firmament doth fill;
 To which the people standing all about,
 As in approvance, doe thereto applaud,
 And loud advaunce her laud;
 And evermore they Hymen, Hymen sing,
 That all the woods them answer, and theyr eccho ring.

Loe! where she comes along with portly pace,
 Lyke Phœbe, from her chamber of the east,
 Aysing forth to run her mighty race,
 Clad all in white, that seems a virgin best.
 So well it her beseems, that ye would weene
 Some angell she had beene.
 Her long loose yellow locks lyke golden wyre,
 Sprinkled with perle, and perling flowres atweene,
 Doe lyke a golden mantle her attyre;
 And, being crowned with a girland greene,
 Seem lyke some mayden queene.
 Her modest eyes, abashed to behold
 So many gazers as on her do stare,
 Upon the lowly ground affixed are;
 Ne dare lift up her countenance too bold,
 But blush to heare her prayses sung so loud,
 So farre from being proud.
 Nathlesse doe ye still loud her prayses sing,
 That all the woods may answer, and your eccho ring.

Tell me, ye merchants daughters, did ye see
 So fayre a creature in your towne before;
 So sweet, so lovely, and so mild as she,
 Adorn'd with beautyes grace and vertues store?
 Her goodly eyes lyke saphyres shining bright,
 Her forehead yvory white,
 Her cheekes lyke apples which the sun hath rudded,
 Her lips lyke cherries charming men to byte,
 Her brest like to a bowl of creame uncrudded,
 Her paps lyke lylies budded,
 Her snowie neck lyke to a marble towre;
 And all her body like a pallace fayre,
 Ascending up, with many a stately stayre,
 To honors seat and chastities sweet bowre.

Why stand ye still ye virgins in amaze,
 Upon her so to gaze,
 Whiles ye forget your former lay to sing,
 To which the woods did answer, and your eccho ring?

But if ye saw that which no eyes can see,
 The inward beauty of her lively spright,
 Garnisht with heavenly guifts of high degree,
 Much more then would ye wonder at that sight,
 And stand astonisht lyke to those which red
 Medusaes mazeful hed.
 There dwells sweet love, and constant chastity,
 Unspotted fayth, and comely womanhood,
 Regard of honour, and mild modesty;
 There vertue raynes as queene in royal throne,
 And giveth lawes alone,
 The which the base affections doo obay,
 And weeld theyr services unto her will;
 Ne thought of things uncomely ever may
 Thereto approach to tempt her mind to ill.
 Had ye once seene these her celestial treasures,
 And unrevealed pleasures,
 Then would ye wonder, and her prayses sing,
 That all the woods should answer, and your eccho ring.

Open the temple gates unto my love,
 Open them wide that she may enter in,
 And all the postes adorne as doth behove,
 And all the pillours deck with girlands trim,
 For to receyve this saynt with honour dew,
 That commeth in to you.
 With trembling steps, and humble reverence,
 She commeth in, before th' Almightyes view;
 Of her ye virgins learne obedience,
 When so ye come into those holy places,
 To humble your proud faces:
 Bring her up to th' high altar, that she may
 The sacred ceremonies there partake,
 The which do endlesse matrimony make;
 And let the roring organs loudly play
 The praises of the Lord in lively notes;
 The whiles, with hollow throates,
 The choristers the ioyous antheme sing,
 That all the woods may answer, and their eccho ring.

Behold, whiles she before the altar stands,
 Hearing the holy priest that to her speakes,
 And blesseth her with his two happy hands,
 How the red roses flush up in her cheekes,

And the pure snow, with goodly vermill stayne
 Like crimson dyde in grayne:
 That even the angels, which continually
 About the sacred altar doe remaine,
 Forget their service and about her fly,
 Ofte peeping in her face, that seems more fayre
 The more they on it stare.
 But her sad eyes, still fastened on the ground,
 Are governed with goodly modesty,
 That suffers not one look to glaunce awry,
 Which may let in a little thought unsownd.
 Why blush ye, love, to give to me your hand,
 The pledge of all our band!
 Sing, ye sweet angels, Alleluya sing,
 That all the woods may answer, and your eecho ring.

Now al is done: bring home the bride againe;
 Bring home the triumph of our victory:
 Bring home with you the glory of her gaine,
 With ioyance bring her and with iollity.
 Never had man more ioyfull day than this,
 Whom heaven would heape with blis,
 Make feast therefore now all this live-long day;
 This day for ever to me holy is.
 Poure out the wine without restraint or stay,
 Poure not by cups, but by the belly full,
 Poure out to all that wull,
 And sprinkle all the posts and wals with wine,
 That they may sweat, and drunken be withall.
 Crowne ye god Bacchus with a coronall,
 And Hymen also crowne with wreaths of vine;
 And let the Graces daunce unto the rest,
 For they can doo it best:
 The whiles the maydens doe theyr carroll sing,
 To which the woods shall answer, and theyr eecho ring.

Ring ye the bells, ye yong men of the towne,
 And leave your wonted labors for this day:
 This day is holy; doe ye write it downe,
 That ye for ever it remember may:
 This day the sunne is in his chiefest light,
 With Barnaby the bright,
 From whence declining daily by degrees,
 He somewhat loseth of his heat and light,
 When once the Crab behind his back he sees.
 But for this time it ill ordained was,
 To choose the longest day in all the yeare,
 And shortest night, when longest fitter were:
 Yet never day so long, but late would passe.

Ring ye the bells, to make it weare away,
 And bonefiers make all day;
 And daunce about them, and about them sing,
 That all the woods may answer, and your eccho ring.

Ah! when will this long weary day have end,
 And lende me leave to come unto my love?
 How slowly do the houres theyr numbers spend?
 How slowly does sad Time his feathers move?
 Hast thee, O fayrest planet, to thy home,
 Within the western fōme:

Thy tyred steedes long since have need of rest.
 Long though it be, at last I see it gloome,
 And the bright evening-star with golden creast
 Appeare out of the east.

Fayre childe of beautie! glorious lampe of love!
 That all the host of heaven in rankes doost lead,
 And guidest lovers through the nights sad dread,
 How chearefully thou lookest from above,
 And seemst to laugh atweene thy twinkling light,
 As ioying in the sight
 Of these glad many, which for ioy do sing,
 That all the woods them answer, and their eccho ring!

Now cease, ye damsels, your delights fore-past;

Enough it is that all the day was yours:

Now day is doen, and night is nighing fast,

Now bring the bryde into the brydall bowres.

The night is come, now soon her disaray,

And in her bed her lay;

Lay her in lillies and in violets,

And silken curteins over her display,

And odoured sheets, and arras coverlets.

Behold how goodly my faire love does ly,

In proud humility!

Like unto Maia, when as love her took

In Tempe, lying on the flowry gras,

Twixt sleepe and wake, after she weary was,

With bathing in the Acidalian brooke.

Now it is night, ye damsels may be gone,

And leave my love alone,

And leave likewise your former lay to sing:

The woods no more shall answer, nor your eccho ring.

Now welcome, night! thou night so long expected,

That long daies labour doest at last defray,

And all my cares, which cruell Love collected,

Hast sumd in one, and cancelled for aye:

Spread thy broad wing over my love and me,
 That no man may us see :
 And in thy sable mantle us enwrap,
 From feare of perrill and foule horror free.
 Let no false treason seeke us to entrap,
 Nor any dread disquiet once annoy
 The safety of our ioy ;
 But let the night be calme, and quiet some,
 Without tempestuous storms or sad afray :
 Lyke as when Iove with fayre Alcmena lay,
 Ween he begot the great Tirynthian groome :
 Or lyke as when he with thy selfe did lie
 And begot Majestie.
 And let the mayds and yongmen cease to sing ;
 Ne let the woods them answer, nor theyr eccho ring.

Let no lamenting cryes, nor dolefull teares,
 Be heard all night within, nor yet without :
 Ne let false whispers, breeding hidden feares,
 Breake gentle sleepe with misconceivd dout.
 Let no deluding dreames, nor dreadful sights,
 Make sudden sad affrights ;
 Ne let house-fyres, nor lightnings helpless harmes,
 Ne let the ponke, nor other evill sprights,
 Ne let mischievous witches with theyr charmes,
 Ne let hob-goblins, names whose sence we see not,
 Fray us with things that be not :
 Let not the skriech-owle nor the storke be heard,
 Nor the night raven, that still deadly yels ;
 Nor damned ghosts, cald up with mighty spels,
 Nor griesly vultures, make us once aheard :
 Ne let th' unpleasant quyre of frogs still croking
 Make us to wish theyr choking.
 Let none of these theyr drery accents sing ;
 Ne let the woods them answer, nor theyr eccho ring.

But let stil Silence trew night-watches keepe,
 That sacred Peace may in assurance rayne,
 And tymely Sleep, when it is tyme to sleepe,
 May poure his limbs forth on your pleasant playne ;
 The whiles an hundred little winged loves,
 Like divers-fethered doves,
 Shall fly and flutter round about the bed,
 And in the secret darke, that none reproves,
 Their prety stealthes shall worke, and snares shall spread
 To filch away sweet snatches of delight,
 Conceal'd through covert night.

Ye sonnes of Venus, play your sports at will!
 For greedy pleasure, carelesse of your toyes,
 Thinks more upon her paradise of ioyes,
 Then what ye do, albe it good or ill.
 All night therefore attend your merry play,
 For it will soone be day:
 Now none doth hinder you, that say or sing;
 Ne will the woods now answer, nor your eccho ring.

Who is the same, which at my window peepes?
 Or whose is that faire face that shines so bright?
 Is it not Cinthia, she that never sleepes,
 But walkes about high heaven al the night?
 O! sayrest goddesse, do thou not envy
 My love with me to spy:
 For thou likewise didst love, though now unthought,
 And for a fleece of wooll, which privily
 The Latmian shepherd once unto thee brought,
 His pleasures with thee wrought.
 Therefore to us be favorable now;
 And sith of wemens labours thou hast charge,
 And generation goodly dost enlarge,
 Encline thy will t' effect our wishfull vow,
 And the chaste womb informe with timely seed,
 That may our comfort breed:
 Till which we cease our hopefull hap to sing;
 Ne let the woods us answer, nor our eccho ring.

And thou, great Iuno! which with awful might
 The lawes of wedlock still dost patronize;
 And the religion of the faith first plight
 With sacred rites hast taught to solemnize;
 And eke for comfort often called art
 Of women in their smart;
 Eternally bind thou this lovely band,
 And all thy blessings unto us impart.
 And thou, glad Genius! in whose gentle hand
 The brideale bowre and genial bed remaine,
 Without blemish or staine:
 And the sweet pleasures of theyr loves delight
 With secret ayde doost succour and supply,
 Till they bring forth the fruitfull progeny;
 Send us the timely fruit of this same night.
 And thou, sayre Hebe! and thou, Hymen free!
 Grant that it may so be.
 Till which we cease your further prayse to sing;
 Ne any woods shall answer, nor your eccho ring.

And ye high heavens, the temple of the gods,
In which a thousand torches flaming bright
Doe burne, that to us wretched earthly clods
In dreadful darknesse lend desired light;
And all ye powers which in the same remayne,
More than we men can fayne!
Pour out your blessing on us plentiously,
And happy influence upon us raine,
That we may raise a large posterity,
Which from the earth, which they may long possesse
With lasting happinesse,
Up to your haughty pallaces may mount;
And, for the guerdon of theyr glorious merit,
May heavenly tabernacles there inherit,
Of blessed saints for to increase the count.
So let us rest, sweet love, in hope of this,
And cease till then our tymely ioyes to sing:
The woods no more us answer, nor our eccho ring: •

*Song! made in lieu of many ornaments,
With which my love should duly have been deckt,
Which cutting off through hasty accidents,
Ye would not stay your dew time to expect,
But promist both to recompens;
Be unto her a goodly ornament,
And for short time an endlesse moniment!*
